POTT-SHRIGLEY, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Prestbury, hund. of Macclesfield, co. Chester, 4½ miles N.E. of Macclesfield, its post town, and 1 mile from Bollington. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the Macclesfield and Congleton canal. A portion of the inhabitants are employed in the collieries. There are several brick kilns and tile works. The soil is of a clayey and sandy nature, with a rocky subsoil. Freestone is quarried. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Chester, val. £100. The church is an ancient stone structure, with an embattled tower containing a clock and three bells. The parochial charities produce about £10 per annum. There is an infant school, in which a Sunday-school is also held. Pott Hall and Shrigley Hall are the principal residences; the latter is situated in a well-wooded park.

POTWELL, a hmlt. in the pars. of Widley and Wymering, co. Hants, 4 miles N.E. of Portsmouth.

POUGHILL, a par. in the hund. of Stratton, co. Cornwall, 1 mile N.W. of Stratton, its post town. The village, which is of small extent and wholly agricultural, is situated near Bude Bay on the eastern shore of the Bristol Channel. It is mentioned in Domesday Book as Pochehelle, and was held at that time by Robert Earl of Mortaigne. It afterwards came to Cliff Abbey. This place is memorable as having been the scene of the battle of Stamford Hill, in which the parliamentarians under the Earl of Stamford were defeated by the royalists, headed by Sir Beville Granville, on the 16th May, 1643. The impropriation belongs to the landowners. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £125, and the glebe consists of 3½ acres. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £116. The church, dedicated to St. Olave, is an ancient stone structure, with a square pinnacled tower containing five bells. The church has some ancient tombs. The register dates from 1537. The parochial charities produce about £4 per annum, besides an almshouse founded by Henry VIII. There is a National school for girls. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. At Bushill House are preserved several articles of the costly furniture of the mansion of Stowe, among which is the bed in which Charles I. slept during his stay at that place.

POUGHILL, a par. in the hund. of West Budleigh, co. Devon, 8 miles S.W. of Tiverton, its post town, and 6 N.E. of the Crediton railway station on the North Devon line. The village, which is of small extent, is chiefly agricultural. The surface is undulating and the land chiefly arable. The soil consists of loam and clay, with a subsoil of the latter, covering a red sandstone used for building. In some parts of the parish it is very fertile, but in others poor and thin. There was formerly a chantry chapel, dedicated to St. John the Baptist. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £221. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has a tower containing five bells. The parochial charities produce about £16 per annum. There is a school for both sexes endowed with a £5 annuity from Gertrude Pyncombe's charity, bequeathed in 1730.

POULET. See PAWLETT, co. Somerset.

POULSHOT, a par. in the hund. of Melksham, co. Wilts, 3½ miles S.W. of Devizes, its post town, and 7 S.E. of Melksham. The village, which is small, is situated at the extremity of a green; the high road intersecting the parish. The inhabitants are wholly engaged in agriculture. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £380, and the glebe comprises 80 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £463, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, has a stone tower containing three bells. It has recently been restored at the expense of the rector, and stands about a mile S. of the village. There is a National school for both sexes. Walter Long, Esq., is lord of the manor.

POULTNEY, a hmlt. in the par. of Misterton, hund. of Guthlaxton, co. Leicester, 2½ miles N.E. of Lutterworth.

POULTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Pulford, lower div. of the hund. of Broxton, co. Chester, 5 miles S. by W. of Chester. It is situated on a branch of the river Dee. It had formerly a Cistercian Abbey founded by Robert Pincerna, who was butler to Ranulph Earl of Chester, but the monks, having suffered from the frequent incursions of the Welsh, removed to Dieulacres in Staffordshire in 1214; but Poulton contained a parcel of the possessions of the monastery till its dissolution.

POULTON, a par. in the hund. of Bewsborough, lathe of St. Augustine, co. Kent, 3 miles W. of Dover. The parish, which is considerable, is situated among the hills. It contains the ruins of Bradsole Abbey, founded in 1191 by Richard I. for monks of the Præmonstratensian order, the abbots of which were afterwards summoned to parliament as peers. The ruins have of late years been converted into farmhouses. An inscription stone marks the site of the parish church, which has long since been demolished. There is no village, only a few farmhouses.

POULTON, a par. and tnshp. in the hund. of Highworth, co. Gloucester, 5 miles S.E. of Cirencester, and 4 W. of Fairford. This parish, previous to 1844, formed part of the county of Wilts. It is intersected by the main road from Cirencester to Oxford, and is a meet for the Vale of White Horse hounds. The village is small, and some of the inhabitants are engaged in the neighbouring stone and slate quarries. Here are traces of a Gilbertine priory, founded by Sir Thomas de Sancto Mauro or Seymour about 1347, as a cell to Sempringham, and dedicated to the Blessed Virgin Mary. Its revenues at the Dissolution were returned at £20 3*s.* 2*d.* per annum. The impropriate tithes were commuted for land and an annual money payment under the Enclosure Act in 1795. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £46, with £10 additional from Queen Anne's bounty, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is an ancient structure with a tower, situated at a short distance from the village. There is a parochial school. The charities consist of a small allotment of land for the poor.

POULTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Eastry, lathe of St. Augustine, co. Kent, 2 miles S.W. of Sandwich.

POULTON, a tythg. in the par. of Mildenhall, co. Wilts, 1 mile N.E. of Marlborough.

POULTON-CUM-SEACOMBE, a tnshp. in the par. of Wallasey, lower div. of Wirrall hund., co. Chester, 3½ miles from Birkenhead. It is situated on the Wallasey Pool, near its confluence with the river Mersey.

POULTON-CUM-SPITTLE, a tnshp. in the par. of Bebington, lower div. of Wirrall hund., co. Chester, 4 miles S. of Birkenhead. The Wirrall union poorhouse is situated in the tnshp.

POULTON-LE-FYLDE, a par. and market town in the hund. of Amounderness, co. Lancaster, 15 miles N.W. of Preston, 21 S. by W. of Lancaster, and 5 S.E. of Fleetwood. It is a station on the Preston and Wyre railway. It is situated near the mouth of the river Wyre, and contains the tnshps. of Fleetwood, Poulton, Marton, Thornton, Carleton, and Hardhorn. The town is a small but very ancient port under Lancaster, and is a polling-place for North Lancashire. It was given to Shrewsbury Abbey by Roger de Poictiers. It is also a petty sessions town; the sessions being held at the Golden Ball inn on the first Friday in each month. A new County Court is held at the court-house monthly. There is a savings-bank, also the Fylde union poorhouse. The gas works are situated at Breck. The parish is very extensive, and the soil of a clayey and heavy description, but tolerably fertile. The line of the Preston and Wyre railway passes a little to the E. of the town, which is much frequented in the summer for sea bathing. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £257. The church, dedicated to St. Chad, occupies the site of an ancient structure. The present church was rebuilt in 1751, with the exception of the tower, which is of the time of Charles I., and contains a clock and six bells. The church has tablets to the families of Brockhole, Hesketh, and Fleetwood. In addition to the parish church are the following district churches, viz. at Marton, Thornton, and Fleetwood, the livings of which are all perpet. curs., varying in val. from £150 to £105. The churches are modern. There is a free school for both sexes. The Independents, Wesleyans, Society of Friends, and Roman Catholics have each a place of worship, and the last have also a small cemetery. Market day is on Monday for the sale of corn. Fairs for cattle and sheep are held on 6th February, 13th April, and 3rd November.

POULTON-LE-SANDS, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Lancaster, hund. of Lonsdale South of the Sands, co. Lancaster, 3½ miles N.W. of Lancaster, its post town. It is situated on Morecambe Bay, and on the Preston and Lancashire railway, which has a branch line to Morecambe. It is a bathing place and sub-port to Lancaster. The North Western hotel stands near the bay, from which there is a prospect over the bay and the mountains of Westmoreland, Cumberland, and Yorkshire. The town is governed by a local board of health, established in 1852. There are steam-packets plying three times a week between Morecambe and Belfast. The tnshp. contains the hmlts. of Bare and Torrisholme. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £120, in the patron. of the Vicar of Lancaster. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, was erected in 1745, with a tower containing one bell. There is a National school for both sexes, including infants. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. The charities consist of lands bequeathed by Francis Bowes in 1732 for a school now producing an income of about £35 per annum.

POULTON-WITH-FEARNHEAD, or PADGATE, a tnshp. in the par. of Warrington, hund. of West Derby, co. Lancaster, 2½ miles N.E. of Warrington, its railway station and post town. The village, which is small, is situated on the old road from Warrington to Bolton, and is chiefly agricultural. The soil is in parts alluvial on sand, and in others clayey. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Chester, val. £120. The church, dedicated to Christ, is new, containing one bell. There is a National school for both sexes, which has an endowment. The Wesleyans, Primitive Methodists, and Roman Catholics have each a place of worship. There is a Sunday-school.

POUNDEN, a hmlt. in the par. of Twyford, hund. of Buckingham, co. Bucks, 1½ mile N.W. of Twyford, and 6 miles S.W. of Buckingham. It belongs to Wykeham of Thame.

POUNDISFORD, a tythg. in the par. of Pitminster, hund. of Taunton, co. Somerset, 4 miles S.W. of Taunton.

POUNDSTOCK, a par. in the hund. of Lesnewth, co. Cornwall, 5 miles S.W. of Stratton, its post town, and 12 from Launceston. The village, which is of small extent, is chiefly agricultural. The parish is bounded on the W. by Widemouth Bay in the Bristol Channel, and is intersected by the road between Stratton and Camelford. This place is mentioned in Domesday Survey as Poupestock, and was held by Robert Earl of Mortaigne. The surface is hilly towards the S.W. The soil is clayey. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £370, and the vicarial for one of £200, and the glebe consists of 25 acres, valued at £40. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £174. The church, dedicated to St. Neot, is an ancient stone structure, with a lofty square tower containing five bells. A lead mine was discovered, but not of sufficient extent to repay the expense of working.

POW, or POW WATER, the name of several streams in Scotland. One rises in Guthrie, co. Forfar, and joins the South Esk near Kinnaird Castle; another rises in Methven, co. Perth, and joins the Earn near Innerpeffray; a third rises near Bannockburn, co. Stirling, and falls into the Frith of Forth at Powside; while a fourth rises near Dalton, co. Dumfries, and falls into the Solway Frith at Powfoot.

POWDER EAST, a hund. in the co. of Cornwall, contains the pars. of St. Austell, St. Blazey, St. Dennis, St. Ewe, Fowey, Gorran, Ladock, Lanlivery, Lostwithiel, Luscullian, Mevagissey, St. Mewan, St. Michael Carhayes, Roche, St. Sampson, St. Stephen and Tywardreth, comprising an area of about 74,460 acres.

POWDER, WEST, a hund. in the co. of Cornwall, contains the towns of Grampound and St. Mawes, also the pars. of St. Allen, St. Anthony, St. Clement, Cornelly, Creed, Cuby, St. Erme, St. Feock, Gerrans, St. Just, Kea, Kenwyn, Lamorran, Merther, St. Michael Penkevil, Philleigh, Probus, Ruan-Lanihorne, Truro, and Veryan, comprising an area of 62,000 acres.

POWDERHAM, a par. in the hund. of Exminster, co. Devon, 2 miles N.W. of Starcross railway station, and 7 S.E. of Exeter. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the navigable river Exe, and on the South Devon railway. It was held at the Conquest by William de Ou or Ewe, and came through John of Powderham and the Bohuns to the Courtenays in the reign of Edward III. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The surface is hilly, and the soil of a loamy nature, except in the uplands, which consist of a red sand. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £270, and the glebe comprises 93 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £450. The church, dedicated to St. Clement, is an ancient stone structure, with a tower containing three bells. The interior of the church contains a wooden screen, and in the N. aisle is the recumbent figure of a lady, of great antiquity, also a monument to the late Countess of Devon. There is a National school. Powderham Castle, the ancient seat of the Courtenays, Earls of Devon, is built on an acclivity rising from the western bank of the Exe. It has been restored on the site of the Norman castle, described by Leland as a strong fort, with a barbican for the protection of Exehaven. It was garrisoned for Charles I. during the parliamentary war, when it was fortified with 18 pieces of ordnance. The picture gallery contains portraits of Charles I., Queen Henrietta Maria, and Charles II., by Vandyck, besides other paintings. The mansion is surrounded by a well-wooded park, and has a view from the Belvidere tower, which occupies an elevated site above the castle, overlooking Exeter, Dartmoor, &c. The Earl of Devon is lord of the manor.

POWERSCOURT, or STAGONIL, a par. in the bar. of Rathdown, co. Wicklow, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles S.W. of Bray. It is 7 miles long and 5 broad, and contains the vil. of Enniskerry, its post town. The surface is mountainous, but consists on the whole of a good soil. It is drained by the streams Cookstown, Glencree, with its fall, and Dargle, all headwaters of the river Brag. The road from Dublin to Rathdrum passes through the interior. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Dublin, val. £307, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church was enlarged by the late Board of First Fruits in 1822. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Delgany. Powerscourt, the seat of Viscount Powerscourt, is situated in a demesne extending over an area of 26,000 acres, with deer park and ornamental plantations. A castle formerly stood here, built by the De la Poers, and which was taken in 1535 by the O'Tooles and Byrnes. Upon its capture by the English it was granted to the Talbot family by Henry VIII., and in the middle of the 16th century was retaken by the Cavanaghs. It was subsequently granted to Sir R. Wingfield by James I. in 1609, who took his title of viscount from hence.

POWERSTOCK. See Poorstock, co. Dorset.

POWERSTOWN, a par. in the bar. of Gowran, co. Kilkenny, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles S.E. of Gowran. Goresbridge is its post town. It is about 3 miles square, lying along the banks of the river Barrow. The road from Gowran to Graignenamanagh passes through the parish. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Leighlin, val. £359, in the patron. of the crown and bishop alternately. The church is an old building. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Ullard. There is a day school in the parish. Near the village are the ruins of two churches, and likewise of Drumroe Castle.

POWFOOT, a hmlt. in the par. of Cummertrees, co. Dumfries, Scotland, 4 miles N.W. of Annan. It is situated at the mouth of a small stream called the Pow Water, on Solway Frith, and is much frequented in the summer for sea-bathing.

POWICK, a par. in the lower div. of the hund. of Pershore, co. Worcester, 3 miles S.W. of Worcester, its post town, and 6 from Malvern. The village is situated near the confluence of the rivers Severn and Teme. At the old bridge which crosses the latter Princes Rupert and Maurice defeated the parliamentary troops under Colonel Sandes in 1642. Near the old bridge is an iron one of modern date. A portion of the land is rich meadow, especially along the banks of the Teme, the remainder being arable, with some hop-grounds and about 150 acres of woodland and common. The par. comprises the hmlts. of Cleveland and Woodsfield. At a farm in the neighbourhood are the ruins of Beauchamp's Court, formerly the seat of the Beauchamps of Powick. There are many villa residences. The impropriation belongs to the corporation of Worcester. The living is a vic.* with the cur. of Cleveland annexed, in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £290. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Lawrence, is an ancient cruciform structure with a tower of great height. The interior of the church has undergone many improvements, and has several stained windows—that in the chancel being of great antiquity. It contains an octagonal stone font, also several tablets and monuments. From the church, which is on a hill in the midst of a cluster of trees, a prospect is commanded of the surrounding country. The parochial charities produce about £51 per annum. There is a National school at Powick, and another situated at Bastenford, about 1½ mile to the S.W. of the village. At Stanbrook, near the river Severn, is a nunnery which removed here from Salford, in Warwickshire. The Earl of Coventry is lord of the manor.

POWIS CASTLE, or CASTELL COCH, the seat of the Earl of Powis, co. Montgomery, 1 mile S. of Welshpool. It is situated on a red sandstone rock in the midst of a park, which is entered by a gate out of the main street of Welshpool, and is free to everybody to enter, through the generosity of the noble owner. The original fortress was commenced by Cadwgan-ap-Bleddyn, Prince of Powisland, in 1109, and was completed by subsequent princes. In 1191 it was taken by Archbishop Hubert, who strengthened the fortifications, which had been dismantled by Llewelyn-ap-Iorwerth in the reign of King John. The castle subsequently came, through the daughter of Owain-ap-Griffith, to Sir John Charlton, Baron of Powis, from whose family it passed into that of the Greys, who sold it to the Herberts in the reign of Elizabeth, and in whose family it has ever since remained. In 1644 it was taken by the parliamentary forces and suffered considerably, but was restored by Smirke, who retained several of the old towers. There is a gallery, built in the latter part of the 16th century, 117 feet long, in the cinque-cento style. It contains portraits of the Herberts, including one of Lady Maria, celebrated by Pope, also Clive, by Dance, several paintings by Italian masters, the Byzantine cup which once belonged to Mary of Modena, sculpture, relics, and antiques from Herculaneum, curiosities from India, and a rare library.

POWMILLION, a stream of the co. of Lanark, Scotland. It joins the river Avon near Strathavon.

POWNALL-FEE, a tnshp. in the par. of Wilmslow, hund. of Macclesfield, co. Chester, 3½ miles S. by W. of Stockport, and 7 N.W. of Macclesfield. The village, which is considerable, is situated near the Manchester railway, and on the river Bollin.

POWSAIL WATER, a stream of the co. of Peebles, Scotland. It joins the Tweed at Drumelzier, where is Merlin's Grave.

POWTRAIL WATER, a feeder of the river Clyde, co. Lanark, Scotland. It rises under the Lowther hills.

POXWELL, or POKESWELL, a par. in the hund. of Winfrith, co. Dorset, 6 miles S. by E. of Dorchester, its post town, and 5½ N.E. of Weymouth. The parish is intersected by the road from Wareham to Weymouth. It is inconsiderable, and wholly agricultural. On a hill in the neighbourhood is a Druidical circle of fifteen stones, measuring 13 feet in diameter. Stone is quarried for building purposes. The glebe comprises about 30½ acres. The living is a rect. annexed to that of Warmwill, in the dioc. of Sarum. The church is an ancient structure with the old manor house adjoining. There is a free school, which is entirely supported by J. T. Trenchard, Esq., who is lord of the manor and sole landowner.

POYNINGS, a hund. in the rape of Lewes, co. Sussex, contains the pars. of Newtimber, Poynings, Pyecombe, and part of Edburton, comprising an area of 7,320 acres.

POYNINGS, a par. in the above hund., rape of Lewes, co. Sussex, 3½ miles S.W. of Hurstpierpoint, its post town, 6 N.W. of Brighton, and 4½ from Hassocks Gate railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated under the northern escarpment of the South Downs, near "the Devil's Dyke," which occupies the southern extremity of the parish. This entrenchment is of an oval form, and nearly a mile in circumference, being defended on one side by the dyke, a natural ravine, much strengthened by art, and on other sides fortified by a broad ditch and rampart thrown up between the hill and the main downs. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. Poynings constitutes a "stewardship," which is given to members of parliament who wish to resign their seat in a similar manner to the Chiltern hundreds. Nearly half the land is arable, and the remainder divided between pasture, sheepdown, and woodland. On the downs stands the Dyke House Tavern, well known to tourists throughout the kingdom. A brook, which rises at the bottom of the Dyke, supplied several fishponds, which once belonged to the Barons Poynings. The glebe consists of about 15 acres in this parish, and 70 in Pyecombe. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £297. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, is a cruciform edifice with a square tower in the centre. The register dates from 1558. The parochial charities produce about £5 per annum. There is a village school, recently erected by grants from the crown, privy council, &c. The Baptists have a place of worship. The manor belongs to the crown, also the principal portion of the land.

POYNTON, or POIGNTON, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Prestbury, hund. of Macclesfield, co. Chester, 5½ miles S.E. of Stockport, its post town, and 6½ N. of Macclesfield. It is a station on the Macclesfield branch of the London and North-Western railway. The village, anciently called Ponynton and Poynington, is situated near the Macclesfield canal, and on the main road from Macclesfield to Stockport. A large portion of the inhabitants are engaged in the collieries. A court-baron is held twice in the year. The glebe comprises about 18 acres. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Chester, val. £85. The church, dedicated to St. George, or St. Thomas, was rebuilt in 1789, and subsequently enlarged. The parochial charities are of small amount. There are National schools for both sexes, also for infants, in which last a Sunday-school is also held. Lord Vernon is lord of the manor and principal landowner. The hall, built about the middle of the 16th century, was taken down by Sir George Warren at the end of the last century, and a modern mansion erected on the site, which is surrounded by well-laid-out grounds.

POYNTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Ercall Magna, co. Salop, 6 miles N.W. of Wellington, on the river Roden.

POYNTZ PASS, a station on the Dublin and Belfast Junction railway, co. Armagh, Ireland.

POYSTON, a hmlt. in the hund. of Roose, co. Pembroke, 2 miles N. of Haverfordwest, within the limits of which borough it is situated.

PRATLEY'S LODGE, an ext. par. place in the chplry. of Leafield, par. of Shipton-under-Wychwood, co. Oxford, 4 miles N.W. of Witney. It is situated in Wychwood Forest.

PRAWLE, a hmlt. in the par. of Chivelstone, co. Devon, 6 miles S.E. of Kingsbridge. It is situated near Prawle Point, and is a coastguard station.

PREBAN, or BRABAN, a par. in the bar. of South Ballinacor, co. Wicklow, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles S.W. of Aughrim. Rathdrum is its post town. The surface is mountainous, but consists in general of a good soil. The stream Derry flows along the southern border, and the interior is traversed by the road from Tinehely to Rathdrum. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ferns, val. £150, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was built by the late Board of First Fruits in 1827. There are a Roman Catholic chapel and three day schools.

PREBEND-END, a precinct in the par., hund. and co. of Buckingham.

PRECELLY, or PERCELLY, a range of mountains in the co. of Pembroke. They extend in length nearly 12 miles, and attain an elevation at Cwn Cerwyn, the highest peak, of 1,758 feet above sea-level.

PREEN-CHURCH. See CHURCH PREEN, co. Salop.

PREES, a par. in the Whitchurch div. of the hund. of North Bradford, co. Salop, 14½ miles N. of Shrewsbury, its post town, and 5 N.E. of Wem. It is a station on the Crewe and Shrewsbury branch of the London and North-Western railway. It comprises the chplries. of Calverhall, or Cloverley, Whixhall, and Darliston, and 7 tnshps. The village, which is large, was formerly a market town. A large portion of the land is heathy. Numerous fossils are found in the neighbourhood. A portion of the inhabitants are engaged in the coal, lime, and slate trade, which is carried on by means of the Ellesmere canal. The parish is intersected by the road from Whitchurch to Shrewsbury, and by the London road from Chester to Birmingham. The glebe comprises 68 acres. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £571, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Chad, is an ancient cruciform structure with a modern tower containing six bells. The interior of the church contains tombs of the Hills, two old figures of Moses and Aaron, and some pieces of tesselated pavement. In addition to the parish church are the following district churches—viz. at Calverhall, Fauls, and Whixhall, the livings of which are all perpet. curs.,* varying in val. from £120 to £50. The parochial charities produce about £93 per annum, besides a small endowment to Industry Hall school, situated at Lower Prees Heath. There is a National school for both sexes. The Independents and Primitive Methodists have each a place of worship. There is also a school for both sexes, including infants, at Prees Heath, founded and supported by Lady Hill. Prees Hall is the principal residence, where the first Viscount Hill was born in 1772. Viscount Hill is lord of the manor and principal landowner. A fair for live stock is held on the second Mondays in April and October.

PREESALL-WITH-HACKENSALL, a tnshp. in the par. of Lancaster, hund. of Amounderness, co. Lancaster, 7 miles N.E. of Poulton-le-Fylde, and 2 E. of Fleetford. The village, which is of small extent, is situated near the river Wyre, and is wholly agricultural. There is a small endowed school, also a place of worship for the Independents. There is a cemetery, which is used by this and the neighbouring township of Stalmine-with-Stainall. D. H. Elletson, Esq., is lord of the manor.

PREESE, a hmlt. in the par. of Kirkham, hund. of Amounderness, co. Lancaster, 4 miles N.W. of Kirkham.

PREMNAY, a par. in the district of Garioch, co. Aberdeen, Scotland, 2 miles S.W. of Old Rayne, and 7 N.E. of Alford. The par., which is about 3½ miles long by 2 broad, contains the vil. of Auchleven. The surface is generally level, and in good cultivation, exclusive of the uncultivated and uninhabited part of the many-topped mountain of Bennochie, which attains an elevation of nearly 1,000 feet above sea-level. This mountain was formerly a royal forest, but there are no trees now upon it, except about its base, the slopes supplying the inhabitants of the neighbouring parishes with peat for fuel. Along the banks of the river Gadie the soil is both fertile and early, but in other parts it is of middling quality. There are granite quarries. The par. is in the presb. of Garioch and synod of Aberdeen. The minister has a stipend of £170. The church was rebuilt at the commencement of the present century. There are charities for the poor producing about £80 per annum.

PRENDERGAST, a par. in the hunds. of Haverfordwest and Dungleddy, co. Pembroke, 1 mile from Haverfordwest, its post town, and 10 from Narberth. It is a suburb of Haverfordwest, situated at the bridge on the river Cleddy. Here are ruins of Prendergast Place, formerly the seat of the Stepneys and Prendergasts, from which family the parish derives its name. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £183. The church, dedicated to St. David, is an ancient structure with a low turret. The chancel contains tablets to the Picton family, &c.

PRENDWICK, a tnshp. in the par. of Alnham, N. div. of Coquetdale ward, co. Northumberland, 8 miles N.E. of Rothbury.

PRENTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Woodchurch, lower div. of the hund. of Wirrall, co. Chester, 3 miles S.W. of Birkenhead railway station, and 6 N. by E. of Great Neston.

PRESCOT, a par., post and market town, in the hund. of West Derby, co. Lancaster, 8 miles E. of Liverpool, 51 S. of Lancaster, and 2 from the Huyton station on the Liverpool and Manchester branch of the London and North-Western railway. This parish, which is very extensive, is situated on the edge of a rich coal field, and is traversed by the road from Liverpool to Manchester and by the Liverpool and Manchester railway, which latter passes about a mile S. of the town. It comprises St. Helen's, Eccleston, Farnworth, Parr, Rainford, Rainhill, Great Sankey, Whiston, Sutton, Windle, Peasley Croft, and seven other townships. The town of Prescot, consisting chiefly of one long straggling street, is a petty sessions town, and received a charter for a market and fair in the 7th year of Edward III. The sessions for the Prescot div. of the hund. are held at the new court-house on the first and third Tuesdays in every month, and at the townhall of St. Helen's on the alternate Tuesdays. The town is well built, and is celebrated for its manufacture of watch movements, tools, and coarse earthenware, which are carried on to a great extent. There are also cotton and flax mills, and collieries, potteries, and glass works in the immediate vicinity. The town contains a town-hall, commercial bank, savings-bank, union poorhouse, and police station. The Poor-law Union of Prescot embraces 20 chapelries and townships. A court-baron is held six times a year, and a court-leet on the festival of Corpus Christi, when a coroner for the manor and liberty is appointed. Above half the land is in pasture. The impropriate tithes belong to the Provost and Fellows of King's College, Cambridge. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Chester, val. £760, in the patron. of King's College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient stone structure, with a modern tower and spire 156 feet high, and containing eight bells. In the interior are several monuments by Westmacott and Chantrey. The tower was erected on the site of the old steeple, which was struck by lightning in 1789. In addition to the parish church are the following district churches, viz. St. Thomas's, Eccleston, Christ Church, Eccleston, St. Helen's with Holy Trinity, Parr-Mount, Parr, Farnworth, Rainford, Rainhill, Great Sankey, and Widnes St. Mary, the livings of all which are perpet. curs.,* varying in val. from £350 to £103. The churches at Rainford, Farnworth, and St. Helen's are ancient. The parochial charities produce about £898 per annum, besides some almshouses. There is an endowed grammar school, also a Roman Catholic school. The Independents, Wesleyans, Unitarians, and Roman Catholics have each a place of worship. There are a floral and horticultural society, and the Prescot Harmonic Society, also a lending library. Among the principal residences are Knowsley and Croxteth Halls. The provost and scholars of King's College, Cambridge, are lords of the manor. The tragedian, John Philip Kemble, was born here in 1757. Market days are Tuesdays and Saturdays. Fairs are held on Ash-Wednesday, 24th and 25th August, 21st October, and 1st November; also fairs every other week for cattle, commencing from Shrove Tuesday to the first Tuesday in May.

PRESCOT, an ext. par. place in the upper div. of the hund. of Tewkesbury, co. Gloucester, 2½ miles W. of Winchcomb, and 5 N.E. of Cheltenham. The Earl of Ellenborough is lord of the manor. This place was anciently covered with wood, and belonged to the Abbey of Tewkesbury, whence it is supposed to have derived its name Priest's Coed, or Prescot.

PRESCOT, a hmlt. in the par. of Cropredy, hund. of Banbury, co. Oxford, 5 miles N.E. of Banbury.

PRESCOTT, a tnshp. in the par. of Stottesden, co. Salop, 3 miles N. of Cleobury-Mortimer.

PRESCOTT, a tnshp. in the par. of Baschurch, co. Salop, 6 miles N.W. of Shrewsbury.

PRESHUTE, a par. in the hund. of Selkley, co. Wilts, half a mile S.W. of Marlborough, its post town. It is situated on the river Kennet, and forms part of the borough of Marlborough, containing the hmlts. of Clatford, Eleot, and Manton. The village, which is irregularly built, is wholly agricultural. The appropriation belongs to the Dean and Chapter of Salisbury. The tithes were commuted for corn rents under an Enclosure Act in 1790. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £186, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. George, is an ancient Norman edifice with a square tower. The interior of the church contains an ancient font of dark grey marble, and a brass to E. Bailey bearing date 1518. The font is said to be the one in which King John and Edward the Black Prince were baptized. The parochial charities produce about £6 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes. The Marlborough union poorhouse is in this parish.

PRESMENNAN, a loch in the par. of Stenton, co. Haddington, Scotland, 7 miles E. of Haddington. It is an artificial lake about 2 miles in length, surrounded by thriving plantations, and gives name to Presmannan House in Lammermuir.

PRESTACOTT, a hmlt. in the par. of Belstone, co. Devon, 2 miles S.E. of Okehampton.

PRESTATYN, a hund. in the co. of Flint, contains the pars. of Dyserth, Gwaenysgor, Llanasaph, Meliden, Newmarket, and part of Rhuddlan.

PRESTATYN, a tnshp. and market vil., in the par. of Meliden, and hund. of Prestatyn, co. Flint, 4 miles N.E. of Rhuddlan. It is a station on the Chester and Holyhead section of the London and North-Western railway. It is situated on the coast, and is in conjunction with the hamlet of Nant. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. Asaph, val. £233, in the patron. of the crown and bishop alternately. There are ruins of a castle at Prestatyn Plâs, erected prior to Henry II.'s time, and which was once the seat of the Banasters, Crevecœurs, Conways, &c. A market is held on Saturday.

PRESTBURY, a par. in the lower div. of Deerhurst hund, co. Gloucester, 1½ mile N.E. of Cheltenham, its post town. The village is situated under the Cotswolds, and is chiefly agricultural. It was formerly a market town, but was burnt in the reign of Henry VII. It was garrisoned by the parliamentarians in the civil war of Charles I. It has a mineral spring, over which is a pump room. The soil is various, with a subsoil of gravel and clay. The vicarial tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £258, with a glebe of 21 acres, and the impropriate tithes for one of £311 11s., part of which latter belong to the Dean and Precentor of Hereford. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £234. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient stone structure, with a square embattled tower containing six bells. The church contains some tablets to the De-la-Bere and other families. It has recently undergone a complete restoration. The parochial charities produce about £30 per annum, exclusive of an almshouse for ten inmates. There is a National school for both sexes.

PRESTBURY, a par. and tnshp. in the hund. of Macclesfield, co. Chester, 2¼ miles N.W. of Macclesfield, its post town, and 15½ E. of Manchester. It is a station on the Manchester and Macclesfield railway. This par., which is of large extent and very populous, includes the town of Macclesfield, the vils. of Bollington, Bosley, Capesthorne, Chelford, Henbury, Hurdsfield, Marton, Poynton, Pott-Shrigley, Rainow, North Rode, Saltersford, Siddington, Sutton, Wincle, Woodford, and 15 tnshps., each of which is described under its own head. The soil is in some parts sandy, and in other clayey. A considerable portion of the inhabitants are engaged in the silk and cotton mills, and others in agriculture. A court leet and baron for the township is held twice a year in May and December. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Chester, val. £500. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient structure, with a lofty tower containing eight bells. On the S. side is an ancient building of stone, supposed to have been a Norman chapel, with an enriched western entrance. The church contains a piscina and several mural monuments. The interior was improved and restored in 1857. In addition to the parish church are the following district churches, viz. Macclesfield, Christchurch, St. Paul's, St. Peter, Macclesfield Forestchapel, Bollington, Bosley, Capesthorne, Chelford, Henbury, Hurdsfield, Marton, Poynton, Pott-Shrigley, Rainow, North-Rode, Saltersford, Siddington, Sutton St. George, Sutton St. James, Wincle, and Woodford, most of which are described under their separate heads; the livings are all perpet. curs., varing in val. from £300 to £48. The parochial charities produce about £40 per annum. There is a free school for both sexes, also a Sunday-school. In the township of Butley, in this parish, several tumuli containing urns and other relics of antiquity, were discovered in 1808. T. Legh, Esq., is lord of the manor. Fairs for cattle are held on the 28th April and 22nd October.

PRESTEIGN, or LLAN-ANDRAS OF THE WELSH, a par., post, and market town, parliamentary borough, and county town of the co. of Radnor, the par. being partly situated in the hund. and co. of Radnor, and partly in the hund. of Wigmore, co. Hereford, 6 miles E. by N. of Radnor, and 151 N.W. of London.

The par., which is of large extent, containing 7,780 acres, includes, besides the town of Presteign, the chplry. of Discoed, and the tnshps. of Combe, Willey, and four others. It is situated in a valley on the Lug, a river celebrated for trout and grayling, and which here separates the counties of Radnor and Hereford. The town of Presteign is small, and a borough by prescription, contributing, under the Reform Act, to New Radnor in returning one member to parliament. It first rose into importance under the patronage of Martin, Bishop of St. David's, who procured for it the grant of a market and many privileges about the close of the 13th century, and as New Radnor subsequently declined Presteign became the capital of the county. During the civil war of the 17th century Charles I. stayed with the Taylors at Lower Heath, near the King's Turning, when flying from Cromwell. It contains a shire hall, situated in Broad-street, and built in 1829, the county gaol, built in 1820, a townhall, commercial bank, a good hotel, and a bridge of three arches. The population of the parliamentary borough in 1851 was 1,617, inhabiting 345 houses, which had increased in 1861 to 1743 persons, and 378 houses. To the W. of the town is a public promenade, called the Warden, occupying an eminence formerly the site of the castle of Presteign, but presented to the inhabitants by Lord Oxford, and now laid out in walks. In the neighbourhood are many seats, the principal of which are Boultibrooke, on the Knighton road, belonging to Sir H. Brydges, Bart., Evenjobb, the residence of Mrs. Harley, and between Presteign and Radnor, Knill Court, the seat of Sir J. Walsh, in the grounds of which is the ivy-grown church of Knill, where Sir Samuel Romilly lies buried. The assizes and quarter sessions are held in Presteign, and the county courts here and at New Radnor alternately. It is also the headquarters of the county militia, the seat of a Poor-law Union, comprising 4 pars. in Radnorshire and 5 in Herefordshire, and the head of a superintendent registry district. Races take place occasionally in the vicinity of the town, on a flat course of seven-eighths of a mile. The living is a rect.* with the cur. of Discoed annexed, in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £1,380. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is an ancient structure with a square embattled tower, and bearing an inscription over the great chancel window on the exterior, "M. P. L., 1244." It contains a stained-glass window, a brass, and some monuments and tablets to the families of Owen, Price, Davies, and Parsons, also a piece of tapestry, in good preservation, representing Christ's entry into Jerusalem, said to have been worked by some ladies of the name of Taylor, then residing at Little Brampton, near Presteign. There are two places of worship for Protestant Dissenters, also a free school, founded by John Beddoes in the reign of Elizabeth, which has an endowment of £150 per annum. The principal antiquities are Offa's Dyke, which runs close by, crossing the wooded hills of Herrock and Knill Garraway, and about 3 miles to the S.E. of the town is Wapley encampment, a Roman fortification occupying a towering eminence 1,100 feet above the level of the sea. Between Knill and Presteign is the rock of Nash Scar, formed of the Woolhope limestone, but subsequently fused into one subcrystalline mass of igneous rock. Market day is on Saturday. Fairs are held on the Saturday before 13th February, on 9th May, 20th June, 13th and 14th October, and 11th December.

PRESTHOPE, a tnshp. in the par. of Much Wenlock, co. Salop, 10 miles S.E. of Shrewsbury. It is situated under Wenlock Edge.

PRESTLEIGH, a hmlt. in the par. of Doulting, co. Somerset, 2 miles S.E. of Shepton Mallet.

PRESTON, a par., market and manufacturing town, and municipal and parliamentary borough in the hund. of Amounderness, co. Lancaster, 21 miles S. by E. of Lancaster, and 218 from London by road, or 210 by the London and North-Western railway. There is a joint station for the East Lancashire, North Union, and Preston and Wyre lines, which, with the Lancashire canal, afford ready communication with all the great centres of manufacturing industry in the N. of England. The par., which is of large extent, comprises, besides the borough of Preston, the chplries. of Ashton-on-Ribble, Broughton, and Grimsargh, and the tnshps. or hmlts. of Barton, Claughton, or Gloton, Fishwick, Haighton, Lea, and Ribbleton. The manor was held by Earl Tosti, brother of Harold II., before the Norman conquest, but was subsequently forfeited, and came in the reign of Richard I. to Theobald, brother of Archbishop Hubert. The town, which was anciently called Prestum, or Prieststown, from the number and extent of its ecclesiastical establishments, stands on an eminence near the head of the estuary of the river Ribble, about 10 miles from the sea at Lytham. It is of great antiquity, and is supposed to have arisen from the ruins of the Roman station Coccium, or Rigodunum, 11 miles higher up the river, now occupied by the village of Ribchester, near Stonyhurst. It was made a borough by Henry II., who granted the merchant guild, which is still commemorated by a jubilee held by the corporation every twenty years. It was assaulted and partly destroyed by fire by the Scots under Robert Bruce in 1323. In the civil war of Charles I. it declared for the king, and was besieged and taken by the parliamentary forces under General Fairfax. In 1648 the Scottish army, under the Duke of Hamilton, advanced to Ribbleton Moor, in the neighbourhood of the town, but were there met by the parliamentary forces under Cromwell and Lambton, and sustained a severe defeat. In 1715 the town was occupied by Foster, Derwentwater, and other adherents of the Pretender, who erected barricades for its defence, but after a brave resistance were routed by General Willes. In 1745 it was occupied by the retreating forces of the Pretender, Charles Stuart, but was evacuated on the approach of the royal forces under the Duke of Cumberland.—The town is situated in a fertile country abounding in rich scenery, including Avenham Walk and Moor Park. The first charter was granted to the town by Henry II., and no less than eleven different royal charters were subsequently granted before the end of the reign of Charles II. Preston returns two members to parliament, and is a polling-place for the northern division of the county. Since the passing of the Act of 1835 it has been divided into six wards, and comprises an area of 2,736 acres. It is governed by a mayor, 12 aldermen, and 36 councillors, with the style of "mayor, bailiffs, and burgesses of the borough of Preston." The corporation revenue is about £12,000, including the fishery of the Ribble, which is well stocked with salmon, smelt, and eels. The population in 1851 was 69,542, with 11,348 inhabited houses, which in 1861 had increased to 82,985, with 15,050 inhabited houses.—The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the manufacture of cotton goods, Preston being one of the largest centres of that trade. Richard Arkwright, who was a native of this town, first introduced spinning by rollers towards the close of the last century, since which time the manufacture of cotton has rapidly increased, until Preston has become second to no town in England in manufacturing importance. There are also several linen factories, flax mills, iron and brass foundries, and machine works. Malting and brewing, rope making, and tanning are carried on to some extent. Although the port of Preston has had restored to it the privileges of a free port, its foreign commerce is small, owing to the difficulty of ascending the river; but a considerable coasting trade is carried on, especially with Ireland, and at spring tides vessels of large tonnage can ascend the Ribble to within a quarter of a mile of the lower bridge. The navigation has been very much improved of late years by the Ribble Navigation Company, and large bonded warehouses have been lately erected near the New Quay, at the Marsh, for the accommodation of shipping and merchants trading to the port. There is also a yard for ship-building near the Old Quay—one where iron vessels are occasionally built. Coal is conveyed in barges or lighters by means of the navigation of the Douglas river, which joins the Ribble 8 miles below the town. The Ribble is crossed by two bridges—one a three-arched bridge at Walton, on the London road, erected in 1782; and the other a five-arched bridge at Penwortham, of more ancient date, on the Liverpool road, about 1½ mile lower down the stream. The North Union railway has also a viaduct of five arches 70 feet above high water.—There are numerous public buildings. The townhall, rebuilt in 1780, stands near the centre of the town, on the site of the Old Tolbooth, and contains some portraits, including a full-length portrait of George II. The sessions court and house of correction was built at the end of the last century, but has since been considerably enlarged. It stands at the end of Church-street, in the eastern suburb. The building is on the penitentiary plan, capable of holding nearly 1,000 prisoners, and occupies an acre of land, with six acres of land adjoining. The court-house comprises a spacious hall 45 feet square, in which the quarter-sessions for the northern division of the county and the county court are held. The market-house and corn-exchange was erected by the corporation in 1824, at a cost of nearly £12,000. It consists of a large brick building of three stories, the lower area being used for the corn-market, which is one of the largest in the county, and for butchers' shambles, while the body contains a hall for cloth merchants and a large hall for public meetings. The police station, situated in the Lancaster road, is an Italian pile of building, consisting of the court-room, where the magistrates hold petty sessions, and of police offices and barracks. The Institution for the Diffusion of Useful Knowledge was completed in 1850 at a cost of nearly 6,000, and contains a library founded and endowed by the celebrated Dr. Shepherd, physician and alderman of the time of George III. The literary and philosophical institution is in the Tudor style of architecture; it has several spacious saloons for billiards, chess, library containing several unique works, and a museum which is very complete of its kind. Besides these are the barracks, a range of buildings at Fulwood, about a mile from the town, the borough prison, a custom house, theatre, public baths and washhouses, which cost upwards of £10,000, the workhouse, the extensive gasworks in Glover-street, temperance hall in the North-road, and the House of Recovery in Deepdale-road, erected in 1829. There are also six banks, a savings-bank, and several insurance offices and benefit societies. The cemetery, which is situated in the adjoining township of Ribbleton, comprises 50 acres, with three chapels for the Established Church, Dissenters, and Roman Catholics. There are two Roman Catholic convents—that of the "Holy Child Jesus," containing about 200 sisters, with schools attached, where nearly 500 children attend daily, and "The Holy Guild," which was established in 1840, and consists of upwards of 120 members.—Preston Poor-law Union contains 28 tnshps. The municipal and parliamentary boundaries are co-extensive, the town occupying an area of nearly 1½ mile square. It includes the ancient borough of Preston and township of Fishwick, and is considered healthy from its high situation. In the four principal streets, all of which are well paved and lighted with gas, are many large houses and shops, but the smaller streets are chiefly inhabited by mechanics; there are also several terraces and squares. The original waterworks are more than a century old, but the present ones were finished about thirty years ago, and furnish an abundant supply.—The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £665, in the patron. of Hulme's Trustees. The parish church, dedicated to St. John, has been recently rebuilt. It was originally dedicated to St. Wilfred. It is a Gothic structure with a tower surmounted by a spire and containing eight bells. Besides the parish church there are twelve other churches, the livings of which vary from £308 to £150 per annum. Christ Church is in the Norman style of architecture, with two octagonal towers, erected in 1836, and was much enlarged in 1852. St. George's was built about 1725. St. Mary's was erected in 1837; as was also St. James's, originally built by the Dissenters, but subsequently purchased by the late vicar for the Established Church. All Saints is an Ionic structure, completed in 1847 at a cost of about £4,000. St. Peter's, in St. Peter's-square, was erected in 1824, by a grant from the Parliamentary Commissioners; it is Gothic, and cost £6,500. St. Paul's, capable of holding 1,200 people, was completed in 1826, at a cost of £7,000, defrayed by a grant from the Parliamentary Commissioners. St. Thomas's is Gothic, and cost £4,500. Trinity Church, situated at the top of Great Shaw-street, is Gothic with a square tower, and was built in 1815, at a cost of £10,000; it contains an E. window of stained-glass. Besides these churches there are several others scarcely of less note, and numerous Dissenting places of worship, several of which are of considerable pretension—the Baptists have three, the Independents two, the Wesleyans two, and the Primitive Methodists, Unitarians, Swedenborgians, Latter-Day Saints, and Society of Friends each one. The Roman Catholics have six churches:—St. Austin's, in Austin-place, with an entablature and four Ionic columns, has accommodation for 1,000 people, and contains several paintings. St. Ignatius' Church, in Meadow-street, is a spacious cruciform structure in the Perpendicular Gothic style of architecture, and was completed in 1836, at a cost of about £8,000; it has a stained-glass window, and the tower with the spire and cross is 120 feet high. St. Walburga's is upwards of 160 feet long by 55 wide, and when completed will have a tower and spire 300 feet high; it has several stained windows, and cost upwards of £13,000. The other Roman Catholic churches are St. Wilfrid's and St. Mary's—the former, situated in Chapel-street, is capable of accommodating 3,000 persons, and was re-decorated and enlarged in 1840; the latter is a small building in Friargate, on the site of the old church. The free grammar school, founded and endowed in 1663, is a Gothic building of stone situated in Cross-street. It is under the direction of the mayor and corporation, and has an income from endowment of £150. Sidell's blue-coat school is a small ancient building in Main-sprit Weind, with an income from endowment of £90. There are National schools in the several ecclesiastical districts, also six infant schools, besides denominational and private schools. There are nine almshouses, including Worthington's and the corporation, besides other charitable institutions. The parochial charities produce about £800 per annum. Roman coins and other antiquities have been found in and about the neighbourhood. A hospital of St. Mary Magdalene formerly existed here, but of this and of the monastery of the Greyfriars, founded by Edmund Earl of Lancaster in the beginning of the 13th century, no remains exist.—The celebrated Lady Hamilton was born here in 1764, being the child of poor parents named Lyon. A. Kinloch, who built the first power-loom at Glasgow in 1799, died here in 1849.—Three weekly newspapers are published in the town—the Preston Chronicle, Preston Guardian, and Preston Pilot—all on Saturday; but the two first have supplements published, the former on Tuesday and the latter on Wednesday. Preston is the headquarters of the 3rd Lancashire militia, which have spacious barracks and stores, erected here in 1856. Races are held annually in the Holme, on the bank of the Ribble. A horse-fair, called Great Saturday, is held in the first week after Epiphany. Other fairs on the 27th March, 26th August, and 7th November, lasting from three days to a week each. Market days are Wednesday, Friday, and Saturday; the last, which is the largest, is chiefly for corn.

PRESTON, a par. in the lib. of Sutton-Poyntz, Dorchester div. of the co. of Dorset, 3 miles N.E. of Weymouth, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated near the bay of Weymouth. Preston is a coastguard station, and includes the hmlt. of Sutton-Poyntz. The road from Weymouth to Wareham intersects the parish. The great tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £270, and the vicarial for £250; the impropriate glebe comprises 64 acres, and the vicarial 3 acres. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £202, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is an ancient structure, with a square tower containing four bells. It has lately undergone restoration, and has a stained window. The church had formerly ten pensionary chapels belonging to it. There is a National school supported by voluntary contributions. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. J. Weld, Esq., of Lulworth Castle, is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

PRESTON, a par. in the hund. of Crowthorne, co. Gloucester, 1¾ mile S.E. of Cirencester, its post town, and 6 miles from Cricklade. This place anciently belonged to a priest named Reinbald, chancellor to Edward the Confessor. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Churn, and is wholly agricultural. The surface is generally level, and comprises some rich meadow land on either side of the river. The subsoil is of clay and oolite, and the soil chiefly a loamy clay, with stonebrash and gravel in parts. Slates or stone tiles are found in some places. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment, under an Enclosure Act in 1771. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £338. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient stone structure with a low tower. There is a parochial school. Miss Master is lady of the manor.

PRESTON, a par. in the lower div. of Dudstone hund., co. Gloucester, 3 miles S.W. of Ledbury, its post town, and 15 N.W. of Gloucester. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the borders of Herefordshire. The par. is intersected by the turnpike road leading from Gloucester and Newent to Leominster, and by that from Ledbury to Ross. Preston anciently belonged to a religious house, hence its present name. The neighbourhood is celebrated for its perry and cider. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £128, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Matthew, has a low turret containing two bells. Preston Court, the principal residence, stands near the church. The Pauncefoote family are lords of the manor.

PRESTON, a hund. in the rape of Lewes, co. Sussex, contains the pars. of Howe and Preston, comprising an area of 1,840 acres.

PRESTON, a par. in the hund. of the same name, rape of Lewes, co. Sussex, 1½ mile N.W. of Brighton, its post town, and 51 miles from London. The village is situated in a valley near the Brighton railway, and on the London road, near the entrance to Brighton. It includes the cavalry barracks and the water-works for supplying Brighton. The vicarial tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £304, with a glebe of 4½ acres, and £13 are paid to the Prebendary of Hove in the cathedral of Chichester. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Chichester, val. with the vic. of Hove annexed, £306, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient structure, with a small tower containing three bells. The register dates from Queen Elizabeth's time. There is a National school. The Independents have a place of worship. In the neighbourhood are numerous villa residences.

PRESTON, a par. in the hund. of Babergh, co. Suffolk, 2 miles N.E. of Lavenham, its post town, and 6 N.E. of Sudbury. The village, which is small, is situated near the river Brett, and is wholly agricultural. There was formerly a mansion called Preston Place, the seat of Robert Ryece, a preserver of the antiquities of the county. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £402, in the patron. of Emanuel College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has a tower containing six bells. The windows are emblazoned with the coats of arms borne by the principal families of this and the adjoining counties. The parochial charities produce about £14 per annum. The rectory-house was rebuilt in 1835. There is a National school, which was built in 1843. The parish is divided into four manors, of which Mr. W. Makin, Mr. John Wright, and Sir B. C. Brodie Bart., are lords.

PRESTON, a par. in the hund. of Martinsley, co. Rutland, 2 miles N. of Uppingham, its post town, and 1½ mile S. of the Manton station, on the Lyston and Peterborough railway. The village, which is of small extent, is situated near the river Chator, and is chiefly agricultural. It is a place of ancient date, and formerly belonged to the Nevilles. The road from London through Bedford to Leeds intersects the parish. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £249. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, is an ancient structure, with a square tower surmounted by a spire, and contains three bells. In the interior are two Norman arches, and a stone canopy in the S. wall of the chancel. The parochial charities produce about £7 12*s.* per annum. There is a National school for both sexes, erected in 1854. The Wesleyans and Independents have each a place of worship. Preston Hall is the principal residence. The ancient manor house is converted into a farmhouse. The Earl of Gainsborough is lord of the manor.

PRESTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Ellingham, S. div. of Bambrough ward, co. Northumberland, 8 miles N. of Alnwick. Preston Tower, in this township, is situated on an eminence, and commands an extensive view.

PRESTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Tynemouth, E. div. of Castle ward, co. Northumberland, 1 mile N. of North Shields. In this township is the borough of Tynemouth Cemetery, which was opened in 1857, and comprises an area of 28 acres. Here are the old barracks, which have been converted into cottages, also a linen manufactory and two breweries.

PRESTON, a par. and tnshp., partly in the middle div. of Holderness wap., and partly in the lib. of St. Peter's, East Riding co. York, 6 miles N.E. of Hull, and 1 mile from Hedon, its railway station and post town. The village, which is extensive, is situated on the Hedon and Hull old turnpike road. The soil consists of warp, marl, &c., with a subsoil of clay. The par. contains the tnshp. of Lilley. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of York, val. £81, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient structure, with a stone tower containing three bells. The register dates from 1559. The parochial charities produce upwards of £150 per annum, £27 of which goes to the free school. There is also a Sunday-school in connection with the Church. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a place of worship. Sir T. A. C. Constable, Bart., is lord of the manor and principal landowner. A cattle fair, which goes by the name of "Magdalen Fair," is held on 2nd August.

PRESTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Stogumber, co. Somerset, 4 miles S.E. of Watchet.

PRESTON, a tythg. in the par. of Aldbourn, co. Wilts, 5 miles N.W. of Hungerford.

PRESTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Harrow-on-the-Hill, co. Middlesex, 2 miles N.E. of Harrow. J. Lyon, founder of the grammar school, lived at this hamlet.

PRESTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Hitchin, co. Herts, 2 miles from Hitchin.

PRESTON, a vil. in the par. of Cranstown, co. Edinburgh, Scotland, 4 miles S.E. of Dalkeith. It is situated on the river Tyne, near Preston Hall.

PRESTON, an ancient par., now united to that of Bunkle, co. Berwick, Scotland, 3 miles N.E. of Dunse. It is situated under Bunkle Edge, in Lammermuir.

PRESTON, a hmlt. in the par. of St. Alkmond, co. Salop, 4 miles W. by N. of Shrewsbury. It is situated on the river Severn. It is joined with Dinthill and Montford to form a township.

PRESTON, a hund. in the lathe of St. Augustine, co. Kent, contains the pars. of Preston-by-Wingham and Elmstone, comprising an area of 2,030 acres.

PRESTON-BAGGOTT, a par. in the Henley div. of the hund. of Barlichway, co. Warwick, 2 miles S.E. of Henley-in-Arden, its post town, and 3 W. of the Hatton railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the Birmingham and Stratford canal, at the bridge over a branch of the river Alne. It is wholly agricultural. The land is partly in common. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £312, and there are 20 acres of glebe. The living is a rect.* in the dioc of Worcester, val. £385. The church is dedicated to All Saints. The parochial charities consist of some poor's land. There is a Sunday-school entirely supported by the clergyman.

PRESTON-BISSET, a par. in the hund. of Buckingham, co. Bucks, 4½ miles S.W. of Buckingham, its post town, and 9 E. of Winslow. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on a branch of the river Ouse, which here divides the counties of Buckinghamshire and Oxford. The par. includes the hmlt. of Cowley. The tithes were commuted for land and annual money payments under an Enclosure Act in 1781. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £457. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is of great antiquity. The parochial charities produce about £5 per annum. There is a parochial Sunday-school for both sexes, also a day school for boys. The Primitive Methodists have a place of worship.

PRESTON-BOWER, a tythg. in the par. of Milverton, co. Somerset, 1 mile N.E. of Milverton.

PRESTON-BROCKHURST, a tnshp., partly in the par. of Shawbury, and partly in that of Moreton-Corbet, Wem div. of the hund. of North Bradford, co. Salop, 3 miles S.E. of Wem.

PRESTON-BROOK, a hmlt. in the par. of Runcorn, co. Chester, 1 mile from Preston-on-the-Hill, and 5 miles S.W. of Warrington. It is a station on the Manchester and Crew section of the London and North-Western railway. It is situated at the junction of the Bridgwater and Grand Trunk canals.

PRESTON-BY-WINGHAM, a par. in the hund. of Preston, lathe of St. Augustine, co. Kent, 2 miles N. of Wingham, its post town, and 9 N.E. of Canterbury. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on an eminence near the river Stour. It is wholly agricultural. Above half the land is arable, and the remainder pasture, hop grounds, and waste. The impropriation belongs to the Dean and Chapter of Canterbury. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £399, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, dedicated to St. Mildred, or St. Michael, has an ancient tower at the W. end. The interior of the church contains two brasses, the one to V. Bacet bearing date 1412. The church was thoroughly restored in 1857. The register dates from 1558. The parochial charities produce about £5 per annum, besides 33 acres to the vicar. There is a parochial school for both sexes, which is supported by voluntary contributions.

PRESTON CANDOVER. See CANDOVER, PRESTON, co. Hants.

PRESTON-CAPES, a par. in the hund. of Fawsley, co. Northampton, 5½ miles S. of Daventry, its post town, and 6 from the Weedon station on the London and North-Western railway. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. The par. includes the hmlt. of Little Preston. A portion of the land is in pasture. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £426. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient, ivy-covered structure, with an embattled tower containing a clock and five bells. The church was thoroughly restored in 1853. There are schools for both sexes; the boys' school has an endowment for the education of 20 pupils, and the girls' school is supported by Lady Knightley and the Rev. N. Knightley, M.A., by whom a Sunday-school is also supported. Preston Capes had formerly a Cluniac priory, founded by Hugh de Leycester in 1090, but which was subsequently removed to Daventry. Sir Rainald Knightley, Bart., of Fawsley Park, is lord of the manor.

PRESTON-DEANERY, a par. in the hund. of Wymersley, co. Northampton, 5 miles S.E. of Northampton, its post town. The village, which is small and wholly agricultural, is situated on a branch of the river Nen. The parish is intersected by the road from London to Birmingham. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £173 15*s*. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £173. The church is dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul. The body of the church is modern, but the steeple is supposed to have been built about the time of Stephen.

PRESTON, EAST, a par. in the hund. of Poling, rape of Arundel, co. Sussex, half a mile S.E. of Angmering station on the South Coast railway, 2 miles S.W. of Goring, and 3 E. of Littlehampton, its post town. It is situated near the coast of the English Channel, and comprises only 560 acres. There is no village, only a few scattered houses. It gives name to a Poor-law Union of 19 parishes. The surface is level and the land chiefly arable. The soil is a rich loam. The impropriate tithes, valued at £210, are paid to the prebendary of Ferring. The vicarial tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £40, and the glebe comprises 9½ acres. The living is a vic. annexed to that of Ferring, in the dioc. of Chichester. The church is an ancient structure, with a lofty tower surmounted by a spire, serving as a landmark at sea. The parochial charities produce about £14 per annum. There is a small endowed school, built by G. Oliver in 1840.

PRESTON-GRANGE, a hmlt. in the par. of Preston-Pans, co. Haddington, Scotland, 2 miles from Preston-Pans, and 9 E. of Edinburgh. It is a burgh of barony, and is commonly called "the West Barony." It takes the adjunct of Grange from the Grange which the monks of Newbottle Abbey established here. The principal residence is Preston-Grange House, the seat of Sir G. G. Suttie, Bart., through the Grants.

PRESTON, GREAT AND LITTLE, a tnshp. in the par. of Kippax, lower div. of the wap. of Skyrack, West Riding co. York, 7 miles N.E. of Wakefield, and 8 S.E. of Leeds. The tnshp. includes the hmlt. of Astley. There are several collieries in the immediate vicinity. Preston Hall, the ancient seat of the Lowther family, was purchased for the union workhouse.

PRESTON-GUBBALS, or GOBALDS, a par. in the Albrighton div. of co. Salop, 4½ miles N. of Shrewsbury, its post town. It comprises the hmlts. of Merrington and Bomere Heath. The village is small and chiefly agricultural. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £167. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £167. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, or St. Martin, is an ancient structure, with a small turret containing one bell. The parochial charities produce about £5 per annum.

PRESTONHOLME, a hmlt. in the par. of Cockpen, co. Edinburgh, Scotland, 2 miles S. of Dalkeith, and 8 from Edinburgh, near the river South Esk.

PRESTONKIRK, or PRESTONHAUGH, a par. in the co. of Haddington, Scotland, 5 miles W. of Dunbar, and 5 N.E. of Haddington. This par. is about 5 miles in length by 3 in breadth, and includes the vil. of Linton, situated on the northern bank of the Tyne, a little above Preston. From the 12th century till the time of the Reformation this parish was called Linton, and is now sometimes colloquially called Haugh, or The Hatch, from the situation of the church on a flat or haugh on the margin of the Tyne. It is watered by the river Tyne, which winds through the middle of the parish, and falls into the German Ocean about 3 miles to the E. of the church, on a flat, sandy beach. The surface is in general level, except a solitary rock of an oval form, called Traprane Law, or Dun-Pender, which has an elevation of 700 feet above sea level, and forms one of the most conspicuous objects after entering the mouth of the Frith of Forth. The soil is exceedingly fertile, with clayey marl and lime. The village of Preston is very ancient, and is supposed to have had a church in the 7th century, built by Baldred, long the patron saint of this parish. Near the ruins of the old church is St. Baldred's Well, and an eddy in the Tyne is still known as St. Baldred's Whirl. This par., formerly a rectory, is in the presb. of Dunbar and synod of Lothian and Tweeddale. The present church was built in 1770. There are a Free church and schools. The chancel of the old church is still standing, and is used as the mortuary chapel of the Smeaton family. On the S. bank of the Tyne stands Hailes Castle, once the seat of Earl Bothwell, who is said to have here concerted the murder of Darnley, with the Earl of Morton. It was dismantled by Cromwell in 1650, and afterwards became the property of Sir David Dalrymple, who, as one of the Lords of Session, was entitled Lord Hailes, and who wrote the "Annals of Scotland." In this parish is also an ancient pillar stone 10 feet high; and at Markle are the ruins of a religious house.

PRESTON-LE-SKERNE, a tnshp. in the par. of Aycliffe, S.E. div. of Darlington ward, co. Durham, 6 miles N.E. of Darlington, on the river Skerne. The Newcastle railway passes through the township.

PRESTON, LONG, a par. and tnshp. in the wap. of Staincliff West, West Riding co. York, 11¼ miles N.W. of Skipton, its post town, and 4 N.E. of Settle. It is a station on the North-Western railway. The village, which is of large extent, is situated on the western bank of the Ribble. The par. which is extensive, comprises the tnshps. of West Halton, Hellifield, and Wigglesworth. A portion of the inhabitants are engaged in cotton weaving. The soil, though fertile, is of various qualities, consisting chiefly of a brown sandy loam upon a gravelly subsoil. Limestone and freestone are extensively quarried. A large portion of the land is devoted to grazing. There are several mineral springs. The impropriate tithes belong to the Dean and Chapter of Christ Church, Oxford. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £302, in the patron. of Christ Church, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure, with a low embattled tower containing three bells. The church has an E. window by Capronnier, of Brussels. The parochial charities produce about £206 per annum, of which £125 goes to Knowles' almshouses, founded in 1615, and which have recently been rebuilt. There is a free school for children of both sexes, founded in 1835 by Mrs. Hall, who endowed it with land now producing £150 per annum. The Wesleyans and Baptists have each a place of worship. The Duke of Devonshire is lord of the manor.

PRESTON-MILL, a vil. in the par. of Kirkbean, co. Kirkcudbright, Scotland, 12 miles S. of Dumfries. It is situated near the coast of the Solway Frith, and had once a market, of which the old market-cross still remains.

PRESTON-NEXT-FAVERSHAM, a par. in the hund. of Faversham, upper div. of the lathe of Scray, co. Kent, 1¼ mile S. of Faversham. The village, which is considerable, has of late years been much improved. Some of the inhabitants are employed in the oyster fishery. About two-thirds of the land are arable, and the remainder pasture, woodland, and waste. The impropriation belongs to the Dean and Chapter of Canterbury, who enjoy a portion of the rectorial tithes. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £324, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church, dedicated to St. Catherine, is an ancient structure, with a small tower at the E. end of the S. aisle. On the N. side of the chancel is an altar-tomb of the Boyles, ancestors of the earls of Cork, also several sepulchral brasses of, the Bacet family, one bearing date 1442. Preston House is the principal seat.

PRESTON-ON-STOUR, a par. in the upper div. of the hund. of Deerhurst, co. Gloucester, 3½ miles S.E. of Stratford, its post town. The Oxford, Worcester, and Wolverhampton line of railway passes in the vicinity. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Stour. It is chiefly agricultural. The soil is mostly clay and marl, intermixed in parts with gravel and sand. The principal seat is Alscot Park. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £55. The church, dedicated to St. Mary Magdalene, has a square tower crowned with pinnacles, containing three bells. The parochial charities produce about £5 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes. J. R. West, Esq., is lord of the manor.

PRESTON-ON-THE-HILL, a tnshp. in the par. of Runcorn, hund. of Bucklow, co. Chester, 5 miles S.W. of Warrington, 4 N.E. of Frodsham, and the same distance from Runcorn. The village, which is of small extent, is situated near the Preston Brook station of the Grand Junction railway, which here passes through a tunnel 40 yards long. The grand Trunk and Bridgwater canals form a junction in this township. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The soil is of a clayey nature, upon a subsoil of clay. There is a National school for both sexes. Miss E. A. Yates is lady of the manor. The Wesleyans have a place of worship.

PRESTON PANS, a par., market town, and burgh of barony in the co. of Haddington, Scotland, 8 miles E. of Edinburgh, and 9 W. of Haddington. It is a station on the North British railway. It comprehends the two baronies of Preston and Preston-Grange, which are commonly called the East and West baronies, and formed part of the par. of Tranent previous to 1606, when it was created a separate parish by the Parliament of Perth. In ancient documents it is called Aldhammer, but took the names of Preston Pans and Salt Preston from the salt works established here by the monks of Newbottle, to whom the manor was given by Robert de Quincey in the 12th century. The charter erecting the East barony was granted in favour of Sir John Hamilton, of Preston, in 1617. It is famous in history as the scene of the battle in which the Pretender Charles Stuart defeated the English forces under Cope, on the 21st Sept., 1745, and in which Colonel Gardiner was slain. This action was called by the Jacobites, "the action of Meadowmills," and by the Highlanders, "the battle of Gladsmuir." The par., which is about 5 miles in length by 1 mile in breadth, extends along the shore of the Frith of Forth, and includes, besides the town of Preston Pans, the vils. of Cuttle or Kuittle, Dolphinston (with Dolphinston Mains), Preston (including Northfield and Shaw's Hospital), Preston Grange (with Drummore, part of the quoad sacra par. of Cockenzie). The only harbour in the parish is Morison's Haven, formerly called New Haven, which has 10 feet water at spring tides, and is esteemed one of the safest harbours in the Frith of Forth. The creeks are the Figgat-bourn, Mussel-burgh, Port Seaton, Aber-Lady, and North Berwick. The surface is in general level, and the soil fertile. The subsoil is sandstone and coal, with gravel and clay in parts. The collieries, though long ago opened by the monks of Newbottle, have not recently been worked, owing to the cheap supplies from the neighbourhood. The town of Preston Pans, which grew out of the salt manufacture, is of considerable antiquity, and has about 16,000 inhabitants, now decreasing. It is under the government of two bailies. It contains a custom-house, post-office, good ale brewery, soap factory, works for the manufacture of oil of vitriol, spirits of salt, and Glauber salts. Many of the inhabitants are engaged in the coasting trade, and in the Pandoor oyster and other fisheries; also, some in the making of bricks and tiles. The parish is in the presb. of Haddington, and synod of Lothian and Tweeddale. The minister has a stipend of £290. The church was rebuilt in 1774. There are also a Free church and several other places of worship. At Preston Pans school, Sir Robert (afterwards Lord) Keith received his education.

PRESTON-PATRICK, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Burton-in-Kendal, ward of Kendal, co. Westmoreland, 3 miles N.E. of Milnthorpe railway station, and 6 S.W. of Kendall. Burton is its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the Lancaster canal, which here crosses the small river Beetha or Belo. Challen or Chanon Hall stands on the site of an abbey, founded by Thomas Cospatrick, in 1119, but removed to Shap about 1150. There are bleaching works, a bobbin factory, two corn mills, and extensive marble works, where large blocks brought from Dent, in Yorkshire, are cut and polished. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1814. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £132, in the patron. of landowners. The church, dedicated to St. Patrick, has a tower containing one bell. The charities produce about £14 per annum. There is an endowed school, founded in 1676. On a hill near the church is a moat, called "Swainshaw Bank Abbey."

PRESTON-PLUCKNETT, a par. in the hund. of Stone, co. Somerset, 1 mile N.W. of Yeovil, its nearest railway station and post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the Yeovil and Ilminster road. The soil consists of loam and clay, with a subsoil of clay. Above half the land is meadow and pasture, and the remainder arable, orchards, and waste. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture and in the manufacture of kid gloves. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic.* of Yeovil, in the dioc. of Bath and Wells. The church is an ancient stone structure, with a tower containing four bells. The parochial charities produce about £7 per annum.

PRESTON-QUARTER, a tnshp. in the par. of St. Bees, ward of Allerdale-above-Derwent, co. Cumberland. It is a large township, extending northward from St. Bees to Whitehaven, and contains the hmlt. of Harris Moor. There are numerous large collieries belonging to the Earl of Lonsdale, who is lord of the manor. There is an endowed free school.

PRESTON-RICHARD, a tnshp. in the par. of Heversham, ward of Kendal, co. Westmoreland, 2¾ miles E. of Milnthorpe, and 6 N.W. of Kirkby-Lonsdale. It is situated near the Kendal and Lancaster canal, and includes the hmlts. Crooklands, End Moor, and Milton. There is a bobbin manufactory, and at Gate Beck are powder mills. The principal residence is Summerlands, situate at a short distance from the high road. On the banks of the canal are several coke ovens and a large coal wharf. The Society of Friends had formerly a burial ground at Birkrigg in this township, now disused. At End-Moor an antique hammer-head of stone was found in 1770.

PRESTON TARRANT, a tythg. in the par. of Crawford Tarrant, hund. of Banbury, co. Dorset, 3 miles S.E. of Blandford. It is situated near the confluence of the river Tarrant with the Stour.

PRESTON-UNDER-SCAR, a tnshp. in the par. of Wensley, wap. of Hang West, North Riding co. York, 1½ mile N.W. of Wensley, and 5 miles N.W. of Middleham. The village, which is of small extent, is situate under a high range of crags, at the W. end of Leyburn-Shawl. A portion of the inhabitants are engaged in the lead and iron works. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. Lord Bolton is lord of the manor.

PRESTON-UPON-TEES, a tnshp. in the par. of Stockton, S.W. div. of Stockton ward, co. Durham, 3 miles S.W. of Stockton. It is bounded on the S. by the navigable river Tees, and is intersected by the Stockton and Darlington railway. The Whinstone Dyke, which runs through this township, is 75 feet in width, and has been worked to a great depth. The principal residence is Preston Hall, on the northern bank of the Tees.

PRESTON-UPON-THE-WILD-MOORS, a par. in the hund. of South Bradford, co. Salop, 4 miles N.E. of Wellington, its post town, and 5 E. of Newport. The village, which is of small extent, is situate on the Newport Branch of the Birmingham and Liverpool Junction canal, and about three miles distant from the Holyhead road. It is wholly agricultural. The surface appears to have been once an extensive morass, but is now well drained. The land is nearly evenly divided between arable and pasture. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £198. The church, dedicated to St. Lawrence, has a tower containing two bells. The parochial charities produce about £1,757 per annum, the greater part of which goes to Lady Herbert's Hospital, founded in 1716. This has accommodation for 28 widows and 20 girls. It was enlarged in 1827, and has in the centre a grand hall, used as a chapel and school-room.

PRESTON-UPON-WYE, a par. in the hund. of Webtree, co. Hereford, 9 miles W. by N. of Hereford, its post town, and 6 S. of Weobley. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Wye, and is wholly agricultural. The soil is sandy in parts, and in others loamy, upon a subsoil of clay and sandstone. The living is a vic. annexed to that of Blakemere, in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £250, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, dedicated to St. Lawrence, is an ancient stone edifice, containing three bells. The parochial charities produce about £4 per annum. There is a small charity school for both sexes. Sir V. Cornewall, Bart., is lord of the manor.

PRESTON-WYNNE, a chplry. in the par. of Withington, hund. of Broxash, co. Hereford, 6¼ miles N.E. of Hereford, its post town, and 10 from Leominster. The village, which is of small extent, is situated about half-a-mile W. of the Hereford and Bromyard turnpike road. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The soil is of a clayey and loamy nature. This village once formed a separate parish. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Hereford. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, is a modern stone edifice, with a square pinnacled tower containing one bell. The church has a marble monument to Henrietta Pugh. The proceeds of the six acres of land bequeathed by the late Mrs. Henrietta Pugh, of Great Baddow, in Essex, are expended in clothing for the poor.

PRESTWICH-CUM-OLDHAM, a par. and tnshp. in the hund. of Salford, co. Lancaster, 4 miles N.W. of Manchester, its post town, and 5 S.E. of Bury. It is situated on the old turnpike road from Bury to Manchester, and contains the tnshps. of Prestwich, Great-Heaton, Little-Heaton, Tonge-with-Alkrington, Oldham, Chalderton, Crompton, Royton, and Polkington, most of which are described under their several heads. A large portion of the inhabitants are employed in the cotton mills. [See OLDHAM.] The county lunatic asylum is a range of brick buildings faced with stone. It includes a chapel, erected in 1851. Near the centre of the parish is a Jewish cemetery, formed in 1841. The living is a rect.* with the cur. of St. Margaret's annexed, in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £1,230. The church, dedicated to St. Bartholomew, is an ancient structure of red sandstone, with a lofty square tower containing a clock and six bells. Adjoining it is the Wilton chapel, containing several monuments to the Earls of Wilton. The parochial charities produce about £40 per annum. On a site presented by the Earl of Wilton, stands St. Margaret's Chapel, the foundation-stone of which was laid by the Duchess of Cambridge, in 1848. There are numerous district churches, also National, British, and infant schools. Among the principal residences are Butt-Hill, Prestwich Lodge, Headlands, and Wood Hill. T. Drinkwater, Esq., is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

PRESTWICK, a tnshp. in the pars. of Dinnington and Ponteland, W. div. of Castle ward, co. Northumberland, 7 miles N.W. of Newcastle, and 2 from Dinnington. It includes Prestwick Carr, an extensive marsh, so completely inundated by the river Pont as to form one vast lake; but in the summer, when the waters retire, it affords excellent pasturage.

PRESTWICK, a vil. in the par. of Monkton, district of Kyle, co. Ayr, Scotland, 4 miles N. of Ayr. It is a station on the Ayr section of the Glasgow and South Western railway. It is an ancient burgh of barony, situated on Ayr Bay, and once formed a separate parish. It is governed by a provost and two bailies, under a charter of James VI., granted in 1600. It contains an ancient market-cross, court-house, and gaol. See MONKTON.

PRESTWICK TOLL, a hmlt. in the par. of Monkton-with-Prestwick, co. Ayr, Scotland, adjoining Prestwick. A fair is held on the 6th November.

PRESTWOLD, a par. in the hund. of East Goscote, co. Leicester, 2 miles N.E. of Loughborough, its railway station and post town, and 15 from Leicester. It is situated on a branch of the river Soar, and near the Loughborough canal. The par. contains the tnshps. of Burton-on-the-Wolds, Cotes, and Hoton. The inhabitants are wholly engaged in agriculture. The living is a don. cur. with the perpet. cur. of Hoton annexed, in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £18. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, has a square embattled tower. The church contains monuments to the Packe family. The parochial charities produce about £44 per annum, of which £37 goes to Newton's School. There is a chapel-of-ease at Hoton, which was rebuilt in 1838. It has an embattled tower, containing a clock and one bell. There are places of worship for the Wesleyans at Burton and Hoton. Prestwold Hall, the residence of the Packe family, is situated in the midst of the well-wooded grounds. It contains a good collection of portraits by Jansen, Kneller, Lely, and other masters, and commands a prospect westward over Charnwood Forest. C. W. Packe, Esq., is lord of the manor.

PRESTWOOD, a tnshp in the par. of Ellastone, E. div. of the hund. of Totmonslow, co. Stafford, 1 mile S.W. of Ellastone, and 6 N. of Uttoxeter. The village is small, and entirely agricultural.

PRESTWOOD, a hmlt. in the par. of Stoke Mandeville, co. Bucks, 2 miles N.W. of Wendover.

PRETTYS, a hmlt. in the par. of Old Cleeve, co. Somerset, 2 miles S.W. of Watchet.

PRIDDBWLL, a tnshp. in the par. of Llansilin, co. Denbigh, 5 miles S.W. of Oswestry.

PRIDDY, a par. in the hund. of Wells Forum, co. Somerset, 5 miles N.W. of Wells, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, and wholly agricultural, lies in a small hollow near the summit of the Mendip range of hills, at an elevation of nearly 1,000 feet above sea-level. A great portion of the land is in pasture. The soil is of a light nature, with a subsoil of limestone. A Roman camp exists in the neighbourhood, and there are traces of numerous lead and silver mines, supposed to have been worked by the Romans and Britons. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £40, and the vicarial for one of £43. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £232. The church, dedicated to St. Lawrence, is an ancient stone structure with a tower containing three bells. There is a place of worship for Independents. The parochial charities produce about £23 per annum. The register dates from 1761. James Green, Esq., is lord of the manor.

PRIESTCLIFF, a chplry. and tnshp. in the par. of Bakewell, hund. of High Peak, co. Derby, 3 miles S. of Tideswell. It is a joint township with Taddington, and derives its name from a cliff over Blackwall Dale, near the river Wye. There is a school in this township, founded and endowed by the late Rev. Roger Wilkinson.

PRIESTEND, a hmlt. in the par. of Thame, co. Oxford, near Thame.

PRIESTFIELD, a hmlt. in the chplry. of Bilston, par. of Wolverhampton, co. Stafford, 1½ mile from Wolverhampton. It is a station on the West Midland section of the Great Western railway.

PRIESTHILL, a hmlt. in the par. of Muirkirk, co. Ayr, Scotland, 4 miles N.E. of Muirkirk, and 23 E. by N. of Ayr. It is situated under the Haughshaw hills, at the head of Ayr and Greenock waters. At this place, John Brown was shot by Claverhouse whilst standing at his own door.

PRIESTHOLME. See PUFFIN ISLAND, co. Anglesea.

PRIEST-HUTTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Warton, hund. of Lonsdale South of the Sands, co. Lancaster.

PRIEST ISLAND, an islet at the entrance to Loch Broom, co. Ross and Cromarty, Scotland.

PRIESTPEOPLE, a ward in the par. of Hexham, co. Northumberland, 2 miles from Hexham.

PRIEST-THORPE, a hmlt. in the par. of Bingley, wap. of Upper Skyrack, West Riding co. York, 2 miles from Bingley, and 32 S.W. of York. It is situated near the river Aire and the Leeds and Liverpool canal.

PRIESTWESTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Chirbury, co. Salop, 6 miles N.W. of Bishop's Castle.

PRIMETHORPE, a tnshp. in the par. of Broughton-Astley, hund. of Guthlaxton, co. Leicester, 5 miles N.W. of Lutterworth. It is situated on the Fosse Way.

PRIMROSE. See CARRINGTON, co. Edinburgh, Scotland.

PRIMROSE HILL, a small isolated hill, in the hund. of Ossulstone, and borough of Marylebone, co. Middlesex, 3½ miles N.W. of St. Paul's, London. It is situated at the northern extremity of the Regent's Park, to which it has recently been added, with Barrow Hill reservoir adjoining it on the W. side. Its summit commands a view of the metropolis, with the hills of Hampstead and Highgate towards the N., and at its base is the Shakspeare oak, planted in 1864. The London and North-Western railway passes underneath it through a tunnel 3,360 feet long, and in excavating which nautili and other fossil shells were found.

PRINCELETT, a vil. in the par. of Newchurch, Isle of Wight, co. Hants.

PRINCE'S CHANNEL, a passage at the mouth of the Thames, between the Tongue and Girdler sands, 6 miles N.W. of Margate.

PRINCE'S RISBOROUGH. See RISBOROUGH, PRINCE'S, co. Bucks.

PRINCETHORPE, a tnshp. in the par. of Stretton-upon-Dunsmoor, Rugby div. of the hund. of Knightlow, co. Warwick, 7 miles S.W. of Rugby, 6 N. by W. of Southam, and 4 S. of the Brandon railway station. It is situated on the Fosse Way, near the river Ichene. There is a Roman Catholic establishment for nuns, called St. Mary's Priory, erected in 1833, on a plot of land four acres in extent. The extensive buildings are situated on an eminence covering two acres, and include a chapel, which is crowned with a low steeple, and contains a clock and three bells. There are also a circular-shaped cemetery and pleasure gardens. In the village is a National school.

PRINCETOWN, a hmlt. in the par. of Lidford, co. Devon, 7 miles N.E. of Tavistock. It is situated in Dartmoor Forest, and is the site of a convict prison and barracks. Some years past works were established here for extracting naphtha from peat.

PRINKNASH-PARK, an ext. par. place in the middle div. of Didstone hund., co. Gloucester, 2 miles N. of Painswick. It was once the seat of Judge Bridgman, and the abbots of Gloucester in the reign of Edward I.

PRINSTED, a tythg. in the par. of Bourne, co. Sussex, 5 miles W. of Chichester.

PRIOR, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanrhaidr-in-Kinmerch, hund. of Isaled and borough of Denbigh, co. Denbigh, 2 miles from Denbigh, and 5 N.W. of Ruthin. It is situated near the river Clwyd.

PRIOR, a hmlt. in the bar. of Trughanacmy, co. Kerry, Ireland, 10 miles S. of Tralee. It is situated near the river Main.

PRIOR, a par. in the bar. of Iveragh, co. Kerry, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 7 miles S. of Cahersiveen, its post town. It is situated in a mountainous and wild district on Ballinaskelleg Bay, and not far from Bolus Head. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ardfert and Aghadoe, val., with Dromod, £260, in the patron. of the crown. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Killenlagh.

PRIOR PARK HOUSE, formerly a Roman Catholic college, on Combe Down, co. Somerset, 1 mile S.E. of Bath. It is a Grecian structure, originally built by Ralph Allen, the friend of Pope, for his private seat, at an elevation of 400 feet above the city of Bath, over which it commands a prospect; but was purchased in 1829 for the college, which was lately broken up.

PRIOR'S ASH. See ASH-PRIORS, co. Somerset.

PRIORS-DEAN, a par. in the upper half hund. of East Meon, Petersfield div. of co. Hants, 7 miles S.W. of Alton, its post town, and 5 N.W. of Petersfield. The village is of small extent, and wholly agricultural. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect.* of Colemore, in the dioc. of Winchester. The church has a tower containing two bells.

PRIORS HARDWICK. See HARDWICK, PRIORS, co. Warwick, and the same for other places with this prefix.

PRIORS-HAY, an ext. par. place in the 2nd div. of Eddisbury hund., co. Chester, 4 miles E. of Chester.

PRIORS-LEE, or LEIGH, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Shiffnal, Shiffnal div. of the hund. of Brimstree, co. Salop, 3 miles N.W. of Shiffnal, its post town, and 4½ N.E. of Wellington. It is situated on the turnpike road from Shiffnal to Wellington. The township is intersected by the Shrewsbury and Birmingham railway. The village, which is considerable, is in close proximity to the chief coal and iron districts of Shropshire. The tnshp. includes the hmlt. of Oakengates. There are numerous blast furnaces, rolling and slitting mills, and foundries for castings of all kinds. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £150, in the patron. of the Vicar of Shiffnal. The church has a square tower containing a clock and one bell. The church was rebuilt in 1836. There is a free school at Snedshill. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. Priors Lee Hall, the principal residence, is situated at a short distance from the village.

PRISK AND CARFAN, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanddewi-brefi, hund. of Penarth, co. Cardigan, 3 miles S.W. of Tregaron.

PRISK AND KILLEY, a parcel in the par. of Llangattock, hund. of Crickhowell, co. Brecon, 2 miles W. of Crickhowell. It is situated on the river Usk, near the Brecon canal and Beaufort iron works.

PRISTON, a par. in the hund. of Keynsham, co. Somerset, 5 miles S.W. of Bath, its post town. The village, which is of small extent and wholly agricultural, is situated to the right of the road leading from Bath to Wells. The par. includes the hmlt. of Wilmington. The surface is for the most part hilly. The soil is of a loamy description. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £400, and the glebe comprises 48 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £384. The church, dedicated to St. Luke, is an ancient stone edifice, with a tower containing six bells. The church has been recently restored. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum.

PRITTLEWELL, a par. in the hund. of Rochford, co. Essex, 3 miles S. of Rochford, its post town, and 1 mile N. of Southend. It is situated near the Thames, and includes Southend, a thriving bathing-place, and the hmlt. of Milton. The parish contains several modern houses. It formerly had a Cluniac priory founded by Robert Fitz-Swaine, in the reign of Henry II., as a cell to the abbey of Lewes, in Sussex, the revenue of which at the Dissolution was valued at £194 14*s.* 3*d.* The site was afterwards given to the Audleys. Prittlewell derives its name from the well at the Priory, which is the source of several fishponds in the neighbourhood. The village is of ancient date. It consists principally of two streets on the declivity of a hill, at right angles with each other. A little above Southend (which see) is Crow Stone, marking the extreme eastern boundary of the jurisdiction of the mayor of London as conservator of the Thames. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £390, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure with a lofty, pinnacled tower, which serves as an excellent sea-mark. The church has a brass bearing date 1612. There is also a district church at Southend, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £50. The parochial charities produce about £31 per annum. There is an endowed parochial school. D. R. Scratton, Esq., J.P., is lord of the manor. A fair is held on 15th and 16th July.

PRIVETT, a par. in the upper half of the hund. of East Meon, Petersfield div. of co. Hants, 6 miles N.W. of Petersfield, and 13 from Winchester. Alton is its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. It was called by the Saxons Pruntesfiod and Pryfeas. The living is a cur.* annexed to the rect.* of West Meon, in the dioc. of Winchester. The church has a tower containing five bells. There is a free school, also a girls' school.

PROBUS, a par. in the W. div. of the hund. of Powder, co. Cornwall, 4 miles N.E. of Truro, its post town, 2 S.W. of Grampound, and 5½ N.E. of the West Cornwall railway. The par., which is extensive, comprises a part of the borough of Grampound, and the hmlt. of Tresillian. It is a healthy village, being situated on an eminence over 300 feet above sea level. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The soil is of a loamy nature. A market was formerly held in the village, which skirts the road from London through Plymouth to the Land's End. At the time of the Domesday Survey there was a college for 5 prebends, founded and endowed by Edward the Confessor, and afterwards given by Henry I. to the bishop and church at Exeter. There are traces of an ancient chapel at Golden. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £509, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to SS. Probus and Grace, has a lofty pinnacled tower, containing seven bells. The church is constructed of granite, and was erected by the parishioners in 1550, but has since been enlarged. The interior contains tombs of the Hawkins family, of Trevithian. The parochial charities produce about £110 per annum, of which £10 goes to Williams's school. There are National and parochial schools for both sexes. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. Near Carvoza are traces of a Roman camp, extending over 7 acres. In the reign of Queen Elizabeth, Walvedon and Golden were forfeited by Tregion for harbouring a priest named Mayne, who was hung. C. H. Hawkins, Esq., is lord of the manor and principal landowner. Fairs for cattle and sheep are held on 5th and 23rd April, 5th July, and 17th September.

PROSEN, a river of the co. of Forfar, Scotland, rises in the Braes of Angus, and flowing through Glenprosen joins the South Esk near Cortachie.

PROSPEROUS, a small vil. in the par. of Killybegs, in the bar. of Clane, co. Kildare, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles W. of Clare. It is situated on the Grand Canal. Here is a police station.

PROVIDENCE, a hmlt. in the par. of Long Ashton, co. Somerset, 2 miles S.W. of Bristol.

PROVOST'S FEE, a manor in the par. of Walkington, Hunsby-Beacon div. of the wap. of Harthill, East Riding co. York, 3 miles S.W. of Beverley.

PRUDHOE and PRUDHOE CASTLE, tnshps. in the par. of Ovingham, E. div. of Tindale ward, co. Northumberland, 1 mile S. of the Prudhoe station on the Newcastle and Carlisle railway, and 10½ miles E. of Hexham. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Tyne. A portion of the inhabitants are engaged in the collieries, and some in the tile and brick kilns. On a rocky eminence, 60 feet above the river Tyne, are the ruined keep and ivy-mantled towers of the castle given to the Umfranvilles by William the Conqueror. This fortress was ably defended in 1174 against William of Scotland, and subsequently came through the first Earl of Northumberland to the Percys. There is a place of worship for the Wesleyans. The Duke of Northumberland is lord of the manor.

PRYORS, a quarter in the par. and hund. of Tiverton, co. Devon, 2 miles from Tiverton. It is situated near the confluence of the river Loman with the Exe.

PRYSE, or PRUSAN, a tnshp. in the par of Ysceifiog, co. Flint, 6 miles W. of Flint.

PUBBLEBRIEN, a bar. in the co. of Limerick, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. Its boundaries are the Shannon, city of Limerick, and the bars. of Clanwilliam, small county Coshma, Upper and Lower Connello, and Kerry. It contains the pars. of Crecora, Kilkeedy, Knocknagaul, Mungret, and parts of those of Ballycahane, Croom, Killeely, Killeenoughty, Killonaghan, Kilpeacon, Monasteranenagh, St. Michael's, St. Munchin's, and Nicholas.

PUBBLEDRUM, an ancient par. in the bar. of Rathvilly, co. Carlow, Ireland, 2 miles E. of Tullow, and 7 N. of Carlow. It is situated near the confluence of the rivers Derreen and Slaney, at the five-arched bridge, and has remains of the old castle of the Butlers, Earls of Ormonde.

PUBLOE, a par. in the hund. of Keynsham, co. Somerset, 5 miles S.E. of Bristol, its post town, and half a mile N.E. of Pensford. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Chew, a branch of the Avon, and is chiefly agricultural. The par. includes the hmlt. of Woolard. There are collieries, and some traces of copper-ore The soil is fertile, with a subsoil of red sandstone and white lias. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £266 16*s.* 1*d.*, and the glebe comprises 64 acres. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Bath and Wells. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient structure, with a square embattled tower containing six bells. The church underwent a thorough repair in 1860, but in the following year a part of the roof and summit was destroyed by lightning. The register dates from 1569. The charities consist in the interest of £500 for apprenticing boys of the parish. There are parochial and Sunday schools. The Wesleyans and Calvinists have each a place of worship. E. L. Popham, Esq., is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

PUCKAUN, a post-office vil. in the par. of Killodiernan, in the bar. of Lower Ormond, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5 miles N.W. of Nenagh. It stands at the head of Lough Derg, and contains a police station and a Roman Catholic chapel.

PUCKERIDGE, a hmlt. in the pars. of Standon and Braughin, co. Herts, 6 miles N.E. of Ware, and 9 N. by E. of Hertford. It is situated on the ancient way Ermine Street. According to Tanner, a free chapel with a chantry existed here in the reign of Edward II.

PUCKINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Abdick, co. Somerset, 3 miles N.E. of Ilminster, its post town, and 6 W. of the Martock station on the Yeovil branch of the Bristol and Exeter railway. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Isle, and is chiefly agricultural. The soil is clay, with a subsoil of limestone. The par. includes the hmlt. of Little Puckington. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £234. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, has a tower containing a clock and five bells. The register dates from 1693. The church was restored in 1857. There is a day school for both sexes, also a Sunday-school held in the church schoolroom. Lord Portman is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

PUCKLECHURCH, a hund. in the co. of Gloucester, contains the pars. of Abson, Cold Ashton, Pucklechurch, Siston, and Westerleigh, comprising an area of 12,250 acres.

PUCKLECHURCH, a par. in the above hund., co. Gloucester, 8 miles N.E. of Bristol, its post town, and 2 E. of the Mangotsfield railway station. It is situated near the line of the Bristol and Gloucester railway, and contains the hmlt. of Shortwood. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture and in the collieries. The soil is of a loamy description, with a subsoil of clay and rock. The village, which is considerable, was formerly a market town. At this place was a palace of the Saxon kings, in which Edmund the Elder was stabbed by Leolf, a robber, in 946. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £765 8s., and there are about 60 acres of glebe. The living is a vic.* with the curs. of Abson, Wick, and Westerleigh annexed, in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £765, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Wells. The church, dedicated to St. Thomas-à-Becket, is an ancient stone structure with a square tower containing six bells. The church has been partly restored. The parochial charities produce about £65 per annum, of which £53 goes to Berrow's school. There is a National school for both sexes. There are places of worship for the Independents and Wesleyans. The Earl of Radnor is lord of the manor.

PUDDING-NORTON, a par. in the hund. of Gallow, co. Norfolk, 1½ mile S. of Fakenham, its nearest railway station and post town. The parish is inconsiderable, and contains only a few farmhouses. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Norwich. The church has long been in ruins.

PUDDINGTON, or PODDINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Willey, co. Bedford, 5 miles from Wellingborough, its post town, and 4 N. of Harrold. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. The par. includes the hmlt. of Hinwick. The soil is chiefly a strong loam, intermixed with clay. There is a petrifying spring, and small shells and fossils are found in the gravel pits. Canary birds are found to live here in a wild state. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1765. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £134. The church, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, has a spired tower containing a clock and four bells. The church has been recently thoroughly restored. The interior contains some brasses, one of which is to J. Howard, bearing date 1518, also a monument to General Livesay, at whose expense the church was erected. There is a National school. Hinwick House and Hinwick Hall are the principal residences. R. L. Orlebar, Esq., is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

PUDDINGTON, or PODINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Witheridge, co. Devon, 7 miles N. by W. of Crediton, its post town, and 8 S.W. of Tiverton. The village, which is of small extent, is situated near the river Credy, and is chiefly agricultural. The soil consists of loam upon a subsoil of clay. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £131, and there are 81 acres of glebe. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £136. The church, dedicated to St. Bartholomew, or St. Thomas-à-Becket, is an ancient stone structure with a tower containing three bells. The Presbyterians have a place of worship. The landowners are lords of the manor.

PUDDINGTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Burton, higher div. of the hund. of Wirrall, co. Chester, 7½ miles N.W. of Chester, and 3 S. of Sutton railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Dee, and is wholly agricultural. In the neighbourhood is an ancient moated mansion, which has been converted into a farm dwelling. There is a place of worship for the Roman Catholics. Puddington Hall is situated in the midst of well-wooded grounds.

PUDDLEDOCK, a hmlt. in the par. of St. Lawrence, Isle of Thanet and lathe of St. Augustine, co. Kent, 2 miles from Ramsgate.

PUDDLE-MILL, a hmlt. in the par. of Church-Knowle, hund. of Hasilor, co. Dorset, 3 miles S. of Wareham.

PUDDLESTONE, a par. in the hund. of Wolphy, co. Hereford, 6 miles N.E. of Leominster, its post town, and 16 from Hereford. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the N. of the turnpike road from Leominster to Worcester. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agricultural pursuits. The soil consists of clay and loam. The par. includes the tnshps. of Whyle and Brockmanton. The living is a rect.* with Whyle, in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £276. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, has a tower containing four bells. The church has been thoroughly restored and enlarged. There is a National school for both sexes. Puddlestone Court is a modern mansion. Hops are grown in the parish. Elias Chadwick, Esq., is lord of the manor.

PUDLICOTT, a hmlt. in the par. of Shorthampton, co. Oxford, 4 miles S.W. of Chipping-Norton, on the river Evenlode.

PUDSEY, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Calverley, wap. of Morley, West Riding co. York, 6 miles S. of Leeds, its post town, 4 E. of Bradford, and half a mile from the Stanningley station, on the Leeds and Bradford railway. This place is mentioned in the Domesday Survey as Podechesaie, and at that time belonged to the Calverley family, by whom the manor was sold in the reign of Edward II. to an ancestor of the Milners. The township, which is extensive, is situated on the brow of a lofty acclivity rising from the valley of Airedale. A large number of its inhabitants are employed in the woollen manufacture, which is carried on to a considerable extent, and is the staple trade of the town. The tnshp. comprises the vil. of Fullneck, with part of Stanningley and the hmlt. of Tyersall. The town formerly consisted of only a few scattered hamlets, but now forms one of the most extensive clothing towns in the West Riding. It is well lighted with gas, and has a bank and mechanics' institute. On the banks of the small stream which flows through the valley below the town are numerous scribbling and fulling-mills, and various establishments for dyeing the wool used in the factories. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £300, in the patron. of the Vicar of Calverley.

The church, dedicated to St. Lawrence, is a spacious structure with a lofty square embattled tower containing a peal of eight bells. The church was erected in 1823 by the Parliamentary Commissioners, at an outlay of £13,362. It has an E. window enriched with tracery and embellished with stained glass. There is also the district church of St. Paul's, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £150. This last is a modern erection. There are various charities, and two National schools for both sexes. The Independents, Wesleyans, New Connexion Methodists, Baptists, Unitarians, Moravians, and Primitive Methodists have places of worship. H. Stowe, Esq., is lord of the manor. On taking down an old house at Fartown in 1834, nearly 400 silver coins were discovered of Edward VI., Elizabeth, James I., and Charles I.

PUFFIN ISLAND, or PRIESTHOLME, an islet at the entrance of the Menai, co. Anglesea, 4 miles N.E. of Beaumaris. It is about 1 mile in length, and is the Welsh Ynys Seiriol. It formerly belonged to the monks of Penmon, and is much frequented by puffins, from which circumstance it derives its name. In 1831 the Rothsay Castle was wrecked at Dutchman's Spit, on the coast, when 100 lives were lost.

PUFFIN ISLAND, an islet off the coast of co. Kerry, Ireland, 5 miles S.E. of Bray Head.

PULBOROUGH, a par., post and market town in the hund. of West Easwrith, rape of Arundel, co. Sussex, 6 miles E. of Petworth, its post town, and 9 N. of Arundel. It is a station on the Brighton and South Coast railway. The village, which is of large extent, is situated at the confluence of the rivers Arun and West Rother. It consists in one long street forming part of the road from Arundel to London, and is partly built upon elevated ground. In this street the chief part of the inhabitants reside. The par. is of large extent, and includes the hmlt. of Nutbourne. A large portion of the land is in marsh and meadow. The parish is traversed by the Arun navigation, and by the Great Roman road from Regnum (Chichester) to London; on the line of the latter many Roman antiquities have been discovered. The soil consists of a strong loam intermixed with clay in some parts. Sandstone is quarried for building. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £1,700, and the glebe consists of 165 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £1,876. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is situated on the summit of a sandstone hill. It is an ancient structure with a tower containing a clock and five bells. On the S.W. of the churchyard was a small chapel, taken down in the latter part of the last century, when some ancient brasses in the chancel were removed. The register dates from 1595. The church has recently undergone restoration. The parochial charities consist of almshouses for six aged widows, who receive weekly a quartern of flour and 1s. 6d. each. They were erected at the expense of Mrs. Helen Anne in 1861. There are three commodious National schoolhouses, recently erected. There are places of worship for the Independents and Wesleyans. In this parish are the remains of two old houses, one built in the reign of Edward I. and the other in that of Henry VI., also the foundations of a castle a little to the W. of the village. A market for corn is held every Friday, also one for the sale of barley, which latter is the largest in West Sussex. A fair is held on Easter-Tuesday for toys and pedlary.

PULFORD, a par. in the lower div. of the hund. of Broxton, co. Chester, 6 miles from Wrexham, its post town, and 5 S.W. of Chester. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on Pulford brook, a branch of the river Dee, and near the line of the Shrewsbury railway. The inhabitants are wholly agricultural. The par. comprises the hmlt. of Poulton, and is traversed by the road from Chester to Wrexham. The soil is of a heavy description, but favourable to the growth of wheat. A court-leet is annually held by the Marquis of Westminster, as lord of the manor. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £200, and the glebe consists of 6 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Chester, val. £200. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a cruciform structure with a square tower containing two bells. The church was rebuilt at the expense of the Marquis of Westminster in 1833. There is a school for both sexes supported by the Marquis of Westminster, who owns the chief part of the soil. In a field called the Castle Hill, adjoining the rectory house, are traces of a fosse and ancient fortifications.

PULHAM, EAST, a par. partly in the hund. of Buckland-Newton, and partly in the lib. of Bindon, co. Dorset, 5½ miles N.E. of Cerne, and 8 S.E. of Sherborne, its post town. It is situated on the river Lyd. The village is small and wholly agricultural. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £410, and the glebe comprises 54 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £350. The church, dedicated to St. Thomas-à-Becket, is an ancient structure with a tower containing three bells. The Rev. John Moore Halsey, lord of the manor, resides at Gaddesden Park.

PULHAM MARKET, or PULHAM ST. MARY MAGDALENE, a par. in the hund. of Earsham, co. Norfolk, 4 miles N.W. of Harleston, its post town. It is a station on the Waveney Valley section of the Great Eastern railway. The village, which is situated on the road from Harleston to Norwich, was formerly a manufacturing and market town of some importance. It contains the Depwade Union poorhouse. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture, and a few in weaving for the Norwich manufacturers. The land is chiefly arable, with a small proportion of pasture. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Norwich, annexed to the rect. of St. Mary the Virgin. The church, dedicated to St. Mary Magdalene, is an ancient structure with a square embattled tower containing six bells. The register dates from 1538. The parochial charities produce about £160 per annum, appropriated to the repair of the church and the relief of the poor. There is a National school for both sexes. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a place of worship. The ancient mansion of Pulham Hall, formerly the seat of the Percy family, has been taken down. George Copeman, Esq., is lord of the manor. A fair is held on the third Thursday in May for cattle.

PULHAM ST. MARY THE VIRGIN, a par. in the hund. of Earsham, co. Norfolk, 3 miles N.W. of Harleston, its post town, and 4 E. of Tivetshall. It is a station on the Waveney Valley branch of the Great Eastern railway. The village is situated on an eminence, and is chiefly agricultural. The common land was enclosed in 1858, according to an Act of Parliament. In 1294 the inhabitants, conjointly with those of Pulham St. Mary Magdalene, obtained the grant of a weekly market, which has long been discontinued. The land is chiefly arable, with a small proportion of pasture. The tithes of this and of the adjoining parish of St. Mary Magdalene have been commuted for a rent-charge of £1,308, and the glebe comprises 37 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. with St. Mary Magdalene, £1,378, in the patron. of the crown. The church, dedicated to St. Mary the Virgin, is an ancient structure with a square embattled tower formerly surmounted by a spire and containing six bells. The interior of the church contains some carved figures and several stained windows. The S. porch, which is decorated with sculpture, is said to have been built by William of Wykeham. The register dates from 1538. The parochial charities produce about £30 per annum, of which £10 goes to a Sunday-school. There is a parochial school, founded and partially endowed by William Pennoyer in 1670. The Baptists have a place of worship. George Copeman, Esq., is lord of the manor. The living of this parish has been held by several eminent men, as Henry de Wingham, Bishop of London, William de Wykeham, Bishop of Winchester, N. Claggett, Bishop of Exeter, Dr. Broome, the eminent Greek scholar and poet, and several others.

PULHAM, WEST, a manor in the par. of East Pulham, hund. of Buckland-Newton, co. Dorset, 9 miles S.E. of Sherborne.

PULLAGHEENY and PULLENDIVA, two hmlts. in the bar. of Tireragh, co. Sligo, Ireland, 6 miles W. of Dromore. They are fishing and coastguard stations, near Rathlee Point, on the E. side of Killala Bay.

PULLEY, a tnshp. in the pars. of St. Julian and Brace Meole, co. Salop, 2 miles S.W. of Shrewsbury.

PULLOXHILL, a par. in the hund. of Flitt, co. Bedford, 4 miles S.E. of Ampthill, its post town, and 11 S. of Bedford. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. The surface is undulating, and for the most part a rich grazing land. Gold dust was discovered in the greensand, but the produce was not sufficient to defray the expense of working it. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £200, and the glebe comprises 30 acres. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £210. The church, dedicated to St. James, has been recently restored and enlarged. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum. There is a National school. Earl de Grey is lord of the manor.

PULSHASY, a hmlt. in the bar. of Ballymoe, co. Galway, Ireland, 5 miles N.E. of Dunmore.

PULTENEY-TOWN, a vil. in the par. of Wick, co. Caithness, Scotland, 1 mile from Wick, of which it is a populous suburb. It is situated under Wick Head, where the Wick Water falls into the Bay of the same name. It was founded in 1808 by the British Fisheries Society, and has on the pier head a fixed light at Pulteney Tower 25 feet high, put up in 1837. The inhabitants are principally engaged in the herring fishery, and in the distilleries.

PULVERBATCH. See CHURCH PULVERBATCH, co. Salop.

PUMNEY, a farm in the par. of St. Helen, hund. of Hormer, co. Berks, 2 miles N.E. of Abingdon. It is situated on the Thames.

PUMPSAINT. See LLANPUMPSAINT, co. Carmarthen.

PUNCHESTON, a par. in the hund. of Kemess, co. Pembroke, 6 miles S.E. of Fishguard, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Cleddy. There are traces of Castell Mael Camp. The land is of a hilly nature. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £101. The living was once held by Gambold, author of a "Welch and Latin Dictionary."

PUNCKNOWLE, a par. in the hund. of Uggscombe, Dorchester div. of co. Dorset, 6 miles S.E. of Bridport, its post town, and 10 W. of Dorchester. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Bride, near the coast of the English Channel. The par. includes the hmlt. of West Bexington, once a considerable village, which was burnt by the French in 1470, who carried off the inhabitants. There are several limestone quarries. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in agriculture, and some of the women in making fishing nets. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £300, and the glebe comprises 40 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £300. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient stone structure with a spired tower. The parochial charities produce about £6 per annum. There is a small school. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. There are traces of Roman encampments, and about 1,200 ancient coins were discovered here in 1791.

PURBECK, ISLE OF, properly a peninsula, forming the S.E. angle of co. Dorset. It is surrounded by the sea on the S. and E., while on the N. it is divided from the mainland by Poole Harbour and the Frome, and on the N.W. by a rivulet called Luckford Lake. It comprises the hunds. of Hasilor and Rowbarrow, with Corfe Castle near the centre, and Studland and Swanwich bays on the coast. It is near 12 miles long by 7 broad, and is traversed from W. to E. by a chalky ridge of hills from Warbarrow Down to Foreland Point, on the coast, dividing it into two sections. The southern half is generally fertile, with a subsoil of greensand, while the northern is mostly barren heath on a subsoil of London clay. Prior to the 17th century it was a royal forest, and some of the old hunting seats are still remaining, having been converted into farmhouses. The prevailing rock is limestone, with oolite and Portland stone, in parts, as at Durlestone and St. Alban's Heads. One variety of the limestone, called Purbeck marble, was formerly much used in the building of churches, being susceptible of a good polish, but is deficient in durability under exposure to the air. It weighs about 150 lbs. per cubic foot, and abounds in shells and fossils, including several species of the iguanodon, crocodile, and plesiosaurus. There are also found a kind of slate, a very hard paving stone, a pure potter's clay, Kimmeridge clay, and firestone near Wareham.

PURBRIGHT. See PIRBRIGHT, co. Surrey.

PURBROOK, a vil. in the pars. of Farlington and Widley, co. Hants, 6 miles N.E. of Portsmouth. It is situated near Portsdown Hill.

PURDIS FARM, an ext. par. place in the par. of Nacton, co. Suffolk, 4 miles S.E. of Ipswich.

PURDYS-BURN, a vil. in the par. of Drumbo, bar. of Upper Castlereagh, co. Down, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 4 miles S. of Belfast. It stands on the river Lagan, not far from the Giant's Ring.

PURFLEET, a hmlt. and chplry. in the par. of West Churrock, hund. of Chafford, co. Essex, 4½ miles W. of Grays, and 6½ from Tilbury. Romford is its post town. It is a station on the London and Tilbury railway. The village, which is small, is situated on rising ground at the mouth of a rivulet which falls into the Thames at Rand's Reach, below Erith. It anciently belonged to the Knights of St. John of Jerusalem, and was called Pourteflete. The Purfleet Barracks and the government powder magazines are in this neighbourhood, also a house with gardens has been built for the use of the Ordnance. The Botany Bay Gardens are attractive to visitors during the summer season. A bridge crosses the Marditch stream, which here forms a little harbour for boats. On Beacon Hill is a small observatory. The neighbourhood abounds in chalk and lime pits. Here was formerly a ferry across the Thames. Steamboats ply daily between London and Gravesend, weather permitting.

PURITON, a par. in the hund. of Huntspill-with-Puriton, co. Somerset, 3½ miles N.E. of Bridgwater, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated near the river Parrett, and is wholly agricultural. The Bristol and Exeter section of the Great Western railway intersects the parish, which is also traversed by the roads from Exeter to Bath and Bristol. The living is a vic. annexed to that of Woolavington, in the dioc. of Bath and Wells. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is an ancient structure, erected in 1450, with a tower containing six bells. The church has some stained windows. The parochial charities produce about £15 per annum, of which £10 goes to a school. There is a parochial school for both sexes. The Independents have a place of worship. B. C. Greenhill, Esq., J.P., is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

PURLEIGH, a par. in the hund. of Dengie, co. Essex, 4 miles S.W. of Maldon, its post town, and 10 S.E. of Chelmsford. This village, which is considerable but chiefly agricultural, is near Purleigh Wash. The parish is extensive, and has a police station near Latchingdon. The land is chiefly arable with a small proportion of pasture and woodland. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £1,141, annexed to the Provostship of Oriel College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to All Saints, has an old embattled tower containing a clock and five bells. The mortuary chapel of the Bourchier adjoins the N. aisle. The register dates from 1593. The parochial charities produce about £3 18*s.* per annum, also the annual rent of three acres of land, which is paid to the parish clerk. Horsmanden's free school is situated near the church, and is endowed with an annuity of £32. There is also a school supported by the rector. A fair is held on the 15th June.

PURLEY, a par. in the hund. of Theale, co. Berks, 4 miles N.W. of Reading, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the Thames and near the line of the Great Western railway. It is chiefly agricultural. The greater portion of the land is arable, with some pasture and woodland. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £300, and the glebe comprises 48 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £281. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is situated about a mile distant from the village.

PURLEY HOUSE, an old seat in the par. of Croydon, co. Surrey, 2 miles S. of Croydon. It occupies the site of an earlier mansion once occupied by President Bradshaw, and subsequently by Horne Tooke, while writing his "Diversions of Purley."

PURLWELL, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Batley, and par. of Dewsbury, West Riding co. York, 2 miles N. of Dewsbury. and 5 N.W. of Wakefield.

PURPLE MOUNTAIN, a lofty summit in the middle lake of Killarney, co. Kerry, Ireland, 5 miles S.W. of Killarney.

PURSE-CAUNDLE. See CAUNDLE PURSE, co. Dorset.

PURSLOW, a hund. in the co. of Salop, contains the divs. of Bishop's Castle and Stow, comprising an area of 64,320 acres.

PURSLOW, a tnshp. in the par. of Clunbury, in the above hund., co. Salop, 5 miles S.E. of Bishop's Castle.

PURSTON, a hmlt. in the pars. of King's Sutton and Newbottle, co. Northampton, 5 miles N.W. of Brackley.

PURSTON-JAGLIN, a tnshp. in the par. of Featherstone, upper div. of Osgoldcross wap., West Riding co. York, 2 miles S.W. of Pontefract. It is a station on the Lancashire and Yorkshire railway. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the Wakefield and Pontefract road, and is chiefly agricultural.

PURT, a vil. in the bar. of Tirhugh, co. Donegal, Ireland, 1 mile from Ballyshannon, of which it is a suburb, and 11 miles S.W. of Donegal. It is situated near the mouth of the river Erne, which is here crossed by the fourteen-arched bridge connecting this village with the town of Ballyshannon.

PURT, a ruined castle in the par. of Abbeyfeale, bar. of Glenquin, co. Limerick, Ireland, 36 miles S.W. of Limerick. It is situated near the confluence of the rivers Allaghaum and Feale, and was once a stronghold of the Geraldines.

PURTHEN, a stream of the co. of Brecon. See PYRRDIN.

PURTON, a par. in the hund. of Highworth, co. Wilts, 6 miles N.W. of Swindon, its post town, and 4 N.E. of Wootton Bassett. It is a station on the Cheltenham branch of the Great Western railway. The village is situated on an eminence near the Wilts and Berks canal, and is chiefly agricultural. Red-street, in this parish, is the site of a battle between the royalists and parliamentarians. At a short distance from the village are traces of a double-ditched Danish camp. The par. includes the hmlt. of Braydon, once a forest, but disafforested in the 5th of Charles II. The Cricklade union poorhouse is situated in this parish. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £690. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a commodious structure with two towers, one of which is crowned with a lofty spire, and contains five bells. The interior of the church contains monuments to the families of Ashley Cooper and Maskelyne. The parochial charities produce about £97 per annum, of which £17 goes to Stephen's school. There is a National school for both sexes. The Independents and Primitive Methodists have each a place of worship. Dr. Maskelyne, the Astronomer Royal, was buried here in 1811.

PURTON, a tythg. in the par. of Lydney, co. Gloucester, 3 miles N.W. of Berkeley. There is a ferry over the Severn sands.

PUSEY, a par. in the hund. of Ganfield, co. Berks, 5 miles E. by N. of Great Faringdon, its post town, and 12 from Oxford. The village, which is of small extent, is situated in the vale of White Horse, on the river Ock. The inhabitants are wholly agricultural. Pusey was the Saxon Pefesige, and was held under a grant from Canute by the Puseys, one of whom, Charles Pusey, recovered the manor in Chancery, before Lord Chancellor Jeffreys, by production in court of the identical horn entrusted to his ancestors by Canute the Great, above 700 years before. The horn is that of an ox, and is of a dark brown colour, 2 feet in length, and upon it is the inscription, "Kyng Knowd gave Willyam Pewse Thys horn to hold by thy Lond." It was perhaps used for drinking, or more probably as a hunting horn. The old Berkshire hounds have a meet in this parish. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £173, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to All Saints, contains a marble monument to J. Allen Pusey, and a singular epitaph to Lady O'Loonry, grandniece of Burke, who went by the name of "Sublime." The church was rebuilt by J. Allen Pusey about 1754. Buckland House and Pusey House are the principal residences.

PUTFORD, EAST, a par. in the hund. of Shebbear, co. Devon, 9 miles W. of Great Torrington, its post town. It is situated on the river Torridge. The village is small, and wholly agricultural. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic.* of Buckland-Brewer, in the dioc. of Exeter. The church is an ancient stone structure, with stained-glass windows. It contains several ancient monuments and brasses. The register is of early date. The trustees of the late Lord Rolle are lords of the manor and principal landowners.

PUTFORD, WEST, a par. in the hund. of Black Torrington, co. Devon, 8 miles N.E. of Holsworthy, its post town, and 9 S.W. of Great Torrington. The village, which is considerable, is situated on the river Torridge, and is wholly agricultural. The soil is of a clayey and loamy nature, with a subsoil of clay. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £195, and the glebe comprises 70 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £186. The church is an ancient cruciform structure, with a tower containing three bells. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum. The Wesleyans and Bible Christians have each a place of worship. William May, Esq., is lord of the manor.

PUTLEY, a par. in the hund. of Greytree, co. Hereford, 5 miles W. of Ledbury, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated to the S. of the road leading from Ledbury to Hereford. The inhabitants are chiefly agricultural. The soil is of a heavy nature, but very fertile. Hops are grown in this parish. A hard clay stone is quarried for the repair of the roads. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £110, and the glebe comprises 20 acres. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £118, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church has a square embattled tower containing three bells. The church is partly enveloped in ivy. The churchyard contains a cross of great antiquity. The parochial charities produce about £5 per annum. Putley Court, a modern mansion, is the principal residence. Major Stock is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

PUTLEY, a tnshp. in the par of Woolhope, hund. of Greytree, co. Hereford, 6 miles S.W. of Ledbury.

PUTLOE, a tythg. in the par. of Standish, hund. of Whitstone, co. Gloucester, 5 miles S. of Gloucester. It is situated on the road from Gloucester to Bristol.

PUTNEY, a par. and post town in the W. div. of Brixton hund., co. Surrey, 4½ miles from Hyde Park Corner, and 6 S.W. of St. Paul's. It has a station on the Richmond and Windsor railway. Steamboats ply to and from London during the summer season. It is a suburban district of the metropolis, situated on the S. bank of the river Thames, opposite Fulham. The par. contains the hmlt. of Roehampton. It is mentioned in Domesday Book as Putelei, and was subsequently called Puttenheath, since contracted into its present name. During the civil war in the reign of Charles I. it was fortified by the Earl of Essex, and in 1647 it became the headquarters of Cromwell's army, while the king was prisoner at Hampton Court. An ancient ferry over the Thames at this place is mentioned in Domesday Book, and in 1729 an Act of Parliament was passed for the construction of a bridge to connect this parish with that of Fulham. The bridge, which is of wood, is 805 feet in length, and was erected at a cost of £23,976. The town of Putney is well paved, lighted with gas, and abundantly supplied with water from the reservoir on Putney Heath, in connection with the Chelsea Water Works. In 1861 it contained a population of 6,481. There are many good streets and shops, and the neighbourhood is studded with villas and mansions. The College of Civil Engineers was founded here in 1804, under the presidency of the Duke of Buccleuch, for the purpose of affording sound instruction in the theory and practice of civil engineering and architecture. The impropriation belongs to the Dean and Chapter of Worcester. The living is a perpet. cur. with the cur. of St. John's, in the diec. of London, val. £362, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Worcester. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has a tower containing eight bells. It was erected in the reign of Henry VII., and had a chantry founded by Bishop West. The whole structure was thoroughly restored in 1836, at an outlay of £8,000, including the repairs of the tower and hanging of the eight bells. The communion table is the same at which Cromwell held his councils of war. The church contains two brasses of J. Welbek, bearing date 1478. The churchyard contains tombs of Toland, and of Wood, the traveller, with an epitaph by Walpole. In addition to the parish church there are two district churches—viz. Roehampton and St. John's—the livings of which are perpet. curs. The latter church is situated in St. John's-road, Putney-hill, and was erected in 1859 at an outlay of £4,500. There are almshouses for 12 poor women, founded by Sir Abraham Dawes in 1629. The Independents, Wesleyans, and several other Dissenting congregations have chapels here. There are National and infant schools, also a free school for watermen's children. Nicholas West, Bishop of Ely, Gibbon, the historian, and Cromwell, Earl of Essex, were natives of this place. Queen Elizabeth often visited Mr. Lacy, a clothier, who resided in this parish, and whose house was rebuilt in 1596. A cemetery was formed here in 1856. On Putney Heath, in 1684, Charles II. held a review, and near the telegraph station, to the S. of the village, is an obelisk erected by the corporation of London, in commemoration of Dr. Hartley, who tried here his fire-resisting plates before George III. in 1776.

PUTSBROUGH, a creek in Morte Bay, co. Devon, 7 miles N.W. of Barnstaple.

PUTTENHAM, a par. in the first div. of the hund. of Godalming, co. Surrey, 4 miles W. of Guildford, its post town and nearest railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated under the Hog's Back hills, and is chiefly agricultural. The land is partly in common, but the greater part is arable. On the hills the soil is chiefly chalk, but in other places sand or a sandy loam. The living is a rect.* in the diec. of Winchester, val. £279. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is an ancient structure, with a tower containing five bells. The tower, which formerly had a spire, was burnt down in 1736. The church has been recently restored, at an outlay of £1,400. It contains several ancient brasses and monuments to the Sumner and Cornish families, of which latter was Admiral Cornish. The parochial charities produce about £10 per annum. There is a National school. The Priory House is situated in well-wooded grounds, from which there is a fine prospect.

PUTTENHAM, a par. in the hund. of Dacorum, co. Herts, 4 miles N.W. of Tring, its post town, and 5½ E. of Aylesbury. The village, which is of small extent, is situated near the Aylesbury branch of the Grand Junction canal, and on the road between Aylesbury and Tring. The inhabitants are wholly engaged in agriculture. The Aylesbury branch of the London and North-Western railway passes within a mile of the village. The tithes were commuted for 150 acres of land under an Enclosure Act in 1814. The living is a rect.* in the diec. of Rochester, val. £166, in the patron. of the Bishop of Peterborough. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has an embattled tower containing three bells. The church has a roof of carved oak, supported by figures representing some of the apostles, and emblazoned with coats of arms, said to be those of Queen Elizabeth, James I., and the founder. Not far distant are the Clinton chalk hills.

PUTTERIDGE PARK, a demesne in the hund. of Hitchin and Pirton, co. Herts, 5 miles S.W. of Hitchin, and 17 N.W. of Hertford. It was anciently called Poderich Bury, and was given by William the Conqueror to William Earl of Ewe, from whom it came to the Darells.

PUTTON, or PODINGTON, a tythg. in the par. of Chickerell, co. Dorset, 4 miles N.W. of Weymouth.

PUXLEY, a hmlt. in the par. of Cosgrove, hund. of Cleley, co. Northampton, 2 miles N. of Stony Stratford. It is situated near the river Ouse and Grand Junction canal.

PUXTON, a par. in the hund. of Winterstoke, co. Somerset, 5 miles N.W. of Axbridge, and 2 from the Barwell station on the Bristol and Exeter railway. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the road from Bristol to Weston-super-Mare, and near the river Axe. The inhabitants are wholly engaged in agriculture. The soil consists of loam, with a subsoil of clay. The impropriate tithes, belonging to the Dean and Chapter of Bristol, have been commuted for a rent-charge of £164; and there are 23½ acres of glebe. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £60, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Bristol. The church, dedicated to St. Saviour, has a tower containing two bells. The porch bears the date of 1557. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum. William Windham, Esq., is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

PUXTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Kidderminster, hund. of Lower Halfshire, co. Worcester, 1 mile N. of Kidderminster. It is situated in Kidderminster Foreign, beyond the limits of the borough.

PWLL, signifying a "pool," is a common prefix to the names of many small places in Wales.

PWLLAN, a tnshp. in the par. of Tregynon, co. Montgomery, 4 miles N. of Newtown.

PWLLCROCHAN, a par. in the hund. of Castlemartin, co. Pembroke, 4 miles W. of Pembroke, its post town, and 2 from Milford. The village, which is small, is situated on Milford Haven. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £200. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, was built in 1342, by the Rev. R. Beneger, whose tomb it contains. The parochial charities produce about £12 per annum, which goes to Mear's school.

PWLL DU POINT, or "Point-of-the-Pool," a headland on the E. side of Oxwich Bay, co. Glamorgan. It is the highest promontory in Gower, and commands a fine view.

PWLL-ELECH, a hmlt. in the par. of Llantwit-Major, hund. of Cowbridge, co. Glamorgan, 5 miles S.W. of Glamorgan. It is situated near the coast of the Bristol Channel.

PWLL-GWAELOD, a creek on the E. side of Fishguard Bay, co. Pembroke.

PWLLHELI, a seaport, market town, and municipal and parliamentary borough in the par. of Denio, hund. of Gafflogian, co. Carnarvon, 19 miles S. by W. of Carnarvon. There is a station at Pwllheli Road on the Carnarvon and Nantlle railway. The town, which is situated on Cardigan Bay, was first chartered by Edward the Black Prince, who gave it to one of his followers named Nigel de Lohayren. It is a brisk little seaport, and during the season it is much frequented for sea-bathing, the facilities for which are unsurpassed. It is also a petty sessions town, and a polling-place for the county elections. Many of the inhabitants are employed in ship-building, and others in the coasting trade and the fisheries. The mouth of the Penkos river forms the harbour, which admits vessels of ten tons burden, and has been recently secured by a large embankment, made at a considerable expense, to protect the harbour from encroachment of the sea. The town, which contains over 2,000 inhabitants, has a townhall (built in 1818), spacious assembly rooms, union poorhouse, a savings-bank, and two commercial branch banks. It is a contributory borough to Carnarvon in returning one member of Parliament, and is governed under the new Municipal Reform Act by a mayor, four aldermen, and twelve common councillors, with the style of the "mayor, bailiffs, and burgesses of the borough of Pwllheli." Its revenue is about £140 per annum. The Poor-law Union comprises 32 parishes. It is also the head of superintendent registry and new County Court districts. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to the vic.* of Llannor, in the dioc. of Bangor. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, was erected in 1834. There are four chapels belonging to Dissenting congregations. A good road was constructed from this town to Porthddinllaen many years ago, under the impression that Government was going to make it a packet station for Ireland. From the heights above Denio, where the parish church is situated, there are views of the Merionethshire coast, the summits of Snowdon, the village of Llannor, with its ancient inscriptions, and Bodfel, where Mrs. Thrale was born. Market days are Wednesday and Saturday. Fairs are held on the 5th March, 13th May, 28th June, 19th August, 24th September, and 11th November.

PWLL-Y-WRACH, a hmlt. in the par. and hund. of Talgarth, co. Brecon, 2 miles from Talgarth, and 8 S. by W. of Hay. It is situated under Pen-cader-fawr, in the Black mountains, and near the river Llyffin.

PYDER, a hund. in the co. Cornwall, contains the town of Wadebridge and the pars. of St. Agnes, St. Breock, Colan, St. Colomb Major, St. Colomb Minor, Crantock, Cubert, St. Enoder, St. Ervan, St. Eval, St. Issey, Lanhydrock, Lanivet, St. Mawgan, St. Merryn, Newlyn, Padstow, Perranzabuloe, Little Petherick, St. Wenn, and Withiel; comprising an area of 103,000 acres.

PYECOMBE, or PIECOMBE, a par. in the hund. of Poynings, rape of Lewes, co. Sussex, 5½ miles N. of Brighton, its post town, and 2½ from the Hassocks Gate railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated near the line of the London and Brighton railway, and on the road from Brighton to London, by way of Hixted and Cuckfield. It is sheltered on the N. and W. by the downs. At the northern extremity of the parish is the fort of Wolstonbury on the South Downs. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £321, and there are 30 acres of glebe. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £315, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, which has been restored, is an ancient structure. There is a National school. The manor and chief part of the land belongs to the crown. In excavating for the railway, Roman urns, coins, and other remains were found.

PYLE, a par. in the hund. of Newcastle, co. Glamorgan, 6 miles N.W. of Bridgend, its post town, and 6 from Aberafon. It is a station on the South Wales railway. The village, which is small, is situated near Margam Abbey, and is famed for its good building-stone, similar to that of Rock Abbey. The Llynvi Valley tramroad has recently been formed into a railway. The living is a vic. with Kenvig, in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £110, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. James, contains an ancient cross. The parochial charities produce about £9 per annum.

PYLLE, a par. in the hund. of Whitstone, co. Somerset, 4 miles S.W. of Shepton Mallet, its post town, and 7 from Wells. It is a station on the Somerset and Dorset railway. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the ancient Fosse Way, and is wholly agricultural. The soil is of a clayey nature, with a subsoil of blue lias. The land is chiefly in pasture. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £174, and the glebe comprises 22 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £181. The church, dedicated to St. Thomas-à-Becket, is an ancient stone structure, with a tower containing five bells. The register dates from 1591. There is a day school for both sexes, in which a Sunday-school is also held. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. Lord Portman is lord of the manor.

PYRFORD, or PIRFORD, a par. in the first div. of Godley hund., co. Surrey, 2 miles N.W. of Ripley, its post town, and 3 from the Woking station on the South-Western Railway. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the Wey navigation, and is wholly agricultural. The line of the London and South-Western Railway passes through the parish. The living is a vic.* annexed to the rect. of Wisley, in the dioc. of Winchester. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is an ancient structure, with a wooden spire containing one bell. There is a parochial school. The manor of Pyrford was granted by Queen Elizabeth to the Wolleys, the ruins of whose mansion still exist. The Earl of Onslow is lord of the manor.

PYRRDIN, a river of the co. of Brecon, rises in the mountains near Capel Colben, and unites with the Nedd, or Neath, about 1½ mile above Pont-Neath-Vaughan. It has two cascades, one of 90 and the other of 40 feet.

PYSCOTTWR, a feeder of the river Dothi, rises on the borders of cos. Cardigan and Carmarthen.

PYSLLY-GOED, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanfairtal-haiarn, co. Denbigh, 4 miles S. of Abergele.

PYWORTHY, a par. in the hund. of Black Torrington, co. Devon, 2 miles S.W. of Holsworthy, its post town. The village, which is considerable, is situated on the Bude canal. In the neighbourhood are several barrows which have been opened, and in which sepulchral urns were found. The surface is hilly, and about half the land is moor and marsh, the remainder being good arable and pasture. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £370, and the glebe comprises 185 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £360. The church, dedicated to St. Swithin, has a lofty tower, containing five bells. In the interior is an arch of great antiquity. The parochial charities produce about £12 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes. The Wesleyans, Primitive Methodists, and Bible Christians have each a place of worship.

Q.

QUADRING, a par. in the wap. of Kirton, parts of Holland, co. Lincoln, 8 miles N.W. of Spalding, its post town, and 2 S.E. of Donington. The village, which is large, is wholly agricultural. The par. includes the hmlt. of Eandyke. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1775. The living is a vic.* annexed to that of Wigtoft, in the dioc. of Lincoln. The church is dedicated to St. Margaret. The parochial charities produce about £215 per annum, of which £65 goes to Brown's school.

QUAINTON, or QUINTON-MALET, a par. in the hund. of Ashendon, co. Bucks, 7 miles N.W. of Aylesbury, its post town, and the same distance from Winslow. The par., which is extensive, comprises the tnshp. of Shipton Lee and the hmlts. of Dereham and Doddershall. It lies between the two great roads which branch off from Aylesbury to Buckingham and Birmingham. The village is chiefly agricultural. It was formerly a market town under the Maleta. Petty sessions are held at the White Hart Inn. The surface is in general level, and the soil clayey. An Act was passed in 1840 for enclosing waste lands. From Quainton Hill stone of various kinds is quarried. In the neighbourhood is a decayed stone cross of great antiquity. There are several mineral springs. A portion of the female inhabitants are engaged in lace-making. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £500. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has a tower containing five bells. The interior of the church contains tombs of the Dormer and Pigot families, and a curious monument to Dr. Brett, once rector, and one of the translators of the Bible in the reign of James I.; there are also several brasses, one of which resembles a half figure of a female, bearing date 1350. In 1687, almshouses were founded by R. Winwood, for 8 widows and widowers, but the present state of the funds will only admit half the number to be inhabited. There is a free school. The Baptists have a place of worship. The parochial charities produce about £2 10s. per annum.

QUAIR, a trout stream of the co. of Peebles, Scotland. It rises in the par. of Traquair, and joins the Tweed near Inverleithen. Its principal tributaries are the united waters of Newhall and Shilling-law burns.

QUANTOCK, a tythg. in the par. of Bishop's Lydeard, co. Somerset, 5 miles N.W. of Taunton.

QUANTOXHEAD, EAST, a par. in the hund. of Williton, co. Somerset, 4 miles E. of Williton station on the West Somerset line, and 13½ W. of Bridgwater, its post town. It is situated on the high road from Bridgwater to Minehead. The village, which is small, is wholly agricultural. Near a third of the land is unenclosed common and waste. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £260, and there is nearly 24 acres of glebe. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £325. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The parochial charities produce about £10 per annum. There is a parochial school for both sexes. H. F. Luttrell, Esq., is lord of the manor.

QUANTOXHEAD, WEST, a par. in the hund. of Williton, co. Somerset, 2¼ miles E. of the Williton station on the West Somerset railway, and 15½ W. of Bridgwater. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the turnpike road from Bridgwater to Minehead, and is within half a mile of the Bristol Channel. The soil consists of stonebrash and clay. The parish is bounded on the N. by the Bristol Channel. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £220, and there are 38 acres of glebe. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £232. The church, dedicated to St. Etheldreda, has a square tower containing four bells. The interior has a marble font and a painted window. The church was erected in 1856 at an expense of £8,000, defrayed by Sir P. Acland, Bart., and Sir Alexander Acland Hood Bart., M.P. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum. There is a parochial school for both sexes, erected in 1857, and entirely supported by Sir Acland Hood. The principal residence is St. Andries House, situated in the midst of an extensive and well-wooded park. Sir A. A. Hood, Bart., is lord of the manor.

QUAR, a vil. in the par. of Worth Matravers, co. Dorset, 3 miles S. of Corfe Castle.

QUARFF, an island and quoad sacra par., with Burra and Noss Island, Shetland Isles, coast of Scotland, 4 miles S.W. of Lerwick on Mainland. The populated part of the island consists of a valley, extending two miles in length by half a mile broad, and flanked on each side by lofty hills. This par. is in the presb. of Lerwick, and in the patron. of the crown. The minister has a stipend of £120. The parish church was erected in 1828, this parish having previously formed part of Bressay. There is an Established church in Burra. There are besides a Free Church preaching station, and places of worship for the Independents, Wesleyans, and Baptists.

QUARLES, an ext. par. place in the hund. of North Greenhoe, co. Norfolk, 4 miles N.W. of New Walsingham. Here was once a church, subject to the abbey of Creak, and which was granted by the Countess of Richmond to Christ's College, Cambridge. The lodge, and part of the plantations of Holkham Park, are within this district.

QUARLEY, a par. in the upper half div. of Andover hund., co. Hants, 6 miles W. of Andover, its post town, and 16 N.W. of Winchester. The village, which is of small extent, is situated under Quarley Hill, and is wholly agricultural. On the above-mentioned hill is a double-ditched camp, with an entrenchment traversing Cholderton Hill, and various tumuli are scattered over the adjacent downs. The land is chiefly arable, with a small proportion of pasture and woodland. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £341. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £289, in the patron. of St. Katherine's Hospital, London. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is an ancient edifice, with a wooden tower containing three bells. There is a free school for both sexes. The Marquis of Winchester is lord of the manor.

QUARLTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Bolton, hund. of Salford, co. Lancaster, 5 miles N.E. of Bolton, and three-quarters of a mile S.E. of Chapeltown railway station. The principal portion of the inhabitants are employed in the collieries and calico print works. The soil is of various quality. H. Wright, Esq., is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

QUARMBY-CLIFFE, a hmlt. in the par. of Huddersfield, upper div. of Agbrigg wap., West Riding co. York, 2 miles N.W. of Huddersfield. It is joined with Lindley to form a chapelry.

QUARNDON, a par. in the hund. of Morleston, co. Derby, 3 miles N.W. of Derby, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is chiefly agricultural. There are a chalybeate spring and sulphur baths near the village. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £110. The church has a turreted tower containing two bells. It was erected in 1790 on a site presented by Lord Scarsdale. The parochial charities produce about £35 per annum, of which £20 goes to Curzon's free school, which educates 20 poor children of the parishes of Kedleston, Quarndon, Weston, and Ravensdale Park. There are also two schools founded by William Evans. In the village are several lodging-houses for the accommodation of visitors to the baths.

QUARNFORD, a tnshp. and chplry in the par. of Allstonefield, N. div. of the hund. of Totmonslow, co. Stafford, 5 miles S.W. of Buxton, its post town, and 7½ N.E. of Leek. This place, which borders on the counties of Derby and Chester, is situated at a considerable elevation amidst the Moorland hills, near the sources of the rivers Dane and Dove. The principal village, called the Flash, skirts the road between Leek and Buxton. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. There are a flax and a silk mill at Gradbach. Several coal mines are in operation. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £85. There is also a chapel-of-ease at Gladbach, erected in 1833. There is a free school endowed with an annuity of £15, which goes to the master for the free education of 36 boys. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. Sir J. H. Crewe, Bart., is lord of the manor.

QUARR ABBEY, an ext. par. place in the lib. of East Medina, Isle of Wight, co. Hants, 2 miles W. of Ryde and 4 N.E. of Newport. It is situated near Wootten Bridge, on a creek which runs from Fishbourne to Bridesford, and has remains of a priory founded by Baldwin de Rivers in 1132 for monks of the Cistercian order.

QUARRELTON, a vil. in the par. of Abbey-of-Paisley, co. Renfrew, Scotland. It is situated on the road from Paisley to Beith, adjoining Thorn, and within half a mile of Johnstone. It is celebrated for its excellent coal measures, which occur in five beds or layers 50 feet thick. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the collieries.

QUARRENDON, or QUARRINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Ashendon, co. Bucks, 2 miles N.W. of Aylesbury, its post town. The parish, which is inconsiderable, is situated between the Bicester and Buckingham roads. Nearly the whole of the land is devoted to grazing, the pasture being exceedingly rich. There is no village, only a few farmhouses. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic.* of Bierton, in the dioc. of Oxford. There is no place of worship in the parish. In the midst of a meadow stands the half-ruined church of St. Peter, founded in 1392 by John Farnham. The ruins chiefly consist of arches, which are in good preservation, and tombs of the Lees, who were seated here in Henry VII.'s time. James Dupre, Esq., is lord of the manor.

QUARRINGTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Kelloe, S. div. of Easington ward, co. Durham, 5 miles S.E. of Durham. It is situated near Quarrington-Hill-Top, and was anciently the chief town of a district called Queringdonshire. The inhabitants are principally employed in the collieries.

QUARRINGTON, a par. in the wap. of Aswardhurn, parts of Kesteven, co. Lincoln, 1 mile S.W. of Sleaford, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated near the canal, and is wholly agricultural. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £287. The church, dedicated to St. Botolph, is an ancient structure, with a spired tower containing three bells. The interior of the church contains a font of great antiquity. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum. The Marquis of Bristol is lord of the manor.

QUARRY BANK, a chplry. in the par. of Dudley, hund. of Offlow, co. Stafford, 1 mile from Dudley, and 8 miles N.W. of Birmingham. The village may be considered a suburb of Dudley. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £150, in the patron. of the crown and bishop alternately. The church is a modern structure.

QUARRYHILL, a hmlt. in the par. of Bolton, ward of Allerdale-below-Derwent, co. Cumberland, 1 mile N.W. of Ireby. It is in conjunction with Low Bolton to form a township.

QUARTER, a mining district in the par. of Hamilton, co. Lanark, Scotland, 3 miles from Hamilton. There are extensive collieries, also newly formed ironworks, which employ the chief part of the inhabitants. There is a railway in connection with the Hamilton branch of the Caledonian railway.

QUARTER-BACH, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Gwynfe-Quarter-Bach, par. of Llangadock, co. Carmarthen, 2 miles from Llangadock. It is situated under the Black mountains.

QUARTER HIGH, a tnshp. in the par. of Kirkby-Ireleth, hund. of Lonsdale North of the Sands, co. Lancaster.

QUARTRE-MAWR, a hmlt. in the par. of Llandausaint, hund. of Perfedd, co. Carmarthen, 6 miles S. by E. of Llandover, and 5 from Llangadock. It is situated under Ben Sîr Gaer Mountain.

QUATFORD, a par., partly in the borough of Bridgnorth, but chiefly in the hund. of Stottesden, co. Salop, 2 miles S.E. of Bridgnorth, its post town, and 11½ from Shiffnal. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Severn, and on the turnpike road from Bridgnorth to Kidderminster. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The soil is of a sandy nature, with a subsoil of red sandstone. The par. includes the tnshp. of Eardington, and was once a Roman settlement. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £59. The church, dedicated to St. Mary Magdalene, is an ancient stone structure, with a tower containing three bells. The interior contains some marble slabs of great antiquity. The parochial charities produce about £9 per annum. There is a National school, endowed with an annuity of £5. The Baptists have a place of worship. Quatford Castle is a modern mansion.

QUATT-MALVERN, a par., partly in the borough of Bridgnorth, and partly in the hund. of Stottesden, co. Salop, 4 miles S.E. of Bridgnorth, its post town, and 9 N. of Kidderminster. It comprises the tnshp. of Quatt-Jarvis. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the Bridgnorth and Kidderminster turnpike road. It is bounded westward by the river Severn. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The soil is in some parts sandy, and in others a dark clay. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £430. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, was rebuilt in 1763, with a tower containing a clock and six bells. The interior contains monuments to the Wolryche family, and an ancient font. There is a parochial school, also the South-Eastern Shropshire district school, for the education of children belonging to Bridgnorth, Cleobury Mortimer, Madeley, and Seisdon unions. Dudmaston Hall is the principal residence. There are traces of a Roman camp called "The Walls." W. W. Whitmore, Esq., J.P., is lord of the manor.

QUEDGELEY, a par., partly in the middle div. of Dudstone hund., but chiefly in the upper div. of Whitstone hund., co. Gloucester, 3 miles S.W. of Gloucester, its post town, and 9 from Stroud. The village, which is small, is situated on the Berkeley Ship canal, and near the river Severn. It is wholly agricultural. In 1838, an Act of Parliament was obtained for enclosing 93 acres of waste land, of which two were appropriated for recreation. The soil consists of blue lias. The par. includes the hmlt. of Woolstrop. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £122. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £161. The church, dedicated to St. James, is an ancient stone edifice, with a spired tower containing six bells. There is a National school. Quedgeley House, the principal residence, is situated in a park. J. C. Hayward, Esq., is lord of the manor.

QUEENBOROUGH, a par. and post town in the Isle of Sheppey, lathe of Scray, co. Kent, 2 miles S. of Sheerness, and 17 N.W. of Canterbury. It is situated at the confluence of the rivers Swale and Medway, and was anciently called Cyningburgh, from a palace of the Saxon kings. Queenborough is a decayed market town, and consists mainly of one wide street near the West Swale, which is navigable. It formerly returned two members to Parliament, but was disfranchised by the Reform Act. It was made a free borough by Edward III., who rebuilt the castle from a plan by William of Wykeham, and conferred on it its present name in honour of his queen Philippa. The castle was afterwards restored by Richard II., Henry VIII., and Queen Elizabeth; but was finally demolished by order of the Parliament in 1650. The moat of the castle still remains, and within it is a well 271 feet in depth, which was reopened in 1725. The staple trade was formerly wool, but the inhabitants are now chiefly engaged in the lobster and oyster fisheries, the latter being let on lease. There is a copperas manufactory, which was the first established in England. The town contains a guildhall, under which is a small gaol. The property belonging to the corporation is held under trustees. The two weekly markets granted by Edward III. are now obsolete. There was anciently a hospital dedicated to St. John. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £85, in the patron. of the mayor and corporation. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, is a neat structure, with an ancient tower at the W. end. The parochial charities produce about £51 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes, erected in 1857. A fair is held on August 5th.

QUEEN CAMEL. See CAMEL, QUEEN, co. Somerset.

QUEENHILL, a chplry. in the par. of Ripple, lower div. of the hund. of Pershore, co. Worcester, 2½ miles S.E. of Upton, its post town, and 4 N.W. of Tewkesbury. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Severn. The chplry. includes the hmlt. of Holdfast. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect.* of Ripple, in the dioc. of Worcester. The church has a tower containing 4 bells.

QUEENIBOROUGH, a par. in the hund. of East Goscote, co. Leicester, 6½ miles N.E. of Leicester, its post town, 1½ mile S. of Rearsby, and 2½ miles S.E. of the Syston station on the Midland Counties railway. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the road from Leicester to Melton-Mowbray, and near a branch of the river Wreak, which bounds the parish on the N.W. The inhabitants are chiefly agricultural, but some few are employed in frame-work knitting. The tithes have been commuted for land and corn rents under an Enclosure Act in 1794, and there are 9 acres of glebe. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £106. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has a lofty spired tower containing four bells. The charities produce about £24 per annum, applied to the restoration of the church. The National school was erected in 1848. The Baptists and Primitive Methodists have each a place of worship. Upper Hall and Lower Hall are the principal residences. Mrs. Williamson is lady of the manor.

QUEENSBERRY, a mountain in the par. of Closeburn, co. Dumfries, Scotland, 6 miles S.W. of Moffat. It is situated at the Clyde's Head, and rises 2,140 feet above sea level. It gives the title of duke to the Buccleuchs, and that of marquis and earl to the Douglases of Kinmount.

QUEENSBOROUGH, a hmlt. in the par. of Beaulieu, bar. of Ferrard, co. Louth, Ireland, 3 miles N.E. of Drogheda. It is situated on the Boyne.

QUEEN'S CHANNEL, a passage between the Tongue and Margate Sands, at the Thames' mouth, 4 miles N.W. of Margate.

QUEEN'S COUNTY, an inland co. in the prov. of Leinster, Ireland, is bounded N. by King's County, E. by co. Kildare, a detached portion of King's County and co. Carlow, S. by co. Kilkenny, and W. by co. Tipperary and King's County. It lies between 52° 45′ and 53° 13′ N. lat., 6° 54′ and 7° 47′ W. long. Its greatest length from E. to W. is 37 miles, and from N. to S. 33 miles. Its area is 664 square miles, or 424,854 statute acres; of which 342,422 acres are arable, 69,289 acres uncultivated, 11,630 acres in plantations, 1,117 acres in towns, and 396 acres under water. The population in 1841 was 153,930, in 1851 it was 111,623, and in 1861 it had fallen to 90,650, or 137 to every square mile of the entire surface—little more than half of the number in 1841, when there were 232 to every square mile. The number of persons from this county who emigrated from Irish ports, stating it was not their intention to return, from the 1st May, 1851, to the 31st December, 1864, was 23,442, or nearly 16 per cent. of the population at the former dates. The number of inhabited houses in 1861 was 16,768, and of uninhabited 533. The poor-law valuation in 1851 was £223,299, and the general valuation in 1861 was £257,249. The county was anciently comprehended in the districts of Leix on the N. and E., and of Ossory on the W. The latter kingdom was of considerable importance, and its king took an active part in the war undertaken by Roderick O'Conor, King Paramount of Ireland, against Dermod MacMurrough, King of Leinster, which led to the invasion by Strongbow and the English, and his territories were repeatedly ravaged by the invaders. He subsequently made peace with the English, and managed to retain his independence. Queen's County was at this time known as Glenmaleire and Leix, and the latter part was a county palatine, and was subsequently given to the youngest daughter of William Earl Marshal, on her marriage with William de Braosa, Lord of Brecknock. Their daughter married Roger Mortimer, Lord of Wigmore, and from this connection the royal family of England is descended. O'More, an Irish chieftain to whom, in the reign of Edward II., Mortimer had confided the management of his domain of Leix, took possession of it in his own behalf, and resisted all attempts to dislodge him. Meanwhile the Fitzpatricks, the chiefs of Ossory, succeeded in preserving their independence, and were generally friendly to the English. In the reign of Edward VI. Sir Edward Bellingham, the lord-deputy, reannexed Leix to the English pale; and a rebellion in the reign of Mary having been successfully quelled, both districts were united, and named after the queen, the assize town being called Maryborough in her honour. A new rebellion in the latter part of Elizabeth's reign was crushed in 1599 by the Earl of Essex, and the O'Mores were annihilated by his successor, Lord Mountjoy. During the rebellion of 1641, this county was the scene of many struggles between the royalist troops and the insurgents under Roger More, head of the now reduced sect of the O'Mores; and in 1646 Owen Roe O'Neill held Maryborough and many other strongholds, but lost them in 1649 to the royalists under Ormond, who, in his turn, was obliged to surrender to the Cromwellian forces under Colonels Hewson and Reynolds. In the war of the revolution in 1688, William gained a decisive victory over the Irish near Cappard; and soon after a force of infantry and dragoons was stationed at Lea by request of the residents, to protect them from roving bands of rapparees who infested the country, since which time the county has been a military station. The county is for the most part flat or gently undulating. The greater portion is in the basin of the Barrow, but parts to the N. and W. incline to the Shannon. Extending through the county are a series of ridges or escarpments, which, having their rise near Athlone, cross King's County, and, entering near Mountmellick, run southwards past Maryborough in an almost unbroken line. They are principally formed of limestone and calcareous sandstone, varying in height from 12 to 45 feet, and are generally broad at the base and narrowed to a few feet at the top. The Dysart hills, in the S.E. of the county, lie between the villages of the Barrow and of the Nore, and relieve the monotony of the scenery. They are wholly composed of limestone, and consist generally of single elevations, of which the most striking are the Doon of Clopoke and the Rock of Dunamase. Towards the S. the Slievemargue hills separate this county from Kilkenny. The Slieve Bloom mountains, of the Old Red sandstone formation, occupy the north-western part, and form the boundary with King's County. Their summit rises 1,753 feet, and was popularly thought to be the most elevated point in the island, whence it obtained the name of Ard Errin, or "Height of Ireland." They are traversed by a narrow defile, called the Gap of Glendine, the only communication in this part with King's County. The central parts of the county abound in bogs, the Heath of Maryborough extending over 425 acres. The only rivers of importance are the Barrow and its tributary, the Nore. The former, rising in the Slieve Bloom mountains, flows across the N. of the county to Portarlington, and thence S. along the boundary, except where it enters Kildare at Monastereven and Athy, till its reaches Carlow. It is navigable for barges from Athy. The Nore has its source in the Slieve Bloom mountains in Tipperary. It enters Queen's County near Borris-in-Ossory, flowing eastward to Castletown, and then in a southerly direction till it reaches Kilkenny near Durrow. The lower Brosna, which is joined by the Clodagh, rises in the W. of the county, and flows across King's County into the Shannon near Banagher. Lough Annagh, the only lake of any importance, is on the northern boundary of the county. It is only 207 acres in extent, and does not exceed a mile in length. The Grand canal, entering the county at Portarlington, runs 12 miles southwards, and joins the Barrow just below Athy in Kildare. A branch of the canal, about 12 miles long, communicates with Mountmellick. The Great Southern and Western railway crosses the county in a north-easterly direction, and connects it with Limerick, Kilkenny, and Cork on the S., and Dublin on the N. The roads are numerous and well laid out, and are generally kept in good order. The principal portion of the county belongs to the limestone formation, which extends over most of Ireland. The Slieve Bloom mountains consist chiefly of sandstone, with thin beds of limestone and coal; and mica slate is found in the higher parts. One of the seven coalfields in Ireland commences in the Slievemargue Hills, and extends into Kilkenny and Carlow, and is extensively worked. The coal, which is of the anthracite quality, and unsuited for domestic purposes, is purchased by the maltsters and distillers of Kilkenny and the neighbourhood. Iron ore, copper, and manganese exist in small quantities, but are not worked. Potters' clay is found, and made into tiles, crocks, and other coarse earthenware. Slate and (in some places) marble are quarried; and near Mountmellick is found sandstone of soft texture, which is used for chimney-pieces and hearthstones.—The climate is dry and salubrious. The occupations of the population are almost wholly agricultural. The soil is generally fertile, but in some parts, especially towards the N., it is light and unproductive, though capable of improvement. In the Slieve Bloom mountains, a yellow clay, and, in some parts, a strong red clay, produce good crops of oats and potatoes, but are often wet and spongy as well as rocky. The Dysart Hills, and the plain from which they rise, consist of rich loam, and are good grazing grounds; and the lands on either side of the Barrow are rich and alluvial, and specially suited for pasturage. Bogs are to be found in many places, especially about Maryborough, and afford a valuable supply of turf for fuel or for manure. Pasturage predominates over tillage. In 1865 there were 148,391 acres under crop, of which 5,966 acres were devoted to wheat, 23,414 acres to oats, 22,905 to barley, bere, rye, vetches, and rape, 21,105 acres to potatoes, 15,987 to turnips, mangel wurzel, beetroot, carrots, and other green crops, 422 acres to flax, and 58,593 to meadow and clover. 359 acres were left fallow or uncultivated, and 214,132 acres were under grazing land. Upon the several holdings there were 12,822 horses, 65,785 cattle, 97,132 sheep, and 29,818 pigs. The acreage under wheat in 1865 was not one-fourth of that in 1848, when 24,944 acres were sown, since which time the quantity gradually decreased, except during and immediately succeeding the Crimean war, when there was a temporary reaction. The large importations of foreign grain in later years will account for this change. The extent under oats in 1848 was 32,941 acres, or more than 40 per cent. over that of 1865, while that of barley, bere, &c., was only 6,881 acres. That under turnips and other green crop increased from 10,262 acres in 1848 to 15,987 acres in 1865. Flax is still little grown, and only for domestic consumption. The cattle are generally of a very superior description, and have increased in numbers from 50,753 in 1848, the number of pigs increased from 16,571 in the same year, while sheep gradually declined from 198,208 in the same year to less than half that number in 1865. The value of live stock generally increased from £571,390 in 1851 to £661,511 in 1861. The average rent of land is 12s. per acre. The farm buildings and peasants' cottages are generally of a poor description. The farms are divided principally by hedgerows, but ditches and stone walls are occasionally met with. Dairies are numerous, and the butter is much esteemed; some cheese also is made. The woollen trade was formerly carried on to a considerable extent, and broadcloths were manufactured at Maryborough and Mountmellick, but the business is now very limited, and is confined to flannels, friezes, and coarse stuffs. There is also something done in weaving of linen and cotton.—The religion of the county is principally Roman Catholic, 80,025 persons, or 88 per cent., having in 1861 belonged to that persuasion; 9,683, or 11 per cent., were members of the Established Church, and 942, or 1 per cent., were of other Christian denominations. Most of the county is in the united diocese of Ossory, Ferns, and Leighlin, of which Kilkenny is the episcopal seat, but it extends also into Kildare, which is joined with Dublin and Glandelagh. It belongs to the Roman Catholic dioceses of Kildare and Leighlin, with Carlow as the episcopal residence, and of Ossory, with Kilkenny as the cathedral town.—It is divided for civil purposes into 11 baronies, Ballyadams, Clandonagh, Clarmallagh, Cullenagh, Maryborough, East and West, Portnahinch, Slievemargy, Stradbally, Tinnahinch, and Upperwoods, and containing 53 parishes. The chief towns are Maryborough, Mountmellick, Mountrath, Abbeyleix, and part of Portarlington, the rest of which is in King's County; also the market towns of Ballinakill, Durrow, and Stradbally. The county returns three members to parliament, two for the county at large—constituency in 1863, 3,554—and one for the borough of Portarlington—constituency 99. It is in the Dublin, or northern military district; and there is a barrack station at Maryborough, in which town the assizes are held. The county town is in the home circuit. It is governed by a lieutenant and custos, high sheriff, 17 deputy-lieutenants, and about 65 magistrates. The county gaol, county infirmary, and the district lunatic asylum for King's and Queen's counties are at Maryborough. In 1861 there were 83 National schools within the county, besides 39 under the Church Education Society and other societies, and 14 private schools, in which a course of primary instruction was imparted, and there were 19 other schools in which one or more foreign languages were taught. The standard of education has been steadily raised since 1841, when only 33 per cent. of the population over five years of age could read and write, 26 per cent. could read only, and 41 per cent. could neither read nor write. The per-centage in 1851 of those who could read and write had increased to 37, and that of persons who could read only, and who could neither read nor write, had fallen to 25 and 38 respectively. In 1861 46 per cent. of those above five years of age could read and write, 23 per cent. could read only, and the per-centage of persons wholly ignorant had fallen to 31.—The principal seats are, Emo Park, Earl of Portarlington; Abbeyleix, Viscount de Vesci; Durrow, Viscount Ashbrook; Rathleague, Lord Congleton; Ballyfin, Sir Charles Coote; Lisduff, J. W. Fitzpatrick; Indiaville, Des Vœux; Bellegrove, Adair; Stradbally, Cosby; Cremorgan, Moore; Cooperhill, Cooper; Dunmore, Staples; besides many other private residence. The chief antiquities are, a cromlech and rath at Gracefield; a round tower, almost perfect, at Timahoe, near the ruins of a monastery; the remains of two others at Killeshin and Rosenalis; several tumuli around Mountmellick; a rath and the ruins of an abbey at Aghaboe; of a priory at Aghmacart; and of a monastery at Rathapick. There are also the remains of many old fortresses, amongst which are Lea Castle, near Portarlington; the strongholds of the Fitzpatricks at Castletown and Borris-in-Ossory; Castlecuff, in Timehinch, built in 1641 by Sir Charles Coote; and a castle of Earl Strongbow on the rock of Dunamose, about four miles from Maryborough. These last named stand on the top of a single elevation, which projects from the more lofty range of the Dysart hills. They were formerly of great strength and of considerable importance, and were the scene of many acts of bloodshed. The castle was at length destroyed by Cromwell's army, but the remains are yet very extensive, and are among the most remarkable military ruins in Ireland.

QUEEN'S-FERRY, a hmlt. in the par. of Hawarden, hund. of Mold, co. Flint, 2 miles N. of Hawarden, and 7 N W. of Chester. It is a station on the Chester and Holyhead railway. It is so named from the ferry across the Dee.

QUEENSFERRY, NORTH, a vil. in the par. of Inverkeithing, district of Dunfermline, co. Fife, Scotland, 2 miles S. of Inverkeithing, and 4 S.E. of Dunfermline. It is a ferry station situated on Cruick's peninsula, opposite South Queensferry, and is much frequented during the summer season as a bathing-place. There is a natural basin called Cruick's Harbour, which affords accommodation to vessels during rough weather. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the fisheries. A small kind of fish resembling the sprat is taken on the coast in prodigious quantities. Cromwell encamped here in 1651.

QUEENSFERRY, SOUTH, a par., royal and parliamentary burgh, co. Linlithgow, Scotland. The parish, which is of small extent, is bounded by the Frith of Forth on the N. side, and on the other sides by the parish of Dalmeny, from which it was separated and formed into a separate parish in 1636. The town of Queensferry is about 11 miles from Edinburgh, 8 E. of Linlithgow, and 4 S.E. of the Ratho station on the Edinburgh and Glasgow railway. It is situated betwixt the shore of the Frith of Forth and a ridge of hills that skirt the coast, and has an important steam ferry station. It was presented by Malcolm IV. to the monks of Dunfermline, and derives its name from Margaret, Queen of Malcolm Canmore, who frequently used the ferry for the passage of the Frith, which is here only two miles across. As a royal burgh Queensferry was first chartered by Charles I., and under the late Act is governed by a provost, a land bailie, two sea bailies, a dean, and three guilds, and a town council. The municipal revenues amount to about £200 per annum. The town is well supplied with water, but the streets are long and narrow. There is a small pier harbour at Newhall; also another pier for the convenience of boats when they fail to make the former point. In the middle of the strait is a small rocky island designated Inch Garvie, and about half a mile to the westward is Port Edgar, the place of embarkation of George IV. on his return to England. Queen Victoria embarked at Queensferry for North Queensferry on her way to Perthshire in 1842. The principal business is in the coasting trade, and in coals. There are an extensive distillery, a brewery, and soap factory. During the winter season the inhabitants are principally engaged in the herring fisheries. The burgh unites with Stirling, Culross, Inverkeithing, and Dunfermline in returning one member to parliament. The par. is in the presb. of Linlithgow and synod of Lothian and Tweeddale, and in the patron. of the town council. The minister has a stipend of £171. The parish church was restored in 1821. There are a parochial and other schools. The principal residence is Hopetoun House, the seat of the Earl of Hopetoun. A pleasure fair is held on the first Friday in August.

QUEEN'S HEAD, a vil. and ecclesiastical district in the par. of Bradford, wap. of Morley, West Riding co. York, 4 miles S.W. of Bradford, and 32 S.W. of York. It is situated near the head of the river Aire, partly in the tnshp. of Clayton and partly in North Owram. The village stands on the summit of a bold eminence, surrounded by wild moorland country. The population are chiefly employed in the manufacture of worsted goods and in weaving. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £150, in the patron. of the crown and bishop alternately. The church is a modern structure. There are also places of worship for Baptists and Wesleyans within the township of Clayton.

QUEENSIDE, a small loch in the co. of Renfrew, Scotland, 5 miles N.W. of Lochwinnoch.

QUEENSTOWN, formerly COVE OF CORK, a seaport town, partly in the par. of Clonmel, but principally in that of Templemore, bar. of Barrymore, co. Cork, Ireland, 14 miles E.S.E. of Cork. It is situated on the S. side of Great Island, in Cork Harbour, in 51° 51′ N. lat, and 8° 18′ W. long. The population in 1851 was 11,419, including 4,172 persons, passengers and crew on board vessels then in the harbour; but in 1861 it was only 8,719. This town overlooks, and almost literally overhangs, the basin of Inner Cork Harbour, and occupies the steep and southern face of a hill, rising from near the edge of the water to a considerable height. The principal seats are wide and commodious, and the houses are regularly built, and in many places faced with slate to protect them from the effects of the prevailing storms. Previous to 1786 Queenstown was but a small village, occupied only by tide waiters and pilots of Cork, and by a few fishermen. During the French war it was made an admiral's station, and quickly rose in importance. It was used as a port for the embarkation of troops going on foreign service, and a rendezvous for ships about to sail under convoy. Six hundred merchant vessels have been at anchor in the harbour at one time, and 400 sail have left on a single day. It is suited for the scene of extensive commerce. The harbour is 3 miles long by 2 broad, with an entrance 2 miles long and 1 mile wide. It is bounded on one side by Great Island, and on the other by the mainland and Spike Island, which form an oval basin sufficiently capacious to contain and shelter the whole navy of England, and the entrance is commanded by the Carlisle and Camden forts, which frown from the summit of two lofty cliffs on either side, but are not now maintained. Spike Island contains an artillery barracks and a depôt for convicts. There is an ordnance depôt on Haulbowline, a small island opposite Queenstown, and near it, in Rocky Island, two powder magazines have been cut out of the solid rock. Queenstown carries on but little trade. It is resorted to as a port of call where vessels wait for orders to proceed to their destination. From its salubrity, and the comparative equality of the temperature, and the dryness of the air, it is much resorted to by consumptive patients, and other classes of invalids. The climate is reputed by some authorities to be more equable and mild than that of any part of England or France, and even to equal that of Rome or Naples. In summer it is much used as a bathing-place, and is at all times a favourite resort of the citizens of Cork. It contains a parish church in the early English style of architecture, with stained-glass windows; a Roman Catholic chapel, which serves as the cathedral of the diocese of Cloyne; and a Wesleyan chapel. National schools, parochial schools under the Church Education Society, and an infant school; a club room, a literary society, a public library, and reading rooms. It has also a market-house, a fever hospital, a dispensary, and a bridewell. Near the western entrance to the town is a pier erected in 1805 at a cost of £20,000, which forms a promenade, and commands a view of the harbour. In the centre of the beach, near the custom-house, is the club-house of the Royal Cork Yacht Club, built in the Italian style of architecture. The annual regatta given by the club is usually held in the month of July, and attracts the best yachts of the sister country. The government of the town is chiefly vested in the local magistrates; and the Cork Harbour Board have likewise a certain jurisdiction. Petty sessions are held every Monday. A market is held on Saturday. The views round Queenstown are beautiful. Rostill, on Castle-Mary, and the Vale of Cloyne, with its ancient cathedral and round tower, lying on the E.; to the S. the harbour; and to the W. Carrigaline, with its estuary, and the expanse of the river Lee. In a cemetery surrounding the ruins of Clonmel church, a short distance from the town, lie the remains of Tobin, the author of the "Honeymoon," and Woolfe, the author of the verses on the death of Sir John Moore.

QUEENWOOD, a hmlt. in the hund. of King's-Sombourn, Romsey div. of co. Hants, 3 miles N.W. of Romsey, and 10 from Southampton. It was here that Robert Owen, in 1842, established Harmony Hall, on the socialistic principle, since converted into a training agricultural school.

QUEICH, two streams of this name in the co. of Kinross, Scotland. They are distinguished as North and South Queich, and both fall into Loch Leven.

QUEMERFORD, a tythg. in the par. and hund. of Calne, co. Wilts, 2 miles from Calne, and 28 N.W. of Salisbury. It is situated on a branch of the Wilts and Berks canal near the river Marlan.

QUENBY, a hmlt. in the par. of Hungerton, hund. of East Goscote, co Leicester, 7 miles N.E. of Leicester, and 1 mile S.E. of Hungerton. The ancient manor house has been in the possession of the Ashby family upwards of seven centuries.

QUENDAL VOE, a harbour in the most southerly part of the Shetland Isles, coast of Scotland. It is situated between Fitful and Sumburgh Heads, about 24 miles S.W. of Lerwick.

QUENDON, a par. in the hund. of Uttlesford, co. Essex, 6 miles N.E. of Bishop Stortford, its post town, and 3 N. of Elsenham railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the road to Newmarket, and on the river Stort. It is chiefly agricultural. It is a place of ancient date, having existed prior to Edward the Confessor's time. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £150, and there are 35 acres of glebe. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £165. The church was rebuilt in 1861. The register dates from 1687. The principal residence is Quendon Hall. Captain Byng is lord of the manor.

QUENINGTON, a par. in the hund of Brightwells Barrow, co. Gloucester, 2 miles N. of Fairford, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Coln. In the vicinity are traces of a commandery of Knights Hospitallers of St. John of Jerusalem, founded by Agnes de Laci in John's time. Its revenue at the Dissolution was valued at £137 7*s.* 1*d., and the site given to the Kingstones. The tithes were commuted for a money payment in 1754, and there are 75 acres of glebe. The living is a rect. in the dioc.

of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £192. The church, dedicated to St. Swithin, is an ancient edifice built by the Lacys; it has two Norman doorways. The windows have been altered in a later style. The parochial charities produce about £10 per annum. There are Church of England day and Sunday schools. The Baptists have a place of worship. Various Roman coins have been found on the line of the ancient Fosse Way which passed through the parish.

QUENNY, a stream of the co. of Salop, rises in the Longmont hills, near Church-Stretton, and joins the Ony at Halford Chapel.

QUERNMOOR, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Lancaster, hund. of Lonsdale South of the Sands, co. Lancaster, 3 miles S.E. of Lancaster, its post town. It was formerly a forest, and a great portion is still occupied by fells and moorland. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £137, in the patron. of the Vicar of Lancaster. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, has a tower containing one bell. There is an endowed National school for both sexes, also a free school. The principal residence is Quernmoor Park. The manor is held by the crown.

QUERRIN, a cove or harbour at the mouth of the Shannon, co. Clare, Ireland, 3 miles S.W. of Kilrush. It is sheltered by Querrin Point.

QUETHIOCK, or QUITHICK, a par. in the middle div. of the hund. of East, co. Cornwall, 4 miles E. of Liskeard, its post town, and 9 from Saltash. The parish, which is of large extent, is bounded on the E. by the river Lynher, and on the W. by the Tidy, or Tide. The land belongs chiefly to Coryton of Pentilly. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The soil in the southern portion is rich, but gradually deteriorates towards the northern boundary. There are numerous stone and slate quarries, also mines of manganese, which have been occasionally worked with profit, and indications of copper, lead, and silver. The great tithes are in two portions, one belonging to the vicar of this parish, and the other to the incumbent of the chantry of Haccombe, in Devon; the tithes for each of these separate portions have been commuted for a rent-charge of £340, and there are about 30 acres of vicarial glebe. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £326, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Hugh, is an ancient stone structure, with a square tower containing three bells. The parochial charities produce about £4 per annum. The church has several bronze tablets, the earliest of which bears date 1371, also a brass of R. Kingdom, his wife, and 15 children, bearing date 1462. There is a National school. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. A. Coryton, Esq., is lord of the manor. A fair for cattle is held on the last Monday in January.

QUEX, a seat in the par. of St. Lawrence, Isle of Thanet, lathe of St. Augustine, co. Kent, 3 miles. W. by S. of Margate. It is situated on the coast, near the North-Foreland, and anciently belonged to the Quek and Crispe families. The house, and the Wellington tower near it, were rebuilt by the late J. Powell.

QUICK, a hmlt. in the par. of Rochdale, upper div. of the wap. of Agbrigg, West Riding co. York, 3 miles E. of Oldham. It is in conjunction with the tnshp. of Saddleworth, and includes Quick Mere Quarter. A portion of the inhabitants are employed in the mines.

QUIDDENHAM, a par. in the hund. of Guiltcross, co. Norfolk, 2 miles E. by N. of East Harling, and 1 mile S. of Eccles Road railway station. Attleborough is its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on a branch of the Little Ouse, and is wholly agricultural. The living is a rect.* annexed to that of Snetterton, in the dioc. of Norwich, joint val. £636. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, has a round tower surmounted by an octangular lantern. The church is situated on an eminence a short distance W. of the Hall, and has monuments of the Keppel family, one of whom was the celebrated Admiral Keppel, ancestor of the present Earl of Albemarle. In connection with the church is a school supported by the rector. The Hall, once the seat of the Keppels, is situated in a well-wooded park, having in its centre a barrow surrounded by fir trees. There is an avenue of trees extending uniformly for 1 mile, from the church on the high road to Kenning Hall. The Earl of Albemarle is lord of the manor and sole landowner.

QUIDHAMPTON, a tythg. in the par. of Overton, co. Hants, 4 miles N.E. of Whitchurch.

QUIDHAMPTON, a tythg. in the par. of St. Peter, Fugglestone, co. Wilts, 1 mile from Wilton, its post town. It is situated on the river Wiley, and had once a monastery, in which King Ethelbert was buried in 827.

QUIN, a par. and post office vil. in the bar. of Upper Bunratty, co. Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5 miles S.E. of Ennis, and 130 from Dublin. There is a joint station for Ardsollus and Quin on the Limerick and Ennis railway. The parish is 5 miles long by 3 broad. The surface comprises a considerable proportion of bog, but the remainder is chiefly good arable land. It is watered by the river Quin, a tributary of the Fergus. The interior is traversed by the roads from Killaloe to Ennis, and from Limerick to Kilfenora. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Killaloe, val. with two others £279, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was a gift from the late Board of First Fruits in 1792. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to those of Cloney and Dowry. There are several schools. The village is a poor little place, but contains the church, a Roman Catholic chapel, and a dispensary, which last is within the Ennis poor-law union. Quin Abbey, a very interesting ruin, was founded in 1402 by MacNamara, lord of Glencoilean. The principal residences are Quin Ville, Knopouge Castle, formerly a seat of the MacNamara family, and Castle Fergus. Ballymarkahan and Dangan are interesting ruins.

QUINCE, or SQUINCE, an islet on the coast of co. Cork, Ireland, 5 miles W. of Roscarbery. It is situated outside Glandore Bay, opposite Filneshawk Head.

QUINTIN, a hmlt. in the par. of Witter, bar. of Ards, co. Down, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 2 miles E. of Portaferry. It stands at the eastern mouth of Lough Strangford, on the bay of Quintin. Near the village are ruins of Quintin castle.

QUINTIN, a par. in the hund. of Wymersley, co. Northampton, 4¼ miles S.E. of Northampton, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. Land was assigned in lieu of tithes under an Enclosure Act in 1814. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £295. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, has a tower containing two bells. The Rev. Sir H. J. Gunning is lord of the manor.

QUINTON, a par. in the upper div. of the hund. of Kiftsgate, co. Gloucester, 6 miles from Stratford-on-Avon, its post town, and the same distance from the Campden station on the Oxford, Worcester, and Wolverhampton railway. The village, which is of small extent, is situated near Meen Hill, on the summit of which is a Saxon camp with double intrenchments, and near which many skeletons, swords, and warlike implements have been dug up. The inhabitants are wholly agricultural. The par. includes the hmlt. of Admington, and was given by Henry II. to Polesworth Nunnery. Near two-thirds of the land are arable, and the remainder pasture and woodland. A portion of the impropriate tithes belong to the Dean and Chapter of Worcester, and the remainder to Magdalen College, Oxford. The former were commuted for a rent-charge of £63, and the latter for land and a money payment under an Enclosure Act in 1772. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £70, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Worcester. The church, dedicated to St. Swithin, is a stone structure, with a spired tower containing six bells. It is supposed to have been erected by the Lacies soon after the Norman conquest. The parochial charities produce about £16 per annum. The president and fellows of Magdalen College, Oxford, are lords of the manor.

QUINTON. See QUAINTON, co. Bucks.

QUIRAING, a mountain in the par. of Snizort, Isle of Skye, co. Inverness, Scotland, near Uig Loch. It is 1,000 feet in height, and commands views of Skye and the basaltic cliff of Aird.

QUIVOX, ST., a par. in the district of Kyle, co. Ayr, Scotland. It contains the vils. of Whiteletts and Wallacetown. It extends 3 miles in length, with an extreme breadth of 3, and is bounded by the pars. of Monkton, Prestwick, Tarbolton, Ayr, and Newton-upon-Ayr. The surface, which lies low, is moderately even. The soil is light on sandstone and coal measures. The parish is situated on the river Ayr, and is traversed by the roads from Ayr to Galston and Mauchline. The village is situated about 3 miles E. of Ayr, and is within easy access by railway, steampacket, and coach. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the collieries and stone quarries. This par. is in the presb. of Ayr, and synod of Glasgow and Ayr. The minister has a stipend of £294. The parish church stands nearly central of the parish, but 3 miles distant from the bulk of the inhabitants. It was built prior to the Reformation on the site of Sanchar or Sanquhar chapel, which belonged to Paisley Abbey. The church was restored and enlarged in 1834. At Wallacetown are a Free church, United Presbyterian church, Reformed Presbyterian church, Original Secession church, and a chapel-of-ease. The Independents, Episcopalians, and Roman Catholics have each a chapel. There are a parochial and several other schools.

QUIXHILL, a hmlt. in the par. of Rocester, co. Stafford, 5 miles N.E. of Uttoxeter. It is situated on the canal, and near the one-arched bridge over the river Dove.

QUOICH, a loch in the co. of Inverness, Scotland, 17 miles W. of Fort Augustus. It is about 4 miles in length by 1 broad, and gives name to the glen of Glenlochquoich.

QUOILE, or BALLINAHINCH, a river in the co. of Down, Ireland. It falls into Lough Strangford, at the S.W. corner of which is Quoile-quay, which serves as the port for Downpatrick and sub-port to Newry.

QUOISLEY, a hmlt. in the par. of Marbury, hund. of Nantwich, co. Chester, 3 miles N.E. of Whitchurch. It forms in conjunction with Marbury a township.

QUORNDON, a chplry. in the par. of Barrow-upon-Soar, hund. of West Goscote, co. Leicester, 2½ miles S.E. of Loughborough, its post town, and 1 mile S.W. of Barrow-upon-Soar railway station. It is situated on the river Soar and Loughborough canal, and near the Midland Counties railway. The town, which contains about 2,000 inhabitants, is well lighted with gas, and paved. Some of the inhabitants are employed in stocking weaving and frame-work knitting. The tithes were commuted for land and money payments under an Enclosure Act in 1762. The living is a perpet cur. in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £120, in the patron. of the Vicar of Barrow. The church, dedicated to St. Bartholomew, is an ancient structure, with a square tower containing six bells. The church had a chantry founded by the Hamleyns in 1328, also another in 1379. The parochial charities produce about £100 per annum. There are a National and an infant school. The Wesleyans, Primitive Methodists, and Baptists have each a place of worship. The kennels of the Quorn hunt are situated in this neighbourhood. Quorn Hall and Quorn House are the principal residences.

QUOTHQUAN or COUTHBOAN, a vil. in the par. of Libberton, co. Lanark, Scotland, 3 miles W. of Biggar. It contains Quothquan Hill, which rises 600 feet above sea level, and has on its summit Wallace's chair, consisting of a huge rough stone in which, according to tradition, Sir William Wallace sat and held conferences of war prior to the battle of Biggar.

QUY, a chplry. in the par. of Stow, hund. of Staine, co. Cambridge, 5 miles N.E. of Cambridge.

R

RAASAY. See RASAY, co. Inverness, Scotland.

RABY, a tnshp. in the par. of Neston, higher div. of Wirrall hund., co. Chester, 2 miles from Great Neston, and 2 N. of Bromborough railway station.

RABY AND KEVERSTONE, a tnshp. in the par. of Staindrop, S.W. div. of Darlington ward, co. Durham, 5 miles N.E. of Barnard Castle. It is situated on a branch of the river Tees, and contains Raby Castle, the seat of the Duke of Cleveland. The castle, which is built on an eminence, was founded by John de Nevile in 1379. It was bought by Sir H. Vane in the reign of James I., but since that period great additions and alterations have been made. It retains much of its original appearance, being still surrounded with ramparts and a deep moat two acres in extent. A carriage road now passes through the great hall, which is approached under a machicolated gateway. Clifford's and Bertram Bulmer's are the oldest of its towers, and from which there are extensive views. The interior has been much modernised. The castle is surrounded by a well-wooded park. That part of the township which forms the hamlet of Keverstone is situated on high ground commanding a prospect to the eastward.

RACAVAN, a par. in the bar. of Lower Antrim, co. Antrim, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, contains Broughshane, its post town. It is 8 miles long by 4 broad. The parish is traversed by the road from Ballymena to Glenarm, and by the river Braid. The surface is hilly, attaining an altitude of 1,457 feet on Flemish Mountain. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Connor, val. with Skerry, £535. Race View is the chief residence. There are two Sunday and three or four day schools.

RACE-BANK, a shoal near the Dudgeon lighthouse, coast of Norfolk, 20 miles N.W. of Cromer.

RACEIT, a hmlt. in the par. of Shap, co. Westmoreland, 1 mile W. of Shap, on the river Lowther.

RACKENFORD, a par. in the hund. of Witheridge, co. Devon, 8 miles N.W. of Tiverton, its post town, and 10 S.E. of South Molton. The village, which is chiefly agricultural, is situated on the Little Dart river. It was formerly a market town under a charter granted in 1235. The soil is of a clayey but productive nature, with a subsoil of gravel. Stone is quarried for building. The glebe comprises 48 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £311. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient structure, with a tower containing five bells. The interior of the church contains several monuments. The parochial charities produce about £8 per annum. There is an endowed National school for both sexes, also a place of worship for the Bible Christians. Crewshay House is the principal residence. Charles Devon, Esq., is lord of the manor and principal landowner, by whom courts leet and baron are held annually. A fair for the sale of sheep and cattle is held on the 8th July.

RACKHAM, a hmlt. in the par. of Amberley, hund. of West Easwrith, rape of Arundel, co. Sussex, 4 miles N.E. of Arundel.

RACKHEATH, a par. in the hund. of Taverham, co. Norfolk, 5 miles N. of Norwich, its post town. The village, which is small but widely scattered, is wholly agricultural. The par. formerly comprised two villages, Magna and Parva, but the latter now no longer exists, the church, situated in the park, having been demolished and the livings consolidated. It had anciently a small priory cell, the revenue of which was valued in 1428 at £2 1*s.* 3*d.* The road from Norwich to North Walsham intersects the parish. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £416, and the glebe comprises 26 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £400. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is situated in a meadow half a mile distant from the village. There is a free school, which is entirely supported by the lord of the manor. Rackheath Hall, the seat of the Stracey family, is a mansion of white brick, situated in the midst of a well-wooded park. It has recently undergone considerable improvements. Sir Henry Stracey, Bart. is lord of the manor.

RACKS, a vil. in the par. and co. of Dumfries, Scotland, 74 miles from Edinburgh, and 3½ from Dumfries. It is a station on the Glasgow and South-Western railway. It is situated near the river Nith, and about 8 miles from the Solway Frith.

RACTON, a par. in the hund. of Westbourne, rape of Chichester, co. Sussex, 7 miles N.W. of Chichester, its post town. The parish, which is inconsiderable, is situated near Stanstead Park. Near it are the ruins of a lofty castellated building, erected by Lord Halifax, commanding sea and land views. The soil is principally chalk and marl. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £220. The living is a rect. with the cur. of Lordington annexed, in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £183, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church is an ancient structure containing monuments to the Gocenter family. Sir Richard Pole and Margaret Countess of Salisbury, his wife, resided at Lordington, where Cardinal Pole was born.

RADBOURNE, a par. in the hund. of Appletree, co. Derby, 4½ miles W. of Derby, its post town, and 6 N. of the Wellington railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is chiefly agricultural. In the reign of Edward III. Radbourne came from the Walkelynes and Chandoses to the Poles. The surface is varied with hill and dale. The Hoar Cross hounds meet in the neighbourhood. The soil is a strong marl and clay, affording excellent pasture. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £372. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, has a low embattled tower containing three bells. The church was restored in 1844. The parochial charities produce about £142 per annum, of which £126 goes towards Pole's school and the apprenticing of poor children. Radbourne House and Old Park House are the principal residences. E. S. C. Pole, Esq., is lord of the manor.

RADBOURN, UPPER AND LOWER, an ext. par. place in the hund. of Knightlow, co. Warwick, 3 miles S.E. of Southam. It is situated near the Oxford canal.

RADCLIFFE, a par. and tnshp. in the hund. of Salford, co. Lancaster, 7 miles N.W. of Manchester, and 3 S.W. of Bury. It is a station on the East Lancashire section of the Lancashire and Yorkshire railway. The village is situated on the old Roman way, Watling Street, and near the Bolton and Bury canal. This par., which includes the hmlt. of Starling, is one of the smallest in the shire. It derives its old English name from a cliff of red rock on the S.E. side of the river Irwell, below its confluence with the Roach, and facing the village of Radcliffe. The village is built in two detached portions, designated Radcliffe and Radcliffe Bridge, about half a mile distant from each other. The parish is separated from the township of Pilkington by the river Irwell, which is here crossed by a bridge of two arches. A large portion of the inhabitants are employed in the cotton mills; and several coal mines are worked in the neighbourhood. The principal part of the land is in meadow and pasture, with some orchard and woodland. A market house was erected in 1851, at the expense of the Earl of Wilton. There is also a gas company. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £346. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient edifice, with a low square tower. It has an E. window in the chapel, which was restored in 1845, when a N. transept was added. There is also the district church of St. Thomas, the living of which is a perpet. cur.,* val. £150. This church was erected in 1819 at an expense of £5,000, defrayed by the Dowager Marchioness of Westminster. The parochial charities produce about £9 per annum. There are a National school and a Wesleyan day school, also a Sunday-school. The Independents, Wesleyans, and Primitive Methodists have each a place of worship. Bishop Kilbye, one of the translators of the Bible, was born in this parish. There are ruins of Radcliffe Tower. The Earl of Wilton is lord of the manor. Fairs for horses and cattle are held on the 29th and 30th of April, and on the 28th and 29th of September for wool, cloth, and pedlary. Races take place about the middle of August.

RADCLIFFE. See RATCLIFFE-ON-TRENT, co. Notts.

RADCLIVE, a par. in the hund. and co. of Buckingham, 2 miles W. of Buckingham, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Ouse and is wholly agricultural. The par. includes the hmlt. of Chackmore. In the neighbourhood are the remains of Radcliffe House, which have been converted into a farmhouse. About one half of the land is arable and the other pasture. The tithes have been commuted for land and a rent-charge of £168, and the glebe comprises 13 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £434, in the patron. of New College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. John the Evangelist, is an ancient structure, and formerly had a chantry attached to it. There is a day school at Chackmore.

RADCUTT, or RADCOT, a hmlt. in the par. of Langford, hund. of Bampton, co. Oxford, 2 miles S.W. of Bampton-in-the-Bush, and 4 N.E. of Lechlade. It is situated on the Thames, near the ancient three-arched bridge, where, in 1387, Robert de Vere, the favourite of Richard II., was defeated by the Duke of Gloucester.

RADDINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Williton, co. Somerset, 5 miles W. of Wiveliscombe, its post town, and 10 from Wellington. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Batharham, and near the Bristol and Exeter railway. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agricultural pursuits. The soil consists of a white shillet, with a subsoil of rock. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £180. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is an ancient stone structure, with a square tower containing four bells. The church was restored in 1845 and 1852. There is a Sunday-school.

RADERNEE, a vil. in the par. of Cameron, co. Fife, Scotland. The village is of a straggling form. The neighbourhood abounds in limestone, which is worked to a considerable extent.

RADFIELD, a hund. in the co. of Cambridge, contains the pars. of Balsham, Brinkley, Burrough-Green, Carlton-cum-Willingham, Dullingham, Stetchworth, Westley Waterless, Weston-Colvill, and West Wrattin, comprising an area of 23,550 acres.

RADFORD, a hmlt. in the par. of Enstone, hund. of Chadlington, co. Oxford, 6 miles N.W. of Woodstock.

RADFORD, a hmlt. in the pars. of St. Michael and Holy Trinity, in the co. of the city of Coventry, co. Warwick, 1½ mile N.W. of Coventry.

RADFORD, a hmlt. in the par. of Rouse Lench, middle div. of the hund. of Oswaldslow, co. Worcester, 6 miles N.E. of Pershore. The Worcestershire hounds meet in the neighbourhood.

RADFORD, a tnshp. in the par. of Worksop, wap. of Bassetlaw, co. Notts, 2 miles from Worksop. It is situated near Sherwood Forest, on the river Ryton.

RADFORD, OLD and NEW, a par. and tnshp. in the S. div. of Broxtow wap., co. Nottingham, 1 mile N.W. of Nottingham, its post town. It is a station on the Nottingham and Mansfield branch of the Midland railway. The parish, which was formerly a part of the ancient forest of Sherwood, is situated on the river Leen, and on a branch of the Grantham canal. It comprises the tnshps. of Old and New Radford, the latter of which has recently been erected into a separate ecclesiastical district; also the hmlt. of Hyson-Green. The town, which is an extensive modern suburb of Nottingham, is well lighted with gas, and contains several good streets. A large portion of the inhabitants are employed in manufactures similar to those at Nottingham. There are extensive bobbin manufactories, bleach works, cotton and worsted mills, good collieries, and several corn mills. The more ancient part of the town is built on the river Leen, but the modern portion adjoins the western limits of Nottingham, extending along the Derby and Alfreton roads. In 1861 the parish contained 13,495 inhabitants, and the ecclesiastical district of New Radford, 5,145. The Poor-law Union of Radford comprises 4 parishes or townships. The Peverel Court, which has jurisdiction over the whole of the honour of Peverel, extending into the counties of Derby, Leicester, and York, has from time immemorial been held here. A priory of Black canons was founded here about 1102, by William de Luvitot, which, at the Dissolution, had a revenue of £302 6*s.* 10*d.* The impropriation belongs to the crown. The glebe comprises 57 acres. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £293. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, has a tower at the W. end containing two bells. The church was rebuilt in 1812. There is also a district church at New Radford, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £150. There are National schools for both sexes. The Wesleyans, Independents, Baptists, Methodist New Connexion, Association, Old, and Primitive Methodists, have each a place of worship. George Gregory, Esq., is lord of the manor.

RADFORD-SEMELE, a par. in the Kenilworth div. of Knightlow hund., co. Warwick, 1¼ mile E. of Leamington, its nearest railway station and post town, and 4 miles E. of Warwick. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the Napton and Warwick canal, and is chiefly agricultural. The soil consists of loam and clay, with a subsoil of clay. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £136. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is an ancient structure, with a tower containing four bells. The chancel was restored in 1833, and three stained windows were inserted in 1837. The register dates from 1565. The parochial charities produce about £17 per annum. There is a village school for both sexes. F. E. Williams, Esq., is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

RADIPOLE, a par. in the hund. of Culliford-Tree, Dorchester div. of co. Dorset, 2 miles N.W. of Weymouth, its post town, and 5 S. of Dorchester. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the harbour formed by the mouth of the river Wey. There are a mineral spring (discovered in 1830) and sulphur baths in the neighbourhood. The land is nearly evenly divided between arable and pasture. Previous to the dissolution of monasteries, the manor belonged to Cerne-Abbas convent. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £280, and the glebe comprises 3½ acres. The living is a cur.* annexed to the rect.* of Melcombe Regis, in the dioc. of Sarum. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, was rebuilt in 1817, and is the mother church to Melcombe Regis. There are places of worship for the Independents and Roman Catholics. The neighbourhood is studded with residences, the principal of which are Nottington House and Corfe Hill. A portion of the parish is in the borough of Weymouth.

RADLEY, a par. in the hund. of Hormer, co. Berks, 2½ miles N.E. of Abingdon, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the line of the Oxford railway. The parish is bounded by the navigable river Isis, and is wholly agricultural. Radley once belonged to the priory of Abingdon, and in the reign of Elizabeth was purchased by George Stonehouse, Esq., one of the clerks of the Board of Green Cloth. The par. comprises the lib. of Thruppwick and a portion of the tnshp. of Kennington. The soil consists of a rich loamy earth. The living is a don. cur. in the dioc. of Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. James, was rebuilt in 1842, with an embattled tower. The interior of the church contains effigies and monuments of the Stonehouse family. The parochial charities produce about £4 per annum. The Hall is the principal residence. Sir G. Bowyer, Bart., is lord of the manor and chief landowner.

RADLOW, a hund. in the co. of Hereford, contains the pars. of Ashperton, Aylton, Bishop's Frome, Bosbury, Canon-Frome, Castle-Frome, Coddington, Colwall, Cradley, Donnington, Eastnor, Evesbatch, Ledbury, Lugwardine, Little-Marcle, Moreton-Jeffries, Munsley, Pixley, Stoke-Edith, Stretton-Grandison, Tarrington, Weston-Beggard, and Yarkhill; comprising an area of 53,340 acres.

RADMORE, a hmlt. in Cannock Chase, co. Stafford. This was the site of a Cistercian priory, founded in 1140 by Queen Maud, and afterwards removed to Stoneleigh in Warwickshire.

RADNAGE, a par. in the hund. of Desborough, co. Bucks, 6 miles N.W. of High Wycombe, its post town, and 3 N.E. of Stokenchurch. The village, which is of small extent, is situated in a valley in the midst of lofty hills. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. Nearly two-thirds of the land are arable, and the remainder pasture, woodland, and common. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £220. The church, which is dedicated to St. Mary, has a square spired tower containing four bells. The parochial charities produce about £24 per annum, arising from bequests for the poor. The Wesleyans have a place of worship.

RADNOR, a tnshp. in the par. of Astbury, hund. of Northwich, co. Chester, 2 miles E. of Astbury, and 2 N.W. of Congleton. It is situated on the river Dane.

RADNOR, or RADNORSHIRE, an inland co. of South Wales, lying between 52° 2′ and 52° 33′ N. lat., and between 2° 57′ and 3° 45′ W. long. It is bounded on the N. by co. Montgomery, on the E. by cos. Salop and Hereford, and on the S. and W. by cos. Brecon and Cardigan. Its greatest length from E. to W. is 32 miles, and its greatest breadth from N. to S. about 28 miles. The area is 429 square miles, or 272,128 statute acres, of which about one-third is enclosed, and the remainder mountain, common land, bogs, and moorland. Of the enclosed portion only one-fourth is under the plough. The general aspect of this county is mountainous, bleak, and dreary, with the exception of the south-eastern districts, which are comparatively level, and producing good crops of corn. The hills in the northern and southern portions of the county are of considerable height, but the highest and most connected range is that of Radnor Forest, running nearly E. and W. from the Herefordshire border to the river Ithon, and reaching an elevation of 2,163 feet above sea-level. This wild tract is supposed to have been anciently covered with wood, as its name implies, although it now produces nothing but moss and heath. It is the property of the crown, and is chiefly useful for the production of game, and according to Leland wild deer were once in great abundance. The waste lands are also of considerable value as sheep-walks, and recently large tracts have been planted in larch and fir.—The geological formation of the county is chiefly composed of the strata forming the Silurian system, but on the W. and N.W. sides of the county the upper beds of the older rocks, comprising the Cambrian system, crop out, and limestone underlies the surface generally in the vale of Radnor; but the want of coal prevents the preparation of lime for manure. Syenite and porphyry occur in many parts, and a coarse amygdaloidal trap is met with. The mineral produce is of little importance, comprising only lead, which is found at Caen-Elan, and traces of copper in the vicinity of Llandrindod.—This county is almost environed by rivers, but none of them are navigable. The principal is the Wye, which rises in Plinlimmon Hill, and crossing the north-eastern corner of the county, forms the boundary between this county and those of Brecknockshire and Herefordshire, till it enters the latter county below Clifford Castle. In the S. are the Arrow, Machawy, and Eddow, or Edw. The central districts are watered by the Lug, which rises in the hills to the W. of Knighton, and passing the town of Presteign joins the Wye about 4 miles below the city of Hereford. One branch of this stream, called the Somergill, forms the waterfall called "Water-break-its-Neck," about 2 miles W. of New Radnor, and then flows for a short distance underground below Aber Edw church. The Ithon, or Ython, rises in the Kerry hills on the northern border, and flowing S. joins the Wye about 6 miles above the town of Builth; the Clywedog is a branch of the Ithon, and the small river Aran also joins the Ithon. In the N. are the Glan, a considerable stream, rising on the Cardigan border, and after a circuitous, but rapid, course, joins the Wye a little below the town of Rhayader; the Teme, also a considerable stream, rises in the Kerry Hills, and skirting the Shropshire border for several miles, at length enters Herefordshire a little to the N. of Brompton Park, and joins the Severn a little below Worcester; another stream rising on the northern border also joins the Severn near Llanidloes in Montgomeryshire. With these two exceptions, all the rivers of Radnorshire, including several mountain streams, as the Bach-wy, Claer-wen, Aran, Dernol, &c., besides those above mentioned, all flow directly or indirectly into the Wye. The Wye, with its main tributary, the Ython, abounds in salmon; the other streams are principally famed for trout and grayling. The lakes are Llyn-Gwynne near Rhayader, Llanbychllyn in Llandilo-graban, nearly a mile and a half in circumference, Glanhilyn or Llyn-ellyn in Radnor Forest, and Llyn-Hindwell near old Radnor. The ancient forests of Radnorshire, which were of great extent, have long since disappeared.—In the earliest times of which we have any authentic history Radnorshire formed part of the territory of the Silures, a British tribe who were subjugated by the Romans; the latter had a camp at Cwm, on the right bank of the river Ithon, of which the remains cover about 4 acres. After the departure of the Romans this county was again merged in the Welsh principalities, and was frequently overrun by the Mercian kings, whose territories included a small portion of the county around Presteign, and were separated from Wales by an artificial dyke made by King Offa, the remains of which are still visible in many places. In later times Radnorshire was overrun by several of the Norman adventurers, chiefly of the families of Mortimer and De Breos, who acquired large possessions, and built castles here, but the remains are very dilapidated, the only castle of interest being that of Aber Edw, at the junction of the Edw with the Wye, which was the last retreat of Llewellyn ap Griffyth.—In the reign of Henry VIII. Radnorshire was made shire ground, and is divided into the hunds. of Radnor, Rhayader, Knighton, Keven-Lleece, or Cefn-llys, Colwyn, and Painscastle, comprising 53 parishes and townships. It returns two members to parliament, one for the county, and one for the borough of New Radnor, with its five contributory boroughs, Presteign, Knighton, Cefn-llys, Rhaydrgwy, and Knucklas, the three first being also market towns. By the Poor-law Commissioners the county is divided into three unions—Knighton, Presteign, and Rhayader. It is included in the South Wales circuit. The assizes are held at Presteign, and quarter sessions alternately at Presteign and New Radnor. The county courts are held monthly in New Radnor and Presteign alternately. The eastern part of the county is included in the diocese of Hereford, and the western in that of St. David's.—The county has no canal or other water communication, and only a short branch line of railway to Knighton, but two new lines are in progress, one to connect the Shrewsbury and Herefordshire line with the South Wales line by way of Knighton, Builth, and Llandovery, and the other an extension of the Oswestry and Newton by way of Llanidloes through Rhayader to Builth. The principal road enters the county by Presteign, where it branches off in three directions, one road running by Knighton into Shropshire, another by Llanbadarn-Nynidd into Montgomeryshire, and the third, which traverses the centre of the county, passes through New Radnor, where it again diverges by Llanelweth and Builth into Brecknockshire, and by Rhayader into Cardigan and Montgomeryshire. Besides these there is the old road along the valley of the Wye from Builth in Brecknockshire through Rhayader to Llanidloes in Montgomeryshire, and the road which runs from Knighton along the right bank of the Teme to the Newton road on the Montgomeryshire border.—Radnorshire is pre-eminently a pastoral county, there being scarcely any manufactures except that of flannel, which is carried on only to a small extent; and the quantity of wheat grown in the county is considerably less than the consumption, notwithstanding the sparsity of the population, which in 1851 was 24,716, and in 1861 25,382. Although wheat, barley, potatoes, and flax are grown in the neighbourhood of market towns, and in the fertile district of the S. and E., the principal dependence of the farmer is on his dairy produce and live stock reared on the pasture lands and common lands, which not only support numerous flocks of sheep, but in the more sheltered districts cattle of all sorts. The cows are principally of the Herefordshire breed, and large quantities of salt butter are made. The draught horses are rather below the ordinary size, and in the mountains the native Welsh ponies are still bred.

RADNOR, a hund. in the co. of Radnor, contains the town of New Radnor, and the pars. of Colva, Gladestry, Norton, Old Radnor, and part of Presteign.

RADNOR, NEW, or MAES-HYVED, a par., post and market town in the above hund., co. Radnor, 9 miles S.W. of Presteign, and 26 from Hereford. It is situated on the river Somergill, under Radnor Forest mountains, and was once a place of great importance. It has for a long period been reduced to a village consisting only of a few thatched cottages. It contains a townhall, prison, &c., also the ruins of a border castle of the Mortimers, which was pulled down by John, but afterwards rebuilt by the English, and finally destroyed by Owain Glyndwr in 1401. Many of the cottages are in a ruined condition, and most of the business has been transferred to Presteign. About a mile from the turnpike road is the cascade designated "Water-break-its-Neck," which descends from a height of 70 feet, being one of the largest in Wales. Radnor gives title of earl to the Bouveries. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £304, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has a tower containing a clock and four bells. It is situated on the declivity of a hill, and was rebuilt by Dean Merewether. The parochial charities produce about £27 per annum, of which £15 goes to Green's school. The Dissenters have a place of worship. In 1188 Giraldus Cambrensis, the historian, began his Itinerary at this point with Archbishop Baldwin, who came hither to preach the Crusades. Fairs are held on 14th August and 28th October.

RADNOR, OLD, or MAES-HYVED HEN, a par. partly in the hund. of Radnor, and partly in that of Wigmore, co. Radnor, 4 miles from Kington, its post town, and 3 from New Radnor. It is situated on the river Somergill, and contains the tnshps. of Ednal, Kinnerton, Evenjobb, Upper and Lower Harpton, and Walton. It had formerly a castle, which was burnt in 1189 by Rhys ap Gruffydd, and of which there are still traces. There are also remains of a Druidical circle. The hills of Old Radnor, Stanner, Hanter, and Worzel are worthy of the geologist's attention. Some of the hills consist of trap and greenstone, similar to the rare hypersthene rock of Coruisk in the Isle of Skye. Limestone is abundant, and there is a tram rail from the works to Kington. At Stones, in 1645, Charles I. supped with a yeoman, when retreating before Cromwell. The living is a vic.* with the cur. of Kinnerton annexed, in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £195, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Worcester. The church, dedicated to St. Stephen, is an ancient structure, with a tower containing six bells. The roof of the church is carved. In the interior are an old font, a carved-oak screen, and several monuments to the family of Lewis, of Harpton. The parochial charities produce about £59 per annum, of which £40 goes to Hartstonge's school.

RADSTOCK, a par. in the hund. of Kilmersdon, co. Somerset, 8 miles S.W. of Bath, its post town, and the same distance N.W. of Frome. It is a prosperous village situated on the road from Bath to Exeter, and near the river Avon, which here receives several small streams. This parish is very productive of coal, of which there are several mines in operation, and there are quarries of corngrit and lias stone, which last, when burnt, makes excellent brown lime, that hardens under water. In 1849 two veins of coal were discovered, from 5 to 6 feet in thickness. The coals are conveyed from the collieries by tramways to the Kennet and Avon canal, and by a branch line of railway, which forms a junction at Frome with the Wilts and Somerset section of the Great Western line. The mines are worked by the Countess Waldegrave, and employ a large number of the inhabitants. The soil is chiefly of a light nature, with a subsoil of clay and ruckey stone. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £270. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, has a tower containing five bells. There is a parochial school for both sexes. The Wesleyans, Primitive Methodists, Reformed Methodists, and Baptists have each a place of worship, with Sunday-schools in connection. Round-Hill-Barrow is in this parish. Radstock gives the title of baron to a branch of the family of Waldegrave. The Countess of Waldegrave is lady of the manor and principal landowner.

RADSTONE, a par. in the hund. of King's-Sutton, co. Northampton, 2 miles N. of Brackley, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £90. The church, dedicated to St. Lawrence, is an ancient stone structure, with a low tower containing two bells. There is an endowed free school, with an annuity of £20. William Holbech, Esq., is lord of the manor.

RADWAY, a par. in the Kington div. of the hund. of Kington, co. Warwick, 4 miles S.E. of Kington, and 4 S.W. of Fenny Compton railway station. The village is situated at the foot of Edge Hill, and is chiefly agricultural. On the borders of the parish the memorable battle of Edge Hill was fought on the 23rd October, 1642, and King Charles I. slept at this village the night after the engagement. The tithes were commuted for land at the time of the enclosure of the parish, and the glebe comprises 87 acres. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £114. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient structure, with a wooden tower containing one bell. The church was restored in 1841. There is a free school, also a literary institution. The Duchy of Lancaster is lord of the manor.

RADWELL, a hmlt. in the par. of Felmersham, hund. of Willey, co. Bedford, 6 miles N.W. of Bedford, on the river Ouse. The Wesleyan Methodists have a place of worship.

RADWELL, a par. in the hund. of Odsey, co. Herts, 1½ mile N.W. of Baldock, its nearest railway station and post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Ivell, and near the Biggleswade road. The inhabitants are wholly engaged in agriculture. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £200, and the glebe comprises 9 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £226. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient structure, with a tower containing two bells. Radwell House is the principal residence.

RADWINTER, a par. in the hund. of Freshwell, co. Essex, 4 miles N. of Thaxted, 5 E. of Saffron Walden, its post town, and 7 E. of Audley End railway station. The parish is situated on the river Pant, and is chiefly agricultural. The village is of ancient date, having existed in the reign of King Edward the Confessor. The surface is varied, and richly wooded. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £700, and the glebe comprises 62 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £566. The church, dedicated to St. Mary the Virgin, is an ancient structure, with an embattled tower surmounted by a lofty spire, containing five bells. The parochial charities produce about £11 per annum, which goes towards the repairs of the church. St. Pris's Well is situated in this parish.

RADYR, or RHAYADER, a par. in the hund. of Miskin, co. Glamorgan, 4 miles N.W. of Cardiff, its post town, and 2 from Llandaff. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the Merthyr Tydfil canal, and near the river Taff. Limestone abounds, and is extensively quarried. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £115. The church is dedicated to St. John the Baptist. Radyr Court, formerly the seat of the Matthews family, is now a farmhouse.

RAE, a small loch in the par. of Kinloch, co. Perth, Scotland, 8 miles N.E. of Dunkeld. It abounds in pike, perch, and trout.

RAEBERRY CASTLE, an ancient stronghold on the shore of the Solway Frith, co. Kirkcudbright, Scotland, 4 miles S. of Kirkcudbright.

RAEMOIR, a demesne in the par. of Banchory-Ternan, co. Kincardine, Scotland, 2 miles N.W. of Banchory, and 19 W. by S. of Aberdeen. It is situated near the confluence of the river Feugh with the Dee.

RAFFORD, a par. in the co. of Elgin, Scotland. It includes a post-office vil. of the same name. The parish extends 8 miles in length from E. to W., with a varying breadth of from 3 to 4 miles. It is bounded by the parishes of Forres, Kinlop, Alves, Elgin, Dallas, Edenkillie, and Dyke and May. The surface is of a diversified character, in some parts being moory. From the uplands varied prospects are obtained. Within the last half century much of the moor and mossland has been reclaimed, and is now in a prosperous and productive condition. Stone and slate are abundant. The parish is traversed by the road from Forres to Grantown. The village, which is distant about 3 miles S.E. of Forres, is a station on the Inverness and Perth railway. It is situated on the river Findhorn. In the neighbourhood are Sueno's Danish pillar, 23 feet in height, also Burgie Castle, erected in 1602. This par. is in the presb. of Forres and synod of Moray. The minister has a stipend of £233. The parish church was erected in 1826. There are a Free church, a parochial school, and three other schools. Fairs are held at the beginning of April and November for cattle.

RAFFORD, a lib. in the par. of Chalgrove, hund. of Ewelme, co. Oxford.

RAGDALE, RAKEDALE, or WREAKDALE, a par. in the hund. of East Goscote, co. Leicester, 6 miles N.W. of Melton-Mowbray, its post town, and 2 N. of Brooks railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the Wolds near the Roman Fosse Way. It is wholly agricultural. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £40. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient edifice, with a low tower containing two bells. The churchyard has a raised stone cross, and the windows of the church are emblazoned with the arms of the Earl of Ferrers. The parochial charities produce about £5 per annum. Ragdale Hall is the principal residence; it is situated on an eminence near the old hall, which is now a farmhouse. The Duke of Sforza is lord of the manor.

RAGDON, a tnshp. in the par. of Hope Bowdler, co. Salop, 1 mile S.E. of Church Stretton.

RAGGED ISLAND, an islet on the coast of the co. of Cork, Ireland, 5 miles W. of Roscarberry. It is situated near the entrance to Glandore harbour, nearly opposite Filneshawk Head, and is surrounded by dangerous reefs.

RAGHLY, or RAUGHLEY, a vil. in the bar. of Carbury, co. Sligo, Ireland, 7 miles N.W. of Sligo. It is a fishing village, with a pier harbour in Sligo bay, and has a coastguard station.

RAGHTINMORE, a mountain in co. Donegal, Ireland, 3 miles S.E. of Dunaff. It is situated to the E. of Lough Swilly, and attains an altitude of 1,656 feet.

RAGLAND, a hund. in two divs., upper and lower, co. Monmouth. The former contains the pars. of Chapel Hill, Cwmcarvan, Kilgwrrwg, Llandogo, Llangoven, Llanishen, Llansoy, Llanvihangel-Tory-Mynydd, Mitchel-Troy, Penalth, Tintern-Parva, Trelleck, Wolves-Newton, with part of St. Arvan's, comprising an area of 26,170 acres; while the lower div. contains the pars. of Bettws Newydd, Bryngwyn, Dingestow, Llandenny, Penrose, Pen-y-Clawdd, Ragland, Tregare, and parts of Llanarth and Llanvihangel-ystern-Llewern, comprising an area of 18,770 acres.

RAGLAND, a par. and small town in the lower div. of the above hund., co. Monmouth, 7 miles S.W. of Monmouth. It has a station at Ragland Road, about a mile from the village on the Monmouthshire branch of West Midland railway. The town is situated midway on the road from Monmouth to Abergavenny. It is celebrated for the ruins of its moated castle, which stands on a gentle eminence partially hidden from view by a grove of ancient trees. It is said to have been mostly built by one of the Lords Herbert on the old castle erected in the reign of Richard II. It was gallantly defended by the renowned Marquis of Worcester against General Fairfax, after the entire reduction of Wales, and until the imprisonment of Charles I. at Holmby, when at last the marquis surrendered it to the parliamentarians after a siege of 10 weeks. The ruins of the castle cover a large space of ground in which is the Yellow Tower, 10 feet in thickness and 193 in circumference, also a large gateway with machicolated hexagonal towers, a hall with an oriel window, extensive stone court, a chapel and Charles I.'s tower. There are also a terrace 260 feet in length, and an oak tree, measuring 28½ feet in circumference. A fine prospect is obtained from the tower. The Monmouthshire hounds meet in the neighbourhood. There are quarries of building stone. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £301, and the glebe consists of 25 acres. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £270. The church, dedicated to St. Cadocus, is a stone structure with a square embattled tower. It stands about the centre of the village, and contains several monuments to the earls of Worcester and the Somerset family. The parochial charities produce about £6 per annum, exclusive of a share with Eton Bishop. The Baptists have a place of worship. This place confers the inferior title of baron on the Duke of Beaufort.

RAGLEY, a hmlt. in the par. of Arrow, Alcester div. of Barlichway hund., co. Warwick, 1½ mile S.W. of Alcester. Its chief attraction is Ragley Hall, the seat of the Marquis of Hertford. The mansion, which has four fronts, is surrounded by an extensive demesne laid out with oak trees.

RAGNALL, a parochial chplry. in the par. of Dunham, South Clay div. of Bassetlaw wap., co. Nottingham, 5 miles E. of Tuxford, its post town, and 1 mile W. of Dunham. The village, which is of small extent, is situated near the river Trent, and is wholly agricultural. The soil is of an alluvial nature. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Enclosure Act in 1803. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic.* of Dunham, in the dioc. of Lincoln. The church is dedicated to St. Oswald. There is a National school, which is frequented by the children of the parishes of Darlton, Dunham, Fledborough, Laneham, and Ragnall. John Angerstein, Esq., is lord of the manor.

RAHAN, a par. in the bar. of Fermoy, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 2½ miles E. of Mallow, its post town. The par., which contains the vil. of Ballymagooley, is 6 miles long by 2½ broad. The surface is partly hilly, lying among the Nagles mountains, except along the banks of the river Blackwater. The soil for the most part is good, but in the hills there is a considerable proportion of bog and waste land. The road from Mallow to Fermoy traverses the interior. Limestone occurs in the district. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Cloyne, val. £182, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was erected in 1792 by means of a sum chiefly granted by the late Board of First Fruits. There are five day schools. The chief residence is Rockforest, the seat of Sir James L. Cotter, Bart.

RAHAN, a par. in the bar. of Ballycowan, King's County, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4½ miles W. of Tullamore. Ballycumber is its post town. It is 5½ miles long by 4½ broad. The surface, which consists for the most part of bog, is situated in a flat and uninteresting district. It is crossed by the Grand canal and by the Clodagh rivulet. The Brosna touches it on the W. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Meath, val. £115, in the patron. of the Incumbent of Fircall. The church was built in 1732 by the Ecclesiastical Commissioners. The Roman Catholic chapel, or convent, is the head of a church district. Here are also a Jesuits' college and the remains of an abbey.

RAHARA, a par. in the bar. of Athlone, co. Roscommon, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 9 miles N.W. of Athlone, its post town. It is 3½ miles long by 2 broad. It consists of pasture and arable lands, and includes Lough Funcheon. It is traversed by the road from Athleague to Athlone. Wind Hill is a prominent feature in the landscape. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Elphin, val. with Killenvoy, £253, in the patron. of the bishop. There is a Roman Catholic chapel united to that of St. John's. Loughfield and Rahara House are the chief residences. Petty sessions are held fortnightly.

RAHARNEY, See RATHFARNE, co. Westmeath.

RAHEEN, a vil. in the par. of Knocklong, bar. of Coshlea, co. Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 6 miles S.E. of Bruff.

RAHEEN, a vil. in the pars. of Clonenagh and Clonagheen, bar. of West Maryborough, Queen's County, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3½ miles N.W. of Abbeyleix, and 4½ S.E. of Mountrath. In the neighbourhood are the seats of Tillakin and Raheen.

RAHELTY, a par. in the bar. of Eliogarty, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 3 miles N.E. of Thurles. It is three miles long by 2½ broad. The surface consists principally of a good soil with a small proportion of bog. It is crossed by the road from Thurles to Moyne. The living is united to Thurles, which see. There are two private schools and a police station. Acherstown House, Turtulla House, and Rathmanna are the chief seats. Remains of Rahelty Castle are seen.

RAHENY, a par. and post-office vil. in the bar. of Coolock, co. Dublin, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 5 miles N.E. of Dublin. It is a station on the Drogheda railway, not far from Clontarf, on Dublin Bay. The par., which is 1½ mile long by 1½ broad, contains the hmlt. of Eliogarty. The surface consists chiefly of pasture and arable land. Limestone is abundant. Here is a police station and court-house, in which petty sessions are held at intervals. The dispensary is within the Dublin poor-law union. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Dublin, val. £231, in the patron. of the crown. The church is a small building, supposed to have been erected in 1712. There are two day schools. The principal seats are Raheny House, Raheny Park, and Killester. Near the village are remains of a Danish rath.

RAHILL, a par. in the bar. of Rathvilly, co. Carlow, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 1 mile N.W. of Rathvilly. It is 2¼ miles long, and 2 broad. The surface for the most part is good, and is watered by the river Slaney. The parish is crossed by the road from Tullow to Baltinglass. The living is a cur. forming part of the benefice of Rathvilly. There are two free schools. It has the ruins of an old church. The principal seats are Broughilstone House and Rahill Cottage.

RAHOLP, a vil. in the pars. of Ballyculter and Saul, bar. of Lecale, co. Down, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 4 miles N.E. of Downpatrick. It is situated on the road to Strangford. There are a school and the ruins of an old church.

RAHOON, a par. in the bars. of Galway and Moycullen, co. Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, containing part of the town of Galway. It is 6 miles long and over 3 broad. It includes Mutton Island and Claddagh on Galway Bay. The surface comprises a fair proportion of good land, and is partly bounded by the river Corrib. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Tuam, forming part of the benefice of Galway. There are two Roman Catholic chapels and several day schools. Rahoon House and Barna House are the chief residences.

RAHUGH, a par. in the bar. of Moycashel, co. Westmeath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles S.E. from Kilbeggan. The surface consists of a light soil with a small proportion of bog. The road from Kilbeggan to Philipstown crosses the interior, and likewise a branch of the Grand canal. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Meath, val. with Ardnurcher, £359, in the patron. of the crown. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Kilbeggan. Here is a Baptist meeting-house, also three day schools. This parish is the reputed site of a monastery founded by St. Aid in the 6th century. In the vicinity are two or three raths and some ruins.

RAIKES, a hmlt. in the chplry. of High and Low Bishopside, par. of Ripon, West Riding co. York, near Pateley Bridge. It is situated on the river Nidd.

RAILSTOWN, a par. in the bar. of Middlethird, co. Tipperary, Ireland, 3 miles S.E. of Cashel. The parish is small, and wholly agricultural. The land is chiefly arable. The living is a rect. united with Fethard, RAINFORD, a chplry. in the par. of Prescot, hund. of West Derby, co. Lancaster, 5 miles N.E. of Prescot, its post town, and 4½ from St. Helen's. It is a station on the W. section of the Lancashire and Yorkshire railway. A considerable portion of the land now drained was formerly a morass. There are tobacco-pipe and crucible manufactories. The village is considerable. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Chester, val. £135, in the patron. of the Vicar of Prescot. The church, which was built as a chapel-of-ease to Prescot, is an ancient edifice. The charities produce about £30 per annum, which goes towards the support of a school.

RAINHAM, or RAYNHAM, a par. in the hund. of Chafford, co. Essex, 4 miles S. of Romford, its post town, and 3½ N.W. of Purfleet steamboat station. It is a station on the London and Southend railway. The village forms an extensive street skirting the London road, and is traversed by the rivulet Ingerburn, over which is a bridge, and which here falls into the Thames. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The land is of a marshy nature, affording pasture in the summer months to numerous herds of cattle. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £259, and the vicarial for £430 15*s.; the glebe comprises 4 acres. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £412. The church, dedicated to SS. Helen and Giles, is of great antiquity, with a square embattled tower.

RAINHAM, a par. in the hund. of Milton, lathe of Scray, co. Kent, 6 miles N.W. of Sittingbourne, its post town, and 4 S.E. of Chatham. It is a station on the London, Chatham, and Dover railway. It is bounded on the N. by the river Medway, which, in the reign of Elizabeth, had three quays on its banks, with 13 small vessels belonging to this port. The S. part of the parish is poor flinty land covered with wood, but the northern is a rich loam, and includes numerous marsh islands. The subsoil is chalk. A considerable portion of its surface is in hop grounds, orchards, and market gardens. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The village, which is large, is situated on the main London and Dover road. The Tickham hounds meet in the neighbourhood. The great tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £752, and the vicarial for one of £519 17*s., while the impropriate glebe comprises 62 acres, and the vicarial 3 acres. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £404, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church, dedicated to St. Margaret, is situated near the high road. It is an ancient structure, with a lofty beacon tower. The interior of the church contains a carved wooden screen, three stone sedilia, and several monuments to the Tuftons, Earls of Thanet, also brasses bearing date 1409. The register dates from 1592. The parochial charities produce about £22 per annum. There are National schools for both sexes, erected in 1846 on a site presented by the Earl of Thanet. There are places of worship for the Independents and Wesleyans. Rainham manor has belonged to the Tufton family from the reign of Henry III. Sir R. Tufton, Bart., is lord of the manor.

RAINHAM, EAST, or RAYNHAM ST. MARY, a par. in the hund. of Gallow, co. Norfolk, 4 miles S.W. of the Fakenham station on the Dereham and Wells branch of the Great Eastern railway, and 4½ N.E. of Rougham, its post town. The village is small and wholly agricultural. About one-third of the land is arable, and the remainder pasture, meadow, and woodland. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £359 10*s.* The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. with that of West Rainham annexed, £717. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is situated in the park, with a square embattled tower, and contains inscriptions to the Townshend family. The register commences in 1621. Raynham Hall is of the 17th century, built from designs of Inigo Jones, by Sir Roger Townshend, Bart., and contains a collection of paintings, including the picture of Belisarius, by Salvator Rosa, presented to the second Viscount Townshend by the late King of Prussia.

RAINHAM, SOUTH, a par. in the hund. of Gallow, co. Norfolk, 4½ miles S.W. of Fakenham railway station, and 3½ N.E. of Rougham, its post town. The village is of small extent and wholly agricultural. It once had a Cluniac cell to the priory of Castle-Acre, founded by William de Lisewes about 1160. About two-thirds of the land are arable, and the remainder meadow, pasture, and woodland. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £185 5*s.*, and the vicarial for one of £106 8*s., and there is a glebe of 28 acres. The living is a vic. annexed to that of Helhoughton, in the dioc. of Norwich. The church, dedicated to St. Martin, is an ancient structure, with a square embattled tower, and the nave is lighted by clerestory windows. In the chancel is the mausoleum of the Townshend family, also several monuments. The Marquis of Townshend is lord of the manor and sole landowner.

RAINHAM, WEST, or ST. MARGARET, a par. in the hund. of Gallow, co. Norfolk, 4½ miles S.W. of Fakenham railway station, and 5 N.E. of Rougham, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is chiefly agricultural. This parish is in conjunction with that of East Rainham. The greater part of the land is arable, with a small proportion of meadow and woodland. There is a lake extending over an area of 23 acres in the park belonging to Rainham Hall, which is situated in the adjoining parish of East Rainham. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £345 10*s.*, and there are about 155 acres of glebe. The living is a rect. annexed to that of East Rainham, in the dioc. of Norwich. The church of St. Margaret has long been in ruins. The ruined tower is crowned with ivy. The inhabitants frequent St. Mary's church, situated in the park. The parochial charities produce about £12 per annum. There is a girls' school, built and entirely supported by the Marquis of Townshend. The rectory house was the birthplace of the Rev. Thomas Dunham Whitaker, D.D., the topographer and antiquary.

RAINHILL, a tnshp. in the par. of Prescot, hund. of West Derby, co. Lancaster, 3 miles S.E. of Prescot, its post town, and 6¾ from Newton. It is a station on the Liverpool and Manchester section of the London and North-Western railway. The district is studded with villas and well-built residences. A large portion of the inhabitants are engaged in the manufacture of watchmakers' tools. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Chester, val. £178. The church is modern, built by subscription.

RAINOW, or RAINHOW, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Prestbury, hund. of Macclesfield, co. Chester, 3 miles N.E. of Macclesfield, its post town. The village, which is large but straggling, is situated on the road between Macclesfield and Sheffield, and near the Roman way from Manchester to Buxton. A large portion of the inhabitants are employed in the silk and cotton mills, and some in the slate and flagstone quarries at Kerridge Hill. The soil is of a clayey and sandy nature, with a subsoil of rock. The par. includes the hmlt. of Harrop. In the vicinity are numerous collieries. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Chester, val. £120, in the patron. of the Vicar of Prestbury. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, is usually called Jenkin or Saltersford chapel. It is of modern erection, with a square embattled and pinnacled tower containing two bells. The parochial charities produce about £10 per annum. There are National and Sunday schools, also a place of worship for the Wesleyans.

RAINSCOMBE, a tythg. in the par. of Newnton, co. Wilts, 3 miles S. of Marlborough.

RAINSTHORPE. See TASBURGH, co. Norfolk.

RAINTON-CUM-NEWBY, a tnshp. in the par. of Topcliffe, wap. of Hallikeld, North Riding co. York, 4 miles N.E. of Ripon, and 5 N.W. of Boroughbridge. The village, which is of small extent, is chiefly agricultural. The soil consists of clay and gravel. The Wesleyans have a place of worship, erected in 1811. Earl de Grey is lord of the manor.

RAINTON, EAST, a tnshp. in the par. of Houghton-le-Spring, N. div. of Easington Ward, co. Durham, 5 miles N.E. of Durham. The tnshp. is intersected by the Durham Junction railway. The village is considerable. Many of the inhabitants are employed in the neighbouring collieries and stone-quarries. In 1817, and again in 1823, an explosion took place in Plain-pit, which destroyed near 80 lives. The Wesleyans have a place of worship.

RAINTON, WEST, a district par. and tnshp. in the ward of Easington, co. Durham, 4 miles N.E. of Durham, its post town. It is a station on the North-Eastern railway, which is here joined by the Durham junction. The village, which is considerable, is situated on the road from Durham to Sunderland, and is chiefly agricultural. A portion of the inhabitants are engaged in the collieries. West Rainton was separated from Houghton-le-Spring in 1838, and erected into a separate parish. This place anciently belonged to the convent at Durham, and had a chapel dedicated to the Blessed Virgin, but there are now no traces of it. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Durham, val. £310, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was erected in 1825. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. There are National schools for both sexes, also a school erected and supported at the expense of the Marchioness of Londonderry, who is lady of the manor and principal landowner.

RAINWORTH, a hmlt. in the par. of Blidworth, co. Notts, 3 miles S.E. of Mansfield.

RAISBECK, a tnshp. in the par. of Orton, co. Westmoreland, 1 mile S.E. of Orton.

RAISDALE, a district in the chplry. of Bilsdale-Midcable, par. of Helmsley, North Riding co. York, 5½ miles S.E. of Stokesley.

RAISEBECK and RAISE-GAP, a stream and pass in co. Westmoreland, 5 miles N.W. of Ambleside. They are situated near the Cumberland border, and from the latter, which is a pass above 750 feet high, a view is obtained of Helvellyn and other fells.

RAISGILL, a hmlt. in the par. of Orton, co. Westmoreland, 2 miles S.E. of Orton.

RAISTHORPE, a tnshp. in the par. of Wharram-Percy, wap. of Buckrose, East Riding co. York, 9 miles N.E. of Pocklington, and 2 from Burdale station on the Malton and Driffield line of railway.

RAIT, a vil. in the par. of Kilspindie, co. Perth, Scotland, 7 miles N.E. of Perth. It was formerly a separate parish. A portion of the inhabitants are engaged in the linen manufacture.

RAITH, a demesne in the par. of Kircaldy, co. Fife, Scotland, 2 miles from Kircaldy, and 16 S.W. of Cupar. It is situated upon Loch Camilla near Kircaldy Bay, in the Frith of Forth, of which it commands a view.

RAITHBY, a par. in the E. div. of the soke of Bolingbroke, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 2 miles N.W. of Spilsby, its post town, and 7 from Firsby railway station. The village, which is of small extent and chiefly agricultural, is situated on the road to Horncastle. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment, under an Enclosure Act, in 1776. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £301, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, is an ancient structure with a tower containing three bells. The register dates from 1640. The parochial charities produce about £16 per annum, which goes to Lawford's free school, founded in 1683. There is a place of worship for the Wesleyans. Raithby Hall is the principal residence.

RAITHBY, a par. in the Wold div. of the hund. of Louth-Eske, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 2 miles S.W. of Louth railway station. The village, which is small and chiefly agricultural, is situated in a valley near the Louth navigation. The par. includes the hmlt. of Maltby. The glebe comprises 74 acres. The living is a rect. with the vic. of Hallington annexed, joint val. £570. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is a Gothic structure, rebuilt in 1839 at a cost of £4,000, and has a square tower surmounted by eight crocketed pinnacles. It contains several stained-glass windows and an altar-piece representing Christ surrounded by his apostles. The register dates from 1657. The parochial charities produce about £20 per annum, of which £13 goes to the support of Lawford's school founded in 1683, and there are rent-charges of small amount for the poor. The school is situated in the adjoining parish of Tathwell. H. Chaplin, Esq., is lord of the manor and chief landowner.

RAKEDALE. See RAGDALE, co. Leicester.

RAKESBOROUGH, a vil. in the par. and hund. of Oakham, co. Rutland, 2½ miles N.W. of Oakham. It commands a view of the vale of Catmore.

RAKES-FARM, an ext. par. place in the wap. of Kirton, parts of Holland, co. Lincoln, near Swineshead.

RAKE-WITH-MANOR, a tnshp. in the par. of Hawarden, co. Flint, 1 mile E. of Hawarden.

RALEIGH. See RAYLEIGH, co. Essex.

RALEIGH'S CROSS, a meet for the West Somerset hounds, co. Somerset, 4 miles N.W. of Wiveliscombe.

RALIA, a hmlt. in the par. of Kingussie, co. Inverness, Scotland, 4 miles N.E. of Pitmain. It is situated in the district of Badenoch, near the river Spey.

RALOO, a par. in the bar. of Lower Belfast, co. Antrim, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 5 miles N. of Carrickfergus, its post town. The surface is mountainous and boggy, but the arable land is of medium quality. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Connor, in the patron. of the dean. It forms part of the Larne and Carrickfergus Roman Catholic district. There are one or two National schools.

RAME, a par. in the S. div. of East hund., co Cornwall, 5 miles S.W. of Devonport, its post town. It is a small agricultural village, situated on the shore of the English Channel, between Penlee Point and Rame Head, which latter promontory is the nearest point of land to the Eddystone lighthouse. Here is a coast-guard station. Crawsand Bay is partly in this parish, and at the entrance is a beacon on Penlee Point. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £206. The church, dedicated to St. German, is on the cliff, near the ruins of the chapel of St. Michael. The parochial charities produce about £12 per annum.

RAMELTON. See RATHMELTON, co. Donegal.

RAMHEAD, a promontory on the coast of Waterford, Ireland, 1 mile S.E. of Ardmore. It is situated at the northern end of Youghal Bay.

RAMOAN, or RATHMORAN, a par in the bar. of Cary, co. Antrim, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, containing its post town, Ballycastle. The surface, which comprises a considerable amount of bog, lies along the W. shore of Ballycastle Bay. The coast is forbidding, and is only approachable at Ballycastle. A great portion of the Knocklaide mountain is within the limits of this parish. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Connor, val. £357, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was restored in 1812, by means of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits; it has some very old monuments. Here are two Roman Catholic chapels, two Presbyterian and one Methodist meeting-house; also a parochial school, four other public and several private schools. Boyd's almshouses are at Ballycastle, Doonaninny Castle is prominent in the landscape, as are also ruins of Kenbane Castle, standing on a spur of rock running out into the sea. At Glenslush are the remains of Goban-Saor, formerly the seat of O'Cahan, and near Ballycastle are the ruins of Bonamargy Abbey, founded as late as 1509 by MacDonnell. Several raths are also remaining in this parish and on Knocklaide Hill is a cairn pointed out by tradition as the tomb of a Danish princess. Clare Park and Glenbank are the chief seats. Coal and freestone occur, the former in some quantity. Numerous beautiful pebbles are found on the beach. There is a mineral spring at Drumans.

RAMOR, a lough in the par. of Lurgan, bar. of Castlerahan, co. Cavan, Ireland, 16 miles S.E. of Cavan. The lough is about 4 miles long by 1 wide, and has on its shore the market village of Virginia.

RAMORE-HEAD, a promontory near the entrance of Portrush harbour, co. Londonderry, Ireland.

RAMPISHAM, a par. in the hund. of Tollerford, Dorchester div. of co. Dorset, 12 miles N.W. of Dorchester, its post town, and 7 N.E. of Beaminster. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Frome, and is chiefly agricultural. A Roman pavement was discovered in 1799, measuring 14 feet by 10. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £198; and there are 62 acres of glebe. The living is a rect.* with that of Wraxall united, in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £444, in the patron. of St. John's College, Cambridge The church, dedicated to St. Michael and All Angels, is of recent erection. It has a brass of T. Dygney, bearing date 1523; also the remains of a large cross with a figured base, and two smaller ones. The old church was dedicated to St. Mary. The parochial charities produce about £102 per annum. There is a newly built National school. Lord Auckland is lord of the manor.

RAMPSHOLME, a hmlt. in the chplry. of Muker, par. of Grinton, North Riding co. York, 1 mile N.E. of Muker. It is situated on the moorlands under Shunner Fell, and near the river Swale.

RAMPSHOLME, an islet in the lake of Derwentwater, co. Cumberland.

RAMPSIDE, or RAMSYDE, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Dalton-in-Furness, hund. of Lonsdale North of the Sands, co. Lancaster, 5 miles S.E. of Dalton. It is situated on Morecambe Bay, near the Lancashire and Yorkshire railway, and opposite Walney Island. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £105, in the patron. of the Vicar of Dalton. The church is of some antiquity. There is a National school.

RAMPTON, a par. in the South Clay div. of the wap. of Bassetlaw, co. Nottingham, 4 miles N.W. of Dunham railway station, its post town, and 7 S.E. of East Retford. The village, which is of small extent, is situated about a mile from the river Trent, and is wholly agricultural. About half the land is in pasture and common, and there is a large marsh, protected by a strong embankment, on the Trent. The great tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £349, and the vicarial for one of £120; and the glebe consists of 41 acres. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £173, in the patron. of the Prebend of Southwell. The church, dedicated to All Saints, has a lofty tower containing four bells. The church contains tombs of the Babingtons, Stanhopes, and Eyres of Ramton House. The parochial charities produce about £21 per annum, of which £4 goes to the free school. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. The Rev. C. W. Eyre is lord of the manor. There is a curious ancient gateway, which formerly belonged to Rampton House.

RAMPTON, a par. in the hund. of Northstow, co. Cambridge, 7 miles N.W. of Cambridge, its post town, and 2 N.E. of the Stanton railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on a branch of the river Ouse, and is wholly agricultural. Rampton was anciently a market town. A portion of the land is in pasture. The waste lands were enclosed under an Act of Parliament in 1839. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £342. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is built of rubble, with a tower containing two bells. The register dates from the latter part of the 16th century. The parochial charities produce about £20 per annum. There is a National school, of recent erection. The Baptists have a place of worship. Henry Effingham, Esq., is lord of the manor.

RAMSBOTTOM, a vil. and ecclesiastical district in the par. of Bury, hunds. of Blackburn and Salford, co. Lancaster, 4 miles N. of Bury, and 9 N.W. of Manchester. It is a station on the East Lancashire section of the Lancashire and Yorkshire railway. It is situated near the rivers Irwell and Roche, and forms a suburb of the town of Bury. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £710, in the patron. of the crown and bishop alternately. The church is a modern structure. The Wesleyans have a place of worship.

RAMSBURY, a hund. in the co. of Wilts, contains the pars. of Baydon, Bishopston, and Ramsbury, comprising an area of 16,350 acres.

RAMSBURY, a par. and post town in the hund. of the same name, co. Wilts, 7 miles N.E. of Marlborough, 5 N.W. of Hungerford, and the same distance from its station on the branch line of the Great Western railway from Reading to Hungerford. The village, which is large, is situated on the banks of the river Kennet. Ramsbury was formerly a market town and a seat of the bishops of Wilts, in the 10th century, to which 13 bishops were appointed in succession when the see was annexed to that of Sherborne, co. Dorset; and in 1072 the united sees were removed to Sarum. The par., which is extensive, contains the hmlt. of Park Town, with the tythgs. of Axford, Eastridge, and Whittonditch. The village chiefly consists of one long street, and contains several tanning, brewing, and malting establishments. The ancient episcopal palace is still remaining, and is situated near the church, with which it once had a subterraneous communication. The glebe comprises about 70 acres. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £219. The church, dedicated to the Holy Cross, has a massive square tower, strengthened with buttresses. The interior of the church contains tombs of the Dorells of Littlecot, of the Reads of Crowood, and a monument to Sir William Jones, late of Ramsbury House. This church was the mother church to Sarum, and was a cathedral up to the time of the Norman conquest. The vicarage is a modern house, built by a late incumbent. There is a National school for both sexes. The Wesleyans, Independents, and Primitive Methodists have each a place of worship. Littlecot Park, Crowood, The Cedars, and Ramsbury Manor House are the principal residences. The last-named is situated in a park watered by a stream of the river Kennet; and was for many years the residence of Sir Francis Burdett, Bart. At Littlecot Park is preserved a collection of ancient armour. Fairs are held on the 14th May for cattle and toys, and on the 11th October for hiring servants.

RAMSDALE, a hmlt. in the par. of Fylingdales, North Riding co. York, 4 miles S.E. of Whitby.

RAMSDEAN, a tythg. in the par. of East Meon, co. Hants, 3 miles S.W. of Petersfield.

RAMSDEN, a chplry. in the par. of Shipton-under-Wychwood, hund. of Chadlington, co. Oxford, 6½ miles from Woodstock, its post town, and 4 N. of Witney. The village is small and chiefly agricultural. The chplry. includes Poole's Lodge. The living is a perpet. cur.* annexed to the vic.* of Shipton-under-Wychwood, in the dioc. of Oxford. The church was erected in 1841. There is a Sunday-school, Lord Churchill and the Vicar of Shipton being its principal supporters. The Wesleyans have a place of worship.

RAMSDEN-BELLHOUSE, a par. in the hund. of Barstable, co. Essex, 3½ miles E. of Billericay, its post town, and 10 E. of the Brentwood station on the Great Eastern railway. The village, which is small, is situated near the river Crouch, and on the high road from Billericay to Rochford. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The soil is a strong and heavy loam, producing good crops of wheat. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £450, and there are 22 acres of glebe. The living is a rect. annexed to that of Stock Harward, in the dioc. of Rochester. The church, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, is an ancient structure with a spired tower containing three bells. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum.

RAMSDEN-CRAYS, a par. in the hund. of Barstable, co. Essex, 3 miles S.E. of Billericay, its post town, and 9 from Brentford railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated near the river Crouch, and on the high road from London to Southend. The inhabitants are wholly agricultural. The soil is of various qualities, consisting of fine hazel mould in the lowlands, and in the upper part of a mixture of clay and loam upon a subsoil of clay. The land is chiefly arable, bordering in the N. upon some extensive woods and commons. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £370. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is of great antiquity, with a tower containing two bells. T. M. B. Batard, Esq., J.P., is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

RAMSEY, a par. in the hund. of Tendring, co. Essex,

3 miles W. of Harwich, its post town, and 7 N. of Thorpe. The village, called Ramsey-Street, is situated near the river Stour's mouth, a narrow creek of the sea, over which is a bridge on the Harwich road, and near the line of the Great Eastern railway. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. Of late years above 500 acres of land have been recovered from the encroachments of the sea. The surface is in some parts considerably elevated, though in others low and marshy, having to be protected from the sea by an embankment. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £300, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, has a tower containing five bells. The register dates from 1644. The parochial charities produce about £38 per annum. From the churchyard there is a prospect over the valley of the river Stour. There is a parochial school. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. E. W. Garland, Esq., is lord of the manor.

RAMSEY, a par., post, and market town in the hund. of Hurstingstone, co. Huntingdon, 10 miles N.E. of Huntingdon, and 69 N.W. of London. It is the terminus of the Holme and Ramsey branch of the Great Northern railway. The parish, which is extensive, is watered by Bill-Load, a branch of the river Nen, near Ramsey Mere. At Ram's Eye, in this parish, there formerly stood a mitred Benedictine abbey of great wealth and magnificence, founded about 967 by Alderman Ailwine, Duke of the East Angles, and dedicated to SS. Mary and Benedict. At the Dissolution the site was given to the Cromwells, who converted it into a private seat. The tower of the abbey was rebuilt by Aednoth, the first abbot, and contained a good library of Hebrew and other books. Its revenue at the Dissolution was valued at £1,983 13*s.* 3*d.* The ancient gateway is still in a state of preservation, and there are remains of a grange at Ramsay House. The town of Ramsay, which is situated at the bottom of a hill on Burybrook, is well built, and principally consists of two streets, one of them extending northward from the bridge along the bank of the stream. It was afflicted with the plague in 1555, and was much damaged by a fire which broke out in 1731. A considerable portion of the land was formerly fenny, but has of late years been drained, and is now in a high state of cultivation. The surface is flat, and the soil generally rich and light. Manorial courts-leet are held every year in May or June, at which a constable is appointed. The impropriation belongs to Edward Fellowes, Esq., whose tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £648. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £47. The church, dedicated to St. Benedict, or according to others, to St. Thomas à Becket, is a Norman structure, with an embattled tower. The church has remains of stained glass and several brasses. It was thoroughly restored and repaired in 1844 and 1845, the expense being defrayed by the lord of the manor. There is also the district church of St. Mary's, the living of which is a perpet. cur.,* val. £150. The church is of recent erection. The parochial charities produce about £50 per annum, exclusive of almshouses for 12 poor women, erected and endowed by Mrs. Fellowes and E. Fellowes, Esq., in 1837. There are free schools for both sexes, and a spinning school for 50 girls, with an income of £40. There are places of worship for the Wesleyans, Baptists, Primitive Methodists, and Particular Baptists. The manor house, the principal residence, is built out of the ruins of the abbey. Edward Fellowes, Esq., M.P., is lord of the manor. Market day is Wednesday. A fair is held on the 22nd July for cattle and toys.

RAMSEY, an island in the hund. of Dewisland, co. Pembroke. It is about 2 miles in length, by half a mile in breadth, and is separated from the main land by a strait called Ramsey Sound, 1 mile in breadth. Its extremities are defended by two rugged mountains of great altitude. A large portion of the island is in an excellent state of cultivation. Among the surrounding rocks are those designated the Horse, Horse-Shoe, Bitch and Whelps, Ynysberi, Pont-yr-Ellan, Bishop and Clerks, &c. A lighthouse was erected in 1783, and has since been greatly improved. Among the cliffs is a place called the Organ and Choir, from the noise of the birds which abound in large quantities throughout the island. There are ruins of two pilgrims' chapels which formerly existed here. The tide is of considerable strength outside the Sound, which has from 3 to 12 fathoms water. The Nimrod steam vessel was wrecked here in 1860, when all hands perished.

RAMSEY, an islet in the par. of Steeple, co. Essex, 5 miles S.E. of Maldon. It is formed by the river Blackwater.

RAMSEY, a market town and seaport in the par. of Kirk-Maughold, Ayre Sheading, Isle of Man, 14 miles N. of Douglas, and 24 N.E. of Castletown. It is a subport to Douglas, and has a small but safe harbour, where steam-boats between Liverpool and Glasgow call several times in the week. The town, which is of considerable antiquity, was the scene of numerous battles fought between the Danes and the Scots, when the latter had possession of the island, and in the 12th century the good King Olave was murdered here by his nephews. It is built on Ramsey Bay, at the north-eastern end of the island, and near the mouth of the river Sulby, which is the largest stream in the island, and is here crossed by a stone bridge of three arches. It is irregularly built, but the streets are wide, clean, and well paved. It contains a spacious market-place, a good hotel, "The Mitre," several seats and villas, and a court-house, said to be the largest in the island. The harbour was much improved in 1830 by the construction of an additional pier, and on the quay is a lighthouse put up in 1800, with a light 25 feet above sea-level and visible for 10 miles. The bay has shelter from the western winds, with from 4 to 10 fathoms water, and vessels of 100 tons burden can approach the quay, but the entrance is obstructed by the Bahama bank. The principal trade is in the export of wheat, and other Manks produce, and a few fishing boats belong to the harbour. The population in 1861 was 2,891. There are bailiffs' and deemsters' courts, the former held every Saturday, and the latter quarterly, at which a deemster presides. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Sodor and Man, val. £100, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Paul, and situated in the market-place, was erected in 1819 by subscription. The old church of St. Peter's, situated just without the town, is now in ruins, and only used as a burial chapel. There are places of worship for Independents, Wesleyans, and Primitive Methodists. Besides Cowell's grammar school, there are two National schools. Market day is on Saturday.

RAMSGATE, a par., seaport, watering-place, post and market town, in the hund. of Ringslow, or Isle of Thanet, lathe of St. Augustine, co. Kent, 4 miles S. of Margate, and 17 N.E. of Canterbury. It is a station on the Margate branch of the South-Eastern railway. The town is a watering-place situated on the cliffs opening southward to the sea, and commands extensive marine and land views, embracing Pegwell Bay, and the Downs, and in clear weather, the French coast. The par., which includes the hmlt. of Ellington, was part of St. Lawrence par. up to 1827, when it was constituted a distinct par. by Act of Parliament. It is a member of Sandwich Cinque Port, a coastguard station, and a polling-place for East Kent. In Leland's time it had only a small wooden pier, for the maintenance of which the merchants of London paid dues by order of Henry VII. The present pier harbour was constructed between the years 1780—1795, by Smeaton and Rennie. It consists of two basins, comprising an area of about 40 acres, and protected by stone piers, 26 feet in width, on the E. and W. The east pier is 3,000 feet in length, and the west pier 1,500 feet. The inner basin, which can accommodate 200 craft, contains a dry dock, and communicated with the outer basin by flood-gates 49 feet in width. The outer basin, which has a new slipway, built in 1838 on Morton's patent plan, is 480 feet in length, by 60 in width, and will receive vessels of 500 tons burthen. The entrance is 940 feet wide. There is a red tide light on the western pier head, 37 feet in height, and visible at a distance of 6 miles. The piers extend a considerable length out to sea, which causes them to be favourite promenades. From the pier, a flight of steps, called Jacob's Ladder, leads down the cliffs to the bazaar, and tea gardens at Pegwell Bay, which last is noted for its shrimps. The town of Ramsgate, which, in the reign of Elizabeth, contained only 25 houses, had, in 1861, a population of 11,865, and is rapidly increasing. It is well built, containing many good streets and shops; and the boarding and lodging houses are generally of a superior character. The town is paved, lighted with gas, and watched, and under an Act of Parliament, obtained in 1838, is abundantly supplied with excellent water by a company incorporated in 1835. The public buildings comprise the county court, gas works, Royal Victoria baths, assembly rooms, music hall, St. James's hall, working men's institute, literary and scientific institution, besides libraries, bazaars, and other useful institutions. There are two banks and a savings-bank. Townley House, for several seasons the residence of Her Majesty, when Princess Victoria, and of the Duchess of Kent, is now a ladies' boarding school. The petty sessions for the division are held every Monday. An extensive trade is done in the importation of coal, timber, and in the supply of marine stores to shipping; ship repairs are also carried on to a considerable extent. There are breweries, rope walks, and an extensive fishery off the coast. Numerous yachts are kept here for pleasure excursions during the season. The Royal bathing rooms are situated beyond the E. pier, in front of a range of chalk cliffs, and on a beach of soft reddish sand; and on the W. cliff, 100 feet above the level of the sea, are the Royal Kent warm sea-water baths. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £400, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church, dedicated to St. George, was erected at an outlay of £28,000, towards which the parliamentary commissioners granted £9,000. The church is 148 feet in length, with a width of 68½ feet, and has a tower with a lantern 137 feet high. In addition to the parish church, are the district churches, Christ Church, and Holy Trinity, the livings of both which are perpet. curs. There are also several proprietary chapels, the principal of which is the Cavendish chapel, erected in 1840 at a cost of £4,000. The parochial charities produce about £59 per annum, including Petley's bequest of £30 for poor women. There are National and infant schools, also a free school at St. Lawrence. The Independents, Wesleyans, Calvinistic Methodists, Particular Baptists, General Baptists, and Unitarians, have each a place of worship. There is also a Jews' synagogue, situated on the road to Broadstairs, with a house for the minister, erected by Sir Moses Montefiore. In the vicinity are several seats, as East Cliffe Lodge, Pegwell Lodge, Southwood House, Cliffe House, and West Cliffe House. Market days are Wednesdays and Saturdays. A fair is held at St. Laurence on the 10th of August.

RAMSGILL, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Stonebeck Down, par. of Kirkby-Malzeard, West Riding co. York, 12 miles S.W. of Ripon. It is situated in the moorlands on the southern side of the valley of the Nidd. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £135, in the patron. of the vicar. The church is of recent erection.

RAMSGRANGE, a vil. in the par. of St. James and Dunbrody, bar. of Shelburne, co. Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles from Duncannon, and 2 from Ballyhack. It is situated on the road from Ballyhack to Titern and Clonmines. There is a Roman Catholic chapel. Fairs are held on 17th March, 1st May, 1st November, and 20th December.

RAMSGRAVE, a tnshp. in the par. and hund. of Blackburn, co. Lancaster, 2½ miles N.W. of Blackburn. It forms part of the chplry. of Mellor. A large portion of the township is occupied by the East Lancashire railway. The land is partly in pasture, with a soil and subsoil of clay. Stanley Hall, the old manor house, is now converted into a farm dwelling. Lord de Tabley is lord of the manor.

RAMS-HILL, a hmlt. in the par. of Horsemonden, hund. of Brenchley, lathe of Aylesford, co. Kent, 8 miles S.E. of Tonbridge.

RAMSHOLT, a par. in the hund. of Wilford, co. Suffolk, 3½ miles S.E. of Hadleigh, its post town, and 6 S.E. of Woodbridge. It is a station on the Hadleigh railway. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the navigable river Deben, where is a dock. In the neighbourhood are ruins of an old seat of the Peytons and Uffords. The great tithes were commuted for a rent-charge of £453, and there are 16 acres of impropriate glebe. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £50, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to All Saints, has a round tower. The register dates from 1682. Mrs. C. Cripps is lady of the manor, and one of the chief landowners.

RAMSHOPE, an ext. par. place in the S. div. of Coquetdale ward, co. Northumberland, 15 miles N.W. of Bellingham. It is situated in a wild spot on the river Reed under Carter Fell, one of the Cheviots, which here separates England from Scotland, and attains an elevation of 1,602 feet above sea level. A conflict took place at a short distance from this spot in 1575 between the English and Scotch wardens, which is celebrated in the old ballad called "The Battle of Reedswire, or Reidssquair."

RAMSHORN, or RAMSOR, a tnshp. in the par. of Ellaston, S. div. of Totmonslow hund., co. Stafford, 5½ miles N.E. of Cheadle, and 3 N.W. of Ellaston. It is situated on an eminence, and includes Wootton Lodge and Park, also the Waste farm. Miss Unwin is lady of the manor and sole landowner.

RAMS-ISLAND, an islet in the par. of Glenavy, bar. of Upper Massareene, co. Antrim, prov. of Ulster, Ireland. The island lies at the entrance of Sandy Bay, a little over a mile W. of the mainland, to which it presents the appearance of having been joined. It has been much improved through the exertions of Mr. Whittle, who lately resided in the island.

RAMSLEY, a hmlt. in the par. of Tawton, co. Devon, 3 miles S.E. of Okehampton.

RAMSYDE. See RAMPSIDE, co. Lancaster.

RANBY, a par. in the N. div. of Gartree wap., parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 6½ miles E. of Wragby, its post town, and 7 N.W. of Horncastle. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the Wolds near the river Bain, and is wholly agricultural. The parish is intersected by the old Roman road from Horncastle to Caistor, and was forfeited by the family of Dicconson at the time of the Gunpowder Plot. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £86. The church, dedicated to St. German, has a lofty tower containing three bells. The church was rebuilt in 1839. The register dates from 1550.

RANBY, a hmlt. in the pars. of Babworth and Blyth, co. Notts, 3 miles N.W. of Great Retford. It is situated on the Chesterfield canal, near the river Ryton.

RAND, a par. in the W. div. of Wraggoe wap., parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 2½ miles N.W. of Wragby, and 3 from the Snelland station on the Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire railway. The village is small and wholly agricultural. The par. includes the chplry. of Fulnetby, and is intersected by the road from Lincoln to Horncastle. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln. val. £402. The church, dedicated to St. Oswald, has a tower containing two bells. The interior of the church contains monuments of great antiquity. Mrs. Barker is lady of the manor.

RANDALSTOWN, a post and market town in the par. of Drummaul, bar. of Upper Toome, co. Antrim, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 17 miles N.W. of Belfast, and 97 N. of Dublin. It is a station on the Cookstown branch of the Belfast and Northern Counties railway. It is situated on the bank of the river Main, which is here crossed by a bridge of 9 arches. The town contains the parish church, a Roman Catholic chapel, two Presbyterian meeting-houses, a dispensary, and a police station.

The headquarters of the county militia are situated here. Petty sessions are held fortnightly. Spinning and calico weaving are carried on to a small extent. This town was formerly a parliamentary borough, returning two members before the Union. The Earl of Antrim's troops had their quarters here during the revolution, and in 1798 the rebels committed great havoc in the town. Wednesday is market day. Fairs are held on 16th July, and 1st November.

RAND'S-GRANGE, a hmlt. in the par. of Bedale, wap. of Hang East, North Riding co. York, half a mile N.W. of Bedale. It consists of a farmhouse, and comprises an area of 344 acres.

RANDS, THE, a reach or bend of the Thames between Erith and Purfleet, with Randhill shoal in the midst of the stream.

RANDWICK, a par. in the upper div. of Whitstone hund., co. Gloucester, 1½ mile N.W. of Stroud, its nearest railway station and post town, and 8 miles S. of Gloucester. The village, which is considerable, is situated on the slope of a hill on the line of the Great Western railway, and near the Thames and Severn canal. A portion of the inhabitants are engaged in the woollen mills. Oolite stone is quarried for building. The surface is hilly, and the soil light and stony, but there is some rich pasture land. From the summit of Randwick Ash a view is obtained over the valley of the Severn, Wales, and the surrounding counties. The rectorial tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £84, and those of the incumbent for £72, and there are 56 acres of glebe. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £124, in the patron. of the Vicar of Standish. The church, dedicated to St. John, is an ancient stone structure with a tower containing four bells. The church has lately been enlarged and restored. The parochial charities produce about £50 per annum. There is an endowed school for both sexes. The Primitive Methodists and the Connexion of the Countess of Huntingdon have each a place of worship. The Rev. R. Morris is lord of the manor.

RANELAGH, a post-office vil. in the par. of St. Peter's, bar. of Upper Cross, co. Dublin, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 1½ mile S.E. of the post-office at Dublin. It is situated on the Enniskerry road. It is divided into North and South, and contains a nunnery, with a charity school annexed. The Bishop of Derry has a residence here. Cullenswood, near the village, was the scene of the slaughter of 500 British colonists in 1209. The spot is sometimes called "the Bloody Field."

RANEY, a feeder of the river Conan, rises in co. Ross, Scotland.

RANFURLEY, a demesne in the par. of Kilbarchan, Upper ward, co. Renfrew, Scotland, 6 miles N.W. of of Paisley. It is situated near the rivers Locker and Black Cart, and belongs to the Knoxes of Dungannon, to which family it gives title of baron and earl.

RANGER'S-LODGE, an ext. par. place in the hund. of Chadlington, co. Oxford, 6 miles N.W. of Witney.

RANGEWORTHY, a chplry. in the par. and lower div. of the hund. of Thornbury, co. Gloucester, 3¾ miles S.W. of Wickwar, and 4 S.W. of Thornbury. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the road from Wotton-under-Edge to Bristol, and near the Bristol and Gloucester railway. The manufacture of hats was formerly carried on to a considerable extent, but the village is now wholly agricultural. The impropriation belongs to the Dean and Chapter of Christ Church, Oxford. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £80, in the patron. of the Vicar of Thornbury. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, contains one bell. It has been recently rebuilt. The Independents and Wesleyans have each a place of worship.

RANKLE-BURN, a feeder of the river Ettrick, rises in co. Selkirk, Scotland, near Loch Moodlaw, in Ettrick Forest.

RANMOOR, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Upper Hallam, par. of Sheffield, West Riding co. York, 3 miles S.W. of Sheffield.

RANNACH POINT, a promontory on the coast of co. Donegal, Ireland. It is situated at the S.W. corner of Aranmore, and has a shoal off it.

RANNOCK, or RANNOCH, a quoad sacra par. in the pars. of Fortingal and Logierait, co. Perth, Scotland. It includes part of Rannock Moor, and extends 28 miles in length, with an extreme breadth of 16. The inhabited part is only 16 miles by 2. It is bounded by the pars. of Lochabar on the N.W., Badenoch on the N., Blair-Athole on the E., the Glenlyon and Fortingal sections of Breadalbane on the S., and Glenorchy and Appin on the W. The surface is of a hilly nature, including Rannock Moor, which lies at an elevation of 1,000 feet above sea-level, and is one of the most dismal and barren tracts in Scotland. It is watered by Loch Lydoch, near the centre of the parish, from which the Gauer water runs down to Rannock Loch, and thence, by a rapid course under Schiallion, to Loch Tummel. On the bank of the stream is Mount Alexander, the ancient seat of the Donachies or Robertsons. The village of Rannock is about 10 miles N.W. of Taymouth. It is situated under the Grampians, but is void of the scenery common to the similar Highland glens. This par. is in the presb. of Weem, and in the patron. of the crown. The minister has a stipend of £120. The parish church, situated at the E. end of Loch Rannock, was erected in 1829. At the W. end of the Loch is a chapel-of-ease.

RANSCLIFF, RAINSCLIFF, or RAVENSCLIFFE, a tnshp. in the par. of Wolstanton, N. div. of the hund. of Pirehill, co. Stafford, 2 miles N.W. of Burslem. The township abounds with coal and iron-stone, which are worked to a considerable extent, and give employment to the population, who are principally seated at Kidsgrove.

RANSKILL, a tnshp. in the par. of Blyth, lib. of Southwell and Scrooby, co. Nottingham, 3 miles S.E. of Bawtry, and 6 N.W. of Retford. It is a station on the Gainsborough line of railway. The village, which is small, is wholly agricultural. There is a place of worship for the Independents.

RANSTON, a tythg. in the par. of Iwerne Courtnay, co. Dorset, 4 miles N.W. of Blandford.

RANTON, or RONTON, a par. in the S. div. of Pirehill hund., co. Stafford. See RONTON.

RANTON ABBEY, an ext. par. place in the S. div. of Pirehill hund., co. Stafford.

RANVILLS, a tythg. in the par. of Romsey-Extra, co. Hants, 2 miles S.W. of Romsey.

RANWORTH, a par. in the hund. of Walsham, co. Norfolk, 10 miles N.E. of Norwich, and 4 N.W. of Acle, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Bure, and is chiefly agricultural. The par. includes the hmlt. of Panxworth, and contains several small lakes, from one of which a canal has been cut to the navigable river Bure. The rectorial tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £227 16*s., and the vicarial for one of £132; there are 10 acres of glebe. The living is a vic. with that of Upton united, in the dioc. of Norwich; joint val. £308, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Helen, is an ancient structure, with a lofty embattled tower. The interior contains six ancient stalls. There is a place of worship for Baptists.

RANZA, a loch on the north-western coast of the Isle of Arran, co. Bute, Scotland. It is nearly 3 miles in length by 1 wide, and is a fishing station.

RAPE-MILLS, a hmlt. in the par. of Reynagh, bar. of Garrycastle, King's County, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles N.N.W. of Birr. It contains a police station and some rape-mills, from which it derives its name. In the neighbourhood are the seats Mount Erin, Ballaghanoher House, and Hill House.

RAPHOE, a bar. in the co. of Donegal, prov. of Ulster, Ireland. It is bounded by the bars. of Kilmacrenan, Innishowen, Tirhugh, and Bannagh, and by the cos. of Londonderry and Tyrone. It is 24 miles in length, and over 14 in breadth. The rivers of this bar. are the Swilly, the Finn, the Foyle, and the Deel. It contains the pars. of All Saints, Clonleigh, Convoy, Donaghmore, Killea, Kiltevoge, Leck, Raphoe, Namoghy, Stranorlar, Taughboyne, and parts of Conwal and Urney.

RAPHOE, a par., post and market town in the bar. of Raphoe, co. Donegal, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 137 miles from Dublin. The par. is 7 miles long, and its greatest breadth is 5 miles. The surface is mostly well cultivated, and is crossed by the road from Lifford to Letterkenny. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Raphoe, val. £826, in the patron. of the crown. The church, which serves as the cathedral of the diocese, was founded by St. Unan in the 11th century. It is a cruciform structure, and has a tower, added at a later date. There is a Presbyterian meeting-house, also several day-schools, in the parish. The town is situated on the road from Strabane to Stranorlar, near Raphoe Hill, and consists chiefly of a market-place and three small streets diverging therefrom. It contains a chief police station and court-house, in which petty sessions are held at frequent intervals. Here are also the deanery, Forster's free school, Charles I.'s grammar schools (adjoining which is a library), Bishop Forster's almshouses for four clergymen's widows, and a dispensary. Raphoe appears to have originated in a large monastic establishment, founded by St. Columb, and was anciently called Rathboth. The monastery was restored early in the 8th century, and the diocese of Raphoe was then established. It is now annexed to Derry, and forms part of the ecclesiastical province of Armagh. The chapter consists of a dean, archdeacon, and four prebendaries. Ruins of the castle, which was surrendered to Cromwell, and subsequently destroyed by the troops of James II., are still remaining. Greenhill is among the principal residences. Saturday is market day. Fairs are held on 1st May, 22nd June, 27th August, and 4th November.

RAPLEYS, a district in the par. of Shalbourn, co. Berks, 3 miles S.W. of Hungerford.

RAPLOCH, a vil. in the par. and co. of Stirling, Scotland. It is a suburb of Stirling, situated about three-quarters of a mile from the bridge, and immediately under the castle. This was the birthplace of Dougald Grahame, the bellman of Glasgow, who composed numerous ballads, and penny histories.

RAPNESS, a promontory on the E. side of Westray, Orkney Isles, coast of Scotland.

RAPPS, a tythg. in the par. of Broadway, co. Somerset, 2 miles N.W. of Ilminster.

RAPSGATE, a hund. in the co. of Gloucester, contains the pars. of Brimpsfield, North Cerney, Chedworth, Colesborne, Cowley, Cranham, Cubberley, Elkstone, Rendcombe, Side, and part of Duntisbourne-Abbotts, comprising an area of 26,900 acres.

RASAY, or RASSAY, a small island in the par. of Glenelg, co. Inverness, Scotland, 5 miles S.E. of Broadford. It is situated in Slate Sound.

RASAY, a feeder of the river Conan, rises near Contin, co. Ross, Scotland.

RASAY, or RAASAY, an island in the par. of Portree, co. Inverness, Scotland. It is situated on the E. side of Skye, from which it is divided by Rasay Sound, about 4 miles in width. It extends about 14 miles in length, with an extreme breadth of 3 miles. The surface is hilly, the greatest altitude being at Dunlan Mountain, which rises 1,500 feet above sea level. The prevailing rocks are gneiss, porphyry, oolite, and sandstone. The E. side of the southern district is interspersed with arable lands and farm dwellings, but the rest of the island is chiefly pasture and moorland. Rasay House has been the seat of the Macleod family for a considerable period. Broichel Castle is of great antiquity, and formerly belonged to a person designated "John the Strong," ancestor of the above-named family; it is situated in a small bay on the E. coast, and its approach is steep and difficult.

RASEN, MARKET, a par., post and market town in the wap. of Walshcroft, co. Lincoln, 9 miles S. of Caistor, and 13 N.E. of Lincoln. It is a station on the Hull and Lincoln section of the Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire line of railway. It is a prosperous little town situated on the river Rasen, which rises in the Wolds close by, and thence flows 7 miles to join the river Ancholme. It chiefly consists of one long street, forming part of the road from Louth to Lincoln, and is well paved and lighted with gas. The public buildings are the corn exchange, market hall, county court, dispensary, mechanics' institution, and gasworks. It is a polling-place for the county election, and a petty sessions town, the sessions being held every alternate Monday. There is a bank, also a savings-bank. Bricks and tiles are extensively made. The surrounding country is fertile. The soil is sandy, upon a substratum of clay. The greater part of the parish is in grass lands. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1779. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £233. The church, dedicated to St. Thomas, is an ancient structure, built of friable sandstone, with an embattled tower containing six bells. The interior of the church contains numerous monuments, and on the outside of the tower, at the southern angle, is a representation of Adam and Eve under a fruit tree. The register dates from 1561. The parochial charities produce about £135 per annum. There are almshouses founded by G. H. Paul and Lady Warwick, also almshouses for Roman Catholics, built in 1841. There is a National school for both sexes, which is partly endowed, also a Roman Catholic school. The Independents, Wesleyans, Reformed Wesleyans, Roman Catholics, and Primitive Methodists have each a place of worship. There is also a chapel, situated on the site of a newly-formed cemetery on the E. side of the town. Captain W. Conway Gordon, Esq., is lord of the manor. Market day is on Tuesday for corn and provisions, and a cattle market is held every other Tuesday, from Palm Sunday to Michaelmas. Cattle fairs are held on the fourth Thursday in Lent, and on 25th September.

RASEN, MIDDLE, a par. in the S. div. of the wap. of Walshcroft, co. Lincoln, 1½ mile N.W. of Market-Rasen, its post town. The village, which is considerable, is situated on the road from Louth to Gainsborough, and is wholly agricultural. The par. comprises the hmlts. of Rasen Tupholme and Rasen Drax, each of which has a separate living. The tithes of both vicarages were commuted for land at the enclosure of the parish. The living consists of two vicarages in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. jointly £313. The church of Tupholme has a Roman entrance, but is in a bad state of repair. It is dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul. In the church of Drax is an ancient altar-tomb of a priest. The charities produce about £20 per annum, exclusive of 2 acres of land, which goes towards the support of a school. The Wesleyans, Reformed Wesleyans, and Primitive Methodists have each a place of worship. At the enclosure of the parish an allotment of 19 acres of land was made for the poor, now yielding £20 per annum.

RASEN, WEST, a par. in the N. div. of the wap. of Walshcroft, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 3 miles W. of Market Rasen, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the road from Bawtry to Louth, and near the river Rasen, and is wholly agricultural. The surface is undulating, and the soil chiefly a rich loam. About two-thirds of the land are arable, and the remainder pasture and woodland. The tithes were commuted for land in 1803. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £543. The church, dedicated to All Saints, has four octagonal turrets surmounted by castellated tower coronets, and containing three bells. It has been repaired and enlarged at various times. The register dates from 1683. There is a National school. Lord Herries is lord of the manor.

RASH, a hmlt. in the chplry. of Muker, par. of Grinton, North Riding co. York, 2 miles from Muker, and 58 N.W. of York. It is situated on the moorlands, under Shunner Fell.

RASHARKIN, a par. in the bar. of Kilconway, co. Antrim, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 8 miles N.W. of Ballymoney, its post town. It is 6 miles long by 5 broad. The surface comprises a considerable proportion of mountain, bog, and waste land, with some good soil. The road from Kilrea to Ballymena traverses the parish, and the river Bann flows in the vicinity. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Connor, val. with others, £323, in the patron. of the bishop. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Finvoy. There are two Presbyterian meeting-houses, and several day schools. There is a chief police station in the village. The linen and bleaching trade is carried on here to some extent. Several Danish raths are observed, and numerous ancient coins have been found. Cannel coal and basalt occur.

RASHEDAGH, a vil. in the bar. of Raphoe, co. Donegal, Ireland, 4 miles S.W. of Letterkenny. It is situated in the vale of the Swilly, and is celebrated for its monthly markets.

RASHEE, a par. in the bar. of Upper Antrim, co. Antrim, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 2 miles N.W. of Ballyclare. It is situated on the road from Larne to Broughshane. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Connor, forming part of the benefice of Ballyeaston.

RASKELF, a chplry. in the par. of Easingwold, wap. of Bulmer, North Riding co. York, 2½ miles N.W. of Easingwold, its post town. It is a station on the North-Eastern railway. The village, which is of small extent, is situated near the little river Kyle, and is chiefly agricultural. Three-parts of the land are arable, and the remainder pasture and woodland. There are brick and tile kilns. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of York, val. £216, in the patron. of the Bishop of Chester. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient stone structure, with a wooden tower containing three bells. The tower is covered with ivy. In the church windows are the arms of Neville Earl of Westmorland, Scrope, Dacre, and Percy, probably commemorating ancient benefactors. The parochial charities produce about £20 per annum. There is a parochial school, erected in 1856, in which a Sunday-school is also held. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. W. F. Webb, Esq., is lord of the manor.

RASTRICK, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Halifax, wap. of Morley, West Riding co. York, 3½ miles N. of Huddersfield, and 5 S.E. of Halifax. Normanton is its post town. This chapelry is bounded on the N.E. by the river Calder, and is skirted by the Calder and Hebble navigation. The village, which is of large extent, is situated on the road from Huddersfield to Bradford, and near the Manchester and Leeds railway, which latter passes through part of the township, and has a station at Brighouse. There are silk and woollen mills, which employ a large number of the inhabitants. The substratum abounds in building-stone of excellent quality, and which is largely quarried. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £135, in the patron. of the Vicar of Halifax. The church, dedicated to St. Matthew, was rebuilt at the commencement of the present century, and is a Grecian edifice with a cupola. The parochial charities produce about £16 per annum, exclusive of a small clothing charity. There is a Church school for the free education of 20 children, endowed with an annuity of £56. There is also a British and Foreign school, erected and endowed by the late John Clay, Esq. The Independents have a chapel, and there is a meeting-house belonging to the Society of Friends. C. C. Thornhill, Esq., is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

RASYTH, an ancient par., now joined to Inverkeithing, co. Fife, Scotland.

RATAINE, a par. in the bar. of Lower Navan, co. Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles N. of Trim, its post town. The surface mainly consists of good soil, and is traversed by the road from Bective-Bridge to Athboy. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Meath, val., with Ardbraccan, £684, in the patron. of the crown. It is joined to Dunderry in the Roman Catholic arrangement.

RATASS, or RATHASS, a par. in the bar. of Trughanacmy, co. Kerry, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 1½ mile E. of Tralee, its post town. The parish is traversed by the road from Tralee to Killarney. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Ardfert and Aghadoe, val. £42, in the patron. of the crown. It is united to Ballymacelligott in the Roman Catholic arrangement. There are one or two day schools. In this parish are the ruins of Ballybeggan Castle, formerly a stronghold of the Desmonds. It was burnt by the Irish during the revolution. Remains of the old church are also visible, and other castle ruins at Ballymullen. Marble is worked.

RATBY, or RATEBY, a par. in the hund. of Sparkenhoe, co. Leicester, 5 miles N.W. of Leicester, its post town, and 8 N.E. of Market-Bosworth. It is an occasional station on the Leicester and Coalville branch of the Midland Counties railway. It is situated on a branch of the river Soar, and contains the hmlts. of Botcheston, Groby, and Newton Unthank. The village is large, but irregularly built, and extends along the road from Leicester to Ashby-de-la-Zouch. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in agriculture and in framework knitting. There are some brick kilns. At Springswell is a Roman camp, near the Via Devana, of 9 acres, supposed to have been the Ratæ, mentioned by ancient writers; it is still in a perfect state, and the ditches and breastworks are distinctly marked. In this parish is Groby Pool, a sheet of water covering 60 acres, and on the northern border is Charnwood Forest. The soil is in parts a strong clay, and in other parts gravel. The impropriation belongs to the Earl of Stamford and Warrington. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Enclosure Act in 1770. The living is a vic. with the cur. of Groby annexed, in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £300. The church, dedicated to St. Philip, is an ancient structure, with a square tower containing four bells. The church contains a monument to Sacheverell, of Steward's Hay. There is also a chapel-of-ease at Groby, erected in 1840. The parochial charities produce about £14 per annum. There is an infant school. The Primitive Methodists have a place of worship. The Earl of Stamford and Warrington is lord of the manor.

RATCHWOOD, a tnshp. in the par. of Bambrough, co. Northumberland, 4½ miles S.E. of Belford.

RATCLIFF, a hmlt. and populous suburban district in the par. of Stepney, Tower div. of the hund. of Ossulstone, co. Middlesex, 1½ mile E. of St. Paul's, London. Its present name appears to be a corruption of Redcliff, an appellation derived from the red cliff, or bank, of the river Thames, which flows southward of the parish. In Camden's time it was a village principally inhabited by sea-faring men, but is now a populous suburb of the metropolis. The main street, called Ratcliff-highway, was formerly planted on each side with elm-trees, but now consists of lines of houses, and extends to Limehouse. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of London, val. £300, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. James, was erected in 1838, by a grant from the parliamentary commissioners. There are also several chapels and schools. In the Commercial-road is situated the Eastern Institution, established in 1839, by a proprietary of shareholders for the promotion of literature and science. See STEPNEY.

RATCLIFFE, a hmlt. in the par. of Worksop, co. Nottingham, 2 miles S.W. of Worksop. It is situated on the river Ryton.

RATCLIFFE-CULEY, a chplry. in the par. of Sheepy-Magna, hund. of Sparkenhoe, co. Leicester, 1½ mile N.E. of Atherstone, its post town, and 6½ S.W. of Market Bosworth. The village, which is of small extent, is situated at the confluence of the rivers Sene and Anker, and is entirely agricultural. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1766. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect. of Sheepy-Magna, in the dioc. of Peterborough. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient edifice with a tower crowned with a spire.

RATCLIFFE-ON-THE-WREAK, a par. in the hund. of East Goscote, co. Leicester, 7 miles S.E. of Loughborough, its post town, 6½ N.E. of Leicester, and 2 N. of the Syston railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the Fosse Way, and near the river Wreak, which is here crossed by a bridge. It is chiefly agricultural. In this parish is the Shipley Hill barrow, 40 feet in height. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1774. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £239. The church, dedicated to St. Botolph, is an ancient structure with a modern spired tower containing a clock and five bells. The tower was erected at the expense of the late Earl Ferrers. The parochial charities produce about £10 per annum. The Roman Catholics have a college a little to the W. of the village. The building was erected about 1845, but has since been greatly improved. A church has recently been erected. Ratcliffe Hall is the principal residence. The Duchess of Sforza is lady of the manor.

RATCLIFFE-ON-TRENT, a par. in the S. div. of Bingham wap., co. Nottingham, 5½ miles S.E. of Nottingham. It is a station on the Nottingham and Grantham branch of the Great Northern railway. This place takes its name from a perpendicular cliff of red clay. The village, which is considerable, is situated on the river Trent, here fordable in two places, and is intersected by the road from Bingham to Nottingham. On the river bank is a wharf belonging to the Earl of Manvers, chiefly used for coal. The surface is hilly in parts, but the land along the river is subject to inundation. The soil is partly clay and partly gravel. There are about 60 acres of glebe. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £198. The impropriate tithes belong to Earl Manvers. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, was rebuilt about 1795. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. There is a school chiefly supported by Earl Manvers.

RATCLIFFE-UPON-SOAR, a par. in the N. div. of Rushcliffe wap., co. Nottingham, 10 miles S.E. of Derby, its post town, and 2 N.E. of Keyworth station on the Midland Counties railway. The village, which is of small extent, is situated near the confluence of the rivers Trent and Soar, and is wholly agricultural. The soil consists of a stiff clay intermixed with loam. At a farm in the neighbourhood are the remains of a seat of the Pigotts and Sacheverells. Limestone abounds, and alabaster is quarried. The impropriation belongs to Earl Howe. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £71. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, is an ancient structure with a square tower, surmounted by a spire and containing three bells. Lord Howe is lord of the manor.

RATESH, a village in the bar. of Dunmore, co. Galway, Ireland, 7 miles N.W. of Tuam.

RATH, a par. in the bar. of Inchiquin, co. Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5½ miles N.W. of Ennis. The parish is intersected by the road from Ennis to Ennistymon, and includes parts of the loughs Inchiquin and Tadane. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Killaloe, and in the patron. of the trustees of the late Marquis of Thomond. The Roman Catholic chapel, which is situated at Liscullane, is united to that of Corofin. There are two schools. The parish church is a mere ruin. The principal residences are Adelphi, Roxton, Clifden, Willbrook, and Riverston. There is a chief police station in the village. In the vicinity are ruins of the ancient seat of the O'Neils and of Tier MacBran's Castle.

RATH, a vil. in the par. of Drumcullin, bar. of Eglish, King's County, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 5 miles W. of Frankford, on the road to Parsonstown.

RATHANGAN, a par., post, and market town in the bars. of East and West Offaly, co. Kildare, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 5 miles N.W. of Kildare, and 26 S.W. of Dublin. The parochial surface, which extends over 8,872 acres, is varied by hill and dale. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Kildare, val. £459, in the patron. of the Duke of Leinster and Bishop of Kildare alternately. The church occupies a prominent site. There are likewise a Roman Catholic chapel and Methodist and Quaker meeting-houses. There are two or three private schools and a National school. Lord Harberton resides at Spencer Farm. The town is situated on the E. side of the Grand canal, and on the road from Kildare to Edenderry. It contains a chief police station and a dispensary. Though well suited for trade, its business is but trifling. Viscount Harberton and the Duke of Leinster are the sole proprietors. Petty sessions are held weekly. Monday is market day. Fairs are held on 26th June, 26th August, 12th November, and Whit-Tuesday.

RATHASPICK, a par. in the bar. of Forth, co. Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2½ miles S.W. of Wexford, its post town. The surface extends from Forth Mountain to Wexford Haven. The soil is of good quality. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ferns, val. £108, in the patron. of the Incumbent of Wexford. The church was rebuilt by the late Board of First Fruits in 1823. It is annexed to Piercetown in the Roman Catholic arrangement. There is a school built and supported by the Morgan family, who are the principal proprietors of the parish, and have their seat at Johnstown Castle. There is a police station in the village. The ruins of Rathlannan Castle stand near Johnstown.

RATHASPICK, a par. partly in the bar. of Fassadinin, co. Kilkenny, and partly in the bars. of Ballyadams and Slievemargue, Queen's County, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 5 miles N.E. of Castlecomer, its post town. The surface is varied, and is intersected by the road from Castlecomer to Athy. The substratum abounds in coal, which is worked. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Leighlin, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was built by the late Board of First Fruits in 1814. Two Roman Catholic chapels are united to that of Ballyadams. There are a parochial school and another supported by private charity, besides several pay day schools. Gracefield is the principal seat. In the village is a chief police station. There are traces of a rath near the site of the old church, and within a short distance is Milltown Castle. Numerous relics of antiquity have been picked up here.

RATHASPICK, a par. in the bar. of Moygoish, co. Westmeath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. Rathowen is its post town. The surface lies along the river Inny and Lough Glynn. There is a considerable area of bog belonging to this parish. It is traversed by the road from Dublin to Sligo. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Ardagh, val. with Russagh, £200. The church was erected by means of a gift and loan from the late Board of First Fruits. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Russagh. There are two or three private schools and a Sunday-school. Among the several residences are Newpass, Ardglass, and Rockglass. The Inny is crossed by a bridge within the limits of the parish. Near the village are remains of a religious house established by the Petyts, likewise of a rath and some castle ruins.

RATHBARRY, a par. in the bars. of Ibane and Barrymore, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 4 miles S.W. of Clonakilty. Castlefreke is its post town. The surface extends along the sea-coast. The soil inland is of good quality, and the road from Cork to Skibbereen traverses the interior. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ross, val. £180. The church is in the later English style. It was erected in 1825 by means of a gift from the late Board of First Fruits, and a donation from Lord Carbery. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Ardfield. There are a parochial school, and another founded by Lord Carbery. Castlefreke, the seat of Lord Carbery, and Kilkerran are the principal residences. There is a police station at Milltown. In the demesne of Castlefreke stand the ruins of Rathbarry Castle, which gave name to the parish. It was built in the 15th century by the Barrys, and has been at various periods the scene of conflict. Ruins are likewise seen of the castles of Dundedy and Dunowen. Great quantities of calcareous sand are collected on the strand, which is most valuable for manure. Fairs are held on 25th March, 29th June, and 29th September.

RATHBEAGH, a par. in the bar. of Galmoy, co. Kilkenny, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2½ miles N.E. of Freshford, its post town. The surface is undulating. The soil is good, and the greater part is under cultivation. The road from Kilkenny to Ballyragget passes through the parish, as does the river Nore. In the village is a police station. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ossory, val. with Freshford, or Aghoure, £704, in the patron. of the bishop. It is united to Lisdowney in the Roman Catholic arrangement. There is one public school and several day schools. The old manor house of Clone was formerly the residence of Sir Toby Caulfield. Fairs are held on the 1st May and November, and on 6th December.

RATHBEGGAN, a par. in the bar. of Ratoath, co. Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles S.E. of Dunshaughlin Cloneé, its post town. It is traversed by the road from Dublin to Enniskillen. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Meath, val. £122. The church was erected by the late Board of First Fruits. The parish is united to Ratoath in the Roman Catholic arrangement. Rathbeggan House is the neighbouring seat. Building-stone is quarried.

RATHBOURNEY, a par. in the bar. of Burren, co. Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 8 miles S.W. of Burren. Ballyvaughan is its post town. The parish, which is of large extent, includes a large proportion of mountain and bog. The road from Burren to Enniskillen passes through the parish. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Kilfenora, val. £247, in the patron. of the bishop. There is a small church. The Roman Catholic chapel is the head of the Glynn district. Gregans is the principal residence. The remains of Gregans Castle are visible.

RATHBOYNE, a par. in the bars. of Lower and Upper Kells, co. Meath, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 2½ miles S.E. of Kells. It is traversed by the roads from Kells to Kilcock, and from Longford to Drogheda. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Meath, and is joined to the benefice of Kells (which see). The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Ardbraccan. There is a school endowed by C. T. Tisdale, Esq. Ballybeg and Charlesfoot are the chief residences. There is an extensive nursery-garden. Limestone is abundant.

RATHBRAN, or RATHBREA, a par. in the bar. of Tirawley, co. Mayo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 5 miles W. of Killala, its post town. The surface extends along the river Owenmore, and is intersected by the road from Ballina to Crossmolina. The soil is of medium quality. The land is pretty generally under cultivation. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Killala, val. £265, in the patron. of the bishop. It is united to Kilfian in the Roman Catholic arrangement. There are a parochial and another public school. Among the residences are Farm Hill, Court Hill, and Spring Hill. Fairs are held on 17th March, 24th June, 29th September, and 26th December.

RATHBRAN, co. Wicklow. See STRATFORD-UPON-SLANEY.

RATHBRIDE, a vil. in the par. of Tully, bars. of Kilcullen and East Offaly, co. Kildare, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles N.E. of Kildare. A fair is held on the 5th July.

RATHCAVAN, a par. in the bar. of Lower Antrim, co. Antrim, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, containing the post town Broughshane. The parish, which is very extensive, includes a large proportion of mountain and waste land. The river Braid takes part of its course through the interior. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Connor, val. with Skerry, £535. The church is at Broughshane. There are a Presbyterian meeting-house, also a National, day, and Sunday schools. The linen manufacture is carried on to some extent. Race View is the principal seat. Basalt and greenstone are the prevailing rocks among the hills.

RATHCLARE, a vil. in the co. of Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, near Buttevant, and 126 miles from Dublin. Fairs are held at intervals between April and December.

RATHCLARIN, a par. in the bar. of East Carbery, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 4½ miles S.E. of Bandon, its post town. The surface extends along the N. shore of Court McSherry Bay. The Arigadeen rivulet flows through the interior. The soil is generally fertile. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Cork, val. £431, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was restored in 1835. The Roman Catholic chapel is the head of a district. There are National schools, besides two or three other public, private, day, and Sunday schools. Among the residences are Gortnahorna and Glenville. Near the village are ruins of a church, founded at the close of the 13th century by the Knights Templars.

RATHCLINE, or RATHLINE, a par. in the bar. of Rathcline, co. Longford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, containing the greater portion of its post town, Lanesborough. The parish, which is of large extent, includes some bog and a poor soil. The river Shannon bounds it on one side. The island of Inchenagh is within the parochial limits. The linen trade is pretty briskly carried on. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ardagh, val. £146, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was built in 1678 by the Lanesboroughs. There is a Roman Catholic chapel, likewise several private schools. Near the church is the site of a small religious house, supposed to have been founded in the 4th century. There are also ruins of Rathcline castle, which was reduced by Cromwell and fired during the revolution. Near these ruins stand those of the old church. Rathcline and Clonbonny are among the residences. A fair is held on 12th February.

RATHCONDRA, a vil. in the par. of Rathcondra, bar. of Rathcondra, co. Westmeath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 6 miles from Mullingar. Mount Dalton is the chief seat in the neighbourhood.

RATHCONNEL, or TURIN, a par. in the bar. of Moyashell and Magheradernon, co. Westmeath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles E.N.E. of Mullingar. Killucan is its post town. The surface extends over 12,440 acres. There is a tract of bog, but the greater part is good arable and pasture land. The Royal canal passes through the parish. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Meath, val. £170. The church was erected by means of a loan and gift from the late Board of First Fruits. The Roman Catholic chapel is at the head of a district. There are a parochial school and a dispensary. Clonlost and Knockdrin are among the numerous seats. Petty sessions are held at intervals.

RATHCONRATH, a bar. in the co. of Westmeath, Ireland, contains the pars. of Ballymore, Ballymorin, Churchtown, Conry, Killare, Piercetown, Rathconrath, Templepatrick, and part of Dysart, comprising about 48,500 acres.

RATHCONRATH, a par. in the bar. of Rathconrath, co. Westmeath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3¼ miles S. of Ballynacargy, its post town. The surface comprises 7,563 acres, consisting very generally of good land. The road from Dublin to Athlone traverses the interior. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Meath, val. £227. The church was erected in 1809 near the site of a more ancient one by the late Board of First Fruits. The Roman Catholic chapel is at the head of a union. There are National and two other public schools, also a police station. Mount Dalton and Neares Court are the principal residences. The Cat and Mouse, on the Ballymore road, are two curious rocks, near which a subterraneous river has its source. At Mount Dalton a monument has been erected in honour of the Empress Maria Theresa, the Emperor Joseph II., and George III.

RATHCOOLE, a par. in the bar. of Gowran, co. Kilkenny, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles N.E. of Kilkenny. Freshford is its post town. The surface extends over a well-cultivated district, and is undulating. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ossory, val. with Kilkryan £82, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. It is united to St. John's in the Roman Catholic arrangement. There are a chapel, a schoolhouse, and a police station. Sandsford's Court is the principal residence in the neighbourhood.

RATHCOOLE, a par. in the bar. of Middlethird, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 1 mile N.W. of Fethard, its post town. The surface extends over a well-cultivated district. The soil is excellent. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Cashel, and forms part of the union of Fethard (which see). Derrylusker, Ardsally, and Rocklow are among the numerous seats in this parish. There are traces of Slanestown Castle.

RATHCOOLE, a par. and post town in the bar. of Newcastle, co. Dublin, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 8 miles S.W. of Dublin. The parochial surface extends over a richly cultivated district. The soil is mostly good. It becomes hilly towards the west. The road from Dublin to Naas passes through the parish. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Dublin, val. with another, £220, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church has been lately repaired by the ecclesiastical commissioners. The parish is annexed to Saggard in the Roman Catholic arrangement. There are two schools and a dispensary. The village consists of one street about a quarter of a mile long, and contains a chief police station.

RATHCOONEY, a par. in the N. liberties of the co. of the city of Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 4 miles N.E. from Cork. Glanmire is its post town. It is partly bounded by the streams Glanmire and Lee. The road from Cork to Dublin traverses the interior. In the village is a dispensary. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Cork, val. £760, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, which is situated at Glanmire, was erected in 1784 by means of private subscriptions. The parish is joined to Upper Glanmire in the Roman Catholic arrangement. There are three schools, one of which is supported by private charity. Ruins of the old church are seen, and several raths.

RATHCOR, a vil. in the par. of Carlingford, bar. of Lower Dundalk, co. Louth, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3½ miles S. of Carlingford, on Dundalk Bay.

RATHCORE, a par. in the bars. of Upper Deece and Lower Moyfenrath, co. Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 5 miles S.W. of Summerhill. Enfield is its post town. The surface lies along the Royal canal and river Blackwater. The road from Dublin to Athlone traverses the parish, which is extensive. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Meath, val. £338, in the patron. of the bishop. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Rathmolion. Here are a public and three or four private schools. Johnstown, Rahinstown, and Newcastle are the principal residences. Limestone is quarried.

RATHCORMACK, a par., post and market town in the bar. of Barrymore, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 18 miles N.E. of Cork. The parish, which is of large extent, comprises a considerable proportion of mountain and bog. The surface is traversed by the river Bride, and by the road from Cork to Dublin. In the village are a fever hospital, dispensary, police station, and a depôt of the South Cork militia. It was chartered by Charles II., and sent two representatives to parliament previous to the Union. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Cloyne, val. £694. The church is an ancient building, but was restored in 1828 by aid of the late Board of First Fruits. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Gortroe. There are a Methodist meeting-house, also a parochial school, and several other private schools.

RATHCORMACK, or RATHGORMUCK, a par. in the bar. of Upperthird, co. Waterford, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 3 miles S.S.W. of Carrick-on-Suir, its post town. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lismore, val. with Mothell £591. It is united to Mothell in the Roman Catholic arrangement. There is a school supported by Lady Osborne, also one or two private ones.

RATHCOURSEY, a vil. in the bar. of Barrymore, co. Cork, Ireland, 3 miles N.W. of Cloyne.

RATHDOWN, a half bar. in the co. of Dublin, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. It extends along the sea coast, and contains, besides 12 parishes and several villages, the towns of Blackwater, Kingstown, Old Drumleary, and Little Bray.

RATHDOWN, a half bar. in the co. of Wicklow, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. It contains the town of Bray, and the vil. of Rathdown, besides 5 parishes. This barony gave title of earl to the family of Monck.

RATHDOWNEY, a par., post and market town in the bar. of Clandonagh, Queen's County, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 72 miles S.W. of Dublin, and 3 from Roscrea railway station. The parish, which is of large extent, comprises a small tract of bog, but the land is in general good. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ossory, val. £763, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, in the later English style, was erected in 1815, partly by the late Board of First Fruits. There are likewise a Roman Catholic chapel, a parochial and a National school. There are numerous seats in the neighbourhood. The town is situated on the road from Mountrath to Thurles. Its trade is entirely local. It contains a poorhouse, and a police station. Petty sessions are held once a month. Fairs are held on 27th January, 1st April, 6th May, 10th July, 12th September, 1st November, 15th December.

RATHDRUM, a par., post and market town in the bar. of Ballinacor, co. Wicklow, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. The parish is large, extending over 41,617 acres of country, one great feature being "the meeting of the waters" in the S. of the parish. The town is situated near the coast, on the road from Dublin to Arklow, 38 miles S. of Dublin, and 8 W. from Ballynacarrig. It is a station on the Dublin and Waterford railway. It contains a dispensary, police station, and workhouse. The woollen trade was formerly carried on here, but has now become extinct. The woollen-hall is converted partly into a Roman Catholic chapel, and partly into a home for paupers. Valuable mineral works are carried on in the mountains. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Dublin, val. £438. The church is erected on the site of the old church. There are two or three chapels-of-ease in the parish, and likewise one or two Roman Catholic chapels. There are several schools, some of which are supported by private charity, and one by royal endowment. Thursday is market day. Fairs are held on 3rd January, 17th February, 11th March, 5th April, 25th May, 19th June, 5th July, 31st August, 10th October, 11th November, and 11th December.

RATHDRUMIN, a par. in the bar. of Ferrard, co. Louth, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles S.E. of Dunleer, its post town. The surface consists of well-cultivated and fertile ground. The road from Drogheda to Dundalk traverses the interior. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Armagh, val. £248, in the patron. of the crown. The church was erected in 1814 by means of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits. The Roman Catholic chapel is the head of a district. A large rath is still remaining.

RATHEN, a par. in the district of Buchan, co Aberdeen, Scotland. It contains the post-office vil. of Inverallochy, and the vils. of Cairnbulg and Charleston. It extends in length about 7 miles, with an extreme breadth of 4 miles. It is bounded on one side by the German Ocean, and on the others by the parishes of Lonmay, Stucken, Tyree, and Fraserburgh. The surface is moderately flat. The land is nearly evenly divided between woodland, pasture, and arable, the whole of which are well drained by the Rathen rivulet. Limestone abounds, and is worked to some extent. The village of Rathen is about 4 miles S. of Fraserburgh. It is situated on the river Rathen, under Mormond Hill, which rises 810 feet above sea-level. The parish is traversed by the roads from Fraserburgh to Peterhead and Aberdeen. There are two old castles at Cairnbulg and Inverallochie, which seem to have been places of considerable strength. This par. is in the presb. of Deer and synod of Aberdeen. The minister has a stipend of £169. The parish church is an ancient structure, but was restored in 1767. There are a Free church and two parochial schools.

RATHENDRICK, a vil. in the par. of Loghan, bar. of Upper Kells, co. Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles W. of Moynalty.

RATHERNAN, a par. in the bar. of Connell, co. Kildare, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 5½ miles N.E. of Kildare. Naas is its post town. The parish is entirely surrounded by the Bog of Allen. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Kildare, val. with Kilmeague, £344, in the patron. of the bishop. It is united to Allen and Miltown in the Roman Catholic arrangement. Ruins of the old church and of Ballyteigne Castle are remaining. Limestone is the prevailing formation of rock.

RATHFARNE, a vil. in the par. of Killucan, bar. of Farbill, co. Westmeath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4½ miles N. of Kinnegad. It is situated on the banks of the river Deel, and on the road from Killucan to Trim. It contains a police station, a Roman Catholic chapel, and a school. The river is crossed by a bridge at this place. Market day is Tuesday.

RATHFARNHAM, a par. and post-office vil. in the bar. of Rathdown, co. Dublin, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles S. of Dublin. The par. includes the vils. of Templeogue and Roundtown. Of the numerous residences in the parish, the most remarkable is the castle, which was built by Archbishop Loftus, and is now the property of the Marquis of Ely. The river Dodder, which passes through the parish, is here crossed by a bridge of one arch. The village contains a police station and a dispensary. Petty sessions are held weekly. Wilkes the comedian was born here. It is a rect. in the dioc. of Dublin, val. £218, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church was renovated and received the addition of a tower and spire in 1821, by means of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits. The Roman Catholic chapel is the head of a union. There is also a nunnery near the village, to which a school is attached. Besides the parish school there are several private establishments. A fair is held on 10th July.

RATHFAYGHT, or RATHFEIGH, a par. in the bar. of Skreen, co. Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 8 miles S. of Slane. Dunshaughlin is its post town. The soil is of medium quality. The road from Dublin to Slane crosses the parish. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Meath, val. with Skreen, £507, in the patron. of the crown. The church has long been in ruins. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Skreen. There is a private day school.

RATHFRAN, a vil. in the par. of Lacken, bar. of Tirawley, co. Mayo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland. It is situated on the W. side of Killala Bay.

RATHFRYLAND, a post and market town in the pars. of Drumballyroney and Drumgath, bar. of Upper Iveagh, co. Down, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 72 miles N. of Dublin, 21 W. of Downpatrick, and 9 S.W. of Castlewellan. It is situated at the crossing of the roads from Newry to Downpatrick, Warrenpoint to Dromore, and Kilkeel to Bainbridge. It consists of a square and five streets diverging from the same. The houses are substantially built. It has a good general trade, and is paved and lighted with gas. It contains, besides a dispensary and police station, the parish church, a Roman Catholic chapel, and Presbyterian, Wesleyan, and Friends' meeting-houses. Petty sessions are held fortnightly. The hill upon the site of which the town stands is crowned by the remains of an ancient seat of the Magennises. Wednesday is market day. Fairs are held in January, February, July, and November.

RATHGAR, a vil. in the par. of Rathfarnham, bar. of Rathdown, co. Dublin, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 1½ mile S. of the post-office, Dublin. It is situated on the road to Roundtown. In the vicinity are extensive limestone quarries, also large bleaching and printing works.

RATHGARVE. See RATHGRAFF, co. Westmeath.

RATHGOGGAN, a par. in the bar. of Orrery and Kilmore, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, containing the post town Charleville. It is situated in an unattractive country, and the surface is principally pasture lands. The road from Limerick to Cork passes through the interior. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Cloyne, val. with Ballyhay, £501, in the patron. of the bishop. The church stands at Charleville. The Roman Catholic chapel is the head of a district. Several schools have been established in the parish. Sanderspark and Fortlands are among the principal residences. Near Moatville are the ruins of a seat of Lord Orrery, which was burnt in the war of 1688. There are also remains of an old church, and numerous raths.

RATHGORMUCK. See RATHCORMACK, co. Waterford.

RATHGRAFF, or RATHGARVE, a par. in the bar. of Fore, co. Westmeath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, containing its post town, Castle Pollard. The parochial surface is slightly hilly, and is watered by the river Glore. The village is traversed by the road from Dublin to Granard. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Meath, val. £361, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is a Gothic structure renovated in 1821 by means of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits. The Roman Catholic chapel is the head of the Castle Pollard district. There are a parish and several private day schools, also a Sunday-school. Kinturk is the principal residence. Ruins of the old church are seen. Limestone is quarried.

RATHGRANAGHER, a vil. in the bar. of Kilmaine, co. Mayo, Ireland, 2 miles N.E. of Kilmaine.

RATHJORDAN, a par. in the bar. of Clanwilliam, co. Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5 miles S. of Cahirconlish. Sixmilebridge is its post town. The soil is mostly good. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Emly, and forms part of that union. It is united to Herbertstown and Hospital in the Roman Catholic arrangement. Ruins of the old church remain, near which is a holy well. There is a police station.

RATHKEALE, a par., post and market town, in the bar. of Lower Connello, co. Limerick, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 17 miles S.W. of Limerick. It is a station on the Limerick and Foynes railway. The parish, which is of large extent, is slightly hilly and has a soil of varying quality. The town is situated on the banks of the river Deel, and on the road from Limerick to Tralee. It consists chiefly of one wide street, edificed with a few good shops and houses. It contains a courthouse, bridewell, police station, and dispensary. Quarter and petty sessions are held here. The town was formerly incorporate and of more importance than at present. Gilbert Harvey founded a priory here in 1289, remains of which are still seen at the extremity of the main street. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Limerick, val. with others, £1,027, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is in the early English style. It stands near the site of the old church. The Roman Catholic chapel is the head of a union. There are Methodist and Independent meeting-houses, also two free schools and several private ones. Beechmount, Ballywilliam, Mount Brown, and Rathkeale Abbey are the principal residences. In this parish are the ruins of Liosnacoille Castle, and about 2 miles S. of the town are those of Ballyallinan Castle. Lead ore occurs in this district. Thursday and Saturday are market days. Fairs are held on 6th January, 7th February, 10th March, 4th April, 8th May, 1st and 19th June, 17th July, 25th August, 18th September, 15th October, 18th November, and 13th December.

RATHKENNAN, a par. in the bar. of Kilnamanagh, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 4½ miles S.W. of Thurles, its post town. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Cashel, val. with Holy Cross, £173, in the patron. of the bishop.

RATHKENNY, a par. in the bar. of Upper Slane, co. Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles N.W. of Slane. Navan is its post town. The surface comprises a large extent of good arable and pasture land, with some little bog. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Meath, val. £143. There is a small church. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Slane. There is a Roman Catholic school. Mullaha and Rathkenny House are the principal seats. There is a police station in the parish.

RATHKIERAN, a par. in the bar. of Iverk, co. Kilkenny, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4½ miles N.W. of Waterford, its post town. The parish is crossed by the road from Waterford to Carrick-on-Suir. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ossory, in the patron. of the Vicars Choral of St. Canice. The church is small. The Roman Catholic chapel is the head of a district. There are a Roman Catholic school, a private day school, and a Sunday-school.

RATHLACKAN, a post-office vil. in the par. of Lackan, bar. of Tirawley, co. Mayo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 5 miles N. of Killala. It is situated on the coast.

RATHLIN, a bar. in the co. of Longford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. It contains six parishes.

RATHLIN, an island and par. in the bar. of Cary, co. Antrim, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 6½ miles N. of Ballycastle, its post town. It lies about 4 miles off the N. coast of Antrim. The greater part of the surface is rocky pasture. The prevailing geologic formation is basalt, which forms a grand coast line on the W. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Connor, val. £100, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was erected in 1815, partly by means of a gift from the late Board of First Fruits. There are a Roman Catholic chapel and three public schools. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the fisheries, and are a primitive and secluded race. There is a coastguard station, also traces of a fortress, said to have been erected and used as a place of refuge by Robert Bruce. Church Bay is the chief landing place. A religious house is alleged to have been founded here by St. Colomb, in the 6th century.

RATHLIN O'BIRNE, a cluster of small islands in Malin Bay, co. Donegal, Ireland, 5 miles N.W. of Killybegs.

RATHLOGAN, an ancient par. now united to that of Fartagh, bar. of Galmoy, co. Kilkenny, prov. of Munster, Ireland. Durrow is its post town.

RATHLYNAN, a par. in the bar. of Clanwilliam, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 3 miles N.E. of Tipperary, its post town. The surface consists generally of a good soil. It is intersected by the road from Tipperary to Thurles, and by the river Multeen. The living is a vic. and rect. in the dioc. of Cashel, val. with Ballintemple, £690, in the patron. of the bishop. Lacken and Mountwilliam are the principal residences. There is a police station.

RATHMACKNEE, a par. in the bar. of Forth, co. Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles S.W. of Wexford, its post town. The parish is crossed by the road from Wexford to Kilmore. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Ferns, val. £123. The church is in the later English style, built in 1813 by means of a gift from the late Board of First Fruits. The Roman Catholic chapel is the head of a district called Piercestown. There is a school supported by private charity, also remains of a castle in very good preservation. Limestone is quarried.

RATHMELL, a tnshp. in the par. of Giggleswick, W. div. of Staincliff wap., West Riding co. York, 3½ miles S. of Settle, its post town. It is mentioned in Domesday Survey under the appellation of Rodemell. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Ribble, and is wholly agricultural. The land is principally in pasture; the soil is of a loamy nature upon a subsoil of limestone. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £101, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, is a modern edifice of stone, with a square embattled tower containing one bell. The register dates from 1842. There is a free school for both sexes, founded in 1716 by G. Clarke, who endowed it with land, now producing about £20 per annum. A Sunday-school is held in the schoolhouse. The Wesleyans have a place of worship.

RATHMELTON, or RAMELTON, a post and market town, in the par. of Aughnish, bar. of Kilmacrenan, co. Donegal, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 19 miles N.N.W. of Lifford, and 123 from Dublin. It is situated on the river Lennan, at the embouchure of that stream into Lough Swilly. The town, which was founded by Sir William Stewart, under patent of James I., consists of 3 principal streets, and contains the parish church, and meeting-houses for Presbyterians and Methodists. Also a chief police station, fever hospital, and a dispensary, which last is within the Milford poor-law union. Petty sessions are held fortnightly. The manufacture of linen is extensively carried on, and there are bleaching grounds, a brewery, and large corn-mills. Small vessels are able to approach the town by way of the river. Fort Stewart and Stewart Castle are the neighbouring seats. Salmon fishing is carried on, and pearls of some value are occasionally found in the river bed. Market days are Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday. Fairs are held on the Tuesdays following 20th May, 15th November, and 11th December.

RATHMICHAEL, a par. in the bar. of Rathdown, co. Dublin, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles N.W. of Bray, its post town. The surface is varied by hill and dale, and the soil is good. There is a proportion of mountain pasture, and a little common. The road from Bray to Dublin crosses the parish. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Dublin, val. £221, in the patron. of the archbishop. The ruins of the church only remain. The parish belongs to the union of Kingstown in the Roman Catholic arrangement. There are a parish and a private school. Shanganagh is the chief residence. In this parish are remains of a round tower, and of one or two castles, likewise the traces of a line of entrenchments and forts. Lead ore is worked.

RATHMINES, a post-office, vil., and suburb of the city of Dublin, in the par. of St. Peter, bar. of Uppercross, co. Dublin, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles S. of the General Post-office. It is situated on the Rathfarnham and Tallaght road. The village consists of a long line of fashionable residences, commencing at Latouche bridge over the Grand canal, and extending for nearly 2 miles. There are a church, and a Roman Catholic chapel, also free and National schools. There is a good water supply, and frequent omnibus conveyance. Here was the battle in which the Duke of Ormond was routed by Colonel Jones in 1649.

RATHMOLYON, a par. in the bar. of Lower Moyfenrath, co. Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3½ miles N.W. of Summerhill. The parish is of large extent. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Meath, val. £250. The church was built in 1797. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Rathcore. There is a parish school in the village, likewise a dispensary and a police station. Rathmolyon House and Tubbertinan are the chief residences. Remains of an old church exist, and also of a Danish fort. Fairs are held on 19th April, 30th June, and 29th September.

RATHMORE, a par. in the bar. of Rathvilly, co. Carlow, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 7 miles S.W. of Baltinglass, its post town. The surface, which is bounded on the S.E. by the river Slaney, consists chiefly of profitable land. The road from Tullow to Castle-Dermot traverses the interior. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Leighlin, val. with Rathvilly, £865, in the patron. of the crown and bishop. It is united to Rathvilly in the Roman Catholic arrangement. There is a school endowed by the late Mr. Disraeli.

RATHMORE, an extensive bog in the bar. of Magunihy, co. Kerry, Ireland. On its border is Rathmore monastery.

RATHMORE, a par. in the bar. of Lune, co. Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 1½ mile N. of Athboy, its post town. The surface consists of a fair soil, and is crossed by the road from Mullingar to Athlone. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Meath, val. with Athboy, £380, in the patron. of the crown, primate, and bishop. The church, which is in ruins, contains monuments to one of the Bligh family, and to Sir F. Hopkins. Near the village are the remains of an ancient castle. The Bligh family took the title of Baron Clifton of Rathmore from hence.

RATHMORE, a par. in the bar. of North Naas, co. Kildare, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles E. of Naas, its post town. The surface is traversed by the road from Dublin to Ballymore-Eustace. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Dublin, val. with Tipper, £317, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church was erected by the late Board of First Fruits in 1776. The parish is united to Blessington in the Roman Catholic arrangement. There is a school supported by the Erasmus Smith charity, and another depending on private charity. The name of the parish signifies the "Great Rath," which is seen near the church.

RATHMORE, a demesne in the par. of Croom, co. Limerick, Ireland, 12 miles S. of Limerick. There are remains of a ruined castle, once a stronghold of the Earls of Desmond.

RATHMOYLAN, a par. in the bar. of Gaultiere, co. Waterford, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 2 miles S.W. of Dunmore. East Passage is its post town. This parish lies along the coast of St. George's Channel, and includes the vil. of Ballymacaw. The coast is rocky. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the fisheries. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Waterford, val. with Killea, £331, in the patron. of the crown. There are two schools. Numerous caves occur along the coast, formed by the action of the waves.

RATHMUIGHE, a vil. in the bar. of Lower Dunluce, co. Antrim, Ireland. It was once a place of considerable importance.

RATHMULLAN, a small seaport and site of a post-office in the par. of Killygarvan, bar. of Kilmacrenan, co. Donegal, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 5 miles N. of Rathmelton. It is seated on the W. side of Lough Swilly, and consists of one principal street, containing police and coastguard stations. Petty sessions are held at intervals. Near the village are ruins of a castle, said to have been built by Mac Swine Fannagh, who was also the founder of a religious establishment of which traces are seen.

RATHMULLAN, a par. in the bar. of Lecale, co. Down, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, containing the post town of Killough. The surface lies on the N. side of Dundrum Bay, and is crossed by the Downpatrick road. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Down, val. £199. The church is in the Grecian style, erected in 1701. There is also a chapel-of-ease at Killough. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Bright. There are likewise meeting-houses for Wesleyans and Presbyterians. There are two public schools, besides private and Sunday schools. Janeville is the chief seat. A preceptory of the Knights of St. John formerly stood at St. John's Point, where remains of the church are visible. Several small forts are scattered about the parish, and there is a curious cave near the church. Numerous mineral springs exist, and there is a coastguard station.

RATHNAVEOGE, a par. in the bar. of Ikerrin, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 4 miles S.W. of Roscrea, its post town. It comprises some waste land, and a part of Benduff Mountain, on which rises a small tributary to the river Nore. The road from Dublin to Limerick crosses the parish. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Killaloe, val. with Dunkerrin, £773, in the patron. of the bishop. It is joined to Dunkerrin in the Roman Catholic division. Lisduff, Honey Mount, Summer Hill, and New Grove are the principal residences. The ruins of Ballynakill Castle are situated on an eminence, and near which are those of the old church and castle of Rathnaveoge.

RATHNEW, a par. and vil. in the bar. of Newcastle, co. Wicklow, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, containing the post town of Ashford. The surface consists of a good soil, and is crossed by the roads from Dublin to Wicklow, upon which stands the village. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Dublin, forming part of the prebend of Wicklow. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Wicklow. Clonmannon is one of the principal seats. There is a police station, and petty sessions are held once a fortnight. There are remains of a rath, from which the parish takes its name; also ruins of the old church.

RATHO, a par. in the co. of Edinburgh, Scotland, 2½ miles S.E. of Kirkliston, and 8 S.W. of Edinburgh. It is a junction station on the Glasgow and Edinburgh railway. This parish, which formerly belonged to the princes of Scotland, is about 5 miles in length by 2½ wide, and contains the post-office village of the same name, and the village of Bonnington, where was the ancient seat of the Wilkie family. The parish is bounded by Costorphine, Currie, Kirkliston, and Kirknewton. It is traversed by the Union canal, on the banks of which the village of Ratho stands, and is watered on the E. by the Gogar burn. The surface is undulating, and even hilly towards the southern boundary, where the two bold isolated heights of Dalmahoy and Kaimes Hill attain an elevation of 660 and 680 feet above sea-level. The prevailing rocks are trap, sandstone, and claystone, all of which are largely quarried; and coal is said to have been formerly worked near Bonnington. The soil is in general fertile, and the greater part is in tillage or arable; but there are considerable plantations and a little pasture. The higher grounds command views of the Lothians, the shores of the Frith of Forth, the Ochil Hills, and the frontier Grampians, with part of Fifeshire. The village, which is built on the declivity of a hill running down to the canal, consists of one street of cottages, built of stone and roofed with tiles or slate. It has recently been much extended and improved. The principal seats are Dalmahoy House, the residence of the Earl of Morton; Ratho House, a Grecian edifice; Hatton House, Bonnington House, Norton House, Millburn Tower (built by the late Sir R. Liston), and several others. The Edinburgh and Glasgow railway and the S. road from Edinburgh to Glasgow traverse the parish. The par. is in the presb. of Edinburgh and synod of Lothian and Tweeddale, in the patron. of trustees. The minister has a stipend of £306 0*s.* 11*d.* The church is an ancient cruciform structure, altered by modern improvements, and near it is a fountain called "Our Lady's" well. There is a free church for Ratho and Kirknewton; also a small public library and two non-parochial schools. Dr. William Wilkie, the eccentric author of the "Epigoniad," and sometimes called "the Scottish Homer," was once minister here.

RATHOWEN, a small market and post town in the par. of Rathaspick, bar. of Moygoish, co. Westmeath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 10½ miles N.W. of Mullingar, and 3 from Ballinalack. Here are situated the parish church, a Roman Catholic chapel, and a school. The village also contains a police station and a comfortable inn. Newpass is the neighbouring residence. Several small loughs make the locality interesting. Tuesday is market day. Fairs are held on 15th May and on the second Tuesday in December.

RATHPATRICK, or BALLYPATRICK, a par. in the bar. of Ida, co. Kilkenny, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3½ miles N.E. of Waterford, its post town. The parish is crossed by the river Suir, and by the road from Waterford to New Ross. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ossory, val. with Rossbercon, £328. The church is in ruins. The Roman Catholic chapel is at the head of a division. There are a Lancasterian and private schools. In the vicinity are ruins of an ancient castle.

RATHREAGA, a par. in the bar. of Ardagh, co. Longford, Ireland, 4 miles S.W. of Edgeworthstown. It is situated in a wild district on the banks of the river Inny. The surface is chiefly bog and mountain pasture; the soil near the river is a rich loam, upon a substratum of limestone. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ardagh, united with Kilglass. The church has long been in ruins. The chief seat is Fox Hall, a modern mansion built on the site of Rathreagh Castle.

RATHREAGH, a par. in the bar. of Tirawley, co. Mayo, Ireland, 4 miles N.W. of Killala. The village, which is considerable, was formerly a place of more importance than at present, and has the remains of an abbey for Dominican Friars, founded in 1274 by the McJordan family, to whom this district anciently belonged. The soil is fertile, upon a substratum of limestone. The land is chiefly arable. The living is a vic. annexed to Ballisakeery. Fairs are held on 17th March, first Thursday after Trinity Sunday, 24th June, 29th September, and 26th December.

RATHREGAN, a par. in the bar. of Ratoath, co. Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles S.W. of Dunshaughlin, its post town. The parish is intersected by the road from Dublin to Trim. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Meath, val. with Dunshaughlin, £333, in the patron. of the crown. The Roman Catholic chapel is at the head of a union. There are a police station and a school. Parsonstown is the principal residence.

RATHROE, a par. in the bar. of Shelburne, co. Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles E. of Arthurstown, its post town. This par. is now both civilly and ecclesiastically annexed to Dunbrody and St. James's (which see).

RATHRONAN, a par. in the bar. of Lower Connello, co. Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 4 miles W. of Newcastle. Ardagh is its post town. The parish, which is of large extent, comprises much mountain and waste, with only a small proportion of arable land. Coal is worked. The parish is traversed by the road from Newcastle to Shanagolden. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Limerick, val. £111, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was entirely rebuilt in 1820, by means of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Ardagh. There are two public schools and a police station. Glenville and Cahermoyle are the principal residences. The ruins of Ballyvohan Castle are in this parish; likewise those of an ancient church.

RATHRONAN, a par. in the bar. of Iffa and Offa, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 1½ mile from Clonmel, its post town. The surface consists generally of excellent arable soil. The road from Clonmel to Fethard crosses the interior. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lismore, val. £99. The church was erected in 1825 by the wife of Gen. Sir William Meadows. The Giant's Grave is an elevated spot, surmounted with a sculptured stone.

RATHSALLAGH, a par. in the bar. of Upper Talbotstown, co. Wicklow, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 1 mile S. of Dunlavan, its post town. The surface consists of well-cultivated land. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Dublin, val. with Dunlavan, £447, in the patron. of the archbishop. It forms part of the Dunlavan union in the Roman Catholic arrangement. Here is a school supported by the Pennyfather family, who are the proprietors of the parish, and have their seat here. A large fair is held on the 4th September. A rath is visible in the parish.

RATHSARAN, a par. in the bar. of Clandonagh, Queen's County, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2½ miles W. of Rathdowney, its post town. The surface is traversed by the road from Dublin to Thurles. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Ossory, val. £265, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was erected in 1797, by the late Board of First Fruits. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Rathdowney. There is a parish school.

RATHTOOLE, or BALLYCOR, a par. in the bar. of Upper Talbotstown, co. Wicklow, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles N.W. of Baltinglass, its post town. It is crossed by the road from Baltinglass to Ballitore. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Dublin, val. with Timolin, £272, in the patron. of the archbishop. There is an ancient burial place.

RATHVEN, a par. in the district of Enzie, co. Banff, Scotland. It comprises the vils. of Buckie, Port Gordon, Porteasy, Portnockie, Findochtie, New Tannachie, and Rathven. It extends about 10 miles in length from S.W. to N.E., with an extreme breadth of 5 miles. It is bounded by the Moray Frith, and by the pars. of Cullen, Deskford, Keith, and Bellie. The greater part of the surface is of a hilly nature, the highest point being at Binhill, which rises 1,050 feet, and serves as an excellent sea mark. A carriage road was constructed to its summit by the late Earl of Seafield. The soil is of various quality. The chief part of the land is in moss and moor, but the level parts are in a good state of cultivation. There is an abundance of slate, lime, and sandstone, all of which are worked. There are also several mineral springs, and traces of a camp at King's Cairn, where King Indulphus defeated the Danes. The parish is traversed near the coast by the road from Fraserburgh to Fochabers. The village of Rathven is about 3 miles S.W. of Cullen, and 1½ N.E. of Buckie. It is situated on the Moray Frith, and is of small extent. In the vicinity are corn and other mills. It contains a public library, and a bead house for six male inmates. This par. is in the presb. of Fordyce and synod of Aberdeen. The minister has a stipend of £228. The parish church was erected in 1794. In the western district there is a quoad sacra parish church, called Enzie church. There are two chapels-of-ease, designated Seafield church and Buckie church. There are also Episcopalian chapels at Arradoul and Buckie, and Roman Catholic chapels at Buckie and Presholm. There is a parochial school, besides numerous other schools, several of which are endowed. The principal residences are Cairnfield, Buckie Lodge, Burnside, Letterfourie, Presholm, and Tannachie. A fair for cattle is held on the Friday in July prior to Glass fair.

RATHVILLY, a bar. in the co. of Carlow, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, contains the pars. of Ardristan, Clonmore, Haroldstown, Rahill, Rathmore, Rathvilly, Straboe, Tullowphelim, and parts of Ardoyne, Ballinglass, Crecrin, Fennagh, Hacketstown, Kiltegan, and Kineagh, comprising about 45,000 acres.

RATHVILLY, a par. in the bar. of Rathvilly, co. Carlow, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 5 miles N.E. of Tallow. Baltinglass is its post town. The surface consists principally of pasture land. The road from Tallow to Baltinglass traverses the interior. The living is a rect. in the dioc of Leighlin, val. with Rathmore and Straboe, £865, in the patron. of the crown and bishop. The church was erected in 1751. The Roman Catholic chapel is at the head of a union. There are a National and a private school. Lisnoon is the principal residence in the parish. There is a large cromlech at Tobinstown, and in other parts of the parish are remains of a rath, some church ruins, and an ancient cross. Fairs are held in the village on 1st January, 25th March, 24th June, and 1st August.

RATHWIRE, a vil. in the par. of Killucan, bar. of Farbill, co. Westmeath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles N.N.W. of Kinnegad. It is situated on the road from thence to Killucan. There is a Roman Catholic chapel, also remains of a castle built by Hugh de Lacy.

RATLEY, a par. in the Burton-Dassett div. of Kington hund., co. Warwick, 4 miles S.E. of Kineton, and the same distance S.W. of Fenny Compton railway station. Banbury is its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated under Edgehill, once the scene of a sanguinary battle between the royalists and parliamentarians in the reign of Charles I. The hills in the neighbourhood afford excellent pasturage for large quantities of cattle. A large portion of the inhabitants are engaged in the stone quarries, which are very extensive. On the brow of Edgehill is a large triangular fortification called Nadbury camp, supposed to be Roman, which commands a prospect over a fertile country, including the Vale of Red Horse, which skirts its base. The tithes were commuted for land, under an Enclosure Act in 1795, and there are 40 acres of glebe. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £120. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, has a lofty square tower containing three bells. There is an endowed free school. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. The Earl of Jersey is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

RATLINGHOPE, a par. in the Bishop's Castle div. of Purslow hund., co. Salop, 4 miles N.W. of Church Stretton, its post town, and 12 S.W. of Shrewsbury. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Onny, and on the road from Shrewsbury to Bishop's Castle. A portion of the district is in a wild state, and becomes impassable during the inclemency of the winter season. The par. includes the tnshps. of Stitt and Gatten. A thin vein of copper has been found, but is not worked. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £65. The church is dedicated to St. Margaret. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum. R. Scott, Esq., is lord of the manor.

RATOATH, a bar. in the co. of Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, contains the pars. of Ballymaglassan, Cookstown, Crickstown, Donaghmore, Dunshaughlin, Greenoge, Kilrew, Killegland, Rathbeggan, Rathregan, Ratoath, and parts of Culmullin and Trevet, together comprising about 35,700 acres.

RATOATH, a par. and post-office vil. in the bar. of Ratoath, co. Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles N.W. of Ashbourne, and 14 S.W. of Trim. The surface consists very generally of profitable land. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Meath, val. with others, £595, in the patron. of the crown. The church was erected in 1817, by means of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits. The Roman Catholic chapel is at the head of a district. There is a National school. Manor House and Lagore are the chief seats. The village was formerly a parliamentary borough, and had an abbey. A large mound, or rath, stands near the church, from which the place probably takes its name. Here are a dispensary and a police station. Fairs are held on 18th April, 1st June, and 20th November.

RATSLOE, a hmlt. in the par. of Poltimore, co. Devon, 3 miles N.E. of Exeter.

RATTEN-ROW, a vil. in the tnshp. of Stainbrough, par. of Silkstone, West Riding co. York, 2 miles S.W. of Barnsley. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the collieries.

RATTERY, a par. and tnshp. in the hund. of Stanborough, co. Devon, 4½ miles N.W. of Totnes, its post town. The village, which is small, is wholly agricultural. The land is fertile, and well cultivated. Lady Carew owns the greater part of the parish. A vein of lead ore has been discovered, but is not worked. The rectorial tithes, which belong to Lady Carew, have been commuted for a rent-charge of £189 9*s., and the vicarial for one of £200. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £240. The church is an ancient structure with a tower surmounted by a spire, and containing four bells. It has been recently repaired at the expense of Lady Carew. The interior contains specimens of ancient stained glass, a wooden screen, and a Norman font. The charities produce about £15 per annum, besides an almshouse for six poor persons, and a small bequest for the repairs of the church. There is a village school, partly supported by Lady Carew. The principal residence is Morley House.

RATTLESDEN, a par. in the hund. of Thedwestry, co. Suffolk, 9 miles S.E. of Bury St. Edmund's, its post town, and 5 W. of Stow-Market. The village is situated on a small stream, which joins the river Gipping at Combs. The manor was alienated from the bishopric of Ely in the 4th year of Queen Elizabeth, and was given to William Blake by James I. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £770, and the glebe comprises 43 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £930. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is an ancient stone edifice with a small tower, surmounted by a spire, and contains five bells. The roof of the church is of open carved work, and there are tablets to two former rectors. The register dates from 1558. There are some small charities. There are a National and a Sunday-school, the former partly endowed. The Baptists have a place of worship. Clapton Hall and Rattlesden Hall are the principal residences. F. L. Cocksedge, Esq., is lord of the manor.

RATTOO, a par. in the bar. of Clanmaurice, co. Kerry, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 7 miles S.W. of Listowel. Tralee is its post town. It lies at the junction of the rivers Feale and Brick. The surface consists of arable and hilly pasture lands. The road from Tralee to Ballybunion traverses the interior. The living is an impropriate rect. in the dioc. of Ardfert and Aghadoe. It is united to Killury in the Roman Catholic arrangement. There are three private schools. The principal seats are Ballyhorgan, Rattoo Lodge, and Bushmount. A castle formerly existed here, and there are some remains of a round tower, and of an abbey. The latter was founded by Friar William in the time of John.

RATTRAY, a par. in the district of Strathmore, co. Perth, Scotland. It comprises a vil. of the same name. The parish extends in length about 5½ miles from S. to N., with a breadth of about 1¾ mile. It lies on the left bank of the river Ericht, and is bounded by Bendochy on the E., and by Blairgowrie on the opposite side of the river. The surface is moderately flat, and of a diversified character. The lands along the banks of the river are arable and fertile, but the higher grounds are only suitable for pasture and sheep-walks. The parish is traversed in an easterly direction by the road from Dunkeld to Kirriemuir, and is within easy access of the Scottish Midland railway. The village of Rattray is about 9 miles N.E. of Dunkeld, and 4½ S.W. of Alyth. It is irregularly built on the declivity of a hill, near the river Ericht. The modern village, called New Rattray, is connected with Blairgowrie by a bridge of four arches across the Ericht, on the banks of which are flax-spinning mills. A large portion of the inhabitants are employed in the mills, hence the rapid growth of this prosperous little village. This par. is in the presb. of Dunkeld, and synod of Perth and Stirling. The minister has a stipend of £157. The parish church was erected in 1821. There are a Free church and an United Presbyterian church. There is a chapel-of-ease at Bendochy, and a parochial school at Rattray. To the S.E. of the village are traces of the old castle of Rattray; and about 2 miles N. stands Craig Hall on a perpendicular rock, 100 feet in height. Fairs are held on the first Fridays in April and August for the sale of cattle.

RATTRAY, a vil. in the par. of Crimond, district of Buchan, co. Aberdeen, Scotland, 7 miles N.W. of Peterhead. It is situated on the coast of the North Sea, under Rattray Head, which has a ledge of rocks off it, called Rattray Brigs.

RAUCEBY, NORTH, a par. in the wap. of Flaxwell, co. Lincoln, 4 miles W. of Sleaford, its post town, and 10 N.E. of Grantham railway station. The village, which is large, is wholly agricultural. There are several quarries of soft freestone. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment, under an Enclosure Act, in 1788, and there are 60 acres of glebe. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £165. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient structure, with a spired tower containing four bells. There is a National school for both sexes. The Marquis of Bristol is lord of the manor.

RAUCEBY, SOUTH, a par. in the wap. of Flaxwell, co. Lincoln, half a mile from North Rauceby, and 3½ W. of Sleaford, its post town. The village, which is large, is wholly agricultural. The inhabitants frequent the church of North Rauceby, as the church of this parish has long been in ruins. Rauceby Hall is the principal residence. The Marquis of Bristol is lord of the manor.

RAUGHLEY, a vil. in the par. of Drumcliff, bar. of Lower Carbery, co. Sligo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 10 miles N.W. of Sligo. It is situated on the N. shore of Sligo Bay, and has a coastguard station. A small pier has been erected for the convenience of traffic in fish and sea manure. Rockley Lodge is the principal seat, and on the western side of a peninsula are some curious caverns. The ruins of the old church and of Artarmon Castle are seen nearly swallowed up in sand.

RAUGHTON AND GAITSGILL, a tnshp. in the par. of Dalston, Cumberland ward, co. Cumberland, 5 miles S.W. of Carlisle. It is in conjunction with the parish of Dalston.

RAUGHTON-HEAD, a chplry. in the par. of Castle-Sowerby, Leath ward, co. Cumberland, 7 miles S.W. of Carlisle, and 9 N.W. of Penrith. It is situated in Inglewood Forest, near the river Calder. The impropriation belongs to the Dean and Chapter of Carlisle. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £100. The church was rebuilt in 1678, and repaired and enlarged in 1760. There is a parochial school with a small endowment.

RAUNDS, a par. in the hund. of Higham-Ferrers, co. Northampton, 6 miles S. of Thrapston, its post town, and 4 N.E. of Higham-Ferrers. The village, which is of large extent, is situated on the river Nene, and near the Northampton railway. Shoes are manufactured here to a considerable extent. The surface is undulating; three-fourths of the land are arable, and the remainder pasture. The soil consists of clay and gravel, with sand and rich alluvial mould near the river. Freestone abounds, and there is a petrifying spring. The tithes were commuted for land and a money-payment under an Enclosure Act in 1797. The glebe comprises about 200 acres, and the vicar receives a rent-charge of £9 13*s.* out of the tithes of Ringstead. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £250. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient structure with a lofty spired tower. Attached to the church is a chantry chapel. In the churchyard is the stump of an old cross. The parochial charities produce about £62 per annum, of which £18 goes towards the support of the National school. The Wesleyans and the Baptists have each a place of worship. The Queen and Sir J. Langham, Bart., of Cottesbrooke, are proprietors of the manor.

RAVEL, a stream of the co. of Antrim, Ireland, rises near Cary, and joins the river Main a little below Cloughmills.

RAVELEY, GREAT, a par. in the hund. of Hurstingstone, co. Hunts, 3½ miles S.W. of Ramsey. It is situated in the eastern part of the county. The village, which is small, is wholly agricultural. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to that of Upwood, in the dioc. of Ely. The church has long been in ruins. The Wesleyans have a small chapel. Sir Henry Peyton, Bart., is lord of the manor.

RAVELEY, LITTLE, a par. in the hund. of Hurstingstone, co. Hunts, half a mile S. of Great Raveley, and 4 S.W. of Ramsey. The parish is of small extent, and the village consists of only a few scattered houses. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Ely, val. £50. The church, dedicated to St. James, was erected in the middle of the 14th century, and was formerly a chapel-of-ease to Bury. It is an ancient structure capable of containing eighty persons, and has recently been repaired and much improved. The Earl of Sandwich is lord of the manor. A Roman urn of blue earth and several skeletons were found while working a gravel pit.

RAVELRIG, a hill near Currie, co. Edinburgh, Scotland. It attains an elevation of 800 feet above sea-level, and has on its summit remains of a Roman station called Castlebank.

RAVENDALE, EAST, a par. in the wap. of Bradley-Haverstoe, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 8 miles S.W. of Great Grimsby, its post town, and 5 W. of North Thoresby railway station. The parish, which is of small extent, is intersected by two roads from Great Grimsby, one in the direction of Lincoln, and the other traversing the low country to the Wolds. The surface is undulating, and the soil clay and sand upon a substratum of chalk. The village is small and wholly agricultural. The glebe comprises about 4 acres. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £66, in the patron. of Trinity College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to St. Martin, has recently been rebuilt on the site of the old one. The register commences in 1723. There is a charity school for both sexes. Henry Thorold, Esq., is lord of the manor. In the chalk pits various fossils are found.

RAVENDALE, WEST, a chplry. in the par. of East Ravendale, hund. of Bradley-Haverstoe, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 8 miles S.W. of Great Grimsby, its post town, and 8½ S.E. of Caistor. There is no village, but only a few dwellings, two of which are farmhouses. The old seat of the De Ravendales, built out of the materials of the priory, has long been in ruins. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to the rect.* of Hatcliffe, in the dioc. of Lincoln. The church has long been in ruins. Here was formerly a priory founded by Alan, son of the Earl of Brittany, in 1202, as a cell to the Abbey of Beaufort, in Brittany. The site was granted to the collegiate church of Southwell in 1438.

RAVENFIELD, a par. in the S. div. of Strafforth wap., West Riding co. York, 4 miles N.E. of Rotherham, its post town, and 9 from Doncaster and Stickhill. The village is small, and wholly agricultural. It took its name from the erection of the Danish standard here during the northern incursions of that people in the 9th century. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of York, val. £150. The church, dedicated to St. James, has a square tower containing six bells. The church was erected in 1756 on the site of the former one. The parochial charities produce about £32 per annum. There is a school for both sexes, partly maintained by T. B. Bosvile, Esq., who is lord of the manor. The principal residence is Ravensfield Park, formerly the seat of the Wesleys and Bosviles.

RAVENGLASS, a small seaport and market town in the par. of Muncaster, ward of Allerdale-above-Derwent, co. Cumberland, 56 miles S.W. of Carlisle. It is a station on the Whitehaven and Furness junction railway. It is situated on the shore of the Irish Channel, near the estuary of the rivers Eske, Mite, and Irt, which here falling into the sea form a safe and commodious harbour. The town consists mainly of one large range of houses, facing the sea, and is sheltered from the N.E. winds by the Black Combe mountains. In the vicinity are limekilns, and there are shipbuilding yards where boats and small vessels are constructed. The trade is inconsiderable, consisting chiefly of the importation of coal from Whitehaven, and the export of oysters, corn, and timber. The oyster trade employs a considerable number of vessels. There is an endowed National school. The principal residence is Muncaster Castle, about a mile from the town, the seat of Lord Muncaster, a lineal descendant of the Penningtons, who have held the manor since the Norman conquest. On the opposite bank of the river Eske is the "old city of Barnscar," the origin of which is traditionally ascribed to the Danes, but of its history no records exist. The city was defended by a wall, and was intersected by one long street and several transverse ones. On a rugged eminence, called Hard Knot, in which the river Eske has its source, are the ruins of an ancient church and castle, also the remains of a round tower on one of the adjacent mounds. Many relics of antiquity, consisting of flint battle-axes and arrow-heads, and Roman and Saxon coins, have been found here. Market day is on Wednesday. Fairs are held on 8th June and 5th August for horses, cattle, and yarn.

RAVENHEAD, a hmlt. in the chplry. of St. Helen's, and par. of Prescot, co. Lancaster, 1 mile S.W. of St. Helen's, and 2 miles N.E. of Prescot. It is situated on the Sankey canal, and is celebrated for its extensive glass works, established in 1773, covering above 20 acres.

RAVENHILL, several places of this name in the vicinity of Whitby, North Riding co. York, so named from having been the site of the Danish standard or Reafen during the invasions of Inguar and Ubba in the 9th century.

RAVENINGHAM, a par. in the hund. of Clavering, co. Norfolk, 3½ miles S.E. of Loddon, its post town, and 4 N.W. of Beccles. The village, which is small and straggling, is situated on the road from Norwich to Beccles and Yarmouth. It is entirely agricultural. Here was formerly a college for a master and eight secular priests, founded by Sir John de Norwich in 1348, but was shortly after removed to Norton-Subcourse, and in 1393 to Castle-Mettingham in Suffolk. At its dissolution the manor came to the Derrys, and afterwards to the Bacon family, whose ancestors were Friar Roger Bacon and Sir Nicholas Bacon, lord keeper in the reign of Queen Elizabeth. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £518 8*s.* The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £70. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, has a circular tower, the upper part of which is octagonal. It was restored and redecorated at the expense of Sir E. Bacon, to whose family there are many monuments in the chancel. The register dates from 1558. There is a National school. Raveningham Hall, the seat of the Bacon family, is situated in a well-wooded park. Sir H. H. Bacon, Bart., is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

RAVEN-MEOLS, a hmlt. in the chplry. of Formby, and par. of Walton-on-the-Hill, co. Lancaster, 7 miles W. of Ormskirk, and 10 N.W. of Liverpool. It is situated on the sea-coast near Formby Point, at the mouth of the river Alt.

RAVEN POINT, a promontory on the coast of co. Wexford, Ireland. It forms the northern point at the entrance to Wexford haven, nearly opposite to Roslare Point.

RAVEN ROCK, a peak of the Axedge hills, co. Derby, 2½ miles S.W. of Buxton. From its summit is a view of Snowdon and Lincoln cathedral, and near its foot the river Dove has its source.

RAVENSBURN, a small river of the co. of Kent, rises near Farnborough, and passes under the Greenwich railway to the Thames at Deptford Creek.

RAVENSBURY CASTLE, an ancient camp on Icknield Street, co. Herts, near Hexton. It covers 16 acres, and is supposed to be of Danish origin.

RAVENSCRAIG, two ancient castles of this name in Scotland, one, the seat of the St. Clairs, is in co. Fife, and now belongs to Earl Rosslyn; the other, a seat of the Keiths, is in co. Aberdeen, near Peterhead.

RAVEN'S CLIFF, a spot on the Wye, co. Hereford, near Bicknor.

RAVENSCROFT, a tnshp. in the par. of Middlewich, hund. of Northwich, co. Chester, 1 mile N.W. of Middlewich. It is situated on the river Dane.

RAVENSDALE PARK, a hmlt. in the par. of Muggington, hund. of Appletree, co. Derby, 5 miles S.W. of Belper, near a branch of the river Derwent.

RAVENSDALE PARK, a demesne in Ravensdale, co. Louth, Ireland, 5 miles N.E. of Dundalk. The mansion occupies a site between the Slieve Gullion and Carlingford mountains.

RAVENSDEN, a par. in the hund. of Barford, co. Bedford, 4 miles N.E. of Bedford, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. The surface is rather hilly, and the soil clayey. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Enclosure Act in 1809. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ely, val. £100. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient structure of stone with a square embattled tower containing five bells. The parochial charities produce about £8 per annum. There is a National school adjoining the church. The Wesleyans have a place of worship.

RAVENSEAT, a hmlt. in the chplry. of Muker, par. of Grinton, North Riding co. York, 4 miles N.W. of Muker. It is situated in the Moorlands near Shunner Fell.

RAVENSFLAT, a hmlt. in the par. of Laughton, wap. of Corringham, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 5 miles N.E. of Gainsborough, near the river Trent.

RAVENSPUR or RAVENSER, an ancient borough in the East Riding co. York. It stood near Spurn Head, and was a place of considerable trade in the 14th century; but was long ago overwhelmed by the sea.

RAVENSTHORPE, a par. in the hunds. of Nobottle Grove and Guilsborough, co. Northampton, 8 miles N.W. of Northampton, its post town, and the same distance N.E. of Daventry. The village, which is of considerable extent, is situated on a branch of the river Nen, and about 2 miles from the main road between Northampton and Dunchurch. The par. includes the hmlts. of Coton-under-Guilsborough and Teeton. The surface is undulating, and the land nearly evenly divided between arable and pasture. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £81, and there are 96 acres of glebe. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £243, in the patron. of the Dean and Canons of Christ Church, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Denis, has an embattled tower containing a clock and five bells. The parochial charities produce about £85 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes. The Baptists have a place of worship. Lord Willoughby de Brooke is lord of the manor.

RAVENSTHORPE, a hmlt. in the par. of Appleby, co. Lincoln, 5 miles N.W. of Glanford-Brigg. It is situated on the line of the ancient Ermine Street, near the river Ancholme.

RAVENSTONE, a par. in the hund. of Newport, co. Bucks, 5 miles N.W. of Newport Pagnel, its post town, and 3 S.W. of Olney. The village, which is of small extent, is situated near the river Ouse, which flows to the S. of the parish. In 1246 a priory of Black canons was founded here by Henry III. In the 15th year of Henry VIII. its revenues were valued at £66 13*s.* 4*d., and were given to Cardinal Wolsey towards the endowment of his intended colleges. The surface towards the northern boundary is undulating, but generally flat towards the Ouse. The soil is clay, alternating with gravel, upon a subsoil of limestone. The land is nearly evenly divided between arable and pasture. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £104. The church, dedicated to All Saints, contains a monument to Lord Chancellor Finch, who died in 1682, and one to the late Earl of Northampton. The parochial charities produce about £282, part of which goes to the Earl of Northampton's almshouses, and £150 to Chapman's school, which is conducted on the National system. G. Finch, Esq., of Burley Hall, in Rutlandshire, is lord of the manor. The Rev. Thomas Seaton, founder of the Seatonian prize poem at Cambridge, was once vicar; and the Rev. Thomas Scott, author of a commentary on the Bible, was once curate.

RAVENSTONE, a par. in the hunds. of West Goscote and Repton, cos. Leicester and Derby, 3½ miles S.E. of Ashby-de-la-Zouch, its post town, and 2½ S.W. of the Coalville railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is chiefly agricultural. A portion of the inhabitants are engaged in the collieries. There are also some brick-kilns. The parish is intersected by the road from Leicester to Ashby, and the railway from Swannington to Leicester runs about a mile distant from the village. The surface is undulating, and the soil is a rich sandy loam upon a substratum of coal. The tithes have been commuted for land and a money payment under an Enclosure Act in 1770, and the glebe comprises 165 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £300, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is an ancient structure, with a spired tower containing three bells. The whole edifice has been put in an excellent state of repair. The parochial charities produce about £881 per annum, chiefly the endowment of Rebecca Wilkins's almshouses, founded in 1712, for 32 single women above the age of 50 years. There is a National school for both sexes. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. Ravenstone Hall and Ravenstone House are the principal residences. Leonard Fosbrooke, Esq., is lord of the manor.

RAVENSTONEDALE, a par. in the E. ward. of co. Westmoreland. It is an extensive par. equalised into four quarters, called The Town, Bowderdale, Fell End, and Newbiggen angles, extending in length about 7 miles, with a breadth of about 5 miles. It is bounded by part of Yorkshire on the N., and by the tnshps. of Mallerstang, Smardale, Raisbeck, and Tebay on its other sides. The town of Ravenstonedale is about 4½ miles S.W. of Kirkby-Stephen, its post town, 13 S.E. of Appleby, and 270 N.W. of London. It is situated under Ravenstonedale Fell, near the source of the river Eden and Lune. The manor was formerly held by Watton Priory, in Yorkshire, and in common with other possessions of that monastery, enjoyed the privilege of sanctuary. After the Dissolution it came to the Whartons and Lowthers. The substratum abounds in a peculiar kind of red sandstone, which becomes very hard upon exposure to the air. A portion of the inhabitants are engaged in frame-work knitting; but the staple trade of the town is derived from agricultural produce. The district abounds with thwaites and fells, intervened by fertile valleys. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £110. The church, dedicated to St. Oswald, was rebuilt in 1744, near the site of a more ancient one, in which the steward and jury of the manor were wont to hold their court for the trial of felons and other offenders. The parochial charities produce about £64 per annum, £42 of which sum goes towards the support of the free grammar school, founded by Thomas Fothergill, B.D., in 1688. A school-house was built by contributions in 1758. The Rev. Dr. John Robinson, author of the "Theological Dictionary," and other eminent men, were educated in the above school, where Latin and Greek are taught to all scholars belonging to this parish free of expense. The Independents and Wesleyans have each a place of worship, and at Newbiggen the Primitive Methodists have a place of worship. There are remains of St. Helen's chapel with a holy well. Near Rotherbridge is a circle of stones, supposed to be of Druidical origin. The Earl of Lonsdale is lord of the manor. Market day is on Thursday. Fairs are held on the Thursday following Whit-Sunday, on the Wednesday prior to the second Thursday in March, and on the Wednesday prior to the second Sunday in April, also on the 29th August.

RAVENSTRUTHER, or RAVENSWORTH, a vil. in the par. of Carstairs, co. Lanark, Scotland, 3 miles N.E. of Lanark, and 1 mile N.W. of Carstairs station on the Caledonian railway.

RAVENSWORTH, a tnshp. in the par. of Chester-le-Street, middle div. of Chester ward, co. Durham, 4 miles S.W. of Gateshead. It is situated on the river Team, opposite Gateshead Fell, and was once held by the Lumleys, Gascoignes, and others. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the coal mines. The principal residence is Ravensworth Castle, rebuilt in the ancient baronial style, after designs by Nash, in 1808. It has the ruined towers of the old castle, and in the neighbourhood is a cross where, during the prevalence of the plague at Newcastle in 1645, the market was held. Ravensworth gives the title of baron to the family of Liddely.

RAVENSWORTH, a tnshp. in the par. of Kirkby-Ravensworth, wap. of West Gilling, North Riding co. York, 4½ miles N.W. of Richmond. At the Conquest it belonged to Bardulf, and was given to St. Mary's abbey, at York. There are traces of an ancient castle, which is said to have existed before the Conquest. There is a place of worship for Wesleyans, also a parochial school.

RAVENSWORTH, KIRKBY. See KIRKBY-RAVENSWORTH, co. York.

RAVENTHORPE. See RAVENSTHORPE, co. Lincoln.

RAVENTOFTS, a hmlt. in the chplry. of Bishop Thornton, West Riding co. York, 3 miles N.W. of Ripley.

RAW, a tnshp. in the par. of Rothbury, W. div. of Coquetdale ward, co. Northumberland, 3 miles S.E. of Rothbury, its post town. The township, which is of small extent, is situated on the S. side of the river Coquet, and at a short distance from the Rothbury road to Morpeth. There is no village, only a few scattered houses. In the vicinity is a small colliery. The Duke of Northumberland is lord of the manor and owner of all the soil.

RAW, a hmlt. in Lyth quarter, par. of Heversham, co. Westmoreland, 4 miles S.W. of Kendal, and 5 N.W. of Milnthorpe, near the edge of an extensive bog.

RAWCLIFFE, a tnshp. partly in the par. of St. Olave Mary-Gate, wap. of Bulmer, North Riding co. York, and partly in the par. of St. Michael-le-Belfrey, city of York, 2 miles N. of York. It is situated on the Scarborough railway, near the river Foss. It is famed for the breeding of blood stock, and designated the Rawcliffe stud farm. Earl de Grey is lord of the manor.

RAWCLIFFE, a tnshp. and chplry in the par. of Snaith, lower div. of the wap. of Osgoldcross, West Riding co. York, 3 miles E. of Snaith, 5 W. of Goole, and 11 S.E. of Selby, its post town. It is a station on the Wakefield, Pontefract, Doncaster, and Goole line of railway. It is bounded on the N. by the river Aire, and is chiefly agricultural. The village, which is large, is built round a spacious green, and the inhabitants are chiefly employed in the manufacture of cloth for sacking. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of York, val. £126. The church, dedicated to St. James, was erected in 1842 at an expense of £2,000. The parochial charities produce about £47 per annum, of which £30 goes to the free school, and £7 to an almshouse for four poor widows. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a place of worship. Mrs. Creyke is lady of the manor.

RAWCLIFFE, OUT, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of St. Michael-on-Wyre, co. Lancaster, 6 miles S.W. of Garstang, its post town, and 4½ of Poulton-le-Fylde. The township, which is much scattered, is situated on the river Wyre, and is wholly agricultural. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £105, in the patron. of the Vicar of St. Michael-on-Wyre. The church, dedicated to St. John, was erected in 1838, on a site of land presented by F. R. W. Ffrance, Esq., by whom its expense was most liberally defrayed. It was designed after the ruins of Glastonbury abbey. There is a National school for both sexes. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. R. W. Ffrance, Esq., is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

RAWCLIFFE, UPPER, a tnshp. in the par. of St. Michael's-on-the-Wyre, co. Lancaster, 2 miles N.E. of Rawcliffe, Out, and 6 S.W. of Garstang. It is joined with Tarnicar, or Tarnacre, to form a township. There is a school with a small endowment.

RAWDEN, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Guiseley, upper div. of Skyrack wap., West Riding co. York, 7 miles N.W. of Leeds, its post town, and 5 S. of Otley. It has a station at Apperley Bridge, on the Midland Counties railway. The village is situated near the road from Leeds to Otley, on the brow of an eminence in the valley of Airedale. A portion of the inhabitants are engaged in the cloth trade. The soil consists of sand, loam, and gravel. The substratum contains coal of inferior quality, which is wrought to a moderate extent, and there are quarries of excellent building-stone, from which the materials for St. Katherine's docks in London were partly supplied. The land is chiefly in pasture and meadow, with a small proportion of arable and woodland. The neighbourhood is studded with numerous gentlemen's seats. Rawdon Hall, the ancient seat of the Rawdons, Earls of Moira in Ireland, is now in a dilapidated state, and Layton Hall, for many centuries the seat of the Layton family, has been converted into cottages. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £108. The church is an ancient stone edifice with a square tower containing a clock and one bell. It was thoroughly repaired in 1825. The parochial charities produce about £50 per annum, of which £10 goes to the free school. There are also a British and a Sunday school. The Independents, Wesleyans, Society of Friends, and Baptists have each a place of worship. The Baptist college, founded by the Northern Baptists, was erected at an outlay of £10,000, and opened in 1859. There is a training school for both sexes belonging to the Society of Friends. This place gives the title of earl and baron to the Marquis of Hastings.

RAWLEIGH, a tythg. in the pars. of Bicton and Rockbear, hund. of East Budleigh, co. Devon.

RAWMARSH, a par. in the N. div. of Strafforth wap., West Riding co. York, 2½ miles N.E. of Rotherham, and 7 from Sheffield. It is a station on the Doncaster and Sheffield branch of the North Midland, which runs through the parish. The village, which is considerable, is situated on the river Don. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the manufacture of steel, iron, and earthenware, and in the collieries. Above half of the land is arable, and the remainder pasture and woodland. The substratum abounds with coal. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Enclosure Act in 1774, and the glebe comprises 140 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of York, val. £402, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, was rebuilt in 1839, with the exception of the tower, which is ancient. There are places of worship for Independents and Wesleyans. The charities produce about £65 per annum, besides almshouses founded by Edward Goodwin for six aged women. There are National schools for both sexes partially endowed.

RAWRETH, a par. in the hund. of Rochford, co.

Essex, 3 miles N.W. of Rayleigh, and 7 N.E. of Pitsea railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated near the river Crouch, which is here crossed by a bridge designated Battle Bridge. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The land is almost wholly arable, with a small tract of common. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £750, and the glebe comprises 45 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £660, in the patron. of Pembroke College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, has recently undergone complete restoration and enlargement. The S. aisle belongs to the lord of the manor of Beccles, by whom it is kept in repair. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum.

RAWRIDGE, a tythg. in the par. of Upottery, co. Devon, 5 miles N.E. of Honiton.

RAWTENSTALL, a vil. and ecclesiastical district in the par. of Whalley, co. Lancaster, 2 miles E. of Haslingden, and 16 N. of Manchester. It is a station on the Manchester, Bury, and Bacup section of the Lancashire and Yorkshire railway. The village is situated in the valley of the river Irwell, near Rosendale Forest. Many of the inhabitants are employed in the neighbouring woollen and cotton mills. There are a savings-bank and post-office in the village, which has much increased of late years. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £300. The church is a modern structure.

RAWYARDS, a vil. in the par. of New Monkland, Middlewood, co. Lanark, Scotland, half a mile from Airdrie, of which it is a suburb, and 12 E. of Glasgow by the Monkland railway, on which it is a station. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the neighbouring collieries and ironworks.

RAYDON, a par. in the hund. of Samford, co. Suffolk, 3½ miles S.E. of Hadleigh, its nearest post town. It is a station on the Hadleigh branch of the Great Eastern railway. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £500, and the glebe comprises 43 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £554. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The register dates from 1682. Mrs. C. Cripps is lady of the manor.

RAYDON, a hmlt. in the par. of Orford, hund. of Plomesgate, co. Suffolk, 2 miles from Orford, and 18 N.E. of Ipswich, on the river Ore near Orford Haven.

RAYE, a stream of the co. of Donegal, Ireland.

RAYLEIGH, or RALEIGH, a par. and post town in the hund. of Rochford, co. Essex, 4 miles from the South Benfleet railway station, and 14 S.E. of Chelmsford. It is situated near the shore of Hadley Bay, and on the road from London to Rochford. The village, which was formerly a market town, chiefly consists of one long street, and contains an extensive brewing and malting establishment. It is mentioned in Domesday Survey as being held at that time by Swene, or Sweyn, the Dane, who founded a castle here, of which there are still traces, surrounded by earthworks and ditches. The site of the castle is at a great altitude. The surface is elevated, and the soil a stiff clay. Roman coins of great antiquity were discovered in the neighbourhood in 1849. This place, anciently the head of an honour or barony, gives title of baron to the Strutts of Terling. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £800. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, is an ancient structure, with a lofty embattled tower surmounted by a shingled spire. It contains tombs of great antiquity. The parochial charities produce about £21 per annum, of which £17 goes towards a National school for both sexes. The Baptists have a place of worship. R. Bristow, Esq., is lord of the manor. A fair is held on Trinity Monday for horses and cattle.

RAYLESTOWN, or VILLARAILE. See RAILSTOWN, co. Tipperary.

RAYMOGHY, or RAY, a par. in the bar. of Raphoe, co. Donegal, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 4 miles N.E. of Letterkenny, its post town. The parish, which is of large extent, is chiefly arable and pasture, but comprises some mountain and waste. It lies along the margin of Lough Swilly. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Raphoe, val. £768, in the patron. of Trinity College, Dublin. The church was erected in 1792. It is united to Lagan in the Roman Catholic arrangement. Here are two Presbyterian meeting-houses, two public and several private schools. Leslie Hill is the chief seat. Fairs are held on 6th January and following months.

RAYMUNTERDONY, a par. in the bar. of Kilmacrenan, co. Donegal, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 4 miles S.W. of Dunfanaghy, its post town. The surface lies along the coast, and is generally mountainous. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Raphoe, val. £301, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was erected in 1803 by means of a gift from the late Board of First Fruits. There are a Roman Catholic chapel and two schools, the latter partly supported by private donations. There is a dispensary in this parish. Ballyconnell and Carrow-cannon are the principal seats. In the old churchyard is an ancient cross. Fairs are held on the last Thursday in each month.

RAYNE, a par. in the district of Garioch, co. Aberdeen, Scotland. It comprises besides a village of the same name, the villages of Old Rayne and Meiklewarthill. It extends about 3½ miles in length by about the same in breadth, and is bounded by the pars. of Auchterless, Fyvie, Daviot, Chapel of Garioch, Ayne, and Culsalmond. The surface is moderately ven, except towards the N., where the Rothmaise Hill rises to an altitude of 850 feet. The soil is chiefly a rich loam upon a subsoil of clay, but in the hilly parts a gravelly loam upon a subsoil of rock. The district is studded with wooded plantations. In the neighbourhood are three meal mills. The parish is traversed by the road from Old Meldrum to Huntly, and is within easy access to the Oyne station on the Great North of Scotland railway. The village of Rayne is about 7 miles N.W. of Inverury. It is situated on the river Urie, near the centre of the parish. At a short distance on the public road stands the little post village of Old Rayne, in which the parish church is situated. It formerly belonged to the Bishop of Aberdeen. In the vicinity are traces of a Roman way, two Druidical circles, and several cairns, under one of which Irvine of Drum, who fell at the battle of Harlaw in 1411, lies buried. This par. is in the presb. of Garioch and synod of Aberdeen, and in the patron. of the crown. The minister has a stipend of £225. There is a Free church which, though situated in the parish of Fyvie, takes its name from Rayne. There is a parochial school. Fairs for cattle, &c., are held on the Thursday prior to 26th May, on the Wednesday following the first Tuesday in August, on the day after Turriff fair, and on the fourth Tuesday in November (old style).

RAYNE, or RAINE, a par. in the hund. of Hinckford, co. Essex, 2 miles W. of Braintree, its post town, and 7 E. of Dunmow. It anciently formed part of the parish of Braintree, to which it is contiguous. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the road to Dunmow, and near the small river Brain, or Podsbrook. It is chiefly agricultural. The soil is a strong loam, on a substratum of clay, which is worked for the manufacture of white bricks. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £500, and the glebe comprises 27 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £466. The church, dedicated to All Saints, has a lofty tower surmounted by a shingled spire and containing five bells. The church was rebuilt in 1840. The register dates from 1558. The old church is said to have been erected in Henry II.'s time, and had a shrine to which pregnant women were wont to resort. The parochial charities produce about £5 per annum. There is a National school for girls and infants. The Earl of Essex is lord of the manor.

RAYNE, a hmlt. in the par. of Orton, E. ward, co. Westmoreland, 2 miles from Orton, and 8 S.W. of Appleby. It is situated on a feeder of the river Lime, under Orton Scar beacon.

RAYNE HATCH FARM, a hmlt. in the par. of Braintree, hund. of Hinckford, co. Essex, 1½ mile W. of Braintree.

RAYNHAM. See RAINHAM, cos. Essex and Norfolk.

REA, two streams of this name, one rises near Stanton Long, in co. Salop, and joins the Teme at Rochford; the other rises under the Clent hills in co. Worcester, and passing under the Grand Junction viaduct, which is here carried across the valley on 28 arches, joins the Teme near Castle Bromwich.

REACH, a chplry. in the par. of Leighton-Buzzard, hund. of Manshead, co. Bedford, 2 miles N.E. of Leighton-Buzzard. It is in conjunction with the hamlet of Heath. The village is situated near the Grand Junction canal and the river Ouzel.

REACH, or RECHE, a hmlt. in the pars. of Burwell and Swaffham Prior, hunds. of Staploe and Staine, co. Cambridge, 1 mile from Swaffham Prior, and 6 miles N.W. of Newmarket. It was formerly a market town. The Independents have a place of worship.

READ, a tnshp. in the par. of Whalley, higher div. of the hund. of Blackburn, co. Lancaster, 4 miles N.W. of Burnley, 5 S.E. of Clitheroe, and 2 E. of the Whalley railway station. It is situate on the road from Padiham to Whalley. The soil consists of loam and clay, with a subsoil of shale. There is a National school. Dean Nowell, composer of the Church Catechism, was born here in 1506, and died in 1602.

READ'S ISLAND, a shoal in the river Humber, co. Lincoln, near Whittonness. Until recently it formed part of the Pudding-Pie Sand, but has been reclaimed, and now affords good pasturage.

READING, a hund. in the co. of Berks, contains the borough of Reading and the pars. of Beenham-Vallence, Bucklebury, Cholsey, Pangbourne, Sulhampstead Abbots, Tilehurst, and parts of Blewberry, St. Giles, St. Mary, Stratfield Saye, and Thatcham, comprising an area of 37,510 acres, exclusive of Reading.

READING, a market town, municipal and parliamentary borough, and county town, co. Berks, locally in the hund. of Reading, but exercising separate jurisdiction, 39 miles S.W. of London by road, and 36¼ by the Great Western railway, on which it is a principal station. There are also branch lines of the Great Western to Hungerford and Basingstoke, and of the South-Eastern to Reigate, by which last the main lines of the Great Western, South-Western, and South-Eastern are connected. There is also water communication with most of the chief ports of England by means of the Kennet and Avon canal and the river Kennet, which last is navigable from Reading for vessels of 120 tons burden, and has commodious wharves on its banks.—The town, which is of great antiquity, is situated in a richly cultivated country on the banks of the river Kennet, just above its junction with the Thames. It was called by the Saxons Redinges and subsequently Reddynge, as is supposed from the overflowing of the meadows in the vicinity, Rhea signifying "a river," and ing "a meadow," though other antiquaries derive it from the British word rhyd, "a ford." It is first noticed in history about 871, when it was taken from the Saxons by the Danes, who retired hither after their defeat at Englefield by Earl Ethelwolf, and were pursued by that Saxon nobleman, who was slain in attempting to take the town of Reading. On the invasion of England by Sweyn, King of Denmark, in 1006, to revenge the massacre of his countrymen in the reign of Ethelred, this town was again stormed by the Danes, who burnt it to the ground, together with the nunnery founded by Elfrida, in expiation of the murder of her step-son, Edward the Martyr. From this calamity it appears to have only partially recovered, for in the Domesday Survey it is noticed as containing only 28 houses, and at that time formed part of the royal demesne. In 1121 Henry I. founded, on the site of the Saxon fort, an abbey for monks of the Benedictine order, which he endowed with an ample revenue and dedicated to the Holy Trinity, the Virgin Mary, and St. John the Evangelist, in expiation for his having put out his brother Robert's eyes. This monastery ranked among the most wealthy in the kingdom, the abbots being mitred and enjoying the privileges of coining money, conferring the honour of knighthood, and many other immunities. It subsequently became one of the favourite abodes of Henry, who died and was buried here in 1135, as were also his queen Adeliza and his eldest son William. In the succeeding reign a strong castle was built at the top of Castle-street, which changed hands several times during the civil war of Stephen and the Empress Maud, but was demolished by Henry II. on his ascending the throne, together with other fortresses erected in the preceding reign. This monarch, in 1163, presided at a judicial combat which took place here, on an island to the E. of Caversham Bridge, between Robert de Montford and Henry de Essex, the royal standard-bearer, who was accused by his antagonist of treasonable cowardice in a battle with the Welsh near Chester. Victory having declared for the former, Essex's lands were forfeited to the crown, but his life being spared, he became a monk in the abbey. Another ceremony took place here in 1185, when the same monarch received from the hands of Herodius, the patriarch of Jerusalem, the keys of the Holy Sepulchre and the royal banner of Jerusalem, but Herodius failed in his endeavours to induce the king to undertake an expedition for the recovery of the Holy Land. In the following reigns the kings frequently resided at Reading, where a tournament was held by Edward III. in 1346, and in 1359 a grand ceremonial took place on the occasion of his son John of Gaunt's marriage with Blanche, co-heiress of Henry Plantagenet, Duke of Lancaster, the ceremony being performed in the abbey church. In the reigns of Henry VI. and Edward IV. four parliaments were held here, the meetings being mostly convened in the great hall of the abbey, where also the latter monarch received his queen Elizabeth Woodville, as portrayed in the illuminated missal in the British Museum. On the dissolution of monasteries the abbey buildings were appropriated as a royal palace, and Henry VIII. took up his residence here for some time after Abbot Farringdon had been hanged for not giving up the abbey. It continued to be a resort of succeeding sovereigns, and Elizabeth had a canopied pew appropriated to her use in the parochial church of St. Lawrence, the floor of which was strewn with flowers and rushes for her reception. In the beginning of the reign of Charles I. the law courts were twice adjourned from Westminster to Reading, viz. in 1625 and 1635, in consequence of the prevalence of the plague which was then raging in the metropolis. At the commencement of the Civil War, the town was garrisoned for the parliament, but was abandoned by the governor on the approach of the royal forces in 1642, after which, being strongly fortified, it was held by the king's troops till 1643, when it sustained a siege of eight days by the parliamentarians under the Earl of Essex. The King and Prince Rupert attempting to relieve the town were defeated on Caversham Bridge, and the town was eventually surrendered, but not until it had suffered severely from the cannon of the parliamentarians placed on Caversham Hill. After the battle of Newbury, the town was abandoned by the parliamentarians and garrisoned for the king, but on Charles I.'s visit here in 1644 he ordered the military works, of which considerable remains are still traceable in the Forbury, to be demolished. The only other event of historical interest connected with the town was the skirmish which took place in 1688 between some of the Irish and Scotch troops belonging to the army of James II. and the Dutch troops under the Prince of Orange, the anniversary of which, called the "Reading Fight," was annually commemorated till about the year 1788. From having been so long a garrison town, Reading suffered severely, and eventually the once flourishing trade of cloth-working entirely decayed. It has, however, long since recovered its prosperity.—The houses are mostly of red brick, and the more modern of Bath stone. Within the last quarter of a century the town has been considerably extended, and great improvements have recently been effected. The parish of St. Lawrence, lying to the N. of the Kennet, and occupying the point of land at the junction of the Kennet with the Thames, comprises the older part of the town, including the market place, and several of the best business streets; while the parish of St. Giles, which lies to the S. of the Kennet, contains the newer portion of the town, and is occupied by the wealthier classes. St. Mary's parish, on the W. of the other two, is chiefly occupied by the working classes. A large extension has recently taken place in the direction of the London Road, where several new streets and squares have been formed, and for several miles along which the road is skirted by detached villa residences. The population of the borough has gradually increased from 16,042 in 1831, to 25,045 in 1861. Under the old charter the inhabitants were exempt from serving on juries at the assizes and sessions for the county of Berks, and from the payment of county rates. The sanitary arrangements of the town are under the management of a local board of health, and it has an efficient and well-regulated police. The streets are well paved and lighted with gas, and there is an abundant supply of water from the tank situated on Castle Hill, which contains about 240,000 gallons, raised by means of a water tower 100 feet high, and which stands in Mill-lane between two branches of the river Kennet. Amongst the principal public buildings are the townhall, rebuilt in 1786, of which the upper part, forming the Council Chamber, contains portraits of Queen Elizabeth, Archbishop Laud, and other worthies, and the under part is appropriated to the use of the free grammar school. The new public hall is a modern structure situated in London-street, and comprises spacious assembly rooms, and offices for the literary and scientific society and mechanics' institute. The county gaol and house of correction is a castellated modern structure, on the summit of Forbery Hill, and is built after the plan of the model prison at Pentonville. The Athenæum is situated in Friar-street, nearly opposite the railway station. The Berkshire hospital is a modern structure, as are also the new cattle markets, situated near the railway station, and the new corn market, in course of construction. Among other buildings requiring notice are the borough buildings, the new assize hall, the theatre, the union poorhouse, public baths, savings-bank, three branch banks, a post-office, gas and waterworks, and two railway stations, the one belonging to the Great Western, and the other to the Reading, Guildford, and Reigate lines. There is also a peculiar structure founded by John Kendrick the clothier, towards the commencement of the 17th century, for the employment of poor people, and which has been used for weaving and other trades, but is now in contemplation to be taken down, and private houses and shops erected on the site. In the town and its immediate vicinity are several bridges over different branches of the Kennet, and one, called the High Bridge, over the Thames into Oxfordshire, also a railway viaduct for the Great Western line over the mouth of the Kennet where it joins the Thames. In the town are iron foundries, boatbuilders' yards, extensive breweries, biscuitmaking establishments, and manufactories for the celebrated Reading and other sauces. A flourishing trade is carried on in the transmission of flour and other agricultural produce, including timber, corn, seeds, bark, hops, wool, cheese, &c., to London by railway and barges. There are a few persons employed in the manufacture of silk for umbrellas, ribbons, crapes, and galloons, and some in the weaving of floor-cloth, sail-cloth, and coarse linen.—The town, which is a borough by prescription, was first chartered by Henry III. in 1253, and received various immunities from subsequent sovereigns. In 1836 it was divided into three wards, and is governed under the new Municipal Reform Act by a mayor, 6 aldermen, and 18 councillors, with the style of "mayor, aldermen, and burgesses of the borough of Reading." The municipal revenue amounts to about £3,700 per annum, partly arising from the manor rents. The limits of the municipal and parliamentary boroughs are co-extensive, comprising, with the hamlets, an area of 4,870 acres. It has continued to return two members to parliament, from the 23rd of Edward I. to the present time, the mayor being the returning officer. The petty sessions for the Reading division of the county are held here every Saturday, and the borough justices hold their sittings four times a week. The borough quarter sessions, and the county quarter sessions at Easter and Michaelmas, and the spring assizes regularly occur in the town. The Berkshire county court is held here monthly, and the poor-law guardians for the union of Reading, which comprises three parishes, meet every Thursday. It is also the head of an excise collection district, a polling place for the county elections, and the headquarters of the county militia. There is a large cemetery just beyond the borough boundary. One newspaper, the Reading Mercury, is published in the town.—This place gives name to a deanery in the archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Oxford, and comprises the parishes of St. Lawrence, St. Mary, and St. Giles. The benefice of St. Lawrence is a vic.,* val. £276, in the patron. of the Bishop of Oxford. The church, which is situated at the upper end of the old market-place, was rebuilt in 1435 on the site of a more ancient one dedicated to the same saint. It includes a small part of the original structure of Norman character, and has a tower at the W. end, built of chequered flint work, and containing a peal of ten bells, the largest of which weighs 4,109 lbs. The interior contains two brasses, the earliest bearing date 1588, also monuments to John Blagrave, the mathematician, and to Dr. Valpy. Both the other benefices, viz. St. Mary and St. Giles, are vics.* endowed with great tithes, val. respectively £724 and £575, in the patron. of the Bishop of Oxford. The former benefice was once held by Bishops Mews and Lloyd, Archdeacon Nares, and Professor Milman. The church of St. Mary stands near the centre of the town, and was rebuilt about 1551, chiefly from the materials of the Abbey Church, then pulled down. It occupies the site of the ancient nunnery founded by Queen Elfrida, and has a tower, 90 feet high, built of flint and stone in squares, somewhat similar to that of St. Lawrence, but not equal to it in elegance of proportions. The interior contains a brass bearing date 1416. The church of St. Giles is likewise an ancient structure with a square tower surmounted by a slender spire, covered with copper, which last was added in 1790. During the siege of the town in the civil war of Charles I., this church was much damaged by the shot of the parliamentarians, but was subsequently repaired, and was considerably enlarged in 1827, when an E. window was added. There are besides four district churches, St. John's, Grey Friars, Christ Church, and Holy Trinity, and a chapel-of-ease, called St. Mary's chapel. The Roman Catholic church was built in 1840, in the early Norman or Saxon style of architecture, chiefly of flints from the abbey ruins. It contains a carved altar of stone richly gilt. The Baptists and Independents have each three chapels, the Primitive Methodists two, and the Wesleyans one. There are also a new Congregational church in the Queen's Road, called Trinity chapel, and a meeting-house for the Society of Friends. There are fifteen public schools, viz. the grammar school, Aldworth's boys'-blue-coat school, Girst's green-coat school, Simeon's endowed Sunday-school, five National schools, British schools for boys and girls, three infant schools, school of industry, and two ragged schools; of these the most distinguished are the grammar school, founded by Henry VII. in 1486, in place of St. John's hospital, and which recently attained great celebrity under the late Dr. Valpy, who was for nearly fifty years head master. It has an income from endowment of about £60 per annum, besides two fellowships in St. John's College, Oxford, on the foundation of Sir Thomas White, and two recently founded scholarships. Amongst the many eminent men who have been pupils in this school were Archbishop Laud; John Blagrave, of Tilehurst, the eminent mathematician; Merrick, the poet; and Coates, author of "The History of Reading;" and Palmer, the Protestant martyr, was once master. Aldworth's blue-coat school has an income from endowment of about £1,000 per annum, and at present maintains and educates 47 boys. The girls' green-coat school was established in 1782, and has an income of about £150 per annum, and Simeon's Sunday-school has an endowment of about £125. A National school now occupies the abbey refectory, in which the parliament met on several occasions, and where Cardinal Pandulph held church councils in 1184 and 1212. The most interesting antiquities are the ruins of the abbey, including a Norman gateway, the refectory, part of the grand hall, the walls of which are 8 feet thick, and the remains of the abbey mill, also the W. window and part of the church of the Greyfriars, founded in 1233, and latterly used as the borough gaol. There were also a leper's hospital, founded before 1134 by Abbot Aucherius, a pilgrim's hospital, founded in 1180 by Abbot Hugh de Reading, and a Franciscan friary; but of these all traces have disappeared. The charities are numerous and well endowed, producing an aggregate income of about £4,000 per annum, of which the Church lands produce £300, John Kendrick's endowment for the Oracle £750, and Archbishop Laud's bequest for apprenticing poor children near £500. The almshouses are also partially endowed, and are distinguished as Harrison's, Kendrick's, Vachel's, Smith's, Jenkin's, Hall's, Webb's, and Wimbledon's.—The races annually take place in August in the King's Meadow, on the N.E. side of the town. Market days are Wednesday and Saturday—the latter, being the great corn market, is numerously attended. Fairs are held on 2nd February, 1st May, 25th July, and 21st September—the last being the great cheese fair, at which upwards of 700 tons are ordinarily sold.

READING STREET, a hmlt. in the par. of St. Peter, Isle of Thanet, lathe of St. Augustine, co. Kent, 2 miles S.E. of Margate.

REAFIRTH, a voe or sea loch on the inside of Hascosay Island, North Shetland Isles, coast of Scotland.

REAGILL, a tnshp. in the par. of Crosby-Ravensworth, West ward, co. Westmoreland, 11 miles S.E. of Penrith, its post town, and 3 N.E. of Shap. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on rising ground, and is chiefly agricultural. Reagill was formerly called Renegill, and came from Shap Abbey to the Whartons and Lowthers. There was formerly a chapel at a place now designated Chapel-Garth. The soil consists of loam and clay upon a subsoil of limestone, sandstone, and clay. The whole of the land is in an excellent state of cultivation. Coal exists, but being of an inferior quality is not worked. There is a free school founded in 1684, and further endowed in 1803 by the commissioners for enclosure of waste lands, who assigned an allotment now let for £30 towards the support of the master.

REANIES POINT, a promontory on the coast of Cork, Ireland, 3 miles E. of Nohaval, and 8 E. of Kinsale. Off this point the Killarney steamer was wrecked.

REARSBY or REORSBY, a par. and tnshp. in the hund. of East Goscote, co. Leicester, 7 miles S.W. of Melton-Mowbray, its post town, and 7 N.E. of Leicester. It is a station on the Syston and Peterborough railway. The village, which is of small extent, is situated near the river Wreak, on the road from Leicester to Melton-Mowbray. A few of the inhabitants are employed in frame-work knitting, and some in the manufacture of hosiery. There is a wharf on the river Wreak, which rises near Waltham-on-the-Wold. The parish is traversed by the line of the Midland Counties railway, and by the Wreak and Melton canal. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1761, and the glebe consists of 335 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £645. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is an ancient structure with a tower containing three bells. In the churchyard is the tomb of Cleare Sacheverelle. The parochial charities produce about £7 per annum. There are schools for both sexes. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. William A. Pochin, Esq., is lord of the manor.

REARYMORE, or REARY, a par. in the bar. of Tinnahinch, Queen's County, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 6 miles N.W. of Mountmellick, its post town. The surface, which consists generally of good soil, is situated along the banks of the river Barrow, and is crossed by the road from Mountmellick to Parsonstown. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Kildare, val. with Oregan or Rosenallis, £575. There are two public and two private day schools. Near the village are ruins of the old church, also a holy well. Reary Vale and Reary More are the chief seats of the locality.

REASBY, a hmlt. in the par. of Stainton-by-Langworth, W. div. of Wraggoe hund., parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 4 miles N.W. of Wragby.

REAVELEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Ingram, N. div. of Coquetdale ward, co. Northumberland, 7 miles S.E. of Wooler, and 10 N.W. of Rothbury, near the river Breamish.

REAY, a par. in the cos. of Caithness and Aberdeen, Scotland. It comprises a vil. of its own name, also the vils. of Melvich and Portskerray. It extends in length about 18 miles, with an extreme breadth of 9, and is bounded by the North Sea, and by the pars. of Thurso, Halkirk, Kildonan, and Farr. The surface is of a hilly nature, the highest point being at Binra Mountain, which rises 2,000 feet above sea-level. The rocks consists of gneiss, syenite, granite, quartz, hornblende, sandstone, and limestone, the two last being extensively quarried. There are mineral springs, also traces of lead and iron. The soil of the district lying within the county of Caithness is generally of a fertile nature; while that of Strath Halladale in Aberdeenshire is better adapted for pasture and sheepwalks. The parish is watered by the rivers Reay, Torss, and Walla, and by the lakes Seirach, Tormaid, and Calam, in all which there are abundance of salmon and trout. There is also a fishery along 9 miles of the coast. The district abounds in black cattle and sheep, also in game, wild fowl, the eagle, otter, fox, &c. The chief bays are Port Skerray and Sandside Bay, the former situated at the mouth of the Halladale, and the latter about 2½ miles E. of the boundary betwixt cos. Caithness and Sutherland. The parish is traversed along the coast by the road from Thurso to Tongue, and by another road up Strath Halladale. The village of Reay, or New Reay, is about 12 miles S.W. of Thurso, and 30 W. of Wick. It is of small extent, and is situated at the head of Sandside Bay. In the village is an ancient market cross, which, according to tradition, belonged to the burgh of Old Reay. At Knock Urray was formerly a Pictish fort. About 2 miles N.E. of Sandside Bay are traces of the old seat of the Mackeys, whose lands in Strath Halladale, Durness, Tongue, and Edderachyllis are now the property of the Duke of Sutherland. This par. is in the presb. of Caithness and synod of Sutherland, and in the patron. of the crown. The minister has a stipend of £236. The parish church was erected in 1739. There are a Free church, a mission chapel, and a parochial school, besides other schools.

RECTORIAL, a hmlt. in the par. of Aber Porth, co. Cardigan, 7 miles N.W. of Newcastle-in-Emlyn.

RECULVER, a par. in the hund. of Bleangate, lathe of St. Augustine, co. Kent, 3 miles E. of Herne Bay, its post town, and 10 N.E. of Canterbury. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the banks of the Thames, and was formerly a market town. In Leland's day it was more than half a mile from the shore, but is now in danger of being washed away by the continued encroachment of the sea. It is supposed to be the Regulbium of the Romans, who placed here the first cohort of the Setasii. It was named by the Saxons Raculf-ceaster, or minster, and had a palace of the Saxon kings of Kent, who founded here, in the 7th century, the Benedictine abbey, which was subsequently annexed by King Edred to Christ Church in Canterbury. There are traces of the Roman castle which, when in its perfect state, measured 594 feet by 570, and in the vicinity of which numerous Roman and Saxon coins and other relics have been found. A submarine forest is clearly distinguishable under the cliffs. The appropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £575, and the vicarial for one of £128. The living is a vic. with the cur. of Hoath annexed, in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £198, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, was erected in 1812 at the hamlet of Hillborough, about a mile distant from the old parish church, of which little more now remains than the two towers of the W. end, called the "Reculvers." These are now the property of the corporation of the Trinity House, by whom they have been repaired as landmarks for mariners. Attached to the church were anciently two chantries; and there is an old brass of the time of Edward IV., besides several tombs, including that of the Saxon King Ethelbert I.

RED BANK, an ecclesiastical district in the par. and borough of Manchester, co. Lancaster. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £190, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is a modern structure dedicated to St. Thomas.

RED BAY, a harbour on the N.E. coast of co. Antrim, Ireland. It lies near Garron Point, and has the remains of a castle built by the Bisset family in the reign of Elizabeth.

REDBERTH, or RHYDBERTH, a par. in the hund. of Narberth, co. Pembroke, 4 miles from Tenby, its post town, and 6 N.E. of Pembroke. It was formerly a part of Carew. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £56, in the patron. of the bishop.

REDBORN. See RODBORNE, co. Wilts.

REDBORNESTOKE, a hund. in the co. of Bedford, contains the pars. of Ampthill, Cranfield, Elstow, Flitwick, Houghton-Conquest, Kempston, Lidlington, Marston-Moretaine, Maulden, Millbrook, Ridgmont, Steppingley, Wilshampstead, and Wootton, comprising an area of 38,037 acres.

REDBOURN, a par. in the hund. of Cashio, or liberty of St. Alban's, co. Herts, 4½ miles N.W. of St. Alban's, its post town, and 4 N.E. of Hemel-Hempstead. The village, which is large, is situated on the river Ver, and near the line of the ancient Watling Street. Redbourn was given by Egelwine the Saxon to the monks of St. Alban's, who founded here a cell prior to 1195. A portion of the inhabitants are employed in straw plaiting. There are silk mills on the banks of the river. About two-thirds of the land are arable, and one-third pasture. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £296. The church stands about a mile W. from the village, and is approached by an avenue of elms. It is dedicated to St. Mary, and is an ancient edifice, with a tower containing six bells. The church was rebuilt in the reign of Henry VI. by Abbot Whethamstead, and has two brasses bearing date from 1515. The parochial charities produce about £30 per annum, of which £10 goes to a school. The Independents, Baptists, and Wesleyans have each a place of worship. There is a National school for both sexes. Redbourn House is the principal residence. Fairs are held on the first Wednesday in January, and on Easter Wednesday.

REDBOURNE, a par. in the E. div. of the wap. of Manley, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 2½ miles E. of Kirton-in-Lindsey, its post town, and 5¾ S.W. of the Brigg railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the road from Barton-Waterside to London, and near the river Ancholme. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The surface is level and the soil gravelly. Near three parts of the land is arable, and the remainder pasture, meadow, and plantations. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £528, and the vicarial for one of £236; the glebe consists of 9 acres. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £250. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, has a lofty tower containing a clock and six bells. It was rebuilt in 1774, and in 1785 the spire was taken down and the tower heightened. In the interior are several stained windows. The parochial charities are chiefly the gift of the Duchess of St. Albans. There is a school for both sexes erected by the late Duke of St. Albans. Redbourne Hall, the principal residence, is situated in a park. The Duke of St. Albans is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

REDBRIDGE, a hund. in the co. of Hants, contains the pars. of Lyndhurst, Nursling, and parts of Eling, Bramshaw, and Minstead, comprising an area of 30,830 acres.

REDBRIDGE, a hmlt., seaport, and watering-place in the par. of Millbrook, hund. of Redbornestoke, co. Hants, 4 miles N.W. of Southampton, its post town, and 6 S. of Romsey. It is a station on the Dorchester and Southampton branch-line of railway. The village, which is populous, is situated at the old bridge over the river Test, and from this circumstance it is supposed to have derived its name. It has always been a place of considerable resort for coasting vessels, occupying an advantageous position at the head of Southampton Water, and near the termination of the Andover canal. The river Test is also crossed by a railway viaduct. The above-mentioned canal has been recently closed, and on its site is constructed the new branch-line of railway to Andover and Redbridge, thus communicating with the W. and N. of England. In the neighbourhood are an oil mill, a brewery, and two manure manufactories. A considerable business is done in the import of coal and timber, and in the export of grain. There is an endowed school of recent erection, the expense of which was defrayed by Miss Doyle. The adjacent country is rich, and many families resort here for sea-bathing.

REDBROOK, a chplry. in the par. of Newland, hund. of St. Briavel's, co. Gloucester, 2 miles W. of Coleford, and 3 S. of Monmouth. It is situated in Dean Forest near the river Wye. There is a tin mine. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic.* of Newland, in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol.

REDCAR, a chplry., fishing village, and post town in the pars. of Upleatham and Marske, E. div. of the lib. of Langbaurgh, North Riding co. York, 6 miles N.N.E. of Guisborough, and 7½ N. of Middlesborough. It is a station on the Stockton and Darlington railway. It is a fishing village and bathing town situated at the mouth of the Tee, near the coast of the North Sea. In 1833 Mr. Brooks projected Port William pier harbour of refuge, covering an area of 500 acres with 30 feet of water. The harbour is 1,000 feet in width at the mouth. The village contains several inns and private lodging houses. The surface is flat, and the soil of various qualities, being on the sea side a sandy loam, and farther inland a strong clay producing good wheat crops. The impropriate tithes belong to the Earl of Zetland. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of York, val. £50. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is a modern structure with a tower containing two bells. There is a school for both sexes, in which a Sunday-school is also held. The Independents, Wesleyans, and Primitive Methodists have each a place of worship; there is also a Friends' meeting-house. The Earl of Zetland is lord of the manor.

REDCASTLE, several ancient seats of this name in Scotland, the most famed being Redcastle, opposite Lunan Bay and near Inverkeillor, co. Forfar, built by William the Lion, and the old seat of the Mackenzies on the Moray Frith, in co. Ross, opposite Inverness.

REDCASTLE HOUSE, a post-office vil. in the bar. of Inishowen, co. Donegal, Ireland, 5 miles S.W. of Moville, and 30 N.E. of Letterkenny. It is situated on the W. side of Lough Foyle, near Kinigoe Bay.

REDCITY, or DEMELLOGE, a par. in the bar. of Middlethird, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 1 mile S.W. of Fethard, its post town. The living is a suspended rect. in the dioc. of Cashel, in the patron. of the bishop.

REDCLIFF, ST. MARY, a par. in the city of Bristol, co. Gloucester. See BRISTOL.

REDCROSS, a par. and post-office vil. in the bar. of Arklow, co. Wicklow, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 5 miles N.E. of Arklow. The surface consists for the most part of profitable land, and is traversed by the road from Arklow to Wicklow. Slate is quarried. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Dublin, val. £100, in the patron. of the incumbents of Danganstown, Kilbride, and Castlemacadam. The church was built in 1829 by means of local subscription and help from the late Board of First Fruits. It is united to Newbridge in the Roman Catholic arrangement. There are two schools, aided by private charity. Ballykane is the principal residence. There are a dispensary and a police station in the village; also ruins of the old church, and of a large fortification. Petty sessions are held once a fortnight.

REDDEN, a hmlt. in the par. of Sprouston, co. Roxburgh, Scotland, 1¾ mile N.E. of Sprouston.

REDDING, a vil. in the par. of Polmont, co. Stirling, Scotland, 3 miles S.E. of Falkirk, and 1¼ mile S.W. of the vil. of Polmont. It is situated on the Union canal, and the Edinburgh and Glasgow railway. It has recently much increased in population, occupying a central position in a prosperous coal district, which gives employment to the chief part of the inhabitants.

REDDING HILL, a hill in the hund. of Tenterden, lathe of Scray, co. Kent, 3 miles S E. of Tenterden, and 24 S.W. of Canterbury. It is the supposed site of the Roman station Anderida, and has barracks on it.

REDDISH, a tnshp. in the par. of Manchester, hund. of Salford, co. Lancaster, 2 miles N. of Stockport, and 5 S.E. of Manchester. It is a station on the Stockport and Staleybridge branch of the London and North-Western railway. The village, which is considerable, is situated near the canal. A portion of the inhabitants are employed in the cotton and paper mills.

REDDITCH, a district par. and post town in the upper div. of Halfshire hund., co. Worcester, 6 miles S.E. of Bromsgrove, and 13 S.W. of Birmingham. It is a station on the Birmingham and Bristol section of the Midland railway. It is situated on an eminence near the Warwickshire border, and was, until recently, a chplry. in the par. of Tardebigg. The village, which has the appearance of a small but flourishing town, is within 2 miles of the Worcester canal, and is celebrated for its manufacture of needles and fish-hooks, affording employment to a large portion of the inhabitants. It had a Cistercian Abbey, founded in 1138 by Maud, daughter of Henry I., and which is said to have extended over eight acres. Its chapel was not erased until 1807, up to which period it formed the only place of worship in Redditch. The town is well built, and lighted with gas. It contains two banks, a savings-bank, county court, literary and scientific institution, and several other public buildings. Petty sessions are held at Mr. Browning's offices weekly. The new line of road from London to Birmingham passes through the village. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £300. The church, dedicated to St. Stephen, is a modern structure, with a tower containing six bells. The interior of the church is adorned with richly-designed windows. It contains a Devonshire marble font. There is a National school for both sexes. The Independents, Wesleyans, Roman Catholics, Primitive Methodists, and Arminians, have each a place of worship. Fairs are held on the first Monday in August and the third Monday in September.

REDENHALL, a par. in the hund. of Earsham, co. Norfolk, 19 miles S. of Norwich. It is a station on the Great Eastern railway. It contains the vil. of Harleston, its post town, and is situated on the banks of the river Waveney. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £990, and there are 34 acres of glebe. The living is a rect.* with the cur. of Harleston annexed, in the dioc. of Norwich, joint val. £1,005. The church is dedicated to the Assumption of the Virgin Mary. The interior contains tombs of the Gawdys. The parochial charities produce £104, of which £44 goes to Dove's school, exclusive of a bequest from Archbishop Sancroft. At Wortwell is a Sunday-school, built in 1810 at the expense of Archdeacon Oldershaw.

REDENHAM, a hmlt. in the par. of Fyfield, upper div. of Andover hund., co. Hants, 5 miles N.W. of Andover. It has traces of a Roman villa.

REDESDALE, a lordship in Tindale ward, co. Northumberland, 6 miles N.E. of Bellingham. It is situated in a wild district on the river Reed, and includes the pars. of Corsenside and Elsdon, with the hmlts. of Linhead and East and West Woodburn. In former times it was held by the Umfranvilles by the service of keeping it clear of wolves and robbers, and now gives title of baron to the Mitford family, of whom were the lord chancellor and the Grecian historian. At Reed Swyse, in the upper part of the valley of the Reed, was fought the last border skirmish, in 1575, between Sir J. Foster and Sir J. Carmichael.

REDESDALE, a seat of the Archbishop of Dublin, near Stillorgan, co. Dublin, Ireland.

REDFERN, a vil. in the par. of Kenilworth, co. Warwick, 4 miles N. of Warwick.

REDFIRTH, an ancient par., now joined to North Yell, Shetland Isles, coast of Scotland. It gives name to a voe or loch on the E. side of Yell Island.

REDGAP, a hmlt. in the bar. of Knocktopher, co. Kilkenny, Ireland, 3 miles S.W. of Knocktopher.

REDGE, a hmlt. in the par. of the Holy Trinity, co. Dorset, near Wareham.

REDGHILL. See RIDGHILL, co. Somerset.

REDGILL, a hmlt. in the par. of Orton, East ward, co. Westmoreland, 2 miles from Orton, and 9 S.W. of Appleby. It is situated on a branch of the river Lune, under the Orton Scar beacon.

REDGORTON, a par. in the district of Almond and Tay, co. Perth, Scotland. It comprises the vils. of Stanley, Redgorton, Pitcairn, Luncarty, Cromwell Park, and Bridgetown. It extends in length about 5 miles, with an extreme breadth of 2 miles; and is bounded on the N. by the pars. of Auchtorgaven and Kinclaven, on the E. by Scone, on the S. by Tibbermuir and Methven, and on the W. by Monedie. The surface is of a hilly nature. The land is chiefly in pasture and moorland, with a small proportion of arable. The soil is in general light, but fertile. The views from the rising grounds include the palace and park of Scone, with the stream of the Tay and the city of Perth in the distance. The parish is traversed by the road from Perth to Inverness, and by the Scottish and Midland railway, which has stations at Luncarty, Dunkeldroad, and Stanley. The village of Redgorton is about 3 miles N.W. of Perth. It is situated on the river Tay, which is here joined by the Almond, Ordie, and Shochie waters, all abounding in salmon and trout. The inhabitants are principally employed in cotton mills and bleachfields. This par. is in the presb. of Perth and synod of Perth and Stirling, and in the patron. of the crown. The minister has a stipend of £189. The parish church was erected in 1756. At Stanley are a Free church and a chapel-of-ease. There are also a Free church and United Presbyterian church at Pitcairn. There is a parochial school.

REDGRAVE, a par. in the hund. of Hartismere, co. Suffolk, 1¼ mile N. of Botesdale, its post town, and 5 miles S.W. of Diss railway station. The par. includes the vil. of Botesdale, and is wholly agricultural. It is situated near the river Waveney, and is bounded on the N. by the Lesser Ouse, which separates it from the county of Norfolk. It was given by Ulfketel the Dane to Bury Abbey; and subsequently Lord Keeper Bacon and Chief Justice Holt resided here. The living is a rect.* with the cur. of Botesdale annexed, in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £889. The church, dedicated to St. Botolph, has a square tower of white brick. The interior of the church is decorated with paintings, and contains three sedilia of stone under canopies; also several monuments to the Bacon and Holt families. It was restored in 1850. The living was once held by Cardinal Wolsey. The parochial charities produce about £49 per annum. In 1561, Sir Nicholas Bacon, the eminent Lord Keeper, founded at Botesdale in this parish a free grammar school, with six exhibitions at Corpus Christi College, Oxford. There is a National school for both sexes. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. Redgrave Hall, the ancient seat of the Bacons, Holts, and Wilsons, is a square-built mansion. Its grounds and park are richly wooded, and stocked with deer. In front of the mansion is a lake, in which numerous English and foreign aquatic birds are kept. G. H. Wilson, Esq., is lord of the manor.

REDHEAD, a promontory on the eastern coast of the co. of Forfar, Scotland, 4 miles S.E. of Redcastle. It is situated opposite Lunan Bay, and attains an elevation of 270 feet.

REDHILL, an ext. par. place in the wap. of Corringham, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln.

REDHILL, a hmlt. in the par. of Edgware, co. Middlesex, 1 mile S.E. of Edgware.

REDHILL, an ecclesiastical district in the par. of Havant, co. Hants, 2 miles N.E. of Havant, and 22 S.E. of Winchester. It is situated on Langston Harbour at the bridge to Hayling Island. The living is a perpet. cur., val. £140, in the dioc. of Winchester. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, was erected in 1838. There is a diocesan school.

RED HILL, a vil. in the par. of Reigate, first div. of the hund. of Reigate, co. Surrey, 2 miles from Reigate, and 22 from London. It is a junction station on the South Eastern and Brighton railways, where the Dover and Reading branches turn off. It is situated under the chalk hills. The Philanthropic Society's farm school for convicts' children, originally established at St. George's Fields, in 1788, was removed here in 1849, when the late lamented Prince Consort laid the first stone of the present building. There are two district churches—one, dedicated to St. John, is a perpet. cur.,* the other, dedicated to St. Matthew, is a cur.,* joint val. £190, in the dioc. of Winchester, and in the patron. of the bishop.

REDHILL, a hmlt. in the par. of Sandon, co. Herts, 3 miles N.W. of Buntingford.

REDHILL, a vil. in the par. of Annagh, bar. of Tullygarvey, co. Cavan, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 2 miles N.E. of Belturbet. It is situated on the road from that town to Ballyhaine. It contains a Roman Catholic chapel. The village takes its name from the red tint of the roads and soil, arising from the prevalence of iron.

RED-HILLS, a ridge of hills in the bar. of East Offaly, co. Kildare, Ireland. They lie between Rathangand and Kildare, and attain an elevation of near 800 feet.

REDISHAM, a par. in the hund. of Wangford, co. Suffolk, 4¼ miles N.E. of Halesworth, its post town, and 4½ S. of Beccles. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £50. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, has a rich Norman doorway on the S. side. The parochial charities produce about £9 per annum, which goes to Leman's Sunday-school.

REDISHAM PARVA. See RINGSFIELD, co. Suffolk.

RED-ISLAND, several islets of this name in Ireland —one in Lough Mahon, co. Cork; another near the Skerries, co. Dublin; and a third in Lough Ree, co. Westmeath.

RED-KIRK, or RED-PATRICK, an ancient par. in co. Dumfries, Scotland, now united with Gretna.

REDLANE, a hund. in the Sturminster div. of co. Dorset, contains the pars. of Buckhorn Weston, Child Okeford, Fife-head-Magdalen, Hanford, Iwerne-Courtnay, Kington-Magna, Manston, Silton, East and West Stower, Sutton Waldron, and Todbere, comprising about 18,000 acres.

REDLINGFIELD, a par. in the hund. of Hartismere, co. Suffolk, 3½ miles S.E. of Eye, its post town, and 7 E. of Fenningham railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. At a farm in the neighbourhood are traces of a Benedictine nunnery, founded by Manasses, Earl of Guisnez, or Ghisness, in 1120, and dedicated to St. Andrew. Its revenue at the Dissolution was valued at £81 2*s.* 5*d.* The site afterwards passed to the Bedingfields. The soil consists of a rich loam. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £251. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £71. The church, which was formerly a chapel to the above-mentioned nunnery, is an ancient structure, with a low tower. The register dates from 1740, the earlier one having been destroyed. The parochial charities produce about £50 per annum, which is derived from town estate. Sir R. S. Adair, Bart., is lord of the manor.

RED-LION, or LARGAY, a hmlt. in the bar. of Tullyhaw, co. Cavan, Ireland, 20 miles N.W. of Ballyconnell.

REDLYNCH, a tythg. and chplry. in the par. and hund. of Bruton, co. Somerset, 2 miles S.E. of Bruton. There is no village, only a few farmhouses. The Earl of Ilchester takes from this place the title of baron. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £59. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, was formerly a chapel-of-ease to Bruton. Redlynch House is the principal residence.

REDLYNCH, a hmlt. in the par. and hund. of Downton, co. Wilts, 5 miles S.E. of Salisbury. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Sarum, in the patron. of the Vicar of Downton.

REDMAIN, a hmlt. in the par. of Isell, ward. of Allerdale-below-Derwent, co. Cumberland, 3 miles N.E. of Cockermouth. It forms a tnshp. in conjunction with Blindcrake.

REDMARLEY, a hmlt. in the par. of Great Witley, lower div. of Doddingtree hund., co. Worcester, 8 miles N.W. of Worcester. It comprises the Lawband estate, which was purchased by F. O'Connor for his land scheme.

REDMARLEY-D'ABITOT, a par. in the lower div. of Oswaldslow hund., co. Worcester, 5 miles N.E. of Newent, its post town, and 5 S.E. of Ledbury. The village is situated on the road from Gloucester to Ledbury, and is chiefly agricultural. In the front of the parish, which is hilly, the soil is light; but in the level portion it is clay. There are several quarries of red sandstone, chiefly used for repair of the roads. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £915, and the glebe comprises 63 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £900. The church, dedicated to St. Bartholomew, has a tower containing six bells. It was partially rebuilt in 1856. The register dates from 1542. The parochial charities produce about £14 per annum. There is a National school. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. Down House is the principal residence. Earl Beauchamp is lord of the manor.

REDMARSHALL, a par. in the S.W. div. of Stockton ward, co. Durham, 4½ miles W. of Stockton-on-Tees, its post town, and 6 from Sedgfield. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. The par. includes the tnshps. of Carleton and Shillington, and partly belongs to Sutton of Elton. The soil is of a light loamy character. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £377, and the glebe comprises 6½ acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Durham, val. £341, in the patron. of the crown. The church, dedicated to St. Cuthbert, has a massive square tower at the W. end, containing three bells. The parochial charities produce about £4 per annum, exclusive of a rent-charge of £56 7*s.*, payable annually to Sherburn Hospital. There is a free school, partly endowed, for either sex. The Marchioness of Londonderry owns the manorial rights.

REDMILE, a par. in the hund. of Framland, co. Leicester, 7½ miles W. of Grantham, its post town, and 3 S. of Bottesford railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the Grantham and Nottingham canal, and is chiefly agricultural. The surface is generally flat, lying at the base of the ridge of hills on which Belvoir Castle stands, and which are clothed with plantations of oak and fir. The soil is clayey on a lias formation. The land is nearly evenly divided between arable and pasture. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Enclosure Act in 1792. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £391. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, has a square tower, crowned with a spire, and containing three bells. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum. There is a National school, erected in 1839, also a place of worship for the Primitive Methodists. The Duke of Rutland is lord of the manor.

REDMIRE, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Wensley, wap. of West Hang, North Riding co. York, 4 miles W. of Leyburn, its post town, and 3 S.W. of Wensley.

The village, which is of small extent, is chiefly agricultural. Coal is obtained in the neighbourhood, and lead mines were formerly in operation. There is a strong sulphurous spa, with accommodation for bathing. Near the village are some smelt mills. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to the cur. of Bolton Castle, in the dioc. of Ripon. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. There is an endowed free school, founded in 1725, by the Rev. Thomas Baynes, and subsequently rebuilt by the late Lord Bolton. Lord Bolton is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

REDMORE FARM, an ext. par. place in the par. of Hockwold-cum-Wilton, co. Norfolk, 9 miles N.W. of Brandon. It is situated on the Little Ouse river.

REDNALL, a tnshp. in the par. of West Felton, hund. of Lower Oswestry, co. Salop, 4 miles S.E. of Oswestry. It is a station on the Shrewsbury and Chester branch of the Great Western railway. The village, which is small and wholly agricultural, is situated near the Llanymynech canal.

REDNOCK, a vil. in the par. of Port-of-Monteith, co. Perth, Scotland, 35 miles S.W. of Perth, on the river Forth, near the Stirlingshire border.

REDPATH, a hmlt. in the par. of Earlston, co. Berwick, Scotland, 30 miles S.W. of Berwick. It is situated in a valley near the source of the Eden.

REDROW, a hmlt. in the par. of Newton, co. Edinburgh, Scotland, 7 miles S.E. of Edinburgh.

REDRUTH, a par., post, and market town in the hund. of Penwith, co. Cornwall, 9 miles S.W. of Truro, and 11 from Falmouth. It is a station on the West Cornwall railway. This place, which is of great antiquity, was originally called Dre Druth, or "the Druids' town," of which its present name is only a slight modification; but for some time after the introduction of Christianity it was called "Uny," from the patron saint to whom its church is dedicated. It is a large and prosperous mining town situated in a barren spot on the great road from Truro to Penzance, and occupies the declivity of a hill, which attains an altitude of 414 feet. The par. comprises, besides the town of Redruth, which consists mainly of one long street, the hmlts. of Little Redruth, or Plengwary, and Treleigh. It is a polling-place for the county elections, and a petty sessions town. It is well built, and partly paved and lighted with gas; but the water supply is very insufficient, notwithstanding large sums of money have been expended by the Board of Health to remedy this inconvenience, though all in vain, owing to the drainage of the extensive mines in the vicinity. The town contains a townhall, built in 1850, a theatre, literary institution, savings-bank, commercial bank, and a clock tower at the entrance to the market-place. The county court for the Redruth district is held monthly in the townhall on the Wednesday and Thursday following the second Tuesday in one month, and the Thursday following the second Tuesday in every other month. The board of guardians for the Redruth Poor-law Union, which comprises 8 parishes, meets at the union poorhouse every alternate Monday. There are an extensive brewery, safety fuse manufactory, and iron foundry; but the chief prosperity of the place is derived from the Consols and United copper mines, which are the richest in Cornwall, and are 1,620 feet deep. These mines, together with others at Huel or Wheal Tolgus, Wheal Mary, and at Cook's Kitchen, are the means of employing a large number of the inhabitants. The substratum is chiefly granite and killas rock, abounding in tin and copper, some lodes of which yield ten per cent. of fine copper on the gross quantity of ore extracted. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £480. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £432. The church, dedicated to St. Uny, is a modern structure, with a tower containing a clock and six bells. The interior of the church contains several monuments. There is also a district church at Treleigh, erected in 1828 at an expense of £2,400, by grant from the parliamentary commissioners, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £130. There are National schools for both sexes. The Wesleyans, Baptists, Primitive Methodists, and Society of Friends have places of worship. On Cairn-Brea, or Carnbre, Hill stands the Dunstanville pillar; and in various parts of the parish are Druidical remains, consisting of circles, stone pillars, cromlechs, cairns, and other relics, though many have of late years been almost obliterated. Market days are Tuesday and Friday. Fairs are held on 25th March, 2nd May, 4th August, and 13th October.

REDSTONE, a hmlt. in the par. and hund. of Narberth, co. Pembroke, 2 miles from Narberth, and 12 N.E. of Pembroke, near the river Cleddau.

REDWELL, a hmlt. in the par. of Ightham, hund. of Wrotham, rape of Aylesford, co. Kent, 4 miles N.E. of Sevenoaks.

REDWHARF, a hmlt. and bay on the coast of Anglesea, near Pentraeth. It is called by the Welsh Traeth Côch, and is celebrated for its rare shells, which abound on the sandy beach. The bay is nearly 5 miles across by 3 deep, with 5 fathoms water.

REDWICK, a hmlt. in the par. and lower div. of the hund. of Henbury, co. Gloucester, 8 miles N.W. of Bristol, and 6 S.W. of Thornbury. It is situated on the river Severn, near New Passage. It forms a tything in conjunction with Northwick. There is a school with a small endowment.

REDWICK, a chplry. in the par. of Magor, lower div. of Caldicot hund., co. Monmouth, 7 miles S.E. of Newport, its post town, and 12 from Chepstow. The village, which is small, is situated on the Bristol Channel. The living is annexed to the vic.* of Magor, in the dioc. of Llandaff. The church is dedicated to St. Thomas. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum. There is a National school.

REDWORTH, a tnshp. in the par. of Heighington, S.E. div. of Darlington ward, co. Durham, 7 miles N.W. of Darlington, its post town, and 5 S.E. of Bishop Auckland. The village is of small extent and wholly agricultural. In the vicinity is Shackleton camp, a Danish fortification, surrounded with triple embankments. The principal seat is Redworth Hall.

REED, or REDE, a par. in the hund. of Thingoe, co. Suffolk, 7 miles S.W. of Bury St. Edmund's, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £286, and the glebe comprises 24 acres. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ely, val. £274. The church, dedicated to All Saints, has a tower containing three bells. The church was restored in 1850. There is an endowed National school.

REED, a par. in the hund. of Odsey, co. Herts, 3 miles S. of Royston, its post town, and 4 N. of Buntingford. The village, which is of small extent, is situated near the London road, and is wholly agricultural. The land is partly in common. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1801. The living is a rect.* with the vic. of Barkway annexed, in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £512. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient edifice, with a square tower containing three bells. The register dates from 1539. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum.

REED, a river of the co. of Northumberland, rises at Reed Swyre, in the Cheviots, under Carter Fell, and after a course of 23 miles through Redesdale joins the North Tyne at Reedsmouth Hall.

REED BOWER, an islet in Loch Leven, co. Fife, Scotland.

REEDHAM, a par. in the hund. of Walsham, co. Norfolk, 6 miles S.E. of Acle, 12 from Norwich, its post town, and 5 N.E. of Loddon. It is a junction station on the Yarmouth section of the Great Eastern railway, where the Lowestoft branch turns off. It is situated near the river Yare, which is here navigable, and is crossed by a ferry on the S. At this spot Lodbroc the Dane was driven ashore in a storm, and was murdered by Bern, huntsman to King Edmund of East Anglia, who then kept his court here. An Act was obtained in 1840 for the enclosure of Wilton Green, and several other tracts of common. The surface is of a marshy character. There are lime kilns, brick kilns, corn mills, and a foundry. About one-third of the land is arable, and the remainder marsh, pasture, and common. The glebe comprises about 96 acres. The living is a rect.* with the vic. of Freethorpe annexed, in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £607. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, has a square tower. The interior of the church contains memorials to the Birney family, also two brasses. There is a National school for both sexes. H. M. Leathers, Esq., is lord of the manor.

REEDLEY-HALLOWS, a hmlt. in the par. of Whalley, higher div. of Blackburn hund., co. Lancaster, 2 miles N.E. of Burnley railway station. The township, which is of irregular form, is situated on the Leeds and Liverpool canal, and near the river Calder. The village is wholly agricultural. The soil consists of clay, with a subsoil of clay and rock. This hamlet is united with New Laund-Booth and Filly-Close to form a township.

REEDNESS, a tnshp. in the par. of Whitgift, lower div. of Osgoldcross wap., West Riding co. York, 5 miles S.E. of Howden. It is situated on the river Ouse, across which is a ferry to Saltmarsh, belonging to the Bishop of Durham. The village is considerable, but wholly agricultural. There is an endowed school. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a place of worship. About 400 acres are warp-land, lately reclaimed from the river and brought into cultivation. The tithes of this township, together with those of Swinefleet, were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1759.

REEDSMOUTH, a hmlt. in the par. of Bellingham, Tindale ward, co. Northumberland, 2 miles from Bellingham, and 29 N.W. of Newcastle. It is a junction station on the Border Counties line, where the Wansbeck branch turns off. It is situated at the confluence of the river Reed with the North Tyne. The principal seat is Reedsmouth Hall. At the upper end of Reedsdale was fought, in 1575, the last border skirmish, known as the "battle of Reedsquair."

REEF-DYKE, a reef of rocks on the coast of North Ronaldshay, Orkney Islands, coast of Scotland. It lies near the entrance to Linklets Bay, off Cape Brideness, and has only 5 feet water, with breakers on it.

REEKY LINN, a cascade on the river Isla, in Glenisla, co. Forfar, Scotland, near Airly Castle.

REELAN, a stream of the co. of Donegal, Ireland, rises under Silver Hill, and falls into the Finn.

REE LOUGH, an extensive lough formed by the rivers Shrule and Shannon, in Ireland. It lies between the cos. of Longford, Roscommon, and Westmeath, and is about 17 miles long, but varies very much in breadth and depth. Its surface is about 130 feet above sea-level, when at its highest. Its shores are indented by many wooded bays and inlets, and its waters varied by small islands, as Inchbofin, Inchcleraun, Inchmore, Inchturk, &c. It is navigable for barges past Athlone, but there are many shoals.

REEN, a headland on the E. side of Castlehaven Bay, co. Cork, Ireland, near Skibbereen. Off it lie the rocks called the Stags of Castlehaven.

REENASKIDDY, a headland in Cork Harbour, co. Cork, Ireland, opposite Skiddy Island.

REEPHAM, or REPHAM, a par. in the wap. of Lawress, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 4 miles N.E. of Lincoln, its post town, and 3 N.W. of the Five-mile railway station. It is a station on the Lincoln and Hull line of railway. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. The Burton hounds are kennelled in this parish. The impropriate tithes belong to the Mercers' Company of London. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £176, in the patron. of the Mercers' Company. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, is an ancient structure. The parochial charities produce about £1 10s. per annum. There is a school of recent erection, which is partially supported by the vicar.

REEPHAM, a par., post and market town in the hund. of Eynsford, co. Norfolk, 12 miles N.W. of Norwich, and 6 N.E. of Elmham railway station. It is situated on the Eyne, a branch of the river Wensam, and was anciently called Refham. The parish, which contains only 570 acres, formerly belonged to the family of De Vaux. An extensive trade is done in malt. There are a brewery and two large tanneries. Reepham is a polling-place for East Norfolk. Petty sessions are held every alternate Monday. The town, which is only a large village, is situated principally in the adjoining parish of Hackford, and extends into those of Kerdiston and Whitwell. It is well built. The market was granted by charter of Edward I. The glebe comprises about 70 acres. The living is a rect.* with that of Kerdiston annexed, in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £699, in the patron. of Trinity College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, is an ancient structure, with a square embattled tower containing two bells. The chancel contains tombs of the Kerdistons, and had a shrine of the Virgin, which formerly brought great gains to the priests. The register dates from 1538. In the same churchyard stands the church of Whitwell, and formerly that of Hackford, which latter was destroyed by fire in 1600. The parochial charities produce about £27 per annum. There are National schools for both sexes and infants. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a place of worship. Booton, Sall, Wood-Dalling, Heydon, Haverland, Weston, and Bawdswell halls are the principal residences. R. Westall, the painter, was born in this parish. The Rev. E. Holley, M.A., is lord of the manor. The market for corn and cattle is held on Wednesday. A fair is held for stock, horses, &c., on the 29th June.

REETH, a tnshp. and market town in the par. of Grinton, wap. of West Gilling, North Riding co. York, 10 miles W. of Richmond, its post town, and 8 N.W. of Leyburn. The town is situated on an eminence near the confluence of the rivers Swale and Arcle. The tnshp. comprises the vils. of Fremington and Healhaugh. The neighbouring lead mines, which are in extensive operation, are the means of employing a large number of the inhabitants; some few are also engaged in frame-work knitting. The Independents, Wesleyans, and Primitive Methodists have each a place of worship. There is an endowed free school, founded in 1643 by Alderman Hutchinson, also a school belonging to the Society of Friends, and at Fremington a National school. The board of guardians meet at the union poorhouse every alternate Friday. Market day is Friday. Fairs for cattle are held on the first Friday in May, 3rd November, the Friday prior to Masham lamb fair, and the Friday preceding the first Monday in March; also fairs for pleasure, &c., on the Fridays before Palm Sunday, Old May Day, 6th July, 5th September, 23rd November, and 21st December.

REFORN, a vil. in the par. of Portland, co. Dorset, 4 miles S. of Weymouth.

REIGATE, a hund. in two divs., first and second, co. Surrey. It was formerly called Churchfeld, and contains the pars. of Bletchworth, Buckland, Charlwood, Horley, Leigh, Reigate, Burstow, Chipstead, Gatton, Merstham, Mitfield, and part of Ewell, comprising an area of 45,150 acres.

REIGATE, a par., post and market town, municipal and parliamentary borough, in the hund. of the same name, co. Surrey, 2 miles from Redhill, 11 E. of Guildford, and 21 S.W. of London. It is a station on the Reading branch of the South-Eastern railway. This place, which is of considerable antiquity, is mentioned in Domesday Book as Cherche felle, and was subsequently called Church-field in Reigate. It is situated upon a rocky eminence, intersected by a branch of the river Mole, and near the head of Holmesdale. It is a polling-place and petty sessions town, and formerly belonged to Editha, Queen of Edward the Confessor. After the Norman conquest it came to the Warrens, who founded here an Austin Priory before 1240. The castle, which is considered to have been of Saxon origin, stood on the N. side of the town, and was taken by Louis the Dauphin and the barons in 1216. It was visited by King Edward I., and was demolished in 1648 by order of parliament. The site, which is surrounded by a broad and deep moat, is now laid out as a lawn, with gravel walks, and there is an antique gateway without the moat. Prior to the Reform Act Reigate returned two members to parliament, from the reign of Edward I., but then was deprived of one, and the boundaries made co-extensive with the parish. The town is well built and very healthy, standing upon a rock of white sand. It chiefly consists of two streets, which are intersected by several smaller streets, and are paved and lighted with gas. It is well supplied with water out of the rock on which it stands. There are a bank, savings-bank, mechanics' institution, with library and reading-room, market-house, townhall, situated in the market-place, and the public hall, which last was erected in 1861, on the site of the ancient chapel of St. Thomas-à-Becket. In the townhall, which was originally built as a prison for felons brought to be tried at the sessions, the Easter sessions are still regularly held; also petty sessions for the borough are held on the first Monday in every month; and the county court is held on fixed Thursdays in January, March, May, July, September, and November. The old borough contained a population of 2,008 in 1861, but the parliamentary borough 9,975. It is governed by a bailiff, who is the returning officer, the Foreign being under a separate authority. The board of guardians for the Reigate Poor-law Union, which comprises 16 parishes, meet every fortnight. Under Castle Hill is a cave 150 feet in length, with a chamber leading out of it, called the Barons' Hall, and which is believed by some to be the place where the barons drew up Magna Charta; there are also traces of St. Lawrence chapel near the White Hart. The Surrey hounds hunt in this parish. The London and Brighton railway, after quitting the Merstham tunnel, passes a little to the E. of this place, and the South-Eastern line, being joined by the branch line from Reading, takes a direction eastward towards Dover. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £418. The church, dedicated to St. Mary Magdalene, is an ancient stone structure, with an embattled tower at the W. end, and with double buttresses. It contains the tomb of Charles Howard, Earl of Nottingham, who fought the Armada in the reign of Elizabeth, also monuments to the Thurlands, Ladbrokes, and other families of great antiquity. In addition to the parish church are the following district churches, viz. St. Mark's; and at Redhill, St. John's, with St. Matthew's: the livings of all which are perpet. curs.* The Independents, Wesleyans, and Society of Friends have each a place of worship. The parochial charities produce about £289 per annum, besides £70 from Henry Smith's charity. There is a grammar school, founded in 1675, and partly endowed by R. Bishop and J. Parker, also National and British schools. Earl Somers is lord of the manor, and resides at Reigate Priory, an ancient mansion, occupying the site of the Austin Priory mentioned above. Market day is Tuesday. Fairs are held on Whit-Tuesday, and on 9th December.

REIGATE-FOREIGN, a lib. in the par. and borough of Reigate, first div. of Reigate hund., co. Surrey. See REIGATE.

REIGHTON, or RIGHTON, a par. in the wap. of Dickering, East Riding co. York, 3 miles S.E. of Hunmanby, 6 miles N.W. of Bridlington, and 2 from the Sputon railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the road leading from Bridlington to Scarborough, and near the coast. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The parish is bounded on the E. by Filey Bay, where it commands views of the German Ocean. There are several limestone quarries. The tithes were commuted for land and corn rents under an Enclosure Act in 1811, and the glebe consists of about 70 acres. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of York, val. £177. The church is an ancient structure with a low brick tower containing two bells. The dedication is unknown. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. Reighton Hall, the principal residence, is of ancient date, and is situated near the village. Admiral Mitford is lord of the manor.

REIKAN-LINN, a fall of the river Calder, co. Renfrew, Scotland, near Lochwinnoch.

REILTH, a tnshp. in the par. of Mainstone, co. Salop, 3 miles S.W. of Bishop's Castle, near Offa's Dyke.

REINDEIN HOUSE, a hmlt. in the par. of Alkham, hund. of Folkestone, lathe of Shepway, co. Kent, 4 miles N.E. of Folkestone. It is a meet for the East Kent hounds.

REISK, a par. in the bar. of Middlethird, co. Waterford, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5 miles S.W. of Waterford. Clonmel is its post town. The surface is hilly. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Waterford, val. £63, in the patron. of the bishop. The church has long been in ruins. There is a private day school. At a hill called the "Heap" lead ore rich in silver is found. On the hill called the "Sugar Loaf" is a large cromlech, and another cromlech and rath are also traced near Pembrokestown.

RELICHMURRY, a par. in the bar. of Clanwilliam, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 4 miles S.W. of Cashel, its post town. The par., which is extensive, contains the post town of Golden and the vil. of Thomastown. The surface forms part of the "Golden Vale," near the river Suir. The soil is rich. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Cashel. The church is situated at Golden. The Roman Catholic chapel is also in that town, and forms the head of a union. There are a National school, besides charity and several private day schools. Rockview is one of the principal seats.

RELISTION, a copper mine in the hund. of Penwith, co. Cornwall, 3 miles S.W. of Camborne, and 13 S.W. of Truro.

REMENHAM, a par. in the hund. of Beynhurst, co. Berks, 1½ mile N.E. of Henley, its post town and nearest station on the Great Western railway. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Thames, and is celebrated for the growth of lavender, the cultivation of which was introduced by the late General Lord Conway, who resided at Park Place, in the grounds of which is a Druids' temple brought from Jersey. The land is chiefly arable and pasture, with about 300 acres of woodland and plantations. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £494, and the glebe consists of 17 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £337, in the patron. of Jesus College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, has a tower containing two bells. It has a curious chancel of great antiquity. There are two schools, partly supported by subscription.

REMPSTONE, a par. in the S. div. of the wap. of Rushcliffe, co. Nottingham, 10 miles S. of Nottingham, its post town, and 4½ N.E. of Loughborough. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the road from Nottingham to Loughborough, and on a branch of the river Soar, which separates it from the county of Leicester. A portion of the inhabitants are engaged in framework knitting, but the greater part in agriculture. The surface is hilly, and the soil a mixture of gravel and chalk. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1768. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £478, in the patron. of the Master of Sidney Sussex College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to All Saints, was erected in 1773, and is situated about half a mile from the site of the former church of St. Peter in the Rushes. There is a village school, besides one for girls.

REMPSTONE, a tythg. in the par. of Corfe Castle, co. Dorset, 2 miles N.E. of Corfe Castle.

RENAGH. See REYNAGH, King's County, Ireland.

RENDALL, an ancient par. in the district of Mainland, Orkney, cos. Orkney and Shetland, Scotland, 3 miles W. of Shapinshay Island. It is now united with Evie (which see).

RENDCOMBE, a par. in the hund. of Rapsgate, co. Gloucester, 5 miles N. of Cirencester, its post town, and 8 S.W. of Northleach The village, which is of small extent, is chiefly agricultural. The soil is of a loamy nature, upon a subsoil of freestone. The Berkeley hounds meet in this parish. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £440, and the glebe comprises 24 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £373. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient stone structure with a tower containing six bells. The parochial charities produce about £3 per annum. Rendcombe Park is the principal residence. Sir W. V. Guise, Bart., is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

RENDHAM, a par. in the hund. of Plomesgate, co. Suffolk, 2½ miles N.W. of Saxmundham, its post town, and 5 from Framlingham. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on a branch of the river Alde, and is chiefly agricultural. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £411, and the vicarial for one of £100, and the glebe consists of 15 acres. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £96, in the patron. of trustees. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is an ancient edifice with a tower containing five bells. The interior of the church was restored in 1852. The roof is of carved oak, as is also the pulpit, which bears date 1632. There is also a piscina of great antiquity. The parochial charities produce about £9 per annum. There is a school for both sexes, erected in 1841, the expense being defrayed by voluntary contributions. The Independents have a place of worship, with a burial-ground and minister's residence adjoining. John Crabtree, Esq., is lord of the manor.

RENDLESHAM, a par. in the hund. of Loes, co. Suffolk, 3 miles S.W. of Wickham-Market, its post town, and 4½ N.E. of Woodbridge. The village, which is small and irregularly built, was formerly a market town. In the Saxon times, it was the seat of Redwald and other East Anglian kings. After the Norman conquest it was held by Fitz-Otho, from whom it passed to the Furneux, Spencers, Hamiltons, and other families, and subsequently to the Thellussons, to whom it gives the title of baron in the Irish peerage. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £480, and there are 53 acres of glebe. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £380, in the patron. of the crown. The church, dedicated to St. Gregory, is an ancient structure with a tower. The interior contains monuments to the Rendlesham family. The register dates from 1681. The parochial charities produce about £13 per annum. There is a free school, chiefly supported by Lord Rendlesham, who is lord of the manor. Rendlesham Hall is the principal residence. Dr. Leonard Maws, Bishop of Bath and Wells, was born here. Camden states that an ancient Saxon crown was dug up here, weighing about 60 ounces, but was sold and melted down.

RENFIELD, a quoad sacra par. in the par. of Barony, lower ward, co. Lanark, Scotland, adjoining Glasgow, of which it is a suburb.

RENFREW, a par., post and market town, royal and parliamentary burgh, in the upper ward of co. Renfrew (of which it is the county town), Scotland, 3 miles N.E. of Paisley, 6 W. of Glasgow, and 50 from Edinburgh. It is the terminus of the Paisley and Renfrew branch of the Glasgow and South Western railway, and a subport to Glasgow, having a wharf on the Clyde, at which the river steamers call in their transit up and down the river. The parish, which lies on the northern border of Renfrewshire, is bounded by the counties of Dumbarton and Lanark, and by the parishes of Abbey-of-Paisley, Inchinnan, and Kilbarchan. It is irregular in outline, lying on both sides of the river Clyde, which is here crossed by a chain ferry to Yocker. The extreme length of the parish from N.E. to S.W is 6 miles, with a breadth of 2½ miles. The rivers White Cart and Black Cart traverse the western boundary on their course northward to join the Clyde, and are crossed at their confluence by a bridge. The surface on the left bank of the Clyde is nearly level, forming part of an extensive plain; but on the right bank it is undulating, being varied by several swells and low conical hills, which, however, never attain an elevation of 200 feet above sea-level. The soil is mostly a deep alluvial loam, upon a subsoil of boulder clay, carboniferous limestone, coal, and trap rock. The land is wholly under cultivation, and is the property of seven principal landowners. The chief seats are Blythswood, Elderslie, Jordanhill, Abbotsinch, Scotstown, and Walkingshaw. The old seat of the Stewarts, which once stood on Castle Hill, is entirely demolished; but the adjoining lands still bear the names of "the Orchard" and "the King's Meadow." The office of high steward of Scotland was first conferred on Walter, laird of Renfrew, by David I., from which circumstance the family took the surname of Stewart. Tradition relates that at the Hill of Knock, in this parish, the Lady Marjory Bruce, daughter of King Robert Bruce, and wife of Walter le Steward, was killed by a fall from her horse in 1316, when far advanced in pregnancy, but that the life of the child being saved, he eventually succeeded to the Scottish throne as Robert II. It was here that Somerled, lord of the isles, who had risen in rebellion against Malcolm IV., was defeated and slain by Angus in 1164; and at the bridge of Inchinnan the Earl of Argyle was defeated and taken prisoner in 1685.—The town of Renfrew, which consists chiefly of one long narrow street, stands about half a mile from the left bank of the Clyde. Most of its houses are small, and some are old-fashioned thatched buildings with gable-ends; but in the environs the houses are superior, including a number of villas and cottages. At the cross near the W. end stands the town-house and gaol. It contains an Athenæum, with a public library attached, a branch office of the western bank of Scotland, gasworks, and the Blythswood testimonial, erected in 1842 by subscription, in honour of the late Archibald Campbell, Esq., of Blythswood, and appropriated to the use of the grammar school, founded by charter of James VI., in 1614. On the banks of the Clyde are wharves and shipbuilding yards; and in the immediate vicinity of the town are bleachfields, starch works, collieries, tile works, a pottery, and an extensive distillery at the hamlet of Yocker, on the right bank of the Clyde. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the salmon fishery, boatbuilding yards, in the weaving of silks and muslins, and in the making of starch. The commerce mainly consists in the importation of grain, fish, dye stuffs, and colonial produce; and in the export of coal, potatoes, and agricultural produce.—The burgh, which was first chartered by Robert III., in 1396, is governed under the late Act by a provost, two bailies, a treasurer, dean of guild, and seven councillors. Its revenue is about £3,500. The burgh court is held every Saturday, and a court of quarter sessions on the first Tuesdays in March, May, and August, and on the last Tuesday in October. It is contributory to Kilmarnock and three other burghs in returning one member to parliament. The population of the parliamentary burgh in 1851 was 2,722, and in 1861, 3,228, and the constituency in 1856 was 103.—This par. is in the presb. of Paisley and synod of Glasgow and Ayr, and in the patron. of the crown. The minister has a stipend of £332 6*s.* 8*d.*, besides a glebe, val. £55. The parish church is an ancient structure, enlarged in 1726, and repaired in 1820. There is a Free church, also several private schools, besides the burgh grammar school mentioned above.—From this place the Prince of Wales takes the title of baron.—Market day is Saturday. Fairs are held on the third Tuesdays in May and July, second Friday in June, 29th September, third Friday of October, and first Friday in December.

RENFREWSHIRE, a co., partly maritime and partly inland, in the W. of Scotland. It lies between 55° 40′ and 55° 58′ N. lat., and between 4° 14′ and 40° 54′ W. long. It is bounded on the E. and N.E. by Lanarkshire, on the S. by Ayrshire, on the W. by the Frith of Clyde, which separates it from Argyle, and on the N. by the Clyde, which separates it from Dumbartonshire, except a small district in the parish of Renfrew, which lies on the right bank of the Clyde. The form of the county is an irregular oblong, having its greatest length about 32 miles from Clogh Point in the N.W. to Drumduff in the S.E., and its greatest breadth 14 miles from Maich-bridge, near Kilbernie-loch, in a N.E. direction, to Erskine on the Clyde; but its average breadth is only 9½ miles. Its circuit is about 80 miles, of which 55 are traced by the river and Frith of Clyde, including the ports of Renfrew, Erskine, Port Glasgow, Greenock, Gourock, near Cloch Point, on which is a lighthouse, Innerkip, and Wemyss Bay. Its area is 234 square miles, or 150,000 acres, of which about 100,000 are cultivated, 20,000 uncultivated, and the remainder waste. In the earliest times of which we have any record, it was a seat of the Damnii, and after the conquest of the island by the Romans was included in the province of Valentia, of which Vanduaria, now Paisley, was one of the principal stations. It subsequently was called Strathgryfe, from the river Gryfe, and formed part of the British kingdom of Strathdyde. In the 12th century it formed part of the shire of Lanark, and was called the barony of Renfrew, from the burgh where the Stuarts, or Stewards, had their principal seat. In 1404, about 33 years after the accession of the Stuart family to the Scottish throne, this district was made shire ground; and the barony, with the other portions of his patrimonial inheritance, was given by Robert III. to his son and heir James, and since that time the eldest son of the reigning monarch has, besides his own titles, been styled Prince and Steward of Scotland and Baron of Renfrew.—The western and southern parts of the county, lying contiguous to the hilly district of the N. of Ayrshire, are somewhat mountainous and rugged, but the highest summits do not attain an altitude of above 1,300 feet above the level of the sea; while the eastern and northern parts of the county bordering on the Clyde are flat or gently undulating, forming one of the best cultivated lowland districts in Britain. The whole country is included in the basin of the Clyde, the estuary of which washes a large portion of the border, and has everywhere been rendered by man subordinate to the interests of trade and industry. The Cart, flowing into the Clyde between the parishes of Renfrew and Inchinnan, is the only other river in this country serviceable for navigation; but the lesser rivers which fall into these —as the Gryfe, Black Cart, White Cart, Locher Water, Calder, and the Levern—are invaluable as giving motion to mills and other machinery, and in supplying the innumerable bleachfields, dye-works, cotton factories, and other industrial establishments which line their banks. The principal natural lakes are Kilbirnie loch and Castle Semple loch (formed by the expansion of the waters of the Black Cart, and abounding in pike, eels, and water-fowl), lochs Long and Libo, in the parish of Neilston, and several small lakes in the parishes of Lochwinnock, Eaglesham, and Mearns. There are likewise two lochs formed by the Kipper Water (the principal stream not belonging to the basin of the Cart), which are used as reservoirs for the supply of Greenock, besides other artificial lakes or reservoirs in the parishes of Paisley, Eaglesham, and Neilston, covering an aggregate area of 700 acres. These last are chiefly formed by the damming of small mountain streams. The only canal is about 6 miles of the Ardrossan, which enters the county from Glasgow, and passes Ralston and Paisley to Johnstone, where it stops. Springs are abundant in all parts of the parish, and there are mineral springs at Linwood and Eaglesham. The climate is moist but healthy, nearly resembling that of the lower part of the adjoining county of Lanark.—The underlying rocks in the north-eastern part of the county belong to the carboniferous formation, which commences on the Lanarkshire brder, and extends N.W. and N.E. over an area of 10 miles in extreme breadth. The chief coal mines are at Quarrelton, near Johnstone, where the seam is 50 feet thick in five beds; at Hurlet and Househill, near Paisley, where the seam is 5 feet thick; and at Renfrew, Polmadie, Pollockshaws, and Neilston. Ironstone is found with the coal, and at Hurlet a bed of shale, overlying the coal, has, by combination with sulphuric acid, been converted into alum-slate, and here extensive alum-works have recently been established. In many places, especially towards the south-western rim of the coal-field, igneous rocks, chiefly trap and granite, overlie the carboniferous strata; and near Quarrelton is a superincumbent mass of compact greenstone, 100 feet thick. Towards the N.W. it is entirely separated from the Ayrshire coal-field by the trap-rock district, which rises into the lofty peaks of Stack Hill, Mistylaw, Dunrod, and Garvock Hills. A strip of Old Red sandstone, with limestone, extends along the northern coast from Port Glasgow to beyond Gourock; but is a mere band, except near Innerkip, where it extends over a breadth of about 5 miles. The igneous rocks in the western part of the county cover an extensive area, extending from Clogh Point to the eastern border of the parish of Eaglesham, and appear to have been protruded through the sedimentary rocks, which are much dislocated, and in some places semi-crystallised. The hills in this part of the country are mostly basalts or porphyry, capped with greenstone, which latter traverses the porphyry in innumerable dykes. An amygdoloidal porphyry, forming an elevated table-land of about 9 square miles, in the parishes of Abbey-of-Paisley and Lochwinnock, abounds in zeolites and other minerals. Good freestone for building, limestone for burning into lime, and sandstones, are extensively quarried at Kilbarchan, Pollockshaws, Eastwood, Neilston, and other places. The coal and ironstone mines also give employment to many persons; and carbonate of copper is found in the red sandstone formation, and in the greenstone at Kaime, but is not at present worked. The land in the fertile districts towards the N. and N.E. is well cultivated, and is nearly all meadow and gardens for the supply of the markets of Paisley, Glasgow, and Greenock. The hilly districts on the W. and S. are chiefly devoted to pasture and sheep-walks. The uncultivated districts are principally among the moory hills of trap-rock in the N.W. part of the county, and along the whole S.W. border is where the soil is cold and poor, producing only heath or coarse herbage, interspersed with extensive bogs and mosses. In these bogs turf is cut, out of which peat is made. The woodlands were returned in 1855 as covering an aggregate extent of 3,860 acres. The soil along the banks of the Clyde and Cart is a rich argillaceous alluvium, of the nature of carse land; but the greater part of the level district, at a distance from the river bank, is a diluvium or mixed transported soil, mingled with vegetable mould, and overlying beds of gravel, clay, or loam. Nearly the whole of this land is arable, and even the worst soils have of recent years been much improved. Dairy farming is extensively practised, and on the hills large flocks of black-faced sheep are reared. The farms, which are not much subdivided, vary in size from 50 to 300 acres; the number of farmers in 1855 paying a yearly rent of £10 and upwards being 1,249, while only 50 paid under £10. The valued rental of the county, according to the old Scottish valuation of 1674, was £5,764; but the real rental in 1856 was £318,280. The farm buildings are generally substantial, the fences are of stone, and great attention has been paid to drainage. Some estates are large and entailed, but there are many small freeholds, the total number of proprietors of all kinds on the new valuation rolls being 2,610. The principal crops are oats, wheat, barley, bere, beans and peas, turnips, potatoes, clover, and artificial grasses.—The manufactures are more extensive and diversified than those of any other county in Scotland except Lanarkshire, these two counties comprising the grand manufacturing district of the W. of Scotland. The staple manufactures of Renfrewshire are cotton and silk, which together employ above 20,000 hands; also woollens, shawls, muslins, linen, flax, canvas, and ropes. The chief seats of these manufactures are at Paisley, Greenock, Johnstone, Renfrew, Pollockshaws, Lochwinnock, Eaglesham, Kilbarchan, and Neilston, and other places in the valley of the Levern; besides some iron and brass works at Paisley and Johnstone. A brisk commerce is carried on at Port Glasgow, Greenock, Paisley, and Renfrew, the Clyde and the Cart affording the chief facilities of communication, supplemented, however, by the Glasgow and Johnstone canal, and by the Paisley and Renfrew, Glasgow and Neilston, Glasgow and Greenock, and Glasgow and South-Western lines of railway, which all traverse a portion of this county. The roads are numerous and well-made, crossing the county in every direction, the main lines being from Glasgow to Paisley and Renfrew, and so along the valley of the Clyde to Greenock, or by the valley of Kilbirnie to Ayrshire.—The population of the county has increased from 78,501 at the commencement of the present century, to 161,091 in 1851, and 177,407 in 1861, inhabiting 11,972 separate houses. There are four principal towns, viz. Renfrew, Paisley, Greenock, and Port-Glasgow. The first is the only royal burgh and the county and election town. The other three are parliamentary burghs, Paisley and Greenock returning each one member to Parliament, while Renfrew and Port-Glasgow contribute to Kilmarnock in the adjoining county of Ayr. One member is also returned for the county, the constituency in 1856 being 2,652. There are also two burghs of barony (Gourock and Newtown), and about 100 villages and hamlets, the largest of which are Bridge-of-Weir, Crosslee, Crofthead, Gateside, Eaglesham, Innerkip, Kilmalcolm, Hollow-wood, Houston, Linwood, Newton-of-Beltrees, Newton-Railston, Newton-Mearns, Grahamstown, East and West Arthurlee, New and Old Cathcart, Crosshill, Crossmyloof, Strathbungo, Thomliebank, Uplamuir, besides 16 others. The county is divided for political purposes into two wards, the upper and lower, and comprises 20 parishes, besides parts of 5 others. It is governed by a lord-lieutenant, vice-lieutenant, sheriff, and two substitutes, who severally reside at Paisley and Greenock, assisted by about 25 deputy-lieutenants. Quarter sessions are held at Renfrew on the first Tuesdays in March, May, and August, and on the last Tuesday in October. The sheriff court for the upper ward is held at Paisley on every Tuesday and Thursday during session, and for the lower ward on every Wednesday and Friday. The sheriff small-debt court is held weekly at Greenock, on Monday, and at Paisley on Thursday, and once in every other month at Pollockshaws. The justice of the peace small-debt courts are held at fixed intervals at Paisley, Greenock, and Port-Glasgow. The commissary court is held at Paisley on every Thursday. For ecclesiastical purposes Renfrewshire constitutes the presbyteries of Paisley and Greenock, in the synod of Glasgow and Ayr. It contains, besides the 20 quoad civilia parishes mentioned above, 3 quoad sacra parishes, and 12 chapelries.—Among the principal seats are Hawkhead, of the Earl of Glasgow; Erskine House, Bishopton House, and Cardonald, of Lord Blantyre; Cathcart House and Cartside, of Lord Cathcart; Abbots Inch, of Lord Douglas; Pollock House, of Maxwell, Bart.; Pollock Castle, of Pollock, Bart.; Milliken, or Napier House, of Napier, Bart.; Ardgowan, of Stewart, Bart.; Blythswood House, of Archibald Campbell; Caldwell, of Mure; Johnstone Castle, of Houston; besides numerous other private mansions. There are three poorhouses in the county, one in the parish of Abbey-of-Paisley, one for the town parishes of Paisley, and one in the parish of Greenock.

RENHOLD, a par. in the hund. of Barford, co. Bedford, 3½ miles N.E. of Bedford, and 8 S.W. of St. Neot's. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on a branch of the river Ouse, and is wholly agricultural. The surface is rather hilly, and in some parts gravel, but is generally of a clayey nature. A large portion of the land is in wood. The great tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £428 10*s., and the vicarial for £125. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ely, val. £126. The church, dedicated to All Saints, has a square tower containing five bells. The interior of the church contains some monuments. The charities produce about £39 per annum, of which £28 goes to Beecher's free school. Howbury Hall, the principal residence, is situated in the midst of a well-wooded park. Captain F. C. Polhill is lord of the manor. In the neighbourhood are several mounds, locally known as the "Amphitheatre."

RENISHAW, a tnshp. in the par. of Eckington, hund. of Scarsdale, co. Derby, 6 miles N.E. of Chesterfield. It is situated on the river Rothie and Chesterfield canal, and near the Leeds railway. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the coal mines and iron-works. On the bank of the canal is an extensive iron foundry. There is a school with a small endowment.

RENNINGTON, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Embleton, S. div. of Bambrough ward, co. Northumberland, 3½ miles N.E. of Alnwick, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. The soil is of a clayey and sandy nature, with a subsoil of clay. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Durham, val. £115, in the patron. of the Vicar of Embleton. The church, dedicated to All Saints, has a square tower containing one bell. The register dates from 1768. The church is of recent erection. There is a National school for both sexes, in which a Sunday-school is held. The Duke of Northumberland is lord of the manor.

RENTON, a vil. in the par. of Cardross, co. Dumbarton, Scotland, 3 miles N. of Dumbarton, and 1¼ mile S. of Alexandria. It is a station on the Dumbartonshire railway. It is situated on the river Leven, and on the road from Dumbarton to Luss, and was founded in 1782 by the Smolletts, of Bonhill. In the neighbourhood is a pillar to Smollett, who was born at Dalquharn. A large portion of the inhabitants are employed in calico printing, and in the bleaching works. There are a Free church, Reformed Presbyterian church, also a library, and several schools and institutions.

RENTON, a quondam vil. in the par. of Coldingham, co. Berwick, Scotland, 5 miles W. of Coldingham. It is situated on the river Eye, near Renton Inn, and is the site of a tower.

RENVILLE, a vil. in the par. of Oranmore, bar. of Dunkellin, co. Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 1 mile S.W. of Oranmore. It is situated on Galway Bay, and is traversed by the road from Oranmore to Ardfry. There are a small pier and a police station. This place is a resort for sea-bathing. An old castle is still standing in Renville demesne. In the vicinity are quarries of black marble, and lead ore is found.

RENVYLE HEAD, a promontory on the coast of Galway, Ireland, lies between Killery and Ballynakill harbours.

RENWICK, a par. and tnshp. in Leath ward, co. Cumberland, 11 miles N.E. of Penrith, its post town, and 3 N.E. of Kirkoswald. The village, which is of a straggling appearance, is situated on the W. side of Thackmoor Fell, and is chiefly agricultural. The soil is of a loamy nature, with a subsoil of gravel and sand. About a third of the land is arable, and the remainder stunted meadow and mountain pasture. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1814. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £92. The church, dedicated to All Saints, has a turret containing two bells. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum. There is a place of worship for the Wesleyans, also a Sunday-school. Queen's College, Oxford, owns the manor. A fair for horses, &c., is held on the Thursday prior to the 26th September.

REORSBY. See REARSBY, co. Leicester.

REPHAM. See REEPHAM, co. Lincoln.

REPPS, NORTH, a par. in the hund. of North Erpingham, co. Norfolk, 3 miles S.E. of Cromer, its post town, and 7 N.W. of North Walsham. The village, which is considerable, is situated near the coast, and is chiefly agricultural. The road from Norwich to Cromer intersects the parish. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £580, and there are 10 acres of glebe. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £516, in the patron. of the Duchy of Lancaster. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has a square tower containing five bells. The interior has been thoroughly restored. There are an endowed school and an infant school. At North Repps Hall, the principal residence, Sir Fowell Buxton died in 1845. Lord Suffield is lord of the manor.

REPPS, SOUTH, a par. in the hund. of North Erpingham, co. Norfolk, 5 miles N.W. of North Walsham, and 4½ S.E. of Cromer. The village, which is large, is divided into Upper and Lower streets, nearly a mile apart from each other. It is chiefly agricultural. The greater part of the land is arable, with some woodland, and about 35 acres of common. A branch of the river Ant intersects the parish. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £666, and the glebe comprises 12 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £670, in the patron. of the Duchy of Lancaster. The church, dedicated to St. James, has a lofty embattled tower containing five bells. The register dates from 1558. The parochial charities produce about £6 per annum. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. Lord Suffield is lord of the manor. On an eminence, about a mile from the village, are the remains of an ancient beacon. A fair for cattle is held on the Tuesday fortnight after Whit-Sunday.

REPPS-WITH-BASTWICK, a par. in the hund. of West Flegg, co. Norfolk, 5 miles N. of Acle, 10 N.W. of Yarmouth, and 12 N.E. of Norwich. The village, which is of small extent, is situated near the Hickling navigation, and is bounded on the N.W. by the river Thirne. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The greater part of the land is arable, and the remainder marsh and plantation. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £390, and the tithes payable to the Dean and Chapter of Norwich for £18. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £156, in the patron. of the Corporation of Norwich. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, has an octangular tower. The old church of Bastwick, which is about half a mile distant, is in ruins. The parochial charities produce about £8 per annum, besides 33 acres of glebe belonging to the hospital, and valued at £48 per annum. Charles Lombe, Esq., is lord of the manor.

REPTON AND GRESLEY, a hund. in the co. of Derby, contains the pars. of Calke, Chillaston, Church-Gresley, Derby Hills, Foremark, Hurtshorn, Lullington, Measham, Melbourne, Newton-Solney, Normanton, Osmaston, Repton, Rosliston, Smisby, Stanton-by-Bridge, Stapenhill, Stretton-en-le-Field, Swarkeston, Ticknall, Walton-on-Trent, Willesley, and parts of Appleby, Burton-on-Trent, Clifton Campville, Croxall, Packington, and Ravenstone; comprising an area of 55,750 acres.

REPTON, a par. in the above hund. co. Derby, 4¼ miles N.E. of Burton, its post town, and 1 mile E. of the Willington railway station. It is situated on a branch of the river Trent, near the Midland railway, and includes the hmlt. of Milton and the chplry. of Bretby. In the Saxon times it was a royal seat of the Mercian kings, and was then called Hreopandunum, Repandune, or Repindon. There are ruins of a nunnery founded prior to 660, and in which Ethelbald I. and other of the Mercian kings were interred. It was burnt by the Danes in 873, but refounded in 1172 by Matilda, wife of Earl Ranulph, of Chester, as a priory for Black Canons. Its revenue at the Dissolution was valued at £168, and the site was then given to the Thackers. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The substratum is clay, alternating with gravel. An annual court-leet is held by the lord of the manor. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act near the end of the last century. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £123. The church, dedicated to St. Wyston, has a spire 198 feet in height, and a Norman crypt of great antiquity, believed to have been part of the conventual church destroyed by the Danes. There is also a district church at Bretby, or Bradby, the living of which is a don. cur., val. £80. The parochial charities produce about £3,000 per annum, of which sum £2,569 goes to Etwall hospital and the grammar school, founded in 1556 by Sir J. Port. In 1621 the master of Etwall hospital, the head-master of Repton school, and the poor men and scholars were incorporated, and the remains of the conventual buildings converted into a school-house. This is the school where Lightfoot, the Hebrew scholar, was usher, and Shaw, the Staffordshire historian, and Scott, the translator of the "Arabian Nights," were pupils. There is a literary institution, under Sir J. H. Crewe, Bart. The Independents and Wesleyans have each a place of worship.

RERWICK, a par. in the district of East Kirkcudbright, co. Kirkcudbright, Scotland. It comprises the vils. of Dundrennan and Auchencairn. It extends in length about 10 miles from S.W. to N.E., with an average breadth of 6 miles. It is bounded by the Solway Frith, and by the parishes of Kirkcudbright, Kelton, and Buittle. The surface in the north-eastern district is of a hilly nature, the highest summit being Bencairn, on which stands an extensive cairn. The views are extensive. The surface in many parts has been greatly improved by drainage, and is now in a fertile and flourishing condition. The predominant rocks are granite, trap, and jasper, which last is found in the coves along the coast. The shore, which is of a sandy nature, is indented by the creeks of Balcarry, Mullock, and others. The village of Rerwick is distant about 6 miles E. of Kirkcudbright. It is situated on the Solway Frith. In the vicinity are two Druid circles, also remains of 12 camps of Danish and other origin. This par. is in the presb. of Kirkcudbright and synod of Galloway, and in the patron. of the crown. The minister has a stipend of £254. The parish church was built at the latter end of the 17th century, and was enlarged and restored in 1743, and again in 1828. There are two parochial schools.

RESAWRIE, a vil. in the par. of Inverness, co. Inverness, Scotland, near Inverness.

RESCOBIE, a par. and district in the co. of Forfar, Scotland. It contains Bole and part of Marestone, also Roscobie Loch. It extends about 9 miles from S.E. to N.W., with a varying breadth of from 1½ mile to 2½ miles. It is bounded by the pars. of Oathlaw, Aberlemno, Guthrie, Kirkden, Dunnichen, Forfar, and Kirriemuir. The surface is uneven, lying in a hollow between Dunnichen and Turin hills, which attain an altitude of about 814 feet above sea-level. On the hill of Turin, which wears an impregnable aspect, formerly stood a stone fort. Traces of the walls, from 13 to 14 feet in thickness, are still remaining, and are now known under the name of Kemp or Camp Castle. The loch of Roscobie extends about 1½ mile in length, with an extreme breadth of nearly 1 mile, occupying that part of the parish which lies betwixt the hills of Turin and Dunnichen. The Lunan Water flows through this loch, as well as that of Balgavies, which last is 1½ mile in circumference, and lies on the boundary of the parish, a little to the S.E. Grey paving-stone and Old Red sandstone conglomerate are the prevailing rocks, and are quarried to a considerable extent. The soil varies according to its position, in some places being a sharp gravel, in others poor and moory, and in parts fertile—these several changes often occurring in one field. The parish is traversed by the roads from Forfar to Arbroath and Montrose, also by the Arbroath and Forfar section of the Scottish North-Eastern railway. This par. is in the presb. of Forfar and synod of Angus and Mearns. The stipend of the minister is £213. The church was erected in 1820. There is a parochial school, also a library. The principal seats are Burnside, Ochterlony, or Balmadies, Pitscandby, Carse, and Reswallie.

RESOLIS, or KIRKMICHAEL, a par. in the district of Easter Ross, cos. Ross and Cromarty, Scotland. It comprises the vils. of Gordon's Mills and Jemima. It extends in length about 8 miles, with a varying breadth of from 3 to 4 miles. It is bounded on the W. and N. sides by Cromarty Frith, and on the other sides by the pars. of Cromarty, Rosemarkie, Avoch, and Urquhart. The surface is moderately even, except towards the water shed of the Mullbury, where it rises considerably. The arable land is chiefly in the valley, which reaches nearly across the parish. It is watered by the Resolisburn, which works two or three mills in its course, and finally falls into Cromarty Frith at Gordon Mills. There are traces of lead ore. Old Red sandstone is the predominant rock. The soil is generally of an unproductive nature, except on the banks of the Resolisburn. In the vicinity are many Danish earthworks and other ancient remains. This par. is in the presb. of Chanonry and synod of Ross. The stipend of the minister is £252. The church was rebuilt in 1830. There is a parochial school, also two other schools. The principal seats are Poyntsfield and Braelangwell.

RESOLVEN, a hmlt. in the par. of Lower Lantwit, hund. of Neath, co. Glamorgan, 2 miles E. of Neath. It is situated in the vale of the river Neath. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the collieries.

RESORT LOCH, a sea loch on the W. side of Lewis and Harris Islands, Western Isles, coast of Scotland. It is about 9 miles in length by 4 broad.

RESTAL, a loch in the par. of Lochgoilhead, co. Argyle, Scotland, 7 miles N.E. of Inverary.

RESTALRIG, or LOCHSTERROCK, a vil. in the par. of South Leith, co. Edinburgh, Scotland. It is a small decayed village standing about equal distances from the town of Leith, the Carlton Hill of Edinburgh, and the Figgate Burn at Portobello. It is situated in the central part of the plain which extends from the beach to the hills of Leith. Restalrig was anciently called Lestalric, and formed a separate parish, belonging to the Logans and Balmerinos, previous to 1609. Here was formerly the ruins of a collegiate church, founded by James II. The cavalry barrack called Jock's Lodge and the St. Margaret's depôt for the North British railway are situated at its eastern extremity. Near the village is St. Margaret's Well, also ruins of the old seat of the lairds of Restalric.

RESTENET, formerly a loch, but now drained, in the par. and co. of Forfar, Scotland, near Forfar, and 13 miles N. of Dundee. Here was once a monastery, founded in the 7th century by St. Boniface as a cell to Jedburgh Abbey.

RESTON, a vil. in the par. of Coldingham, co. Berwick, Scotland, 4 miles W. of Ayton. It is situated on the North British railway, which has a station here. There is a parochial school for both sexes.

RESTON, a hmlt. in the chplry. of Hugil, par. and ward of Kendal, co. Westmoreland, 6 miles N.W. of Kendal.

RESTON, NORTH, a par. in the hund. of Louth-Eske, co. Lincoln, 4½ miles S.E. of Louth, its post town, and 1 mile from Legbourn railway station. The parish is inconsiderable, and contains no village. It is intersected by the road from Louth to Alford. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £216 9*s*. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £211. The church, dedicated to St. Edith, has a turret containing one bell. The register dates from 1563. Howard Jackson, Esq., is lord of the manor.

RESTON, SOUTH, a par. in the hund. of Calceworth, co. Lincoln, 6 miles S.E. of Louth, its post town, and 2 from the Authorpe railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the road from Louth to Alford, and is chiefly agricultural. The soil is of a clayey nature. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1771. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £110, in the patron. of the Duchy of Lancaster. The church, dedicated to St. Edith, has a turret containing one bell. The parochial charities produce about £7 per annum. There is a parochial school. The Wesleyans and Free Methodists have each a place of worship. Thomas Alcock, Esq., is lord of the manor.

RESTORMEL CASTLE, a demesne in the par. of Lostwithiel, hund. of East Powder, co. Cornwall, 1 mile N. of Lostwithiel, and 20 miles S.W. of Launceston. The present mansion is situated on a hill overlooking the river Fowey, and near the ruins of the ancient court of the Earls of Cornwall, built by Robert, Earl of Mortaigne.

RETFORD, or RETFORD, EAST, a par., market town, municipal and parliamentary borough, in the North Clay div. of Bassetlaw wap., co. Nottingham, 27 miles N.E. of Nottingham, and 138½ from London, by the Great Northern railway. It is also a station on the Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire line. This place is supposed to have derived its name from the ancient ford over the river Idle, and from the circumstance of the clay on the banks being here of a reddish colour. It is written in Domesday Book Redeford, and early in the 13th century was spelt Esle Redd furthe.—The town, which is a place of considerable antiquity, being mentioned in the Saxon annals, is situated on the main N. road, and on the E. bank of the river Idle, which is here crossed by a stone bridge of five arches, connecting the town with the suburb of West Retford. The Chesterfield canal, which communicates with the river Trent at West Stockwith, is conveyed by an aqueduct over the river Idle, a little to the S.W. of the town, and is now the property of the Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire railway company. The ancient part of the town is situated in the parish of East Retford, but the modern portion extends into the adjoining parishes of Ordsall, Clarborough, and West Retford, on the opposite side of the river. The streets are paved and lighted with gas at the expense of the corporation. The houses are in general well built, and the shops well supplied. Near the centre of the town is a market place, surmounted by five lamps, which has been erected on the site of the ancient market cross. A good general trade is carried on, and much business is done in corn, cheese, and hops. In the town and its immediate neighbourhood are several corn and paper mills. The principal public building is the townhall, erected in 1755 on the site of the old Moot Hall: in the upper part are the hall of justice and the council-room, containing full-length portraits of James I., George II., and Queen Caroline, and on the ground-floor are the butchers' shambles; adjoining the hall on the E. side is a new building, recently added at the cost of £500. A new townhall is in course of building, at the estimated expense of £9,000. The other public institutions are the literary and scientific institution, with a library attached, a spacious news-room, savings-bank, three commercial banks, gas-works, union poor-house, and agricultural society's rooms.—Retford is a borough by prescription, and a royal demesne, having been first chartered by Edward I., who let the manor to the burgesses at a fee-farm rent of £10 per annum. In 1336 its privileges were confirmed by Edward III., and again in the reigns of Henry VI. and James I., who empowered the bailiff to hold courts of record, and to execute the duties of escheator and clerk of the market, with the style of "bailiffs and burgesses of East Retford." Under the new Municipal Reform Act the government is vested in a mayor, who is also returning officer, 4 aldermen, and 12 councillors, assisted by a high steward, recorder, and town-clerk; the recorder, mayor, and ex-mayor being justices of the peace. The corporation revenue produces about £1,500, chiefly from the manor rents. The municipal borough, which is conterminous with the parish of East Retford, comprises about 130 acres, and had in 1851 a population of 2,775, which in 1861 had increased to 2,982; but the population of the town properly so called is about 6,500. It first sent two members to parliament in the 9th year of Edward II., but in 1330 the burgesses petitioned for a suspension of the privilege, on account of their poverty, and it subsequently lay dormant until the year 1571, when it was again exercised, and two members were regularly returned till 1827, when, on the petition of Sir H. Wright Wilson, the return of W. B. Wrightson and Sir R. L. Dundas was declared void, and the committee directed the attention of the House to the corrupt state of the borough. In 1830 it was settled by Act of Parliament that the franchise should be thrown open to the whole hundred of Bassetlaw, the £10 occupiers of which now exercise the right of voting for the parliamentary borough, which thus includes a population of 47,330. Retford is also a polling-place for the northern division of the county of Nottingham. The general quarter sessions for the northern division of the county, and also for the borough, are held in the townhall. The petty sessions for the division and for the borough take place weekly on Saturdays. A new County Court is likewise held here, the district of which is co-extensive with the superintendent registry, which comprises 46 parishes or places. The Poor-law Union comprises 50 parishes, and takes its name from East Retford, though the union poorhouse is situated in the parish of Clarborough.—Retford is the head of a deanery in the archdeac. ot Nottingham and dioc. of Lincoln, the archdeacon holding a visitation yearly in the parish church. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £140. The parish church, frequently called the Corporation church, is dedicated to St. Swithin. It is an ancient structure, with a square tower surmounted by pinnacles, and containing a peal of eight bells. It was almost entirely rebuilt by the corporation in 1658, at an expense of £1,500, the original structure, which was very ancient, having been crushed by the fall of the steeple and tower seven years previously. The length of the church is 117 feet, its breadth in the nave and aisles 51 feet, the transept 85 feet, and the height of the tower 97 feet. It has been entirely restored and enlarged by the addition of a new aisle in 1854. There are besides a chapel-of-ease at Moorgate, dedicated to St. Saviour, and a modern church in the W. suburb, erected at a cost of £4,000, as a chapel-of-ease to the parish church at Clarborough. There are places of worship for Wesleyans, Independents, General Baptists, and Primitive Methodists, which last, situated in Carol Gate, was erected in 1789 for a theatre, and was so used till 1843, when it was purchased by the Primitive Methodists for a chapel. The parochial charities produce altogether about £500 per annum. The Royal Free Grammar School, founded and endowed by Edward VI., has an income of about £400 per annum. There are also National schools for both sexes in East Retford, erected in 1857; a National school for infants, erected in 1813; and a Wesleyan day school, besides a National school for girls in St. Saviour's. Sloswicke's hospital was founded in 1657 by Richard Sloswicke for six decayed burgesses, and was rebuilt in 1806 at the expense of the corporation; its estate now realises about £90 per annum. There are also nine other almshouses, and several benevolent societies, including two lodges of Odd Fellows, a Dorcas charity, and a sick club. Market day is on Saturday. The chartered fairs are held on 23rd March and 2nd October, for horses, cattle, cheese, and hops, and other fairs on the last Thursday in July for lambs, Thursday after 11th June, and second Thursday in December, for horses, cattle, and sheep.

RETFORD, WEST, a par. in the wap. of Bassetlaw, co. Nottingham, 1 mile W. of East Retford, and 8 miles from Bawtry. It is separated from East Retford by the river Idle, and the Chesterfield canal passes through the parish. The old hall was once the seat of the Denman family, from which, by intermarriage, was descended Anne, consort of James II., and Queen Anne. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Enclosure Act in 1774. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £364. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, has a tower and crocketed spire. The parochial charities produce about £148 per annum, independent of a hospital, founded by Dr. John Darrell in 1664, for 16 poor men. The income of this charity now exceeds £1,000 per annum; and the hospital itself was rebuilt in 1832.

RETTENDON, a par. in the hund. of Chelmsford, co. Essex, 9 miles S.E. of Chelmsford, its post town, and 7 E. of Billericay. The village, which is irregularly built, is situated on the navigable river Crouch, and is chiefly agricultural. The Essex Union hounds meet in this parish. The surface is partly hilly, and is almost wholly arable land. The soil is a highly-productive loam, with a subsoil of clay. In 673 it was given to a priory in the Isle of Ely, and subsequently belonged to the Bishops of Ely, who had an episcopal palace here. The hmlt. of Battle Bridge is included within the parish. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £830, and the glebe comprises 84 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £765, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to All Saints, has a square embattled tower containing five bells. The interior of the church contains tombs of great antiquity. The parochial charities produce about £30 per annum. There is an endowed school. The Independents have a place of worship at Battle Bridge. The Rev. A. W. Bullen, of Great Baddow, is lord of the manor.

REVELSTOKE, a par. in the hund. of Plympton, co. Devon, 10 miles S.E. of Plymouth, and 7 S.E. of Earl's Plympton. Ivy Bridge is its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is designated Noss Mayo. It is situated on the S. coast of Devon, near the river Yealm, in Bigbury Bay, and under Stoke Point. The herring, crab, and lobster fisheries are very productive. A portion of the inhabitants are engaged in agriculture. The soil is of a light nature. The great tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £139, and those of the incumbent for one of £115. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £227, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, built in the reign of Henry VIII., has a small wooden belfry containing two bells. It is situated at Stoke Point, within a few yards of the cliff overlooking the English Channel. Divine service is performed but once in three weeks. At Noss Mayo there is a chapel-of-ease, erected in 1840. The parochial charities consist of a house and garden for the poor.

REVESBY, a par. in the W. div. of the soke of Bolingbroke, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 2 miles N.W. of Bolingbroke, 11 N. of Boston, its post town, and 7 N.E. of Tattershall railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is chiefly agricultural. The par. comprises the hmlts. of Medlam, Moorhouses, and Tumby-Wood. In the parish are traces of a camp, with two tumuli 300 feet by 100; also ruins of a Cistercian abbey, founded in 1142 by William de Romara, Earl of Lincoln, and which, at the Dissolution, had a revenue of £349 4*s.* 10*d.* The site was given to the Brandons. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £200. The church is dedicated to St. Lawrence. It was rebuilt about 1730, by one of the Banks family. The parochial charities produce about £50 per annum, of which £48 goes to Banks's almshouses, founded in 1727. There are National schools for both sexes, erected in 1858 at an outlay of £1,000, chiefly defrayed by J. B. Stanhope, Esq., who is lord of the manor. Revesby Abbey, the seat of the Stanhopes, is a modern mansion, erected from designs by Burns.

REW, a hmlt. in the par. of Marlborough, co. Devon, 4 miles S.W. of Kingsbridge.

REWCASTLE, a hmlt. in the par. of Bedrule, co. Roxburgh, Scotland, 4 miles S.W. of Jedburgh, in a moorland district, near the rivers Rule and Teviot.

REWE, a par. in the hunds. of Wonford and Hayridge, co. Devon, 5 miles N. of Exeter, its post town, and 9 from Tiverton. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the Bristol railway, and on the road from Exeter to Tiverton. The parish is intersected by the river Culm. It comprises the tythg. of Up-Exe. It is wholly agricultural, about two-thirds of the land being arable, and one-third pasture. The soil is of red sand. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge, and the glebe comprises 50 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £394. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has a tower containing a clock and five bells. At Up-Exe are the ruins of an ancient chapel. The parochial charities produce about £4 per annum. There is a school for infants. The Earl of Ilchester is lord of the manor.

REXTON, a hmlt. in the par of Stogumber, co. Somerset, 4 miles S.E. of Watchet.

REYDON, a par. in the hund. of Blything, co. Suffolk, 2 miles N.W. of Southwold, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated near the coast, on the river Blyth, on which is a quay, where coal is imported, and corn and bark exported. It was formerly a market town, and has several small vessels belonging to the port. The great tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £410, and the vicarial for one of £218, with a glebe of 43 acres. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £220. The church, dedicated to St. Margaret, is an ancient structure with a lofty tower. The register dates from 1686. The parochial charities produce about £18 per annum. Reydon House is the principal residence. Above the quay was Wolsey's Bridge, said to have been built by the cardinal.

REYMERSTON, a par. in the hund. of Mitford, co. Norfolk, 5 miles S.E. of East Dereham, its post town, and 1½ mile S.W. of Thuxton railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated near the East Anglian railway and the river Blackwater. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. Three parts of the land are arable, and the remainder pasture and woodland. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £461, and the glebe comprises 18 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £338. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, has a square tower containing five bells. The register dates from 1559. The parochial charities produce about £42 per annum, including the produce of 14 acres of land, allotted to the poor at the enclosure of the parish in 1796. The New Hall is the principal residence.

REYNAGH, or RENAGH, a par. in the bar. of Garrycastle, King's County, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. It contains the post town of Banagher (which see). Petty sessions are held once a week. The surface extends along the river Shannon. There is much bog and waste land, and the arable is of poor quality. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Meath, val. £253, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was built in 1829 by means of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits, and is in the later English style. The Roman Catholic church is at Banagher, and is at the head of a union. There are two public and several private schools. Carrigcastle, Mount Carteret, and Claremount are the principal residences. There are some large meal mills. Steamboats ply on the Shannon to Limerick and other places. In the vicinity are remains of an old church, also of Streamstown Castle, and traces of a rath. There is a dispensary in the parish. Fairs are held on 1st May and 15th September.

REYNOLDSTON, a par. in the hund. of Swansea, co. Glamorgan, 11 miles S.W. of Swansea, its post town, and 2 from Penrice. The village, which is small, is situated in Gower, near Cefn-y-Bryn, or Arthur's Stone. It formerly belonged to Reginald de Braose. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £120. The church is dedicated to St. George. Stout Hall is the principal residence, and in its grounds is a large cave.

REYNOLDSTON, a par. in the hund. of Narberth, co. Pembroke, 4 miles S.W. of Narberth, its post town. The village, which is now of small extent, was formerly a Flemish-built town. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £62.

RHAIDR, or RHAYADER, signifying "a fall on a river," is a prefix to the names of many spots in Wales.

RHANBERFEDD, a tnshp. in the par. of Queen's Hope, hund. of Maylor, co. Flint, 2 miles N. of Caergwrle. It is situated in Hopedale, on the river Alen, and near Offa's Dyke.

RHANDIR, a tnshp. in the par. of Llandyssil, hund. of Newtown, co. Montgomery, 2 miles S.W. of Montgomery, near the river Severn.

RHANDIR, ABBOT, CANOL, ISAF, and UCHAF, hmlts. in the par. of Llanfairarybryn, hund. of Perfedd, co. Carmarthen, 1 mile N. of Llandovery. They are situated between the rivers Towy and Bran. The district is traversed by the ancient road Sarn Helen, and was probably the site of a Roman camp.

RHANHIR, a tnshp. in the par. of Llangerniew, hund. of Isaled, co. Denbigh, 11 miles W. of Denbigh, and 7 N.E. of Llanrwst. It is situated among the hills, near the river Elwy. The subsoil is rich in lead and copper ores.

RHANTREGYNWEN, a tnshp. in the par. of Llandysilio, co. Montgomery, 7 miles N.N.E. of Welshpool.

RHAYADER. See RADYR, co. Glamorgan.

RHAYADER, a hund. in the co. of Radnor, contains the pars. of Cwm-Toyddwr, St. Harmon, Llanfihangel Helygen, Llanyre, Nantmel, and Rhayader.

RHAYADER, or RHAIADER GWY, a par., market town, and parliamentary borough in the hund. of the same name, co. Radnor, 16 miles N.W. of New Radnor, and 14 from Llanidloes, by the Mid Wales railway, on which it is a station. This parish was included in that of Nantmel previous to 1735. The town occupies a site on the left bank of the Wye, surrounded by barren hills. Its name, which signifies a "cataract," was derived from a small fall of the Wye, which was almost obliterated by widening the channel, and removing the rocks in 1780, in order to build a bridge over the river. The town is mean looking, with but little trade. It was formerly an assize town, and is still a polling-place for the county elections, and a borough by prescription. It is governed by a bailiff, and contributes to Radnor in returning one member to parliament. The bounds include the hmlt. of Llansaintfraed-Cwmtoyddwr, and contained in 1861 a population of 1,030; but the par. of Rhayader contained only 846 inhabitants, some of whom are engaged in the flannel trade. It contains the townhall, built in 1762, and the union poorhouse. The Poor-law Union comprises the hund. of Rhayader, with the pars. of Abbey-cwm-hîr, Cefnllys, and Llanbadarn-fawr in Radnorshire, and the par. of Llanwithwll in Brecknockshire. The new County Court and superintendent registry districts are co-extensive with the Poor-law Union. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £75, in the patron. of the Vicar of Nantmel. The church is dedicated to St. Bridget. The Dissenters have three chapels in the town. The charities comprise a small endowment for Davies's school, and Williams's bequest of £2,000 for a divinity lecture. Market days are on Wednesday and Saturday. Fairs are held in May, June, August, September, October, and December for cattle.

RHEBAN CASTLE, a fortress in the co. of Kildare, Ireland, 4 miles N.W. of Athy. It is a stronghold built by De St. Michael in the 13th century, to command the valley of the river Barrow, and is supposed to occupy the site of Rheba, the capital of Venicnii mentioned by Ptolemy. It was several times taken and retaken in the wars between the English and Irish in the Middle Ages, and was finally dismantled by O'Neil in 1648.

RHEIDOL, a river of the co. of Cardigan, rises under Plinlimmon, and after a course of about 20 miles unites itself with the Ystwith in an artificial channel, and both streams together fall into Cardigan Bay at Aberystwith.

RHELESKIN, a tnshp. in the par. of Guilsfield, hund. of Pool, co. Montgomery, 3 miles N.W. of Welshpool. It is situated in the valley of the Severn, near the Montgomery canal.

RHEWHIRIETH, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanfair-Caereinion, hund. of Mathrafel, co. Montgomery, 2 miles from Llanfair, and 9 N.W. of Montgomery. It is situated in a hilly district under Caer-Einion British camp, and near the Roman road Sarn Sws.

RHIDYBRIW, or YSCLYDACH, a chplry. in the par. of Llywell, hund. of Devynnock and borough of Brecknock, co. Brecon, 12 miles W. of Brecknock. The village is situated among the hills, near the river Usk, and the line of the Roman road Via Julia Montana. Some of the inhabitants are engaged in the neighbouring woollen mills. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. David, val. £145, in the patron. of the Vicar of Llywell.

RHIEWARGOR, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanwddyn, hund. of Llanfyllin, co. Montgomery, 12 miles N.W. of Llanfyllin, near the river Bechan, or Owddyn.

RHIEWLAS, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanfihangel-yn-Gwynva, co. Montgomery, 5 miles S.W. of Llanfyllin. It is situated in a hilly country, near the line of the Caer Sws Roman way, and in the district of Gwynva, which anciently formed part of the principality of Powysland.

RHIEWNACHOR, a tnshp. in the par. and hund. of Llanfyllin, co. Montgomery, 2 miles from Llanfyllin, and 16 N.W. of Montgomery. It is situated among the hills near the river Vyrnwy.

RHIEWSAISON, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanbrynmair, co. Montgomery, 10 miles N.W. of Llanidloes.

RHIGOS, a hmlt. in the par. of Ystrad-dyfodwg, hund. of Miskin, co. Glamorgan, 9 miles S.W. of Merthyr-Tydfil. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the Hirwaun ironworks.

RHIND, or RHYND, a par. in the district of Eastern Perth, co. Perth, Scotland. It is bounded by the pars. of Perth, Kinnoul, Kinfauns, St. Madoes, Abernethy, and Dumbarnie. It extends in length about 4 miles from S.E. to N.W., with an extreme breadth of 1½ mile. The surface is moderately flat, and is of a fertile carse nature. Rhynd Island, which has been reclaimed from the river, is included in this par. There is a mineral spring. Near to the ancient castle of Elcho is part of Orchardnook Priory, founded as a cell to Dunfermline Abbey. The soil consists of a sharp gravel in the N.W. district, but in the S.E. it is principally clay. The village of Rhynd is about 3 miles S.E. of Perth, and is situated on a point at the confluence of the rivers Tay and Earn. It is within easy access of the Scottish Central railway, the Edinburgh and Perth railway, and the Tay navigation. This par. is in the presb. of Perth and synod of Perth and Stirling. The stipend of the minister is £234. The church was erected in 1842. There is a parochial school.

RHINEFIELD LODGE, an ext. par. place in the hund. of Lymington, Lymington div. of co. Hants.

RHINEFIELD SANDYS, an ext. par. place in the hund. of Lymington, Lymington div. of co. Hants.

RHINESHARK, a creek on the E. side of Tramore Bay, bar. of Middlethird, co. Waterford, Ireland, 6 miles S.W. of Waterford. It lies between Brownstown and Great Newtown Heads, and is dangerous for shipping.

RHISTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Church-Stoke, co. Salop, 2 miles S.E. of Montgomery.

RHIW, or RHIW-YN-RHÔS, a hmlt. in the par. of Llandrillo-yn-Rhôs, hund. of Isdulas, co. Denbigh, 4 miles N.E. of Conway, and 7 N.W. of Abergele. It is situated near the coast, under Little Orme's Head.

RHIWABON. See RUABON, co. Denbigh.

RHIWAEDOG, or RHYWAEDOG, ISAFON, and UWCHAFON, tnshps. in the par. of Llanfawr, co. Merioneth, 2 miles S.E. of Bala.

RHIWGWREIDDYN, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanwrin, co. Montgomery, 3 miles N.E. of Machynlleth.

RHIWIA, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanbedr-Dyffryn-Clwyd, co. Denbigh, 2 miles N.E. of Ruthin.

RHIWLAS, a hmlt. in the par. of Llandilofawr, co. Carmarthen, 2 miles from Llandilofawr, and 15 N.E. of Carmarthen. It is situated among the hills, near the marble bridge over the river Towey.

RHIWLAS, ISFOEL, and UCHFOEL, tnshps. in the par. of Llansilin, hund. of Chirk, co. Denbigh, 9 miles S. of Llangollen, and 5 S.W. of Oswestry. They are situated in the vale of the Cynlleth.

RHIWRHIAD, a tnshp. in the par. of St. Harmon, hund. of Rhayader, co. Radnor, 4 miles N.E. of Rhayader. It is situated on a branch of the river Wye.

RHIW-WITH-PEN-LLECH, a par. in the hund. of Commitmaen, co. Carnarvon, 9 miles S.W. of Pwllheli, its post town. It is situated on Hells Mouth Bay, under Mynydd-Rhiw Mountain, which attains an elevation of more than 1,000 feet above sea level. The parish is of small extent and wholly agricultural. The substratum contains traces of manganese, which was once worked. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bangor, val. with Llandudwen cur. annexed, £100, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Aelrhiw, is a cruciform structure with a tower. The principal residence is Plâs Rhiw.

RHODE. See ROAD, King's County, Ireland.

RHODE'S GREEN, a hmlt. in the par. of Rothwell, wap. of Lower Agbrigg, West Riding co. York, 5 miles N. of Wakefield, near the river Aire and the Leeds canal.

RHODOGEIDIO, or CEIDIO, a chplry. in the par. of Llanerchymedd, hund. of Menai, co. Anglesey, 20 miles from Bangor, its post town, and 3 N.W. of Llanerchymedd. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Alaw. The substratum is rich in copper. The living is a cur. annexed to the perpet. cur.* of Llanerchymedd, in the dioc. of Bangor. The church, dedicated to St. Ceido, is ancient.

RHONDDU, a river of the co. of Glamorgan, rises under Craig y Llyn, and joins the Taff at Pontyprydd.

RHONHOUSE, a hmlt. in the par. of Kelton, co. Kirkcudbright, Scotland, 1 mile S.W. of Castle Douglas.

RHOS, a parcel in the par. of Bryn-croes, co. Carnarvon, 7 miles S.W. of Nevin.

RHOS, a hmlt. in the hund. of Bromfield, co. Denbigh, 3 miles S.W. of Wrexham, and 21 S.E. of Denbigh. It is situated on a branch of the river Dee, near the line of the Shrewsbury and Chester railway.

RHOS, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanganhafal, co. Denbigh, 3 miles N.E. of Ruthin. It is situated in a hilly district under Moel Farmnall pillar, which stands on a pinnacle of rock 1,845 feet above sea level.

RHOS, a vil. in the par. of Penmark, hund. of Dinas Powis, co. Glamorgan, 9 miles S.W. of Cardiff. In the vicinity are the remains of Gilbert Humfreville's Castle, which was dismantled by Owain Glyndwr.

RHOS. See ROOSE, co. Pembroke.

RHOSAFLO, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanfair-Caereinion, co. Montgomery, 2 miles from Llanfair.

RHOSBEIRIO, an ext. par. place in the hund. of Twrcelyn, co. Anglesey, 4 miles from Almwch, its post town, and 5 N.W. of Llanerchymedd. It is situated near the seashore. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect. of Llaneilian, in the dioc. of Bangor. The church, dedicated to St. Peirio, is of great antiquity.

RHOSCILLY, or ROSILLY, a par. in the hund. of Swansea, co. Glamorgan, 16 miles S.W. of Swansea, its post town, and 6 from Penrice. It is situated on Rhoscilly Bay, near Worms Head, and was given by Fitz Hamon to Reginald de Sulwy. Limestone is abundant. A great portion of the parish is occupied by Rhoscilly Downs, which are devoted to pasture. In stormy weather the sea makes so terrific a noise in rushing up through a cave, designated the "Barometer," that it can be heard at a distance of 7 miles. In the 17th century a Spanish galleon was wrecked here, from which many dollars were picked up in 1833, bearing date 1631, and more have been discovered since that period. It was likewise on this coast that the City of Bristol was wrecked in 1840. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £135. The church is dedicated to St. Mary.

RHOSCOLYN, a par. in the hund. of Menai, co. Anglesey, 4 miles S.E. of Holyhead, its post town, and 15 from Llangefnic. It is situated in the S. half of the Holy Island. In the neighbourhood are ruins of a religious house. The living is a rect.* with the curs. of Llanvair-y-Eubwll and Llanvihangel-yn-howyn, in the dioc. of Bangor, val. £260, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Gwenvaen. The parochial charities produce about £8 per annum. The Calvinistic Methodists have a place of worship.

RHOSCROWTHER, a par. in the hund. of Castlemartin, co. Pembroke, 6 miles from Pembroke, its post town, and 2 S. of Milford. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the Haven, near Angle Bay. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £307, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Decumanus, is an ancient cruciform structure with a tower. The interior of the church contains two or three sculptured figures. The chancel was completely restored and a Sunday-school building erected in 1851.

RHOSFERIG, a hmlt. in the par. of Llanfihangel-Bryn-Pabuan, hund. of Builth, co. Brecknock, 6 miles N.W. of Builth. It is situated on the river Irvon, and was formerly the seat of the Lloyds, to whom it came through Elystan Glodrydd, Prince of Ferregs.

RHOSGÔCH, a tnshp. in the par. of Worthen, co. Montgomery, 6 miles N.E. of Montgomery.

RHOS-LLANERCHRUGOG, a vil. and ecclesiastical district in the par. of Ruabon, co. Denbigh, 2 miles from Ruabon, its post town, and 4 S.W. of Wrexham. The village is considerable. Many of the inhabitants are engaged in the neighbouring coal and iron mines. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. Asaph, val. £300, in the patron. of the crown and bishop alternately. The church is a commodious structure. Near it is Wynnstay, the seat of Sir Watkin Williams Wynn, Bart.

RHOSMAEN, a hmlt. in the par. of Llandilofawr, co. Carmarthen, 2 miles from Llandilofawr, and 15 N.E. of Carmarthen. It is situated amongst the hills, near the new marble bridge over the river Towey.

RHOS-MARKET. See Rose-Market, co. Pembroke.

RHOSTIE, or RHOSDHU, a par. in the upper div. of Ilar hund., co. Cardigan, 6 miles S.E. of Aberystwith, and 9 from Tregaron. The village, which is small and wholly agricultural, is situated near the sea-coast. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £101, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Michael.

RHOS-Y-MAMBICH, a tnshp. in the par. of Llangwym, co. Denbigh, 13 miles S.W. of Ruthin.

RHOS-Y-MEDRE, a chplry. in the par. of Ruabon, co. Denbigh, 3 miles S.W. of Wrexham, and 5 N. of Chirk. It is situated on a branch of the river Dee, near the Ellesmere canal and the line of the Shrewsbury and Chester railway, which has a station at Ruabon. The chplry. comprises the tnshps. of Bodulltin, Kenrick-Christionydd, and Hafod. The village is considerable. Many of the inhabitants are employed in the collieries at Cefn Mawr, and the Acrevair ironworks. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. Asaph, val. £80.

RHUABON. See Ruabon, co. Denbigh.

RHUAL, a demesne in the par. and hund. of Mold, co. Flint, 1 mile N.W. of Mold. It is a spacious mansion of the time of Charles I., containing several portraits by Vandyke and others.

RHUDDLAN, a hund. in the co. of Flint, North Wales, contains the pars. of Caerwys, Cwm, Dymeirchion, Rhuddlan, Ysceifiog, and parts of St. Asaph, Bodfary, and Nannerch.

RHUDDLAN, a par., decayed market town, and parliamentary borough in the above hund., co. Flint, 3 miles N.W. of St. Asaph, and 8 from Denbigh. It is a station on the Vale of Clwyd railway, and steamers go to Liverpool. It is situated at the bridge over the river Clwyd, about two miles from the sea, and is a subport to Chester. The par. contains, besides the borough of Rhuddlan, the bathing-place of Rhyl, which forms a separate chplry., and nine other tnshps. The village itself, though formerly an important borough and market town, is now a decayed place of only one street. It was made a free borough by Edward I., and is still nominally governed by bailiffs and other officers, and is contributory to Flint in returning one member to parliament. The bounds of the borough include parts of the pars. of Rhuddlan, St. Asaph, Cwm, and Dysarth, with a population in 1861 of 1,406, while the population of the whole par. of Rhuddlan was 4,397. It is also a polling-place for the county and borough elections, and a seaport town, having a quay to which small craft can come up. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in agriculture. The bridge was built in 1595 by Bishop Hughes. In the town there still exists part of an old wall, metamorphosed into the gable end of a row of small houses, on which a tablet has been placed by the late Dean of St. Asaph, pointing this out as the building in which Edward I. held a parliament after Llewelyn's death in 1283, when the "Statutes of Rhuddlan" were passed, securing to the principality of Wales its judicial rights and independence: and here the king's son was first proclaimed Prince of Wales. The principal historical interest, however, is attached to the castle, which occupies a striking position overhanging the banks of the river Clwyd, and which, although now a mere shell, has an imposing appearance. It is a red sandstone building of quadrangular form, the walls 17 feet in thickness, and having at two opposite angles a round tower called Twr-y-Brenhin, while the other two corners are occupied by gateways flanked by two towers, each now in ruins. Part of the fosse is still in good condition, as well as a square bastion that defended the escarpment towards the river, and there are remains of a room in which Eleanor of Aragon was born, an ancestress of the Tudors. The castle is said to have been originally built in 1015 by Llewelyn ap Sitsyllt, but was burnt by the English, under Harold, in 1063, and entirely destroyed by Grufydd ap Cynan, Prince of North Wales, but was subsequently rebuilt by the Norman Earls of Chester, and strengthened by Henry II. in 1157; but ten years later was stormed by Owain Gwynedd, and having been retaken by the English, was besieged by Llewelyn ap Jorwerth in 1220, while held by Randal Blundeville; but the latter was relieved by the Duttons, who came to its rescue with a mob of minstrels and strangers collected at Chester fair; and for this good service Dutton was rewarded with the unenviable title of "Magisterium omnium peccatorum et meretricum totius Cæstreshiræ." It was several times visited by Edward I., who held here his parliament, mentioned above, and was given by Edward III. to the Black Prince. In 1399 it was seized by Percy, when betraying Richard II. to Bolingbroke, and was for a short time the resting-place of that unfortunate monarch, when on his way to Flint as a prisoner. In the civil war of Charles I. it was garrisoned for the king, but was taken by Mytton, and dismantled by order of parliament.—The tithes were commuted in 1839. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of St. Asaph, val. £264, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a rude ancient structure, situated near the bridge, with a massive tower and a decorated E. window. It contains a modern monument to Dean Shipley, and tombs of the Conways of Bodryddan. There is also a district church at Rhyl, the living of which is a perpet. cur.,* val. £155. The Baptists, Wesleyans, Independents, and Calvinistic Methodists have places of worship, and there are three daily schools. The parochial charities produce £4 per annum. On the opposite side of the river Clwydis Rhuddlan Marsh, where a base line of the Trigonometrical Survey was measured, and where in 795 a great battle is said to have taken place between the Welsh, under Caradoc, and the Saxons under Offa, King of Mercia, in which the latter were victorious, and the Welsh prince, with all his nobles, slain, as commemorated in the Welsh air of "Morfa Rhuddlan." On the S.E. of the castle are traces of a priory for Black Canons, founded in the 12th century, with the effigies of a knight, now worked into the wall of a neighbouring farmhouse; also at Yspytty Farm was a preceptory of the Knights Templars. Fairs are held on 2nd February, 25th March, and 8th September.

RHUGGATT, a tnshp. in the par. of Corwen, co. Merioneth, 2 miles from Corwen, and 10 N.E. of Bala. It includes the hmlt. of Bonwen. It is situated near the river Dee, under Berwyn Mountain.

RHULEN, or RULEN, a chplry. in the par. of Glascomb, hund. of Colwyn, co. Radnor, 7 miles from Builth, its post town, 6 S.E. of Radnor, and the same distance N.W. of Hay. It is situated on the river Edwy. The land is of a hilly character, and part waste. Near Harpton are the Blaen Edwy sulphur spirings. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic.* of Glascomb, in the dioc. of St. David's.

RHUSNANT, a tnshp. in the par. of Llandysilio, hund. of Deythur, co. Montgomery, 7 miles N.E. of Welshpool, and 6 E. of Llanfyllin. It is in conjunction with the hamlet of Rhantregynwen. The Montgomery canal and the river Vyrnwy pass in the vicinity.

RHUWRRIAD, a tnshp. in the par. of St. Harmon, hund. of Rhayader, co. Radnor, 3 miles N.E. of Rhayador. It is situated on a branch of the river Wye.

RHWNGYDDNYFORDD, a tnshp. in the par. of Llysfaen, hund. of Creaddyn, co. Denbigh, formerly in Carnarvon, 3 miles W. of Abergele, and 6 E. of Conway, on the coast near the Holyhead railway.

RHWNG-Y-DDWY-AFON, a tnshp. in the par. of Caerhûn, co. Carnarvon, 4 miles S. of Conway. It is situated in the vale of the river Conway. Many Roman antiquities have been found in the neighbourhood, and remains of the station Conovium.

RHYDDALT, a tnshp. in the par. of Ruabon, hund. of Bromfield, co. Denbigh, 4 miles N. of Chirk, and 5 S.W. of Wrexham. It is situated near a branch of the river Dee and the Ellesmere canal.

RHYDFAES, a tnshp. in the par. of Llandinam, hund. of Llanidloes, co. Montgomery, 5 miles N.E. of Llanidloes, and 6 S.W. of Newton. It is situated in the vale of the Severn, under Caer Sws camp and the Plinlimmon mountains.

RHYDFENDIGAED, a vil. in the par. of Caron-ys-Clawdd, hund. of Penarth, co. Cardigan, 2 miles from Tregaron. The village, which is considerable, is situated near the river Teife and the Sarn Helen way.

RHYDGOLEY, a hmlt. in the tnshp. and par. of Mold, co. Flint, 2 miles from Mold, its post town, in a valley near the river Alyn and Offa's Dyke.

RHYDGWERN, a hmlt. in the par. of Machen, hund. of Caerphilly, co. Glamorgan, 5 miles E. of Caerphilly. It is situated on the river Romney.

RHYDMANTEG, a vil. in the par. of Llangranog, co. Cardigan, 8 miles N. of Newcastle-in-Emlyn.

RHYDODRIDGE, a vil. in the par of Pendoylon, hund. of Cowbridge, co. Glamorgan, 7 miles W. of Cardiff. It is situated near the river Ely.

RHYDODDRWY, a tnshp. in the par. of Rhuddlan, co. Flint, 1 mile from Rhuddlan, and 3 miles N.W. of St. Asaph. It is situated near the estuary of the Clwyd, about two miles from the sea.

RHYDONEM, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanynys, co. Denbigh, 3 miles N.W. of Ruthin, on the river Clwyd.

RHYDUCHA, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Ismynydd, par. of Llanykil, co. Merioneth, 2 miles from Bala, near Bala lake.

RHYD-Y-BORTHAN, a hmlt. in the par. of Eglwys-Llan, hund. of Caerphilly, co. Glamorgan, 4 miles N.W. of Caerphilly. It is situated on the river Taff, and near the Cardiff and Glamorgan canal. Under Castell Coch is Fynnon Taf spring. The neighbourhood abounds in coal, iron, and tin, which are extensively worked.

RHYDYCROESAU, an ecclesiastical district in the par. and hund. of Oswestry, co. Salop, 3 miles from Oswestry, and 18 N.W. of Shrewsbury. It is situated in the neutral ground between Offa's and Wat's Dykes, on the borders of Denbigh and Salop. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. Asaph, val. £100, in the patron. of the bishop.

RHYDYPENNAN, a vil. in the tnshp. of Tyr-y-Mynach, par. of Llanfihangel Geneur-Glynn, co. Cardigan, 4 miles N. of Aberytswith.

RHYDYRGANE, a vil. in the par. of Llanllawddog, co. Carmarthen, 6 miles N.E. of Carmarthen.

RHYDYRHIW, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanegryn, co. Merioneth, 3 miles N. of Towyn. It is situated at a ford on the river Dysynni.

RHYL, a tnshp. in the par. of Rhuddlan, co. Flint, 2 miles N.W. of Rhuddlan. It is a station on the Chester and Holyhead railway. It is situated in a barren and marshy spot near the mouth of the river Clwyd. At the commencement of the present century it was a mere fishing village, but has been much improved, and is now a watering-place with good hotels, and is much frequented by visitors, principally from Liverpool, and by tourists. It is well lighted with gas, and has a news-room. Snowdon is visible from several points. A large and valuable tract of land, lying between the town and the sea-shore, was formerly a barren marsh, but has been reclaimed, and is protected from the tides by an embankment 8 miles long and 80 feet wide at the base. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of St. Asaph, val. £165, in the patron. of the Vicar of Rhuddlan. The church was erected in 1839. The principal residences are Rhyl Hall and Ty-yn-Rhyl; the latter, built in the 16th century, has in the hall carved woodwork made out of the bedstead of Griffith, the gentleman-usher to Queen Catherine of Aragon.

RHYLLON, a tnshp. in the par. of St. Asapn, hund. of Rhuddlan, co. Flint, 2 miles from St. Asaph, and 209 N.W. of London. It is situated at the confluence of the rivers Clwyd and Elwy, near the bridge.

RHYND. See RHIND, co. Perth, Scotland.

RHYNDWRY CLYDACH, a hmlt. in the par. and hund. of Llangafelach, co. Glamorgan, 6 miles N. of Swansea. The inhabitants are engaged in the collieries and iron-works; from the latter there is a line of rail leading to the canal.

RHYNIE AND ESSIE, a par. in the district of Alford, co. Aberdeen, Scotland. It contains the old pars. of Rhynie and Essie, and the vil. of Muir of Rhynie. It extends about 5 miles in length, and the same in breadth. It is bounded by the pars. of Cabrach, Gartly, Kinnethmont, and Auchindoir. The surface lies at an elevation of about 400 feet above sea-level, but none of the hills are lofty except that of Noth, which rises 1,000 feet above sea-level, and has on its summit a ruined fort. The soil near the base of the hills is of a stony and gravelly character, though very productive; while that of the low grounds is clay and moss. The village of Muir of Rhynie is about 9 miles S.W. of Huntley. It is situated on the river Bogie, under Noth Hill, and near the Gadie's Head. Near the W. base of the Noth are the ruins of Lesmore castle and of Essie-Kirk. The parish is within easy access of the Gartly station on the Great North of Scotland railway. This par. is in the presb. of Strathbogie, and synod of Moray. The stipend of the minister is £158. There are also a Free church and an Independent chapel. There is a parochial school, besides two other schools.

RHYNNS OF GALLOWAY, a peninsula between Luce Bay and Loch Ryan, on the W. side of co. Wigtown, Scotland.

RHYSCOG, a tnshp. in the par. and hund. of Llanfyllin, co. Mongomery, 2 miles from Llanfyllin, and 16 N.W. of Montgomery. It is situated among the hills near the river Vyrnwy.

RHYSGOG, a tnshp. in the par. of Llangollen, hund. of Chirk, co. Denbigh, 2 miles from Llangollen, and 19 S.E. of Denbigh. It is situated in the vale of the river Dee, and near the Ellesmere canal.

RIB, a feeder of the river Lea, rises near Buntingford, co. Herts.

RIBBESFORD, a par. in the lower div. of Doddingtree hund., co. Worcester. It contains the borough of Bewdley (which see), and the village of Ribbesford, once a market town. The parish is situated on the river Severn, and is celebrated for its oak timber. The surface is undulating, and the soil of various qualities. The substratum contains coal, but this mineral is not generally worked. The village of Ribbesford is surrounded by wooded heights. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £360. The church, dedicated to St. Leonard, is an ancient and curious structure, partly Norman, with some old sculptures over the doorway. It contains several ancient monuments. There is also a district church at Far Forest, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £101. The church is erected in a retired situation. The parochial charities, including those of Bewdley, produce about £250 per annum, of which £50 is the endowment of the grammar school. There are several sets of almshouses, partially endowed, and distinguished as Sayer's, Burlton's, and Cooke's.

RIBBLE, The, a river of Yorkshire and Lancashire, supposed to be the Belisama mentioned by Ptolemy. It rises under Whernside, in the West Riding of Yorkshire and receiving in its course of nearly 70 miles the tributary streams of the Hodder, Calder, Darwent, and Douglas, falls into the Irish Sea below Lytham, where there is a tide-light; but the entrance to the port is much obstructed by sands.

RIBBLETON, a tnshp. in the par. of Preston, hund. of Amounderness, co. Lancaster, 1 mile N.E. of Preston.

It is a small and irregularly-built village, situated on the Longridge road, and is wholly agricultural.

RIBBY-WITH-WREA, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Kirkham, its post town, co. Lancaster. It is a station on the Lytham branch of the Preston and Wyre railway. The village is small, and chiefly agricultural. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £90, in the patron. of the Vicar of Kirkham. The church was erected in 1848. There is a free school, with an endowment of £90, bequeathed by Nicholas Sharples in 1716.

RIBCHESTER, a par. in the hunds. of Amounderness and Blackburn, co. Lancaster, 7 miles N.W. of Blackburn, its post town, and 4 from the Longridge station on the Fleetwood, Preston, and West Riding Junction line of railway. It is situated on the river Ribble, and comprises the tnshps. of Dilworth, Dutton, Alston, Hatherall, Longridge, and part of Whalley. Ribchester is of ancient date, being the site of the Roman station Coccium or Rigodunum, where the 20th legion was stationed, and ranked as one of their first cities in Britain. At this place the tide formerly encroached. Many coins, statues, altars, columns of temples, inscriptions, and other antiquities have been found at various times. A portion of the inhabitants are engaged in the cotton mills, and others in the neighbouring quarries of slate and iron. The living is a vic.* with the perpet. cur. of Stidd annexed, in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £175, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Wilfrid, is an ancient stone structure with a square tower containing six bells. It has been enlarged at some distant period. There is also a district church at Longridge, the living of which is a perpet. cur.,* val. £170. The parochial charities produce about £74 per annum, of which £20 goes to the support of the free school, founded by J. Dewhurst in 1771. There is a parochial school for both sexes, also a Sunday-school. John and James Fenton, Esqs., are lords of the manor.

RIBSTON, GREAT, with WALSHFORD, a tnshp. in the par. of Hunsingore, West Riding co. York, 3 miles W. of Hunsingore, and 3 N. of Wetherby. It is situated on a bend of the river Nidd, and includes the hmlts. of Great Ribston and Walshford, both situated on the N. bank of the river. The apple called from this place the "Ribston pippin," was first brought here from France, and the original tree continued to flourish till 1840. The principal residence is Ribston Hall, which has remains of a Knights Templars' preceptory, founded by Robert Lord Ross, and subsequently granted to the Knights Hospitallers. At the Dissolution, its revenue was valued at £265 9*s.* 6*d.*, and the site was given to the Brandons, from whom it passed to the Goodricke family. In connection with the hall is a chapel, dedicated to St. Andrew, and containing monuments of the Goodrickes, who settled here in 1542. In the cemetery attached is the sepulchral monument, with an inscription to the standard-bearer of the 9th Roman legion, which was found at York in 1688. The whole of this property was purchased by Joseph Dent in 1840.

RIBTON, LITTLE, a tnshp. in the pars. of Spofforth and Hunsingore, West Riding co. York, half a mile W. of Great Ribston, and 3 N.W. of Wetherby. The township, which is of small extent and wholly agricultural, is mostly the property of the Earl of Harewood and Joseph Dent, Esq.

RIBTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Bridekirk, ward of Allerdale-below-Derwent, co. Cumberland, 6 miles W. of Cockermouth, and 3 N.E. of Workington. It is situated on the N. bank of the river Derwent, and has an ancient chapel, which was dedicated to St. Lawrence, but is now in ruins.

RIBY, a par. in the E. div. of Yarborough wap., parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 7 miles S.W. of Great Grimsby, its post town, and 3 S. of Stallingborough. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. It is situated on the Wolds, and is much scattered. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £130. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £80. The church, dedicated to St. Edmund, is an ancient edifice with a square tower containing a clock and three bells. The interior of the church contains several inscriptions to the Tomline family. In 1848 almshouses and a school for both sexes were erected at the expense of G. Tomline, Esq., by whom they are entirely supported. Riby Hall, the principal residence, is situated in the midst of plantations. It was formerly the seat of the ancient family of Tomline, the last descendant of which bequeathed his estates and name to the late Dr. Pretyman, Bishop of Lincoln, in 1803.

RICCALL, a par. partly in the lib. of St. Peter's, and partly in the wap. of Ouse, East Riding co. York, 10 miles S.E. of York, its post-town, 3½ N. of Escrick, and 5 N.W. of Selby. The village, which is considerable and well built, is situated on the river Ouse, and is wholly agricultural. The soil is rich sand and warp upon a subsoil of clay. The land is partly in common, but the remainder is in a good state of cultivation, two-thirds being arable and one-third pasture, with about 40 acres of orchards and gardens. There are two manors, one belonging to the Bishop of Ripon, and the other to the Prebendary of Riccall, which has for more than two centuries been leased to the Wormley and Richardson families. The appropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £508 10*s., and the vicarial for £140. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of York, val. £300, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient stone structure with a square embattled tower containing a clock and three bells. There are several monuments to the Richardson and Wormsley families. The parochial charities produce about £31 per annum. There is a parochial school for both sexes, partly supported by an endowment of £6. Riccall Hall, the seat of the Richardson family, is the principal residence. It is of red brick, and contains a collection of paintings. Wheel Hall, anciently the episcopal palace and the prebendal manor-house, has been converted into farmhouses. On the common are the earthworks, called Daneshill, which were thrown up by the Danes and Northmen, who landed here in 1060, under Harold Harfager, king of Norway, upon the invitation of Tosti, Earl of Northumberland, but were defeated by Harold at Stanford bridge, when Harfager and Tosti were both slain.

RICCARTON, a hmlt. in the par. and co. of Linlithgow, Scotland, 2 miles S.E. of Linlithgow, near Riccarton water.

RICCARTON, a par. in the district of Kyle, co. Ayr, Scotland. It contains the vil. of its own name, also the vils. of Hurlford and Sornhill. It extends about 8 miles in length from W. to E., with a breadth of about 2 miles, and is bounded by the pars. of Kilmarnock, Galston, Craigie, Symington, and Dundonald. The surface is moderately flat, the highest elevation being attained towards the S. and E., when it gently swells into a ridge of hills, rising above 550 feet above sea-level. The scenery includes the banks of the Cessnock. An extensive prospect toward the N. and W. is obtained from the elevated grounds. The soil is chiefly of a clayey nature. There are brick and tile kilns. The coal measures are very productive, and limestone is worked to a great extent. Weaving and cotton printing are carried on. The parish is traversed by three roads forking southward, and by the Glasgow and South Western railway, which has a station at Hurlford. This par. is in the presb. of Ayr, and synod of Ayr and Glasgow. The stipend of the minister is £277. The church, erected in 1823, is situated on an eminence. There are also a preaching station, an adventure school, a private school for girls, and an endowed Church of Scotland school situated at Hurlford. In this parish was the residence of the venerable Sir Ronald Crawford, the maternal uncle of Wallace, who frequently retired here after performing many of his daring exploits before he openly unfurled his country's banner. The town of Riccarton is about a mile S. of Kilmarnock, and is partly included within the parliamentary limits of that borough.

It is situated on the rivers Irvine and Cessnock, and was made a burgh of barony in 1638. It formed part of Craigie till 1648, and was designated Richardstown, after Wallace's brother Richard, who had a seat at Yardsides. It consists mainly of one long street almost connecting it with the town of Kilmarnock, of which it may be considered a suburb. The principal seats are Caprington Castle, Treesbank, Shawhill, Dollars, Bellfield, and Milrig.

RICHARD, ASKHAM. See ASKHAM - RICHARD, Ainsty of York.

RICHARD'S CASTLE, a par. partly in the lower div. of Munslow hund. co. Salop, and partly in the hund. of Wolphy, co. Hereford, 4 miles S.W. of Ludlow, its post town, and 3 from the Woofferton railway station. It comprises the tnshps. of Woofferton, Overton, Batchcott, and Moor. The village, which is chiefly agricultural, was formerly a market town under the Mortimers by grant from King John, but both the market and fair have long been disused. It is situated on the old road from Ludlow to Leominster, near the Kington canal, which passes to the S.E. of the village. Here are the ruins of the keep and walls of a castle erected prior to the Conquest by Richard Scrope. It was near this spot that Colonel Birch routed the Royalists in 1645. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £650, and there are 109½ acres of glebe. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £745, in the patron. of the Bishop of Worcester. The church, dedicated to St. Bartholomew, has a detached tower, the spire of which has been burnt down. There are some stained windows. A school is supported by the rector. In this parish is a spring, called Boney-well, from the circumstance that numerous small fish or frog bones are cast up by its waters in spring and autumn.

RICHARDSTOWN, a par. in the bar. of Ardee, co. Louth, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2½ miles E. of Ardee, its post town. The surface extends along the S. bank of the river Dee, and is traversed by the road from Ardee to Annagasson. The soil is mostly good. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Armagh, val. with Stabannon, £162, in the patron. of the Vicars-Choral of St. Patrick's Deanery. In the Roman Catholic arrangement this place is united to Dunleer. Richardstown Castle, still used as a residence, is a place of considerable antiquity. Near the village are ruins of a chapel and a holy well.

RICHARDSTOWN, a hmlt. in the bar. of Middlethird, co. Tipperary, Ireland, 7 miles S.E. of Killenaule.

RICHBOROUGH CASTLE, a Roman ruin in the par. of Ash-near-Sandwich, co. Kent, 2 miles N.W. of Sandwich, and 3 E. of Wingham. It is situated on a hill near the river Stour, and was built by the Romans to command the port of Rhitupæ or Rutupiæ, their usual landing-place on this coast. The northern wall, which is the most perfect part of the ruin, is 560 feet long by 23 feet high, and 11 feet thick, with remains of towers and gateways, and the foundations of an amphitheatre 210 feet in diameter.

RICHHILL, a post town in the par. of Kilmore, bar. of West O'Neilland, co. Armagh, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 4 miles N.E. of Armagh, and 64 N.W. of Dublin. It is a station on the Belfast and Armagh railway. The town is situated on the road from Armagh to Belfast, and on the river Tallwater. It consists of two chief thoroughfares, containing some well-built houses, and formerly enjoyed an important linen trade, which has declined of late. There are meeting-houses for Presbyterians, Friends, and Wesleyans, likewise an endowed school and a dispensary. Castle Dillon and Hockly Lodge are in the neighbourhood.

RICHMOND, a par. and flourishing town in the first div. of Kingston hund., co. Surrey, 9 miles from Hyde Park Corner, 12 W.S.W. of St. Paul's, London, by road, or 16½ by the river Thames, and 10 by the Windsor section of the London and South-Western railway, which has a station here. It anciently formed part of the parish of Kingston, when it was called Sheen, or West Sheen, and was for a long period a royal residence under the Plantagenet kings. Edward III. died here, and Chaucer was surveyor of the works in the reign of Richard II. Henry V. considerably added to the beauty of the place, and Henry VII. rebuilt the village after it had been destroyed by fire in 1498, and willed it to be hereafter called after his own title. This last monarch entertained King Philip, of Spain, and died here a few years after having rebuilt the royal palace. Soon after his accession, Henry VIII. held a tournament here, and subsequently entertained the Emperor Charles V. at Richmond palace. The king afterwards gave it to Cardinal Wolsey, and subsequently to Anne of Cleves, from whom it came to Edward VI. The Princess Elizabeth was detained for some time a prisoner here by order of her sister, Queen Mary, and took such an affection for the place that she frequently visited it after she became queen, and died here in 1603. In the following reign it was given to Prince Henry, and afterwards to the king's second son, Prince Charles, who enclosed the Great Park, of upwards of 2,200 acres, or 8 miles round, for hunting. This is now popularly called Richmond Park. The palace was almost wholly destroyed by the parliamentary troops, and what was left, with the exception of a few offices still standing, was pulled down in the following century. The site has since been built upon.—Richmond is situated on the right bank of the river Thames, and is one of the prettiest places in the immediate vicinity of the metropolis. The population in 1851 was 9,065, with 1,534 inhabited houses, which in 1861 had increased to 10,926, with 1,841 inhabited houses for the parish, but 7,423 inhabitants within the limits of the town. The town is well built, supplied with water, and lighted with gas. There are many dwellings and seats in the neighbourhood, such as the Duke of Buccleuch's, Lords Onslow's, Sidmouth's, Mount Edgcumbe's, Fitzwilliam's, and others. Earl Russell lives at Pembroke Lodge, close to the entrance of the park. There are a few malthouses and breweries, and some market gardens and nursery grounds. The "Star and Garter" hotel has lately passed into the hands of a Limited Liability Company, who have enlarged it to more than twice its original size; it has a great reputation, and is a favourite place of resort, more especially for the "upper ten thousand." There is a stone bridge of five arches across the Thames, which connects Richmond with Twickenham. It was completed in 1777, and cost upwards of £25,000. The Wesleyan Theological Institution on Richmond Hill is a collegiate establishment for the education of candidates for the ministry; it is in the Tudor style of architecture, with tower and wings, and is 248 feet long by 65 wide. There are also a literary institution, a mechanics' institute, savings-bank, and a theatre, built in 1720; likewise bath rooms, a parochial library and reading-room.—Its Poor-law Union comprises Barnes, Kew, Mortlake, Petersham, and Richmond, with an area of 5,200 acres, and the poorhouse has 200 inmates. There are also several almshouses, which include Duppa's, Hickey's, Houblon's, and Michell's. The old park adjoining the Green is still the abode of royalty. At the White Lodge, which was given by George III. to Lord Sidmouth, the Prince of Wales used to reside before his marriage some time during the year; it is now similarly occupied by the Duke of Edinburgh, the second son of Queen Victoria. There are large herds of deer in the park, but the Old Deer Park, adjoining the gardens, is now let out for grazing. The observatory, erected by Sir William Chambers in 1769, is still here. In 1855, a cemetery was laid out S.E. of the town. Sir Joshua Reynolds lived in a house on Richmond Hill. Gainsborough, Collins, and Thomson were also residents. The board of guardians and the magistrates meet every Saturday. Omnibuses and trains run frequently to London, and likewise steamers during the summer season. Richmond is the headquarters of the First Royal Surrey Militia.—The living is a vic.* with the cur. of St. Matthias annexed, in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £500, in the patron. of King's College, Cambridge.

The church, which is dedicated to St. Mary Magdalene, is of ancient date, though the greater part has been renovated and enlarged. There are monuments to the poet Thomson, Kean the tragedian, Mrs. Yates the actress, Edward Gibson the painter, Lord Brounker, Dr. Moore, and other celebrities. There is also the district church of St. John's, the living of which is a perpet. cur.,* val. £300. St. Matthias, built in 1858 by Gilbert Scott, architect, is a stone edifice with a spire 195 feet high; it is a chapel-of-ease to the parish church. There are places of worship for Baptists, Independents, and Wesleyans; the Roman Catholics have likewise a chapel. There are several schools, National, industrial, infant, and Roman Catholic.

RICHMOND, a par., market town, municipal and parliamentary borough in the wap. of West Gilling, North Riding co. York, 44 miles N.W. of York, and 233 N.W. of London by road, or 240 by the Great Northern, and 268 by the London and North-Western railways. It is situated on elevated ground near the river Swale. It is supposed to have derived its name from Rich-mont, on account of its natural attractions, and appears to have been a place of considerable importance at the time of the Norman conquest, for William I. gave the title of Earl of Richmond to his kinsman, Alan Rufus, son of Hoel, Count of Bretagne, on his obtaining the estates of the Saxon earl, Edwin, which then comprised 200 manors, called Richmondshire, extending over nearly a third of the North Riding of Yorkshire. This Alan Rufus is generally believed to have rebuilt the town, as well as the castle. When Henry VII. came to the throne, these possessions reverted to the crown. Henry VIII. gave it to his natural son Henry, by a daughter of Sir John Blount, and more than a century later King Charles II. gave the title to the Lennoxes, with whose descendants it still remains. The castle has long been in ruins, though the Norman keep with pinnacled corner towers is still intact, the walls of which are upwards of 100 feet high and 11 feet thick. At the S.E. corner is the ruin of a smaller tower, beneath which is a dungeon 15 feet deep, and at the S.W. corner is a tower of considerable height. The castle originally covered five acres, and was built on almost a perpendicular rock, 100 feet above the level of the river Swale. This castle, from the advantages of its position and its complete fortifications, was considered inaccessible, and without a rival either in extent or strength. The North York Rifles have converted a portion of the castle into a store for arms, and several houses in the Gothic style have been built for the convenience of the staff. Until about three centuries after the Norman conquest, Richmond is generally supposed to have carried on a good trade, but little is now done except in agricultural produce, and in retail trade for the supply of the agricultural district in the midst of which it is situated. The want of water communication, owing to the natural obstructions of the river Swale, and the privileges granted by various sovereigns to neighbouring towns, have, no doubt, contributed to this result. The only manufactories are a large paper-mill, and an iron and brass foundry. There are several corn-mills, and tanning is carried on to a small extent.—Queen Elizabeth granted the first charter to the town, and under the Municipal Corporations Act it is governed by a mayor, who is also returning officer, four aldermen, and twelve councillors, with the style of "mayor and aldermen of the borough of Richmond." The population in 1851 was 4,106, with 843 inhabited houses, which in 1861 had increased to 4,290, with 863 inhabited houses, but the parliamentary bounds are rather more extensive, comprising 5,734 inhabitants. It returns two members to parliament, and is also a polling-place for the North Riding.—The town is lighted with gas, and has a good supply of water. Several houses have been erected of late, and many landed proprietors and county families reside in the environs, whose seats add greatly to the attractions of the place. The principal public buildings are the town-hall, situated in the market-place, containing an assembly room and court room, where the business of the town is chiefly transacted, and where quarter and petty sessions are held as well for the borough as for the West Gilling division of the North Riding; the borough gaol, an ancient stone edifice situated in Newbeggin; the savings-bank, situated in Low Channel, contains, besides the bank offices, the library of the Richmond scientific society, the mechanics' institute, and the subscription newsrooms; the union poorhouse is capable of accommodating 120 paupers, where the board of guardians meet every Saturday; the market-house was built at the expense of the corporation in 1854, for butter and poultry, the corn market being held in the market-place adjoining; there are also two branch banks, gas and water works, and several insurance agencies. The railway station and the bridge over the Swale are handsome structures, the latter is built of stone and has three arches.—A county court is held monthly, also a court of record for the borough. The Richmond Poor-law Union comprises 41 parishes and tnshps. The Richmond and Ripon Chronicle is published on Saturday.—The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £470, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient stone structure, principally Gothic, but with traces of Norman architecture; it has been enlarged at different times, and has a square tower containing six bells. There is a curious old monument to the Hutton family. There is also a district church, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £120. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, is an old structure, with a tower containing one bell; it has been partially restored, and the N. aisle, in which until recently the consistory court of the Archdeaconry of Richmond was held, has been added to the church. The Roman Catholic chapel was built in 1811 by Sir J. Lawson, and enlarged in 1855; the Independents and Wesleyans have each a place of worship. The free grammar school was founded and endowed in the reign of Queen Elizabeth, by whom it was incorporated, and has two scholarships at Trinity College, Cambridge; the present building was erected in 1850, and has an income of nearly £300 per annum. There are also the corporation school, built in 1851, National, Sunday, and infant schools.—Several of the resident gentry have training stables near the race-course, which is about a mile from the town, and where there is a commodious grand stand. The principal antiquities are the ruins of the castle above described, now the property of the Duke of Richmond, the remains of the Grey Friars' monastery, founded in 1258 by Ralph Fitz-Randal, and situated at the back of Frenchgate, consisting of a steeple, now crumbling to decay; and about a mile from the town, some remains of the monastery of St. Martin and of the abbey of St. Agatha, on the N. bank of the river in the adjoining parish of Easby. Greathead, the inventor of the life-boat, was a native. In the neighbourhood of Richmond, Roman coins have been found. Saturday is market day for corn and provisions, &c., and a fortnightly market for cattle has been held since 1852. There are several fairs for pedlary, and a large stock and cattle fair held on the 2nd and 3rd of November. Races take place annually in the beginning of October.

RICHMOND, a hmlt. in the par. of Handsworth, West Riding co. York, 4 miles E. of Sheffield.

RICHMOND, a vil. in the bar. of Coolock, co. Dublin, Ireland, 2 miles from Dublin, of which it is a suburb. It is situated on the river Tolka.

RICHMOND FEE, a part of the barony of Kendal, co. Westmoreland.

RICHMOND HARBOUR, a creek in the bar. and co. of Longford, Ireland. It is situated near the confluence of the river Camlin with the Shannon.

RICKERBY, a tnshp. in the par. of Stanwix, ward of Eskdale, co. Cumberland, 2 miles N.E. of Carlisle, on the river Eden. Rickerby Hall is the principal residence.

RICKERGATE, a tnshp. in the par. of St. Mary, city of Carlisle, co Cumberland.

RICKERSCOTE, a tnshp. in the par. of Castle-Church, co. Stafford, 2 miles S.E. of Stafford. It is situated on the Grand Junction railway, and near the confluence of the rivers Penk and Stow, and is distinguished for its spa. The Worcester canal passes near this township. The lowlands, which are mostly in pasturage, have been much improved by drainage and embankments.

RICKHAM, a hmlt. in the par. of Portlemouth, co. Devon, 4 miles S.E. of Kingsbridge. It is a coast-guard station.

RICKINGHALL-INFERIOR, a par. in the hund. of Blackbourn, co. Suffolk, 7 miles S.W. of Diss, 5 W. of Mellis railway station, and a quarter of a mile S.W. of Botesdale, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. The road from Bury St. Edmund's to Norwich runs through the village. The tithes of the two parishes, Inferior and Superior, have been commuted for a rent-charge of £1,040; and the glebe contains 24 acres. The living is a rect.* consolidated with that of Rickinghall-Superior, in the dioc. of Norwich, joint val. £850. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient edifice with a circular tower, the upper part of which is octagonal. The parochial charities produce about £33 per annum. There is a National school. The Baptists and Wesleyans have each a place of worship. G. H. Wilson, Esq., is lord of the manor.

RICKINGHALL-SUPERIOR, a par. in the hund. of Hartismere, co. Suffolk, 7 miles S.W. of Diss, 8 N.E. of Ixworth, and three-quarters of a mile S.W. of Botesdale, its post town. The village, which is situated on the road from Norwich to Bury St. Edmund's, is wholly agricultural. The glebe consists of 15 acres. The living is a rect. annexed to that of Rickinghall-Inferior, in the dioc. of Norwich, joint val. £850. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure with a square embattled tower, and has a remarkable S. porch. The parochial charities produce about £33 per annum. G. H. Wilson, Esq., is lord of the manor. There is a National school for girls.

RICKLING, a par. in the hund. of Uttlesford, co. Essex, 6 miles N. of Bishop's Stortford, its post town, and 2½ S.W. of Newport. The village is situated near the Cambridge railway, and on the road to Newmarket. It is chiefly agricultural. Rickling once belonged to King Harold. The land is partly in common and pasture, but the greater part is arable. The great tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £275, with a glebe of 17 acres, and the vicarial for £124, with a glebe of 6 acres. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £168, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to All Saints, has a tower containing five bells. It contains several interesting monuments. The parochial charities produce about £5 per annum. There is a National school. The Independents have a place of worship. Rickling Hall, which is of great antiquity, is a quadrangular embattled structure, with a lofty gateway tower. Colonel Inglis is lord of the manor.

RICKMANSWORTH, a par. and post town in the hund. of Cashio, or lib. of St. Alban's, co. Herts, 4 miles S.W. of Watford, and 18 N.W. of London. It is a station on a branch line of the North Western railway. It is situated on the Grand Junction canal, at the confluence of the rivers Chess and Gade with the Colne. The par., which is very extensive, comprises, besides the town of Rickmansworth, the hmlts. of Batchworth, Mill End, Croxley Green, and the chplries. of Chorley Wood and West Hyde. Rickmansworth was formerley called Richmereswearth or Rykemereswearth, signifying "the rich-moor meadow," and was given by King Offa of Mercia to St. Alban's abbey, which retained it till the Dissolution, after which it was held by Bishops Ridley and Bonner. In the reign of Elizabeth it reverted to the crown, and ultimately passed into the hands of the Fotherleys and Whitfields. The town, which is well built, and was formerly a market town, is lighted with gas, and contains many villas. Its proximity to London renders it a desirable place of residence. A portion of the inhabitants are engaged in straw-plaiting, and in the manufacture of horsehair seating for chairs. There are several silk, paper, and corn mills; also an extensive brewery. A singular echo occurs at Warren Hill. The rivers in the vicinity are noted for trout, and the town is much resorted to by anglers. The cultivation of watercresses for the London market is extensively carried on. The great tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £1,385, and the vicarial for £600, besides a glebe of 108 acres, valued at £200. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £510, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has been recently rebuilt, with the exception of its embattled tower. It has a painted E. window of ancient glass, formerly belonging to the church of St. John at Rouen, but presented by the late Vicar of Rickmansworth. It contains tombs of Lord Cary, the Fotherleys, Coltes, Saltes, and Earles of Moor House; also a brass of T. Day, bearing date 1585. The register dates from 1571. In addition to the parish church are the following district churches, viz. St. Thomas's at West Hyde, and Christ Church at Chorley Wood, the livings of which are perpet. curs., val. £100 and £40 respectively. The parochial charities produce about £66 per annum, besides Fotherley's almshouses. There are National and infant schools. The Baptists and Wesleyans have each a place of worship. Moor Park, which is the principal residence, was formerly the seat of Cardinal Wolsey and of the Duke of Monmouth. There is a cemetery in the neighbourhood. Fairs for cattle are held on the 20th July and 24th November, and a statute fair on the Saturday prior to the third Monday in September.

RIDDELLS QUARTER, a tnshp. in the par. of Long Horsley, W. div. of Morpeth ward, co. Northumberland, 6 miles N.W. of Morpeth. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the collieries and lime pits.

RIDDINGS-WITH-IRONVILLE, a manufacturing and market town and ecclesiastical district in the par. of Alfreton, hund. of Scarsdale, co. Derby, 2½ miles S.E. of Alfreton, its post town. It is situated near Butterley Park. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the iron and coal mines. In the town are extensive iron-works, forges, and furnaces, for smelting iron-ore. The new line of road from Manchester to Nottingham, and a branch of the Cromford canal, pass through this place, which has rapidly increased within the last half-century. The population in 1861 was 4,145. The living is a perpet. cur.* with the cur. of Somercotes annexed, in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £150, in the patron. of the Vicar of Alfreton. The church, dedicated to St. James, was erected in 1830, the cost of which was partly defrayed by subscription, and partly by the parliamentary commissioners. There are places of worship for Baptists, Independents, and Wesleyans.

RIDDLESDEN, a hmlt. in the par. of Bingley, wap. of Upper Skyrack, West Riding co. York, 2 miles from Bingley, and 31 S.W. of York. It is situated on the Leeds and Liverpool canal, near the river Aire.

RIDDLESWORTH, a par. in the hund. of Guilt-Cross, co. Norfolk, 6 miles E. of Thetford, its post town, and 6 S. of the Harling Road railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the border of Suffolk, near the rivers Waveney and Little Ouse. It is wholly agricultural. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £116, and the glebe comprises 15 acres. The living is a rect.* with that of Gasthorpe united, in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £212. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient structure with an embattled tower. In the chancel is a monument to Sir D. Drury. Riddlesworth Hall, the principal residence, is situated in an extensive park.

RIDDOCK, a shoal between Stromness and Graemsay, West Orkney Islands, coast of Scotland.

RIDGACRE, a tnshp. in the par. of Halesowen, hund. of Brimstree, co. Worcester, 4 miles E. of Stourbridge, and 8 S.W. of Birmingham. The village, which is considerable, is situated in the vale of the river Stour, near the Dudley canal. Some of the inhabitants are engaged in the collieries and iron mines.

RIDGE, a par. in the hund. of Cashio, or lib. of St. Alban's, co. Herts, 3 miles N.W. of Chipping Barnet, its post town, and 5½ S.W. of Hatfield. The village, which is of small extent, lies about a mile off the road from Barnet to St. Alban's. It is wholly agricultural. The soil consists in the hilly parts of a strong clay, but in the lower grounds of a loamy earth, resting on chalk and gravel. The land is chiefly in pasture, and is watered by the river Colne. The great tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £323 12*s., and the vicarial for one of £242. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £190. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure, with a tower containing three bells. The register dates from 1558. There are five almshouses. The National school at South Mimms is frequented by the children of this parish. The Countess of Caledon is lady of the manor, and impropriator of the great tithes. Here was once a religious house attached to the Abbey of St. Alban's, but now converted into a private residence.

RIDGE, a tythg. in the par. of Chilmark, hund. of Dunworth, co. Wilts, 1½ mile S.W. of Chilmark.

RIDGES, a tnshp. in the par. of Ellesmere, co. Salop, 3 miles S.W. of Ellesmere, near the Ellesmere canal.

RIDGEWAY, an ecclesiastical district in the par. of Eckington, hund. of Scarsdale, co. Derby, 7 miles N. of Chesterfield, and 3 N.E. of Dronfield. It comprises the tnshps. of Ridgeway and Troway. The substratum abounds in coal, which is partially worked. In the village is a manufactory for scythes and sickles. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £300, in the patron. of the Rector of Eckington. The church, erected in 1840 at a cost of £2,200, has a small tower at the E. end. There is a chapel for Wesleyans, also a National school, built in 1837.

RIDGHILL, a tythg. in the par. of Winford, co. Somerset, 6 miles S.W. of Bristol. It is a small but neatly-built village. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agricultural pursuits.

RIDGMONT, or RIDGMOUNT, a par. in the hund. of Redbornstoke, co. Bedford, 2 miles N.E. of Woburn, its post town. The village, which is chiefly agricultural, is situated on the road to Bedford, and on the North Western railway. The parish is said to have derived its present name from the red colour of the sandy hill on which formerly stood a castle called Ruggemount, or Rougemount. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Enclosure Act, in 1796. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £84. The church is dedicated to All Saints. The parochial charities produce about £53 per annum. There is a place of worship for Baptists; also a National school for both sexes. Brogborough House, which is the principal residence, is a square brick-built mansion, situated on rising ground.

RIDGMONT, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Burstwick-cum-Skeckling, wap. of South Holderness, East Riding co. York, 3 miles E. of Heydon.

RIDGWAY, a hmlt. in the par. of Smeeth, hund. of Bircholt Barony, lathe of Shipway, co. Kent, 4 miles S.E. of Ashford.

RIDGWELL, or REDGEWELL, a par. in the hund. of Hinckford, co. Essex, 9 miles N.W. of Halstead, its post town, 5 N.W. of Castle Hedingham, and 4 S.W. of Clare. The village, which is a place of ancient date, is situated on the road to Cambridge, and had formerly a market. It is supposed to have been a Roman station on the Roman Way, Via Devana, where many Roman antiquities, with portions of a Roman villa, were discovered in 1794. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. In this parish is also the hamlet of Ridgwell-Norton, consisting of a few houses situated on a green. The great tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £420, and the vicarial for one of £136. There are besides 37 acres of impropriate glebe, and 5½ of vicarial. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £178, in the patron. of Catherine Hall, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to St. Lawrence, has a square embattled tower containing five bells. There is a spring near the chancel, which with the Ridgway gives name to the village. The Independents and Baptists have each a place of worship.

RIDING, a tnshp. in the par. of Bywell St. Andrew, E. div. of Tindale ward, co. Northumberland, 6 miles S.E. of Hexham, and a quarter of a mile from Riding Mill. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the Roman Way, Watling Street, and near Newcastle railway. The bridge over the river Tyne was erected in 1822 across the dangerous ford of Dipton Burn. Riding House is the principal residence.

RIDLEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Bunbury, first div. of the hund. of Eddisbury, co. Chester, 6 miles N.W. of Nantwich, and 3 S.W. of Bunbury. It was the birthplace, in 1540, of Lord Chancellor Egerton, who was created by James I. Viscount Brackley. Ridley Hall is the principal residence. Lord Cottenham is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

RIDLEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Holt, hund. of Bromfield, co. Denbigh, 6 miles N.E. of Wrexham, in the vale of the river Dee, opposite Farndon.

RIDLEY, a par. in the hund. of Axton, lathe of Sutton-at-Hone, co. Kent, 8 miles S.E. of Dartford, and 4 S.W. of Meopham railway station. Wrotham is its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. The land is partly in hop grounds. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £174 8*s., and there are 30 acres of glebe. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £133. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient structure containing one bell. The parochial charities produce about £3 per annum. There is a small free school.

RIDLEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Haltwhistle, W. div. of Tindale ward, co. Northumberland, 5 miles S.E. of Haltwhistle, and 3 W. of Haydon Bridge. It is situated near the Newcastle and Carlisle railway, at the confluence of the river Allen with the South Tyne. Ridley Hall, which is still the principal residence, was formerly the seat of the Ridley and Lowes families. In the vicinity are the ruins of Bebingham chapel. Sir E. Blackett, Bart., is lord of the manor.

RIDLEY WATER, a river of the co. of Northumberland, rises under the Cheviots, and joins the Coquet at Lynbridge.

RIDLINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Tunstead, co. Norfolk, 4½ miles N.E. of North Walsham, and 4 from Mundesley. The village, which is of small extent, is situated near the coast, and is wholly agricultural. The houses are much scattered. The land is chiefly arable. The living is a rect.* with the vic. of East Ruston united, in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £208. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, has a square embattled tower, surmounted by four figures, representing the Evangelists, as pinnacles. The poor have the right of using the common for fuel and pasturage.

RIDLINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Martinsley, co. Rutland, 3¼ miles N.W. of Uppingham, its post town, and 2 S.W. of the Manton railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated within the range of Leighfield Forest, and is wholly agricultural. Ridlington is mentioned as Redlictun in Domesday Book, and belonged to Queen Editha. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £353, and the glebe contains 46 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £344. The church, dedicated to SS. Mary and Andrew, is an ancient structure with a square tower covered in ivy, and containing three bells. The interior of the church contains monuments of the Harringtons, through whom the manor passed to the Earl of Gainsborough. The parochial charities produce about £5 per annum.

RIDON, a hmlt. in the par. of St. Decuman's, co. Somerset, near Watchet.

RIDWARE, HAMSTALL. See HAMSTALL-RIDWARE co. Stafford.

RIDWARE, MAVESYN. See MAVESYN-RIDWARE, co. Stafford.

RIDWARE, PIPE, a par. in the N. div. of Offlow hund., co. Stafford, 6 miles N. of Lichfield, and 4½ E. of Rugeley, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the N. side of the river Trent, and near the Grand Trunk canal. It is much scattered, and is wholly agricultural. The soil is of a loamy nature, with strong clay subsoil. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £45, besides a rent-charge of £90 payable to the prebendary of Alrewas. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £46, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. James, has a turret containing two bells. The parochial charities produce about £5 per annum. Lord Leigh is lord of the manor and chief landowner.

RIESS, a vil. in the par. of Wick, co. Caithness, Scotland, 2 miles from Wick. It is situated on Sinclair Bay, near the estuary of the river Wick, which here forms a good harbour.

RIGDON, a shoal off the coast of Jersey, Channel Islands, 3 miles W. of Cape Grosnez.

RIGG-BAY, a harbour on the coast of co. Wigtown, Scotland, 3 miles E. of Sorbie.

RIGGEND, a vil. in the par. of New Monkland, co. Lanark, Scotland, 2 miles N. of Airdrie.

RIGHTBOLT, a hmlt. in the par. of Gosberton, wap. of Kirton, co. Lincoln, 4 miles N.W. of Spalding. It is situated near the river Risegate Eau, and the line of the Great Northern railway.

RIGSBY, a par. in the Wold div. of Calceworth hund., parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 2 miles S.W. of Alford railway station, its post town, and 6 N.E. of Spilsby. The village, which is of small extent, is chiefly agricultural. The par. comprises the hmlt. of Ailby. Chalk, which underlies the soil, is quarried for agricultural purposes. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £223. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic. of Alford, in the dioc. of Lincoln. The church, dedicated to St. James, has a turret containing one bell. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum. This parish has the privilege of sending scholars to Alford free grammar school. The Right Hon. R. A. C. N. Hamilton is lord of the manor.

RIGTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Bardsey, lower div. of Skyrack wap., West Riding co. York, 4 miles S.W. of Wetherby. It is joined with Bardsey to form a tnshp.

RIGTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Kirkby-Overblow, upper div. of Claro wap., West Riding co. York, 6 miles N.E. of Otley. The village, which is wholly agricultural, is situated near the North-Eastern railway. It forms part of Knaresborough Honour, and includes the hmlt. of Brackenfoot. There is a commodious school, also a place of worship for Wesleyan Methodists. The Earl of Harewood is lord of the manor.

RIGWM, a hmlt. in the par. of Llanboidy, co. Carmarthen, 9 miles N.W. of Laugharne.

RILLINGTON, a par. and tnshp. in the wap. of Buckrose, East Riding co. York, 5 miles N.E. of New Malton, its post town, 6½ from Pickering, and three quarters of a mile from the station on the Malton and Scarborough line of railway. The parish is bounded on the N. by the navigable river Derwent. The village is situated near the Scarborough railway, and on the old high road leading from Scarborough to York. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture, about three-fourths of the land being arable, and the rest pasture. The soil is of a sandy and loamy description, upon a subsoil of gravel. The par. comprises the vil. of Scampston. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of York, val. £256. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, has a square embattled tower containing two bells. There is also a district church at Scampston, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £80, in the patron. of the Vicar of Rillington. There is a National school for both sexes, and a Sunday-school is held within the same building. The Wesleyans, Independents, and Primitive Methodists have each a place of worship. There is also a newsroom recently opened.

RILSTON, or RYLSTONE, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Burnsall, E. div. of Staincliff wap., West Riding co. York, 4½ miles N. of Skipton, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. The soil is rich, and the lands principally meadow and pasture. The living is a cur. annexed to that of Burnsall, in the dioc. of Ripon. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, was formerly the private chapel of the Norton family, of Norton Tower. The register dates from 1559. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum.

RIMMINGTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Gisburn, W. div. of Staincliff wap., West Riding co. York, 5 miles N.E. of Clitheroe, and 13 N.W. of Settle. The village, which is small, is situated on a branch of the river Ribble, and is wholly agricultural. The tnshp. includes Martin Top, Todber, and Howgill. The subsoil abounds in minerals, including lead, silver, and calamine, all of which were formerly wrought with success. G. L. Fox, Esq., is lord of the manor.

RIMPTON, a par. in the hund. of Taunton, co. Somerset, 5 miles N.W. of Sherborne, its post town, and 6½ N.E. of Yeovil railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated at the head of the great valley of Taunton-Dean, and is wholly agricultural. The soil is a sandy loam, with a subsoil of clay. A small stream flows through the village on its way to the river Parret. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £209, and there are 48 acres of glebe. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £272, in the patron. of the Bishop of Winchester. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient edifice, with a tower containing three bells. The church has 5 painted windows, 4 of which were the gift of Sir William Forbes, Bart. The register dates from 1537. The parochial charities produce about £5 per annum. There is a parochial school for both sexes, in which a Sunday-school is also held. J. H. Kinglake, Esq., and A. W. Kinglake, Esq., are joint lords of the manor.

RIMSWELL, a tnshp. in the par. of Owthorne, S. div. of Holderness wap., East Riding co. York, 4 miles N. of Partington, and 3 N.W. of Owthorne.

RINCREW CASTLE, a demesne in the co. of Waterford, Ireland, 3 miles N.E. of Youghal. The castle, which is in ruins, is situated on the brink of the Blackwater, and once belonged to Sir Walter Raleigh.

RINCURRAN. See RINGCURRAN, co. Cork.

RINDLEFORD, a tnshp. in the par. of Worfield, co. Salop, 3 miles N.E. of Bridgnorth.

RINESHARK HARBOUR, a creek in the bar. of Gaultiere, co. Waterford, Ireland. It lies on the E. side of Tramore Bay, and is dangerous for ships.

RINGABELLA, a creek on the W. side of Cork Harbour, co. Cork, Ireland, opposite Roche Tower.

RINGAGONAGH, or RING, a par. in the bars. of Decies-without-Drum and Decies-within-Drum, co. Waterford, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5 miles S.S.E. of Dungarvan, its post town. The surface extends along the S. shore of Dungarvan Bay, and is bordered on the N.W. by the Bricky river. The parish, which is of large extent, contains some mountain. The soil is in general good. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lismore, val. £60. The church was rebuilt by the late Board of First Fruits in 1822. There is a Roman Catholic chapel, also two private schools. There is a small pier here, also a coastguard station.

RINGAN'S, ST. See NINIAN'S, ST., co. Stirling.

RINGAROGIE, an islet in Roaring Water Bay, co. Cork, Ireland, 6 miles S.W. of Skibbereen.

RINGBOROUGH, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of East Newton, par. of Aldbrough, East Riding co. York, 8 miles N.E. of Hedon. It is situated near the coast.

RINGCURRAN, a par. in the bars. of Kinalea and Kinsale, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, containing a portion of the post town of Kinsale. The surface lies along Kinsale Harbour and Oyster Haven. The soil is of medium quality. The villages of Scilly and Cove are within the limits, and are both resorts for bathers. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Cork, val.

£350, in the patron. of the crown. The church, which occupies a prominent site, serves as a landmark. There are still some remains of the old church. This parish is united to Kinsale in the Roman Catholic arrangement. There are a parochial and a Sunday school. Long Quays and Rathmore are the principal residences. A profitable fishing trade is carried on. Races and a regatta are held during the season. This parish was the scene of several severe struggles during the Spanish invasion of Kinsale in 1600.

RINGEY, a stream of the co. of Chester, rises near Macclesfield, and joins the Bollin below Wilmslow.

RINGFORD, a vil. in the par. of Tongland, co. Kirkcudbright, Scotland, 3 miles N. of Kirkcudbright, near the confluence of the rivers Tarff and Dee.

RINGLAND, a par. in the hund. of Eynsford, co. Norfolk, 7 miles N.W. of Norwich, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated near the river Wensum, and is wholly agricultural. The land is chiefly arable and pasture, with some marsh and common. The surface is undulating, the higher grounds commanding extensive views. The appropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £165, and the vicarial for £105, besides a glebe of 11½ acres. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £60, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient structure, with a lofty embattled tower. The interior contains a font and a stained window. The chancel, which has been thoroughly restored, is separated from the nave by a carved screen, in the lower compartments of which are representations of the apostles, painted and gilt. The parochial charities produce about £26 per annum, of which £22 goes to the free school. There is a place of worship for Wesleyans. Lord Stafford and T. T. Berney, Esq., are lords of the manor.

RINGLESTONE, a hmlt. in the par. of Woodnesborough, hund. of Eastry, lathe of St. Augustine, co. Kent, 2 miles S.W. of Sandwich.

RINGLEY, a chplry. in the par. of Oldham-cum-Prestwick, hund. of Salford, co. Lancaster, 7 miles N.W. of Manchester, on the East Lancashire railway. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £250, in the patron. of the Rectors of Prestwich, Bury, and Middleton. The church is dedicated to the Holy Trinity. There is a school founded by Nathan Walworth in 1640, with an endowment of about £60 per annum.

RINGMER, a hund. in the rape of Pevensey, co. Sussex, contains the town of Lewes and the pars. of Glynde, South Malling, Ringmer, Stanmer, and St. Thomas in the Cliffe, comprising an area of 14,200 acres, exclusive of Lewes.

RINGMER, a par. in the above hund., co. Sussex, 3 miles N.E. of Lewes, its post town, and 10 W. of Hailsham. The village, which is chiefly agricultural, is situated on the road from Lewes to Hastings, and near the river Ouse. The Chailey union poorhouse is in this parish, also artillery barracks, which were erected during the French war, but are now disused; part of the latter are converted into a kennel for the South Down fox hounds. The surface is diversified by elevations. The soil is in some parts clay, and in others a chalky marl. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £400, in the patron. of the Archbishop of Canterbury. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient edifice, with a wooden spire, erected in lieu of an ancient steeple which fell into ruins. It has some monuments and brasses of great antiquity. The parochial charities produce about £31 per annum, of which £10 is applied in support of the National schools for both sexes. Elizabeth Cheyney in 1620 founded and endowed an almshouse for two poor persons. The Independents have a place of worship. There are ruins of an old mansion, called Broyle Place, said to have been erected by one of the Archbishops of Canterbury, and which was formerly surrounded by a deer park of 2,000 acres in extent.

RINGMORE, a par. in the hund. of Ermington, co. Devon, 5 miles W. of Kingsbridge, and 4 S.W. of Modbury, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the coast of Bigbury Bay, near the mouth of the Avon. Mr. Roe's harriers meet in this parish. Small vessels come up the Avon laden chiefly with coal, and a considerable mackerel and pilchard fishery is carried on. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £235, and the glebe contains 100 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £400. There are two schools.

RINGORAN, or RINGRONE, a par. in the bars. of Kinsale, East Carbery, and Courcies, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 2½ miles S.W. of Kinsale, its post town. The surface lies along the river Bandon, and extends towards the S. into the sea, forming part of the S. wing of Kinsale Harbour. The soil is good. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Cork, val. £562, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is situated at Sandy Cove. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Courcies. There are a parochial and several private schools. Among the principal seats are Coolmain and Glouneveraine. There are coastguard stations at Howes Strand, Sandy Cove, and the Old Head of Kinsale, on which last point stands a lighthouse with a fixed light visible for 23 miles. The fisheries employ many of the people. In the vicinity are ruins of Duncearma Castle, formerly the residence of the De Courceys, to whom this part of the country was granted after the conquest of Ireland. There are also ruins of other strongholds.

RING'S-ASH. See ASHREIGNEY.

RINGSEND, a post-office vil. in the par. of St. Mary, Donnybrook, co. Dublin, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 1½ mile E. of the general post-office, Dublin. It is situated upon the river Dodder, near Irishtown, at the point where that river empties itself into the Liffey. The road to Sandymount and the Pigeon House fort crosses the parish. The village consists of several poor streets in a neglected condition. The Grand Canal Docks are on the opposite side of the Dodder. There are a Roman Catholic chapel, a Wesleyan meeting-house, and National school. There are glass-works, salt-works, and boat-building yards, also coastguard stations at Pigeon House road and Ringsend point.

RINGSFIELD, a par. in the hund. of Wangford, co. Suffolk, 2½ miles S.W. of Beccles, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. The ruins of Little Redisham church are enclosed in a field near the Hall, it having once been a separate parish. The glebe contains about 40 acres. The living is a rect.* with that of Little Redisham consolidated, in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £550. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient structure with a thatched roof, and a tower containing two bells. The interior of the church contains a brass of N. Garneys and family, bearing date 1600. There is a school for girls. The Independents and Wesleyans have each a place of worship. Little Redisham Hall is the principal residence. J. Garden, Esq., is lord of the manor.

RINGSHALL, a par. in the hund. of Bosmere, co. Suffolk, 5 miles from Stowmarket, its post town, and 4½ S.W. of Needham Market railway station. The village, which is straggling, is wholly agricultural. The soil is chiefly clayey. The framework of the Royal Exchange, built by Sir Thomas Gresham, was made here and in the adjoining parish of Battisford. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £562 10s., and there are 93 acres of glebe. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £505, in the patron. of Pembroke College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Catherine, has a square tower, the upper part of which has been damaged by lightning. W. Adair, Esq., is lord of the manor. Fossils of the Saurian and other extinct species have been found here.

RINGSHALL WITH INCOMB AND WARDS, a hmlt. in the par. of Ivinghoe, co. Bucks, 3 miles S.E. of Ivinghoe.

RINGSLOW, a hund., called also Isle of Thanet, co. Kent, contains the watering-place of Broadstairs and the pars. of Birchington, St. Lawrence, Margate, Minster, Monkton, St. Nicholas at Wade, St. Peter's, Ramsgate, Sarre, Stonar, and Wood; comprising an area of 45,880 acres.

RINGSTEAD, a par. in the hund. of Higham-Ferrers, co. Northampton, 2½ miles S.W. of Thrapston, its post town and railway station. The village, which is extensive, is situated on the eastern bank of the navigable river Nen. Some of the inhabitants are employed in shoemaking, and others in agriculture. Mill Cotton Roman camp, where coins, &c., have been discovered, is in this parish. The land is partly in common, but the greater part of the waste lands were taken in under an Enclosure Act passed in 1839. Building-stone is quarried. The great tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £384 18*s.* 6*d.*, and the vicarial for £147. There are also rent-charges of £10 8*s.* and £9 13*s.* payable to the Rector of Shelton and the Vicar of Rounds. The living is a vic. annexed to that of Denford, in the dioc. of Peterborough. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is of great antiquity, and has a tower and spire. The parochial charities produce about £31 per annum. The Wesleyans and Baptists have each a place of worship. T. Burton, Esq., is lord of the manor.

RINGSTEAD, a hmlt. in the par. of Osmington, co. Dorset, 5 miles N.E. of Weymouth, on Ringstead Bay.

RINGSTEAD, GREAT AND LITTLE, or ST. ANDREW AND ST. PETER, a par. in the hund. of Smithdon, co. Norfolk, 16 miles N. by E. of Lynn, its post town, and 8 W. of Burnham Westgate. The village, which is small, is situated near the Wash, and is chiefly agricultural. Near the village is Downes, a spot resorted to by pleasure parties. In the parish are several woods and plantations. The soil is various, upon a subsoil of chalk, gravel, and sand. The land is chiefly arable, with some pasture and meadow, and about 58 acres of common. There are two corn mills. The parishes of St. Andrew and St. Peter have been consolidated. The glebe consists of 150 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £49. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is an ancient flint and stone structure, with a square embattled tower containing one bell. The church was restored with the materials of its neighbouring church of St. Peter, in 1771. All that now remains of St. Peter's church is its ruined circular tower, mantled in ivy. The parochial charities produce about £3 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes, in which a Sunday-school is also held. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. Henry L'Estrange Styleman Le Strange, Esq., is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

RINGVILLE, a vil. in the par. of Ringagonagh, bar. of Decies-within-Drum, co. Waterford, Ireland, 4 miles S.E. of Dungarvan. It is situated near Helwick Head, and has a small harbour.

RINGWOOD, a div. of the co. of Hants, contains the town of Christchurch, and the hunds. of Lower Christchurch, Upper and Lower Fordingbridge, Ringwood, and the libs. of Breamore and Westover.

RINGWOOD, a hund. in the co. of Hants, contains the pars. of Burley, Foulford, Harbridge, Ringwood, and Shobley; comprising an area of 13,250 acres.

RINGWOOD, a par., post and market town in the above hund., co. Hants, 29 miles S.W. of Winchester, 20 S.W. of Southampton, and 18½ from Salisbury. It is a junction station on the Salisbury section of the London and South-Western railway. It comprises the hmlts. of Crow, High Town, Upper and Lower Kingston, and Poulner, with the ext. par. libs. of Burley Lodge, Godshill, Linwood, and Woodgreen. It is situated on the border of the New Forest, on the eastern bank of the river Avon, which, after dividing eastward into three branches, over each of which is a stone bridge, again unites its waters into a broad expanse, with an island in the middle, crossed by a causeway. Ringwood was a place of importance at a very early period, and was originally named Regnum, or the town of the Regni, mentioned by Antoninus. It was occupied both by the Romans and Britons as a military post, and was called Renoved and Regnewood by the Saxons, who set much store by it. The town is well built and lighted with gas, and contains many neat residences. It consists principally of four streets, diverging from the market-place. The public buildings consist of a commercial branch bank, library, with reading-rooms, police station, gas-works, union poor-house, &c. There are steam and water biscuit manufactories, and two breweries. Ringwood was once celebrated for its strong beer, but the trade of late years has considerably declined, as have also the manufactures of woollen cloth and stockings, once extensively carried on. Ringwood is a polling-place for the county elections. Petty sessions are held on the first Wednesday in every month, at the Crown Hotel. The Poor-law Union at Ringwood comprises 5 parishes and townships. The board of guardians meet every Monday from the 10th October to the 5th April, and from the 5th April to the 10th October, on every alternate Monday. Courts-leet are held by the lord of the manor at Lady-day and Michaelmas, when a constable is appointed. A large portion of the land is in meadow, but the lower grounds frequently suffer from inundation, caused by the overflow of the Avon. The river abounds with trout and other fish. The living is a vic.* with the curs. of Harbridge and Bisterne annexed, in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £960, in the patron. of King's College, Cambridge. The church is dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul; its former architectural beauty has been almost effaced by modern alterations. The chancel has been rebuilt at an outlay of £850, defrayed by the Provost and Fellows of King's College, Cambridge. There is also the district church of St. John's, Burley, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £100, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was rebuilt about a quarter of a century ago by the Mills family. The parochial register dates from 1561. There are charities in connection with the church producing about £24 per annum, exclusive of the endowment of the free grammar school, founded in 1586 by Richard Lyne, which now produces near £35 per annum. In 1843 almshouses were erected and founded by the late William Clarke, Esq. There are National schools for both sexes, and also schools for the Dissenters. The Independents, Wesleyans, and Unitarians have each a place of worship. St. Ive's House and the Manor House are the principal residences. John Morant, Esq., is lord of the manor. The late Lord Chief Justice Mansfield was born in this parish. Market day is on Wednesday; also a market for cattle every alternate Wednesday. Fairs are held on the 10th July and the 11th December.

RINGWOOD, a vil. in the par. of Rosbercon, bar. of Ida, co. Kilkenny, Ireland, 2 miles N.W. of New Ross, and 21 W. of Wexford. It is situated near the confluence of the rivers Nore and Barrow.

RINGWOULD, a par., locally in the hund. of Cornilo, lathe of St. Augustine, co. Kent, but forming part of the Cinque-Port lib. of Dover, 6 miles N.E. of Dover, its post town, and 3 S.W. of Deal. The village, which is neatly built, and was once a market town, is situated on an eminence near the main road from Deal to Dover. The par. contains the hmlt. of Kingsdown, situated close to the sea-shore. A portion of the inhabitants are engaged in fishing. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £500, and there are 10 acres of glebe. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £352. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, has a square tower containing five bells. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum, besides half an acre of land appropriated to the clerk for ringing the curfew bell. There are a day school and a Sunday-school.

RINN, a small lough in the co. of Leitrim, Ireland, 2 miles S. of Mohill. It is about 2½ miles in length by 1 mile in breadth. On its banks stands Rinn Castle, the property of the Earl of Leitrim.

RINRAWROS, a bay in the island of Aran, bar. of Boylagh, co. Donegal, Ireland.

RINROE, a creek in Broadhaven, co. Mayo, Ireland.

RIPE, or RYPE, a par. in the hund. of Shiplake, rape of Pevensey, co. Sussex, 7 miles E. of Lewes, 10 S.E. of Uckfield, and 2 from the Berwick railway station. Hurst Green is its post town. The village, which is sometimes called Eckington, is of small extent, and chiefly agricultural. There is a powerful chalybeate spring in the neighbourhood. The surface is well wooded, and the land is divided between arable, meadow, and pasture. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £470, and the glebe comprises 33 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £431, in the patron. of Exeter College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, has an embattled tower containing five bells. The chancel has a window of ancient stained glass. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes.

RIPLEY, a chplry. and small market town in the par. of Pentrick, or Pentridge, hund. of Morleston, co. Derby, 3½ miles S.W. of Alfreton, its post town, 5 N.E. of Belper, and 4 E. of Ambergate railway station. It is situated near the tunnel of the Cromford railway, and at a short distance from the river Derwent. It was chartered as a market town by Henry III., but since that period has considerably declined, and the market day, formerly on Wednesday, has been altered to Saturday. The chplry. includes the hmlts. of Butterley, Hartshay, and Marehay. The town, which wears a neat appearance, contains many good shops. A large portion of the inhabitants are employed in the silk and cotton mills, and others in the extensive collieries at Hartshay, and the iron-works of the Butterley Company. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £200. The church was erected in 1821. The parochial charities produce about £3 per annum. There are National schools for both sexes. The Wesleyans, Reformed Wesleyans, Baptists, Primitive Methodists, and Unitarians have each a place of worship. There is also a library, with reading and newsrooms. Coins of Gallienus, Carausius, Victorinus, and others were discovered here in 1730. Butterley Hall is the principal residence. The Duke of Devonshire is lord of the manor. Fairs are held on the Wednesday in Easter week, also on 23rd October; and, on the 5th November, a statute fair for the hiring of servants.

RIPLEY, a par. and post town in the wap. of Claro, West Riding co. York, 3½ miles from High Harrogate, 5 W. of Knaresborough, and 22 N.W. of York. It is situated on the Leeds and Thirsk railway, and near the river Nidd. The par. comprises the tnshps. of Clint and Killinghall, besides the vil. of Ripley, which was formerly a market town. The town occupies rising ground, about half a mile N. from the river, and consists chiefly of one broad street. All the old houses have been taken down, and replaced by others constructed of stone. The townhall, designated the Hotel de Ville, was erected at the expense of Lady Amcotts Ingilby, in 1841. The surface is varied by hill and dale, and the higher grounds command some good views. The soil is rich and fertile, with a subsoil of clay. It is chiefly famed for its production of liquorice. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £640. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient cruciform structure, with a square embattled tower containing three bells. The interior of the church contains monuments of the Ingilby family, including one of Sir Thomas Ingilby, Justice of the Common Pleas in the reign of Edward III. In the churchyard is the stump of an ancient cross, with eight niches, apparently intended for kneeling. The parochial charities produce about £298 per annum, of which £206 goes to Admiral Long's free school, and £40 to Ingilby's school. There is an infant school, in which a Sunday-school is also held. Ripley Castle, originally built in 1555, but recently enlarged, is a castellated mansion, situated in a park. It was here Oliver Cromwell lodged the night before the battle of Marston-Moor. Ripley was the birthplace of Ripley, the alchemist, and of Archbishop Pullen. The Rev. H. J. Ingilby, M.A., is lord of the manor and principal landowner. Fairs are held on Easter Monday and Tuesday, and on the 25th and 26th of August for cattle.

RIPLEY, a hmlt. in the par. of Sopley, hund. of Christchurch, co. Hants, 4 miles N. of Christchurch.

RIPLEY, a chplry. and post town in the par. of Send, second div. of Woking hund., co. Surrey, 5 miles S.E. of Woking, and 5 N.E. of Guildford. The village, which is considerable, is situated on the high road from Portsmouth to London. The land partly belongs to Sumner, of Hatchlands. The living is a vic.* annexed to that of Send, in the dioc. of Winchester. The church was rebuilt on the site of the old one, in 1846. There is a place of worship for Baptists; also a National school for both sexes, built in 1847. Fairs are held on 22nd July and on 11th November.

RIPLEY COURT, an ancient seat in the par. of Westwell, hund. of Calehill, co. Kent, 4 miles N.W. of Ashford. It once belonged to Sheriff Iden, who took Jack Cade prisoner at Hothfield, in 1450, and in the reign of Charles I. came to the Tuftons.

RIPLINGHAM, a hmlt. in the par. of Rowley, Hunsley Beacon div. of Harthill wap., East Riding co. York, 2 miles N.E. of South Cave.

RIPLINGTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Whalton, W. div. of Castle ward, co. Northumberland, 6 miles S.W. of Morpeth.

RIPLINGTON, a tythg. in the par. and hund. of East Meon, co. Hants, 5 miles N.W. of Petersfield.

RIPON, a lib. in the West Riding co. York, contains the pars. of Markingfield, Nidd, and part of Ripon, comprising about 35,500 acres.

RIPON, a market town, municipal and parliamentary borough, and seat of a bishopric, in the lib. of Ripon, West Riding co. York, 22 miles N.W. of York, and 215 from London by the Great Northern Railway, or 212 by road. The parish, which is very extensive, comprising between 49,000 and 50,000 acres, is situated on the right bank of the river Ure. The soil is for the most part gravelly, and the land is fertile around the city, but in some parts it is hilly and bleak. The first mention of Ripon occurs about the middle of the 7th century, when Eata, Abbot of Melrose, is said to have founded a monastery, at which time there were not more than thirty houses. A few years afterwards it was given to Wilfrid, who added considerably to the town, and made it a bishop's see. Alfred the Great made it a borough about the year 885. During the following two centuries it was destroyed three times, having been burnt twice by the Danes and laid waste by William the Norman soon after the Conquest. It was again twice burnt by Bruce between 1319 and 1323. When the plague raged in London in the reign of Henry IV. the king took up his residence at Ripon. James I. also visited this city, as did Charles I., on two occasions, and it was here that the Scots negotiated for a peace in 1640. It was subsequently occupied for a time by the parliamentarian troops, but was retaken in 1643 by the royalists under Sir John Mallory. In accordance with a custom instituted by King Alfred, three blasts of the horn are given at the door of the mayoralty every evening at nine o'clock by the official hornblower, and a fourth at the market cross. The origin of this custom was to give warning against thieves, and the bugler was at that time called the "wakeman."—The municipal and parliamentary boundaries are co-extensive, comprising the ancient borough of Ripon, with the townships of Aismunderby and Bondgate, which form part of the parish of Ripon, and together contain 1,549 acres. The population in 1851 was 6,080, with 1,345 inhabited houses, which in 1861 had increased to 6,172. The streets generally are irregular, but they are well paved, lighted with gas, and there is a good supply of water. No especial branch of manufacture is now carried on in the city, but woollen cloth used to be made in large quantities before the days of Elizabeth, and spurs were then made in such quantities, and of such good quality, that "as true steel as Ripon rowels" became a proverb throughout England to denote honesty and courage. Davenant, in his "Wits," as well as Ben Jonson in his

"Staple of News," make mention of sharp Ripon spurs. The manufacture of saddle trees is still carried on to a certain extent, together with that of buttons and hardware. There are some iron and brass foundries, engine works, several flour mills, and varnish manufactories, and tanning, and malting.—The borough returns two members to parliament since the reign of Edward VI., and once in that of Edward I. It was first chartered by James I., and under the new Act is governed by a mayor, who is the returning officer, four aldermen, and twelve councillors, with the style of "mayor, burgesses, and commonalty of the borough of Ripon." The corporation revenue is about £250 per annum.—A bridge of seventeen arches crosses the river Ure, the navigation of which was brought into the city through a canal constructed in 1768. The townhall was built in 1800 by Wyatt, the architect, at the sole expense of Mrs. Allanson, of Studley. It contains assembly rooms, and rooms where the magistrates hold their sittings. The mechanics' institute was completed in 1849. The market-place is a large square, in the centre of which is an obelisk 90 feet high, surmounted by the arms of Ripon, a bugle horn and a spur rowel, erected in 1780 by the then member for Ripon, William Aislabie. The other public buildings are a dispensary and house of recovery, borough gaol, house of correction, gas and water works, theatre or riding school, four banks, and a savings-bank. The union workhouse was built in 1854.—The cathedral of SS. Peter and Wilfrid is one of the best proportioned churches in England. It was originally built on the site of St. Wilfrid's abbey, in the reign of King Egfrid, about the year 680, but the present edifice was not commenced before 1330, and not wholly completed until the end of the 15th century. Almost every style of architecture may be traced in this structure. Its entire length from E. to W. is 266 feet, the transept is 130 feet long, the nave is 86 feet broad, and the choir and aisles 67 feet. At the western extremity are two towers, each 110 feet high; and there is besides the great tower called St. Wilfrid's Tower, containing a peal of eight bells. The crypt is of the Saxon period, and contains a large quantity of human remains in good preservation. The E. window is 50 feet by 25 feet, of stained glass, with armorial and other devices. The altar-piece is Grecian, and there are also portraits on wood of many of the kings of England from Edward III. to James I., besides many ancient and curiously-wrought monuments. The bishopric of Ripon was first erected in 1836 in accordance with an Act of Parliament, and the then head master of Harrow, the Rev. C. T. Longley, was consecrated the first bishop. The Bishop's Palace, a stone building in the Tudor style, about a mile from the city, was completed in 1839. The diocese is in the province of York, and includes the greater part of the West Riding, as well as Richmondshire in the North Riding. The chapter consists of the dean, two archdeacons, four canons, a chancellor, and two minor canons. The living of the Holy Trinity is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £300, in the patron. of Simeon's Trustees. The church was built in 1825 at the cost of £13,000. It is cruciform, and in the early English style of architecture, with a spire 136 feet high. The organ is beautiful, and there are sittings for 700 persons. There are also the following district churches, viz. Aldfield-with-Studley, Bishop-Monkton, Bishop-Thornton, Dacre, Greenhow Hill, Markington, Pateley-Bridge, Sawley, Sharow, Skelton, North Stainley, and Winksley in conjunction with Grantley, the livings of which are all perpet. curs., varying in val. from £300 to £72. There are places of worship for Independents, Primitive Methodists, New Connexion Methodists, Wesleyans, and Roman Catholics. The free grammar school was founded by King Edward VI., and incorporated by his sister, Queen Mary; the endowment produces an income of about £600 a year. There are also a blue-coat school, infant and National schools, and a Wesleyan elementary school, and a large training college for mistresses in connection with the dioceses of York and Ripon. The charities, or hospitals, as they are termed, are numerous; foremost among these is St. Mary Magdalene's Hospital, founded about 1344; the almshouses were rebuilt in the reign of Charles II.; that of St. John the Baptist is also of ancient date, and St. Anne's dates from the time of Edward IV., and was founded by a Neville. A public bath-house, supplied from St. Wilfrid's Well, was erected in 1813; there is also another excellent spring called St. Helen's Well. Saxon coins and remains have been found at Ripon. Fountains Abbey, at Studley, about 3 miles off, is the seat of Earl de Grey, who admits visitors to his park and pleasure grounds every day except Sunday.—Ripon used formerly to be noted for breeding horses, and the principal street is still called the horse fair. Races take place annually on the feast of St. Wilfrid in August. Market day is Thursday. Fairs are held on the last Thursday in January, 13th and 14th May, first Thursday and Friday in June, first Thursday in October and November, and on the 23rd November for hiring farm servants.

RIPPINGALE, a par. in the wap. of Aveland, parts of Kesteven, co. Lincoln, 5 miles N. of Bourn, its post town, 4 S. by E. of Falkingham, and 8 N.E. of Corby railway station. The parish, which is of large extent, is chiefly agricultural. It is intersected by the road from London to Lincoln. The surface towards the W. is diversified by hill and dale, and on the E. slopes gradually towards the sea shore, where it becomes flat. The land is nearly evenly divided between arable and pasture. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1803. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £895. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, contains a figure of a Knight-Templar in chain-armour, a monument of the Marmion family, consisting of three full-length figures much mutilated, and figure of the Lady Abbess of Ringstone Abbey in this parish. The parochial charities produce about £18 per annum, of which £8 is the endowment for a school.

RIPPLE, a ward in the par. of Barking, hund. of Beacontree, co. Essex, 4 miles S.W. of Romford, and 10 E. by N. of London.

RIPPLE, a par. in the hund. of Cornilo, lathe of St. Augustine, co. Kent, 2½ miles S.W. of Deal, its post town, and 7 N. of Dover. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. There is a Roman camp in this parish, supposed to have been thrown up by Cæsar in his route from the sea to his principal camp on Barham Down. The surface is undulating, and the soil chiefly clay and chalk. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £260, and the glebe comprises 10 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £201. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, was rebuilt in 1861, near the site of the former one, and has a tower containing two bells. In the churchyard are two yew trees. The charities consist of two almshouses. Ripple Vale is the principal residence.

RIPPLE, a par. in the lower divs. of the hunds. of Oswaldslow and Pershore, co. Worcester, 3 miles N. of Tewkesbury, its post town, and 3 S.E. of Upton. It comprises the chplry. of Queenhill, and the hmlt. of Holdfast. The village is situated on the road from Bristol to Birmingham, and near the river Severn, which runs through the parish. There is a considerable traffic carried on by means of the Severn. The market gardens are numerous and productive. A monastery existed at Ripple as early as the year 770, in Bishop Mildred's time, and was granted to the church of Worcester in the 9th century by Duke Alfred, but no remains are now extant. The tithes have been commuted for land and money payments, and the glebe contains about 580 acres. The living is a rect.* with the cur. of Queenhill annexed, in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £1,186, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. James, or St. Mary, is an ancient stone structure with a tower containing six bells. It has lately undergone thorough restoration. The register dates from 1550. The parochial charities consist of lands now producing about £126 per annum, part of which goes towards church repairs. There is a National school for both sexes.

RIPPLESMERE, a hund. in the co. of Berks, contains Windsor, and the pars. of Clewer, Easthampstead, Winkfield, Old Windsor, and part of New Windsor, comprising an area of 22,710 acres.

RIPPONDEN, a vil. and chplry. in the par. of Halifax, wap. of Morley, West Riding co. York, 5½ miles S.W. of Halifax. It includes an extensive district comprising the tnshps. of Barkisland and Soyland. The village is situated on the Rochdale road in a valley watered by a branch of the river Calder, under Blackstone Edge. It suffered greatly from a flood in May, 1722, when the waters in the valley suddenly rose 21 feet above their ordinary level, bearing down in their course the mills and bridges on the river, and destroying many houses in the village. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £175, in the patron. of the Vicar of Halifax. The church, dedicated to St. Bartholomew, was rebuilt in 1737, the former one having been partly destroyed by the flood. It has a square tower, and the cemetery is enclosed by a yew-tree hedge cut into semicircular arches. The living was once held by the Rev. J. Watson, author of the "History of Halifax."

RIPTON, ABBOT'S. See ABBOT'S RIPTON, co. Hunts.

RIPTON, KING'S, a par. in the hund. of Hurstingstone, co. Hunts, 2 miles N.E. of Huntingdon. The village is small and wholly agricultural. This place takes the affix of "King's" to distinguish it from Abbot's Ripton, which parish it adjoins. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ely, val. £179. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient edifice with a square tower, and was fully restored in 1864. There is a free school supported by the rector. The master and fellows of Magdalene College, Cambridge, are lords of the manor.

RISBOROUGH, MONKS', a par. in the hund. of Aylesbury, co. Bucks, 5 miles S.W. of Wendover, and 1 mile N.E. of Prince's Risborough, its post town. The par. comprises the hmlts. of Askett, Upper and Lower Cadsden, Meadle, Owlswick, and Whiteleaf. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. A cross, called White Leaf Cross, cut on the side of the chalk hills near the village, is supposed to commemorate a victory obtained here by the Saxons over the Danes. The tithes, excepting those of the woodlands, were commuted under an Enclosure Act in 1830, for land and a money payment. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £353, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Dunstan, has a square embattled tower containing five bells. The interior of the church has a brass bearing date 1431, which is in good condition. The parochial charities consist of land allotments in trust for the time being to the rector, churchwardens, and constable, who distribute the realised rent in coals to the poor every Christmas. There is a place of worship for Baptists.

RISBOROUGH, PRINCE'S, a par., post and market town in the hund. of Aylesbury, co. Bucks, 8 miles S. of Aylesbury, and 37 N.W. of London. It is a junction station on the Oxford and Maidenhead section of the Great Western railway, where the Aylesbury branch turns off. This place, which is of great antiquity, stands on the Chiltern hills, near the line of the ancient Icknield Street, and has traces of a Roman camp, supposed to be that of the Emperor Severus. The lordship anciently belonged to the crown, and was given by Henry III. to his brother Richard Earl of Cornwall. It subsequently became the property of Edward the Black Prince, who built a moated seat or palace here, on the site of a Saxon camp, now called "The Mount," from which circumstance this place takes the prefix of "Prince's" Risborough. The manor was settled in dower on Queen Margaret, and belonged to the crown to the time of Charles I. The town, which is only a considerable village, contains about 1,000 inhabitants, has a market-house, and a theatre. It received a charter in the 39th year of Queen Elizabeth, exempting the inhabitants from payment of tolls at fairs, and from sitting on juries, the latter privilege being still enjoyed. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £145, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, was built in the reign of Henry VII., and has a square tower, surmounted by an octagonal spire, and containing six bells. In the interior are an E. window of three lights, several stone stalls, effigies of crusaders, and an antique font. There is also the district church of St. John's at Lacy Green, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £90. The Baptists and Wesleyans have each a place of worship. There are National and British and Foreign schools. The parochial charities produce about £90 per annum. Market day is on Thursday. A fair is held on 6th May for cattle.

RISBRIDGE, a hund. in the co. of Suffolk, contains the pars. of Barnardiston, Great and Little Bradley, Chedburgh, Clare, Cowling, Dalham, Denardiston, Denham, Depden, Gazeley, Hawkedon, Haudon, Kentford, Lidgate, Moulton, Ousden, Poslingford, Stansfield, Stoke, Stradishall, Great and Little Thurlow, Whixoe, Whickhambrook, Whithersfield, Great and Little Wratting, and parts of Haverhill and Kedington; comprising an area of 59,160 acres.

RISBRIDGE, MONKS', an ext. par. place adjoining the par. of Barnardiston, hund. of Risbridge, co. Suffolk, 4 miles N.W. of Clare. This place contains scarcely a dozen inhabitants, but gives name to the hund. and Poor-law Union of Risbridge, which comprises 26 parishes and townships.

RISBURY, a tnshp. in the pars. of Humber and Stoke-Prior, hund. of Wolphy, co. Hereford, 4½ miles S.E. of Leominster. It is situated near Risbury Cross, and contains a Danish camp, enclosing an area of about 30 acres.

RISBY, a par. in the hund. of Thingoe, co. Suffolk, 4 miles N.W. of Bury St. Edmund's, its post town, and 1 mile N. of the Saxham railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated near the high road from Bury St. Edmund's to Newmarket, and is chiefly agricultural. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £600, and there are 21 acres of glebe. The living is a rect.* annexed to that of Fornham, in the dioc. of Ely, val. £760, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Giles, is an ancient structure, with a round tower containing three bells. The interior of the church contains tablets to the Danby, Wastell, and Spark families; also a carved screen. It was newly pewed in 1842. The parochial charities produce about £38 per annum. There is a Sunday-school. Sir T. R. Gage, Bart., is lord of the manor.

RISBY, a hmlt. in the par. of Roxby, N. div. of the wap. of Manley, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 8 miles N.W. of Glandford-Brigg. The village is small, and wholly agricultural. The living is a discharged vic., united in 1717 to that of Roxby.

RISBY, a hmlt. in the par. of Walesby, S. div. of Walshcroft wap., parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 3 miles N.E. of Market-Rasen.

RISBY, a hmlt. in the par. of Rowley, Hunsley Beacon div. of Harthill wap., East Riding co. York, 3 miles S.W. of Beverley. Risby Hall, formerly the seat of the Ellekers, is now converted into a farmhouse.

RISCA, a par. in the upper div. of the hund. of Wentllooge, co. Monmouth, 5 miles N.W. of Newport, its post town, and 9 from Pontypool. It is situated on the Crumlin canal and tram-railway, and is chiefly dependent upon its extensive collieries, copper and iron-works. The impropriate tithes belong to the Bishop of Llandaff. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £102, in the patron. of the Vicar of Bassaleg. The church is dedicated to St. Michael. Risca House, about half a mile S.E. of the village, is the principal residence.

RISDALE, or RIDALE, a feeder of the river Swale, rises in the North Riding co. York.

RISE, a par. and tnshp. in the N. div. of the wap. of Holderness, East Riding co. York, 10¼ miles N.E. of Hull, its post town, and 8 N.E. of Beverley. The village, which is of small extent, is situated near the Hull and Hornsea turnpike-road, and is wholly agricultural. Petty sessions are held here. The soil principally consists of clay. The land is nearly evenly divided between arable and pasture, and there is 184 acres of wood. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £537 15s. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of York, val. £550, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to All Saints, has a spired tower containing three bells. It has some stained windows, and several monuments to the Bethell Family. Prior to the Reformation the church had two chantries, dedicated to SS. Mary and Thomas. The parochial charities produce about £14 per annum. There is a free school for both sexes, in which a Sunday-school is held. Rise Park is the principal residence. Lord Westbury is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

RISEBROUGH, THORNTON. See THORNTON RISEBROUGH, co. York.

RISEGATE, a hmlt. in the pars. of Gosberton and Surfleet, co. Lincoln, 5 miles N.W. of Spalding. It is situated on the river Eau, which forms a junction with the Welland near Fosdyke.

RISEHOLME, a par. in the hund. of Lawress, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 2½ miles N.E. of Lincoln, its post town. The par. comprises the ext. par. district of Grainge-de-Linge. The village is situated near the line of the ancient Ermine Street, and is wholly agricultural. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £100, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, was recently rebuilt at the expense of Bishop Kaye, whose tomb stands in the churchyard. There are but slight traces of the old church. Riseholme Hall, which is the principal residence, consists in part of the old hall, but the exterior walls are of modern date. The hall was formerly the seat of Francis Chaplin, Esq., at whose decease it was, with part of the estate, purchased by the Ecclesiastical Commissioners as a palace for the bishops of Lincoln.

RISELEY, or RISLEY, a par. in the hund. of Stodden, co. Bedford, 9 miles S.E. of Higham Ferrers, its post town, and 5½ S.W. of Kimbolton. The village, which is situated in a valley, is chiefly agricultural. The soil is of a clayey nature, but fertile. The land is divided between rich pasture and arable. The surface is undulating, and is traversed by the road from Leeds to Kimbolton. The impropriate tithes belong to Lord St. John, and the glebe consists of 26 acres. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £177. The church, dedicated to All Saints, has a square embattled tower containing five bells. There is a National school for both sexes. The Wesleyans, Moravians, and Baptists, have places of worship. Lord St. John, of Melchbowrne House, is lord of the manor. Near the modern mansion are the remains of the old castle, from which the family of St. John derive their title. A fair is held on Shrove Tuesday.

RISHANGLES, a par. in the hund. of Hartismere, co. Suffolk, 4 miles S. of Eye, its post town, and 5 E. of Finningham railway station. The village, which is small, is wholly agricultural. The glebe comprises 70 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £323. The church, dedicated to St. Margaret, is an ancient edifice, with a square embattled tower. The font is of Caen stone. The register dates from 1593. The Wesleyans and Baptists have each a place of worship.

RISHTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Blackburn, lower div. of the hund. of Blackburn, co. Lancaster, 3 miles N.E. of Blackburn. It is a station on the East Lancashire railway. The village, which is considerable, is situated on the Blackburn and Burnley turnpike-road, and near the Leeds and Liverpool canal. There is an extensive reservoir. A portion of the inhabitants are engaged in the collieries, stone-quarries, and in the neighbouring cotton-mills. Fire-bricks are made in this township. The soil consists of peat sand and clay, with a subsoil of stone and clay. Henry Petre, Esq., is lord of the manor.

RISHWORTH, a tnshp. in the par. of Halifax, wap. of Morley, West Riding co. York, 6 miles S.W. of Halifax, its post town. The township is of large extent, comprising above 6,000 acres, nearly two-thirds of which are uncultivated moor, bordering on the Blackstone and Booth Dean range of hills. The village, which is situated on the old Manchester road, is straggling. A portion of the inhabitants are employed in the cotton and paper mills. The free grammar school, founded by John Wheelwright, of North Shields, in 1727, is situated in this township. The trustees of the Savile estates are lords of the manor. Near the Rockingstone is a mineral spring, called the Booth Dean Spring. On the summits of some of the hills are Druidical remains, and on others traces of ancient encampments.

RISLEY. See RISELEY, co. Beds.

RISLEY, a parochial chplry. in the pars. of Wilne Sawley and Sandiacre, hund. of Morleston, co. Derby, 7½ miles S.E. of Derby, its post town, and 1½ mile from the Sawley railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. Risley was formerly held by the Mortimers, Sheffields, and Willoughbys, of which last family was Sir Hugh, the navigator, who, in 1554, was frozen to death with his crew on the coast of Lapland, while exploring the north-east passage by Russia. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to that of Breaston, in the dioc. of Lichfield. The church has a pinnacled tower, containing three bells. It was thoroughly restored in 1841, when a new aisle was added. There is a school for both sexes; also a grammar school, to which the children of seven adjoining parishes are admitted.

RISLEY, a moss in the hund. of West Derby, co. Lancaster, 4 miles N.E. of Warrington, and 18 E. of Liverpool. It is situated in the valley of the river Mersey, near the Sankey and Bridgwater canals.

RISSINGTON, GREAT, a par. and tnshp. in the hund. of Slaughter, co. Gloucester, 5 miles W. of Burford, its post town, 5½ S. of Stow, and 6 N.E. of Northleach. The village, which is of small extent, is situated near the river Windrush, and is wholly agricultural. The surface is in some parts hilly. The soil of the uplands consists of stone brash; but the lower grounds, through which the Windrush flows, are clayey and gravelly. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £647. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is an ancient stone structure. The register is legible from Henry VIII.'s time. The charities produce about £12 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes, endowed with an annuity of £5. Lord Dynevor is lord of the manor.

RISSINGTON, LITTLE, a par. and tnshp. in the lower div. of the hund. of Slaughter, co. Gloucester, 4 miles S. of Stow-on-the-Wold, and 7 E. of the Shipton station on the Oxford, Worcester, and Wolverhampton railway. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on an eminence, from which there is a view of the vale of the river Windrush, which separates it from the adjoining parish of Bourton-on-the-Water. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The substratum of the hills is oolitic limestone. The soil on the high grounds consists of stonebrash, while that of the low lands is a rich clay. A large portion of the land is meadow and pasture, some of which is very rich. The Stow and Burford turnpike road runs along the eastern boundary of the parish. The greater part of the tithes were commuted for land in 1712, the glebe contains about 175 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £350, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, has a tower and chancel lighted by lancet windows. It was thoroughly restored in 1859 at the joint expense of J. Bennett, Esq., and the rector, the former gentleman being lord of the manor. A mansion has been recently erected by J. Bennett, Esq. There is a National school erected and endowed in 1840 by the late rector, the Rev. R. W. Ford.

RISSINGTON-WICK, a par. in the lower div. of the hund. of Slaughter, co. Gloucester, 3 miles S. of Stow-on-the-Wold, its post town, and 2 N.E. of Bourton-on-the-Water. The village, which is of small extent, is situated near the Roman Fosse Way, and is wholly agricultural. The soil consists of stonebrash and clay. The tithes have been commuted under two several Enclosure Acts for land and a money payment. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £206. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, was recently restored and enlarged. The parochial charities produce about £7 per annum. There is a parochial school, chiefly supported by C. V. N. Pole, Esq., who is lord of the manor and principal landowner. Wick House is the principal residence.

RISTOL, a small island in the par. of Lochbroom, cos. Ross and Cromarty, Scotland, 30 miles N.W. of Dingwall.

RISTON. See RYSTON, co. Norfolk.

RISTON, LONG, a par. in the wap. of Holderness, East Riding co. York, 6½ miles N.E. of Beverley, its post town, and 9 N.E. of Hull. The village, which is chiefly agricultural, is irregularly built, but situated at a considerable elevation. The soil is a strong clay, and the land chiefly arable. The par. comprises part of the tnshp. of Arnold. The glebe comprises 160 acres. The living is a rect. with the vic.* of Hornsea annexed, in the dioc. of York. The church, dedicated to St. Margaret, has a tower containing two bells. The church has undergone thorough restoration. The register dates from 1657. There is an endowed school for both sexes. The Independents and Primitive Methodists have places of worship. Riston Grange is the principal residence.

RISTON-WITH-BROMPTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Church-Stoke, hund. of Chirbury, co. Salop, 7 miles N.W. of Bishop's-Castle.

RITTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Wentnor, co. Salop, 5 miles W. of Church Stretton. It is in conjunction with Kinnerton to form a township.

RITTON-COLTPARK, and RITTON-WHITEHOUSE, tnshps. in the par. of Nether-Witton, W. div. of Morpeth ward, co. Northumberland, 5½ miles S. of Rothbury. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the collieries.

RIVAULX, or RIEUVAULX, a tnshp. and vil. in the par. of Helmsley, wap. of Ryedale, North Riding co. York, 2½ miles N.W. of Helmsley. The village, which is small, is situated in a well-wooded spot near the river Rye, and on the high road betwixt Helmsley and Thirsk. Rivaulx is celebrated for the ruins of its once magnificent abbey for monks of the Cistercian order, founded by Sir Walter D'Espec in 1131, and dedicated to the Blessed Virgin Mary. Its revenue at the Dissolution was valued at £238. The site was afterwards granted to the Villierses, from whom it came to the Duncombes in 1695. The principal remains are those of the church and the refectory, the choir of the former measures 144 feet long by 63 wide. Rye Vale takes its name from this place. There is a chapel-of-ease, also a partly endowed school for both sexes, in which a Sunday-school is also held.

RIVEL, or YR EIFL, a lofty summit of the Clynnog range, co. Carnarvon, 5 miles N.E. of Nevin. It attains an elevation of 1,866 feet above sea-level.

RIVENHALL, a par. in the hund. of Witham, co. Essex, 2 miles N.E. of Witham railway station, its post town, and 2 W. of Kelvedon. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on a branch of the river Blackwater, and is wholly agricultural. Rivenhall is of ancient date, and formerly belonged to Queen Editha, Eustace de Boulogne, the Scaleses, Widvilles, Eateses, and others. The land is chiefly arable, and the soil loamy. The Essex and Suffolk hounds meet in this parish. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £731. The church, dedicated to St. Mary and All Saints, has a square embattled tower, surmounted by a shingled spire, and containing one bell. It has been entirely reroofed and beautified by the late Lord Western. The interior of the church contains a monument to Sir Ralph and Lady Wiseman, bearing date 1594. There is also an E. window of Rufus's time, presented by the rector. The parochial charities produce about £14 per annum. There is a free school. Traces of a Roman villa, &c., have been discovered near the church. The parish contains 5 manors.

RIVER, a par. in the hund. of Bewsborough, lathe of St. Augustine, co. Kent, 2¼ miles N.W. of Dover, its post town, and near the Kearsney station on the London, Chatham, and Dover railway. The village is situated in a valley on the road from Dover to London, and from its proximity to the former town it may be reckoned a suburb thereof. The parish is watered by the river Dour, and is chiefly agricultural. A portion of the inhabitants are employed in the paper and corn mills, which line the river bank. Upon a hill near the northern boundary of the parish several tumuli have been opened, and were found to contain each a skeleton, spear-head, and short sword. The impropriation belongs to the Archbishop of Canterbury. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £136, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, was partially rebuilt and enlarged in 1832. The register dates from 1620. Kearsney Abbey, Old Park, and Archer's Court, are the principal residences.

RIVER CHAPEL, a vil. in the bar. of Ballaghkeen, co. Wexford, Ireland, 4 miles S.E. of Gorey, and 6 S.E. of Enniscorthy, on the river Aughboy.

RIVER GREEN, an ext. par. place in the W. div. of Castle ward, co. Northumberland, 5 miles S.W. of Morpeth.

RIVERHEAD, a lib. and chplry. in the par. of Sevenoaks, hund. of Codsheath, and lathe of Sutton-at-Hone, co. Kent, 1½ mile N.W. of Sevenoaks, its nearest railway station and post town, and 23 miles from London. The village, which is extensive, is situated near the river Darent. The soil is tolerably fertile. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £90, in the patron. of the Rector of Sevenoaks. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, was erected in 1831 by the late Lord Amherst and M. Lambard, Esq., by whom it has been partially endowed. There is a free school built by the late Lord Amherst, also a labour benefit society. Montreal Park and Bradbourn House are the principal residences; the latter mansion was rebuilt on the site of an ancient one in 1730. It contains some tapestry in excellent preservation, presented by Queen Elizabeth to Sir Ralph Bosville during her visit here. A fair is held on Whit-Monday.

RIVERSDOWN, a hmlt. in the par. of Warnford, co. Hants, 5 miles S. of New Alresford.

RIVERSTOWN, a vil. in the pars. of Templeusque and Cahirlog, bar. of Barrymore, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5½ miles N.E. of Cork. It is situated on the road from thence to Dublin. Two streams unite in the vicinity of the village. Kilcoane Church is at a short distance, and there are several seats. In the village is a police station, also an extensive whisky distillery and cotton mills.

RIVERSTOWN, a hmlt. in the bar. of Lower Dundalk, co. Louth, Ireland, 3 miles S.W. of Carlingford, near Dundalk Bay.

RIVERSTOWN, a vil. in the pars. of Drumcollum and Kilmacallane, bar. of Tirerill, co. Sligo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland. It stands on the road from Collooney to Ballyfarnon. It contains the parish church, a Methodist meeting-house, a Roman Catholic chapel, a dispensary, and a police station.

RIVINGTON, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Bolton, hund. of Salford, co. Lancaster, 4 miles S.E. of Chorley, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated under Rivington Pike, which is 1,345 feet in altitude, and had once a beacon. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture, and a few in the lead mines. The mineral called barytes was first found here, and coal and gritstone are also worked, the latter being in great demand for paving. The chplry. comprises the tnshps. of Rivington and Anglezark, and is about 6 miles long by 3 broad. The land consists chiefly of moss, comprising the range of hills called Rivington and Anglezark moors. The Leeds and Liverpool canal, and the Bolton and Preston railway pass within 2 miles of the village. Swinton Moor, a small estate of little value, was some years back leased to the guardians of the poor of Manchester, for £250, for the training of about 1,000 pauper children of that parish. There are several chalybeate springs in the township, and in Dean Wood is a cascade of 32 feet fall. On the summit of a hill, about 1,500 feet above the sea-level, is a square tower 20 feet high, from which in favourable weather a prospect is obtained embracing Furness Fell, Snowdon, and the Isle of Man. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £90, in the patron. of inhabitants. The church was erected about 1530, by Richard Pilkington. The screen and font are supposed to have belonged to some earlier edifice. The parochial charities consist of Bishop Pilkington's free grammar school, founded in 1566, the endowment of which has increased to £310 per annum. The Unitarians have a place of worship.

RIXTON-WITH-GLAZEBROOK, a tnshp. in the par. of Warrington, hund. of West Derby, co. Lancaster, 6 miles N.E. of Warrington, and 7 S.W. of Leigh. It is situated on the river Mersey, and belongs partly to Tempest of Broughton. The village is considerable. There is a Roman Catholic place of worship.

ROACH, a par. in the bar. of Upper Dundalk, co. Louth, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 4 miles W. of Dundalk, its post town. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Armagh, val. with Baronstown, £348. It is united to Dundalk in the Roman Catholic arrangement. Roach Castle is situated on a rocky eminence, and commands an extensive view. It was partially destroyed by Cromwell in 1644.

ROACH, or ROCHE, a par. in the E. div. of Powder hund., co. Cornwall, 5½ miles N. of St. Austell, its post town, and 7 S.W. of Bodmin. The village, which is chiefly agricultural, is situated near Hensbarrow beacon. Roche is mentioned in Domesday Book as Treroache, and was held by the De Rupes. On a rugged quartz rock are ruins of a hermitage 15 feet by 10½, said to have been once inhabited by the celebrated hermit Conan, who afterwards removed to the see of St. Germans. A portion of the inhabitants are engaged in the tin stream works, of which there are several in this parish, and a rich mine, called the Rock Mine, was opened in 1831. China clay is also found in large quantities, and sent to Liverpool for the potteries. The lofty elevation called Hainsborough, or Hensbarrow, and which gives rise to the river Fal, is partly in this parish. In the streams which descend from this eminence grains of pure gold are occasionally discovered. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £413. The church, dedicated to St. Gomonda, was rebuilt in 1822, and has a square embattled tower containing six bells. In the churchyard is an ancient cross. There is a National school for both sexes. The Wesleyans and Bible Christians have each a place of worship. Fairs are held in May, July, and October, for the sale of cattle.

ROAD, a par. in the hund. of Frome, co. Somerset, 4 miles N.E. of Frome railway station, and 10 from Bath, its post town. The village, which is large, is situated on the river Frome, which separates it from the par. of Woolverton. It was formerly a market town, and had a cross nearly in the centre of the village, but has recently been removed. There are a cloth mill and considerable woollen dye-works at Shawford. The soil is chiefly light, though various, with a subsoil of clay. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £455, and the glebe contains 85 acres. The living is a rect.* annexed to that of Woolverton, in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £600. The church, dedicated to St. Lawrence, is an ancient structure, with a square embattled tower containing a clock and six bells. The parochial charities produce about £4 per annum. The register dates from 1587. There is a National school for both sexes. The Wesleyans and Baptists have each a place of worship, the former having a school for both sexes, also a Sunday-school. Mrs. Jones, of Hinton, is lady of the manor. A large fair for the sale of cheese and cattle is held on the first Monday after 9th September.

ROAD, or RHODE, a hmlt. in the bar. of Warrenstown, King's County, Ireland, 5 miles N.E. of Philipstown. It had formerly a religious house, founded by St. Pulcherius in the 7th century.

ROADE, a par. in the hund. of Cleley, co. Northampton, 5½ miles S. of Northampton, its post town, and the same distance N. of Towcester. It is a station on the London and North-Western railway. The village, which is of small extent, is situated near the Blisworth cutting of the Birmingham railway and the canal tunnel. Some of the inhabitants are employed in the shoe trade. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £100, in the joint patron. of the Duke of Grafton and Rector of Ashton. The church, dedicated to the Blessed Virgin, is an ancient cruciform structure, with a tower containing a clock, which has no dial, and four bells. There is a stone in the wall recording the date of 1619, probably the period when that portion of the church was rebuilt. The parochial charities produce about £26 per annum, exclusive of £4 for almshouses. There is a Church school for both sexes. The Wesleyans and Baptists have each a place of worship. The Duke of Grafton is lord of the manor.

ROADFORD, a hmlt. in the bar. of Corcomroe, co. Clare, Ireland, 6 miles N.W. of Ennistimon, on the river Aile, near the coast.

ROADSIDE, a hmlt. in the par. of St. Cyrus, co. Kincardine, Scotland, 4 miles S.E. of Lawrencekirk. It is situated in the valley of the North Esk, near the coast.

ROAD SIDE, NEW, a hmlt. in the par. of Aldmondbury, West Riding co. York, near Huddersfield.

ROAD SIDE, NEW, a hmlt. in the par. of Batley, West Riding co. York, near Dewsbury.

ROADWATER, a hmlt. in the par. of Old Cleeve, hund. of Williton, co. Somerset, 2 miles S.W. of Watchet, near the coast of the Bristol Channel.

ROAG, a sea loch on the W. side of the Isle of Lewis, Western Isles, coast of Scotland.

ROAN. See RONA, Scotland.

ROANCARRICK, an islet in Bantry Bay, co. Cork, Ireland. It lies on the E. side of Bearhaven, and has a lighthouse, erected in 1847, nearly 60 feet above low water.

ROAR, a bank in East Bay, co. Kent, extending nearly 7 miles between Hythe and New Romney.

ROARING MIDDLE, a sandbank in the Wash, co. Norfolk, on the E. side of Lynn Channel.

ROARINGWATER, a bay on the coast of co. Cork, Ireland. It lies between Cape Clear and Mizen Head, and contains several small islands.

ROATH, or RHATH, a par. in the hund. of Kibbor, co. Glamorgan, 1 mile N.E. of Cardiff, its post town, and 7 miles from Caerphilly. The village, which is of small extent, is situated near the river Rumney. In the vicinity are some ancient earthworks. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £96. The church is dedicated to St. Margaret. Roath Court is the principal residence.

ROBE, a river of the co. of Mayo, Ireland. It rises near Clare, and falls into Lough Mask.

ROBEEN, a par. in the bar. of Kilmaine, co. Mayo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 2 miles W. of Hollymount, which is its post town. The surface is traversed by the river Robe, and the road from Hollymount to Castlebar. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Tuam, val. with Hollymount or Kilcommon, £515, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was improved in 1818 by the late Board of First Fruits. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Kilcommon. There are two public schools. The principal residences are Newbrook, the seat of Lord Clanmorris, Bloomfield, and Beechgrove. Castle ruins are seen in the village and at Togher.

ROBERTON, a par. in the district of Hawick, cos. Roxburgh and Selkirk, Scotland. It contains the vil. of Deanburnhaugh, and the ancient par. of Borthwick on the north-western bank of the Borthwick water. It extends about 13 miles in length from E. to W., with an average breadth of from 4 to 5 miles, and once belonged to the monastery of Melrose. It is bounded on the W. by Dumfriesshire, and on the other sides by the pars. of Ettrick, Kirkhope, Selkirk, Ashkirk, Wilton, and Hawick. The surface is of a hilly character, and chiefly in pasture and sheep walks. The greatest altitude is obtained at the peaks of Craikmore, Culm or Coom, and Criblaw of Craik, which rises from 1,200 to 1,300 feet above sea-level. That part of this parish which lies in the shire of Selkirk was anciently within the bounds of the Royal Forest. The parish is watered by the Ale, Borthwick, Kingmoor, and other small lakes and streams, which all abound in perch, pike, and red trout. There is a rivulet which has a fall of 20 feet. The village is about 6 miles S.W. of Hawick, and stands on the Borthwick and Ale waters. It formed part of the parishes of Hawick, Hassendean, and Borthwick till 1682, when, upon the suppression of the last two, it was erected into a separate parish. This par. is in the presb. of Selkirk and synod of Merse and Teviotdale, and in the patron. of the crown. The stipend of the minister is £239. The parish church was erected in 1750. There is a Free Church preaching station. On Borthwick Water are traces of the Africa, Roman Camp, with other encampments of a circular form called Picts' Works. The mansion of Harden is of great antiquity. The principal seats are Borthwick-Brae, Borthwick-Shields, Chisholme, and Hoscoat.

ROBERTON, a vil. in the par. of Wiston, co. Lanark, Scotland, 4 miles N. of Abingdon, and 8 S.W. of Biggar. It was formerly a separate parish, in the patron. of the family of Douglas.

ROBERTSBRIDGE, or ROTHERBRIDGE, a hmlt. in the par. of Salehurst, hund. of Henhurst, rape of Hastings, co. Sussex, 5½ miles N. of Battle. It is a station of the South-Eastern railway. It is situated at the bridge over the river Rother, from which circumstance it takes its name. The village consists chiefly of one long street on the road from London to Battle. It has a branch of the Hastings bank, and a large flour-mill. At a farm in the neighbourhood are traces of a Cistercian abbey founded by Alured de St. Martino in 1176, the revenue of which at the Dissolution amounted to £248 10*s.* 6*d.*, and the site was given to the Sidneys. A fair is held on the 25th of September for cattle and horses, and a hop-market every alternate Thursday at the George hotel.

ROBERTSCOVE, a vil. in the bar. of Kinalea, co. Cork, Ireland, 10 miles E. of Kinsale. It is situated on Carrigadda Bay, and is a coastguard station.

ROBERTSON, a vil. in the par. of Heriot, co. Edinburgh, Scotland, 4 miles N.W. of Stow.

ROBERTSTOWN, or CASTLE-ROBERT, a par. in the bar. of Shanid, co. Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 4 miles W. of Askeaton. Youghal is its post town. The surface, which consists generally of first-rate soil, stretches along by the river Shannon, and is traversed by the road from Limerick to Askeaton. Foyn's Island is included within the limits of the parish. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Limerick, val. with Dunmoylan, £141. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Shanagolden. There are three day schools. Old Abbey, Fort Anne, and Congreiff are the principal seats. In this parish are the ruins of an abbey, and those of Dysart Castle are not far distant. Ancient earthworks are traced.

ROBERTSTOWN, an ancient par. in the bar. of Lower Kells, co. Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2½ miles S.W. of Nobber, its post town. The soil is good. The parish, which now forms part of Newtown, is crossed by the road from Nobber to Kells. There is no village, and only a few cottages. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Meath, val. with Newtown, £359, in the patron. of the crown and bishop alternately. It is united to Stahalmock in the Roman Catholic arrangement. There are two schools.

ROBERTSTOWN, a small market and post town in the par. of Kilmaogue, bar. of Connell, co. Kildare, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 7 miles N. of Kildare. It is situated on the banks of the Grand canal, and is a packet station from Dublin. It contains a police station and a dispensary. Wednesday is market day. Fairs are held at intervals.

ROBERT-TOWN, a hmlt. in the chplry. of Liversedge and par. of Birstall, West Riding co. York, 2 miles from Birstall, and 6 S.E. of Bradford. It is situated in a manufacturing district, near the line of the Lancashire and Yorkshire railway. Many of the inhabitants are employed in the woollen mills and iron mines. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £150, in the patron. of the Vicar of Birstall. The church is a modern structure.

ROBESTON WATHON, or EAST, a parochial chplry. in the hund. of Narberth, co. Pembroke, 2 miles N.W. of Narberth, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Cleddau. Many curious fossils are found in a quarry in the neighbourhood. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect.* of Narberth, in the dioc. of St. David's. The church is an ancient structure, with a tower.

ROBESTON, WEST, a par. in the hund. of Roose, co. Pembroke, 2 miles N.W. of Milford, its post town. The village is small, and chiefly agricultural. The land is fertile, with an abundance of limestone. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £169. Robeston Hall is the principal residence.

ROBIN HOOD'S BAY, a creek and vil. in the par. of Fylingdales, North Riding co. York, 5 miles S.E. of Whitby. It is a coastguard station, and sub-port to Whitby, situated on the cliffs of the bay. A portion of the inhabitants are engaged in the fisheries.

ROBIN HOOD'S WELL, a hmlt. in the tnshps. of Burghwallis, Moss, and Skelbrooke, and par. of Campsall, West Riding co. York, 6 miles N. of Doncaster.

ROBINSTOWN, a vil. in the par. of Killskyre, bar. of Upper Kells, co. Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. It contains a police station.

ROBOROUGH, a hund. in the co. of Devon, contains the borough of Plymouth, and the pars. of Beer-Ferris, Bickleigh, Buckland-Monachorum, St. Budeaux, Egg-Buckland, Meavy, Sampford-Spiney, Sheepstor, Tamerton-Foliott, St. Peter Tavy, Walkhampton, Whitchurch, and parts of St. Andrew, Charles-the-Martyr, and Maker; comprising an area of 57,870 acres.

ROBOROUGH, a par. in the hund. of Fremington, co. Devon, 5 miles E. of Great Torrington, its post town, and 4 from the Portsmouth Arms station on the North Devon railway. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. It belongs partly to Vivian of Pencalenick. The soil is of a clayey nature, and the land generally of an inferior quality. The surface lies high, and is consequently exposed to easterly winds. The greater part of the land is arable, and the remainder meadow, pasture, and woodland. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £193. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is of the 15th century, containing six bells. The parochial charities produce about £3 per annum. There is a parochial school for both sexes. Ebberley House, which is the principal residence, is a modern mansion. C. Hole, Esq., is lord of the manor.

ROBURNDALE, a tnshp. in the par. of Melling, hund. of Lonsdale South of the Sands, co. Lancaster, 8 miles N.E. of Lancaster.

ROBY, a tnshp. in the par. of Huyton, hund. of West Derby, co. Lancaster, 2 miles S.W. of Prescot, and 1 mile from Huyton. It is a station on the Liverpool and Manchester railway. The village is irregularly built, and is chiefly agricultural. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Chester, val. £200. The church is dedicated to St. Bartholomew. Roby Hall, which is the principal residence, is erected on the site of a more ancient one.

ROBY MILL, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Upholland, co. Lancaster, 4 miles S.W. of Wigan.

ROCESTER, a par. and small town in the S. div. of Totmonslow hund., co. Stafford, 4 miles N.E. of Uttoxeter, and 7 S.W. of Cheadle. It is a station on the Churnet Valley section of the North Staffordshire railway. Ashbourn is its post town. The village is situated near the confluence of the rivers Dove and Churnet. A canal passes from Uttoxeter to the Potteries, by which coal and lime are brought for the supply of the neighbourhood. The river Dove is crossed here by a bridge of 60 feet span, constructed by Fradgley in 1839. The soil is good, consisting for the most part of rich meadow and pasture land. The village, which is well built, has recently been lit with gas. A portion of the inhabitants are engaged in a large cotton mill, built by the late Sir Richard Arkwright. The par. comprises Rocester Green and four other hmlts. An abbey for Black Canons was founded here by Richard Bacoun in 1146; but no traces of it now remain. Its revenue at the Dissolution was valued at £111 11*s.* 7*d.* The impropriation belongs to the Dean and Canons of Windsor. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £150. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is an ancient edifice with a tower, and has been enlarged. It contains tombs of the Staffords, and two pillar crosses. There is also a district church at Denston, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £150. The parochial charities produce about £12 per annum, exclusive of other small donations bequeathed by the Bainbrigge and other families. There are British schools for both sexes. The Wesleyans and Baptists have each a place of worship. Dove Leys, Barrow Hill, and Woodseat are the principal residences. Wakes are held on the Sunday following 11th October.

ROCH, a par. in the hund. of Roose, co. Pembroke, 5 miles N.W. of Haverfordwest, its post town, and 10 from St. David's. The village is situated near St. Bride's Bay, and has, on the edge of a rocky ridge extending E. and W., a three-storied Norman tower of the Roches. It was erected in the 13th century by Adam de Rupe, and was garrisoned for Charles I. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £137. The church is dedicated to St. Mary.

ROCH, a small river of the co. of Lancaster, rises in the moors near Upper Knowsley, and running through Rochdale, joins the Irwell near Bury.

ROCHDALE, a par., market town, and parliamentary borough in the hund. of Salford, southern div. of co. Lancaster, 11 miles N. of Manchester, and 218 by rail from London. The town is situated on the river Roach or Roche, a tributary of the Irwell, whence it derives its name. Its population in 1801 was 8,542; in 1851 it was 29,195; and in 1861 it had increased to 38,184, occupying 7,705 houses. The population of the parish, which extends into the West Riding of Yorkshire, and covers an area of 58,620 acres, was 119,531 in 1861. The town occupies the site of a castle built by the Saxons at Castleton, and probably destroyed in conflicts between the Saxons and the Danes in the 11th century. Many of the streets are narrow and irregular, but great improvements have been lately made, several of the more important thoroughfares having been widened and rebuilt. The houses are generally built of brick, and in the older quarters the roofs are for the most part of stone, instead of slate. The streets are paved and lighted with gas, and there is an abundant supply of excellent water from four reservoirs in the neighbourhood. The river is crossed by five bridges, one of which, of light ironwork, is used by foot passengers only. The principal public buildings are the townhall, used also as a newsroom, a public hall for concerts, grammar, British, National, and other schools. The parish church, raised in honour of St. Chad, is situated on an elevated site, and is approached from the lower parts of the town by a flight of 122 steps. It was built in the 12th century, partly in the Norman and partly in the perpendicular style. It underwent considerable repairs in 1856, has a square embattled tower, besides several windows of tracery, and some ancient monuments.—The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Manchester, val. about £2,000, in the patron. of the bishop. Besides the parish church, there are St. Alban's, of recent erection, St. Mary's, and St. James's, and in the rural parts of the parish 17 other churches, the livings of which are all perpet. curs., varying in val. from £67 to £300. There are also two Baptist and two Independent chapels, and places of worship for Presbyterians, Lady Huntingdon's Connexion, Primitive, Association, and Wesleyan Methodists, Friends, Unitarians, and Roman Catholics. There is a Sunday-school attached to each church or chapel, which large numbers of children attend. Moss school is a well-endowed establishment, where 40 boys and 20 girls receive gratuitous instruction, and there is a free grammar school, founded in 1564 for about 45 boys, who pay a fee of £6 a year from the smallness of the endowment, and also an endowed girls' school.—Until the passing of the Reform Bill in 1832 Rochdale was unrepresented in parliament. It was then constituted a borough, the boundary to be a circle, with the townhall as a centre, and a radius of three-quarters of a mile, and returns one member. The constituency in 1865 was 1,416. The town is also a polling-place for the S. division of Lancashire. The municipal affairs are attended to by Improvement Commissioners, appointed in 1856 under a private bill. The town is divided into three wards, Castleton, Spotland, and Wardleworth; and the corporation consists of a mayor, ten aldermen, and thirty councillors, two aldermen and six councillors being apportioned to Spotland ward, and four aldermen and twelve councillors to each of the others. A county court is held in the town every fortnight, and manor courts, under an old charter to the Byron family, are held four times a year. The petty sessions court sits on every Monday, Wednesday, and Friday.—Markets are held on Mondays and Saturdays, and fairs on 14th May, Whit-Tuesday, and 7th November, for horses and cattle. There are also monthly Monday cattle fairs, and at particular parts of the year they are held every fortnight.—The town is under the jurisdiction of the county magistrates.—Rochdale was early celebrated as a manufacturing town. Some Flemings introduced the woollen trade in the reign of Edward III., and in the reign of Elizabeth it was in a flourishing condition. The entire district has shared in the rapid improvement which has marked the last century, and the manufactures are now important. In 1861 nearly 60 per cent. of the population over 20 years of age were engaged in industrial occupations, principally confined to mills, mines, and manufactures generally. The woollen and cotton trades are extensively followed in the town and the district immediately adjoining it, the latter in particular employing large numbers. There are about 160 factories, distributed in every available and accessible part of the town and neighbouring heights, where upwards of 11,000 persons are engaged in cotton mills and print works, where strong calicoes, fustians, and other coarse fabrics are made, and about 6,000 in flannel, baize, and other woollen factories. The power loom is now principally used, but there are still large numbers of handloom weavers. A considerable business is done also in the manufacture of machinery, at which about 1,150 are employed, and hat making is extensively followed. Three banks have offices in the town, and three co-operative societies have been established among the working classes, whose dealings amount to £380,000 yearly. The parish abounds in excellent coal, stone, and slate, and large quantities are extracted, the coal being principally consumed in the mills and foundries. Flags are quarried at Spotland, and iron ore has been found in the township of Butterworth. Great facilities exist for active business in the communications by water and rail. The Rochdale canal, which is 33 miles in length, and was completed at a cost of £600,000, unites to the eastward with the Calder and Ribble navigation at Halifax, and on the W. with the Duke of Bridgwater's canal, near Manchester, thus establishing a connection with the E. and W. seas, and with the chief seats of commerce in Yorkshire and Lancashire. One of the reservoirs supplying the canal with water is 130 acres in extent. A still more important means of communication is the Manchester and Leeds railway, which runs through this district, and gives considerable facilities to the trade of the town. At Littleborough, by which a Roman way formerly ran, a tunnel has been cut through the solid rock, 80 feet below the surface, and 2,860 yards in length, at a level of 500 to 600 feet above the sea. The family of Byron were Barons de Rochdale, and held the manor and estates for more than two centuries, but these were sold by Lord Byron, the poet, in 1823. They are said to extend over more than 32,000 statute acres. Many remains of antiquity have been found in the neighbourhood. In 1820 a small iron box was discovered, containing rouleau of brass coins of the Lower Empire, in very good preservation. At another place some Roman coins and the right arm, in silver, of a statue of Victory, were dug up, the latter 10 inches long, and weighing 6 ounces. About the wrist was a loose armilla, and another was fastened to it above the elbow; attached to the former was a plate of silver, inscribed, "Victoriæ Leg. VI. Vic. Val. Rufus. V.S.L.M." In the township of Castleton the mound of an ancient castle is still preserved. The Poor-law Union of Rochdale comprises the tnshps. of Spotland, Blatchinworth, Butterworth, Castleton, Wardleworth, and Wuerdle, with an area of 40,340 acres, and a population in 1861 of 91,754.

ROCHE. See ROACHE, cos. Cornwall and Louth.

ROCHE ABBEY, a ruined abbey in the West Riding co. York, 4 miles S.W. of Tickhill. It is situated in Sandbeck Park, the seat of the Earl of Scarborough, and was originally built in 1147 by Richard de Boulli for monks of the Cistercian order.

ROCHE CASTLE, a ruined castle in the co. of Wexford, Ireland. It is situated on the river Slaney, and formerly belonged to the Roches of Rochisland.

ROCHE POINT TOWER, a lighthouse on the E. side of Cork Harbour, Ireland, about 100 feet above sea level, and visible for 15 miles.

ROCHESTER, a city, market town, municipal and parliamentary borough, locally situated in the lathe of Aylesford, co. Kent, 8 miles from Gravesend, 26 N.W. of Canterbury, and 29 from London by road, or 30 by the North Kent railway, and 33 by the London, Chatham, and Dover line. It is situated on the right bank of the Medway, about 15 miles from the Nore, and is a place of considerable trade, having Sheerness and Maidstone as sub-ports. On the land side it is sheltered by a range of chalk hills, rising almost perpendicularly from the river, which is here crossed by an iron bridge, connecting this town with Strood, on the left bank of the Medway. The borough, as extended by the Reform Act, includes, besides the two parishes forming the City of Rochester, parts of Chatham, Frindsbury, and Strood. These places, being all immediately adjacent, form as it were one continuous town, though differing widely in appearance, and each having many objects of interest, requiring separate notice under their several heads.—Rochester is of very ancient date, and was once of more importance than at present. By the Romans it was called Durobrivis, and by the Saxons Hroffe-ceastre. King Æthelbert first raised the place into importance by enclosing it with a well-built wall; he also founded a priory, and made it the seat of a bishopric, to which St. Augustin ordained Justus in 604 as first bishop. It was frequently destroyed before the Norman conquest, having been besieged by Ethelred, and sacked and burnt several times by the Danes. William the Conqueror rebuilt the castle, the ruins of which still remain, and gave it to Bishop Odo, his brother, but he rebelling against William Rufus, this king besieged and took the castle into his own hands. In the three following reigns of Henry I., Stephen, and Henry II., Rochester was nearly destroyed by fire. In 1215 King John took the castle from the insurgent barons; in the following year it was retaken by Louis, Dauphin of France, but again retaken in 1217 by King John. In 1264 Simon de Montfort, Earl of Leicester, held possession of the city and castle for a short time. It was attacked by Wat Tyler at the time of his insurrection. The last king who took any interest in keeping the castle in proper repair was Edward IV. The Protestant martyrs were burnt here in 1556. Henry VIII., his daughter Elizabeth in 1573, and Charles II. soon after his restoration, paid visits to Rochester; and here it was that his brother, James II., embarked for France after his abdication. It was devastated by the plague in 1665. In consequence of the attack made on Rochester by the Dutch in the reign of Charles II., when they sailed up the Medway, it was fortified.—The chief object of interest in the town is the cathedral, which in parts is one of the most ancient churches in the kingdom. Originally a priory, founded about the year 604, it was rebuilt by Bishop Gundulph about 1076, and although partly burnt some fifty years afterwards, was restored and has now many portions of the old structure remaining. The tower on the N. side of the choir is called Gundulph's tower, the walls of which are 6 feet in thickness, and the nave is likewise part of the ancient building. The W. part is of the enriched Norman style of architecture. Bishop Gundulph's statue is in one of the towers. The extreme length of the cathedral, including the nave and choir, both of which are about the same length, is 306 feet; the principal transept is 122 feet, and the smaller transept 90 feet; the Norman W. front is 81 feet; the eastern part is chiefly of plain early English architecture; the tower which intersects the transepts is modern, having been erected so recently as 1825; and the whole building has within the last thirty years undergone thorough repair, at a cost of above £20,000. The crypt, which is ancient, is extensive. The original Chapter House has perished, but a modern one, though of mean pretensions, now answers the double purpose of Chapter House and library, in which there are some ancient MSS., among them the register of the diocese, the Textus Roffensis and the Custumale Roffense. The bishop holds his consistory court in one of the many chapels, called St. Mary's, or Henry VII.'s chapel. There are many monuments, tombs, and brasses of an ancient date, including that of St. Paulinus, who converted Edwin the Saxon King of Northumbria, and died here in 644. Lord Chancellor Morton, founder of Merton College, Oxford, has a monument of Limoges enamelled work. The diocese of Rochester, until the recent alterations made pursuant to the Commission of Inquiry issued 4th February, 1835, comprised the western part of the county of Kent and the peculiars of Iselham and Freckenham, but by Order in Council 8th August, 1845, so much of the county of Kent as was in the diocese and archdeaconry of Rochester, except the city and deanery of Rochester, was subtracted from this diocese, and added to those of Canterbury and London; and the county of Essex, except the parishes of Barking, Great Ilford, East Ham, West Ham, Little Ilford, Low Layton, Walthamstow, Wanstead, Woodford, and Chingford, was added, together with the whole county of Hertford. The whole of this diocese was under the jurisdiction of the Archdeacon of Rochester until the Order in Council just mentioned; that order places the new district or see of Rochester under the jurisdiction of the several archdeacons of Essex, Colchester, and St. Alban's, and suppresses the archdeaconry of Rochester upon its next avoidance. The peculiars were abolished by Orders in Council dated 8th August and 23rd December, 1845. Until these alterations the members of the cathedral body were the bishop, dean, archdeacon, and six prebendaries, one of these last being annexed to the provostship of Oriel College, Oxford, and another to the archdeaconry. At present there are, besides the bishop, the dean, archdeacons of Rochester, St. Alban's, Colchester, and Essex, with four canons and eight honorary canons.—The city is straggling, and extends for a considerable distance along the river banks. The principal street leads direct from the bridge into Chatham. Many improvements have been made during the last few years. The streets, though irregularly laid out, are well paved and lighted with gas. There are many good houses, especially in the environs and on the heights. The population in 1851 was 14,938, with 2,549 inhabited houses, which in 1861 had increased to 16,362, with 3,074 inhabited houses. It is well supplied with water from a reservoir at Gillingham. Many of the inhabitants are engaged in the general trade and in the oyster fisheries. Rochester owes much of its prosperity to being contiguous to the large naval and military station of Chatham.—The borough returns two members to parliament, the parliamentary bounds being co-extensive with the municipal. It was first chartered by Henry II., and under the new Act is divided into three wards, and is governed by a mayor, who is also the returning officer, six aldermen, and eighteen councillors, with the style of "mayor and citizens of the city of Rochester." The corporation revenue is about £5,500, partly derived from rents of the manor.—There is a large manufactory of patent steam-engines, for agricultural and other purposes. The bridge over the Medway was designed by Sir William Cubitt; it is of iron, with three arches, and was completed in 1858 at a cost of £200,000, defrayed in part from the bridge estate, the remainder being borrowed on mortgage. In the course of the building the wooden piles of the first bridge of the time of Henry I. were discovered. The second bridge, of stone, was built in the reign of Richard II., and was only destroyed when the present one, of iron, was begun. The London, Chatham, and Dover railway bridge is close to the new bridge, and entirely destroys the view on one side. The approach from the London side is striking. Rochester Castle, from its great antiquity, is an interesting ruin, though only the outer walls and towers remain. Bishop Gundulph's keep, which is yet standing, was in the south-eastern angle of the court; it is 104 feet high, 70 feet square, and about 12 feet thick, with four towers at the corners 20 feet higher—three square, and the one at the south-eastern angle round. All the walls are very thick, consisting of Kentish ragstone, bound together by Roman mortar or cement. The principal parts of the building remaining are the ruins of a gateway, the winding staircase, dungeon, fireplaces and galleries. The city has several public buildings, as the townhall, built in the reign of James II., and containing portraits of William III. and Queen Anne, by Sir Godfrey Kneller; the gaol, with a clock-house, built by Sir Cloudesley Shovel; and the County Court house, in the Elizabethan style of architecture, erected in 1862; besides these are the gasworks, customhouse, bank, theatre, assembly rooms, the Medway union workhouse, floating baths, and several commercial hotels. The general sick hospital, known as St. Bartholomew's, is situated in the New-road, and only just completed at a cost of above £20,000, a fourth of which was defrayed by the government, and the remainder by the Watt's charity and the St. Bartholomew estates. The revenues of the latter charity are to be in future devoted to its maintenance.—Rochester is the seat of a customs port of entry, and of an excise district. It is also a coastguard station, and one of the polling-places for the county elections. There is a separate commission of the peace for the city of Rochester. Quarter sessions are held here, as also a new County Court for the district, comprising the superintendent registries of Medway, Hoo, and North Aylesford, with the parishes of Burnham, Hartlip, Rainham, Upchurch, and Wouldham. It is chiefly comprised with Chatham within the Medway poor-law union, but the districts of Strood and Frindsbury are included in the North Aylesford union.—The city of Rochester comprises the two parishes of St. Margaret, and St. Nicholas with St. Clement's annexed. They are both vics.* in the dioc. of Rochester, the former, val. £389, in the patron. of the dean and chapter, and the latter, val. £150, in the patron. of the bishop. St. Margaret's church, with the exception of the tower, was partly rebuilt in 1824 on the site of an ancient foundation, and completed with considerable enlargements in 1840, and contains several old monuments. St. Nicholas church was originally built in 1420, but was partially rebuilt in 1624, and thoroughly restored a few years since. It contains a carved octagonal font. Some remains of St. Clement's church, which once stood on the N. side of High-street, near the bridge, were recently discovered and removed. Besides the two parish churches and cathedral within the city of Rochester there are several district churches, viz. St. Peter's, a Gothic structure, situated in Troy Town, erected in 1859 at a cost of £6,000; Strood church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, and rebuilt in 1812, with the exception of the tower; also the parish church of Frindsbury, an ancient structure, dedicated to All Saints. There are places of worship for Independents, Wesleyans, and Primitive Methodists, a Jewish synagogue, and a meeting-house belonging to the Society of Friends. The local charities and bequests produce near £5,000 per annum, exclusive of school endowments. The cathedral grammar school is the principal of the numerous educational establishments in the town. It was founded by Henry VIII. in 1542, and is richly endowed, besides having four exhibitions at Oxford or Cambridge, val. £40 yearly, during residence, two restricted to University College, Oxford, val. £45, during residence, and one of £5, in the gift of the head master, who is appointed by the dean and chapter, but not removable at their pleasure, as shown by the legal proceedings against the Rev. R. Whiston, M.A., which several years since attracted so much interest. The average number of scholars is about 60, a third of whom are King's scholars, receiving a free education and an annual allowance of £21 13*s.* 4*d.* Williamson's free mathematical school was founded in 1701 by Sir Joseph Williamson, who bequeathed £5,000, in perpetuity, for its support, but the income of which has now increased to above £11,000 per annum. It is free to the sons of freemen of Rochester, and has now about 70 pupils. While Colson was head master Garrick was a pupil. The Poor Travellers' House was founded and endowed by Richard Watts, in the reign of Queen Elizabeth, for six poor travellers, who are entitled each to fourpence, a supper, and a night's lodging. It bears an inscription stating that "neither rogues nor proctors will be admitted." The income is now nearly £4,000 per annum. The almshouses in the Maidstone-road cost about £10,000. St. Bartholomew's Hospital was founded originally for lepers at the time of the Crusades, but there being fortunately now no special applicants the revenues are appropriated to the general hospital. Besides the foundations above alluded to there are several National, British, and infant schools, a dispensary, savings-bank, and numerous minor charities.—Roman coins, and other antiquities have been found. Two newspapers are published in the town, the Rochester and Chatham Journal and the Rochester Gazette. It gave the title of earl to the Wilmots and Hydes, but is now extinct. Market days are Tuesdays and Fridays. Fairs are held on 30th May and 11th December, and a large cattle market on the first Monday in each month. Races take place in September on a 1½ mile course.

ROCHESTER-WARD a tnshp. in the par. of Elsdon, S. div. of Coquetdale ward, co. Northumberland, 11 miles N. of Bellingham, and 8 N.W. of Elsdon. The village, called High Rochester, is situated near the river Reed, and on the line of the Roman way Watling Street. It occupies the brow of a rugged eminence, once the site of the Roman Bremenium, a stipendiary city, and one of the strongest of the Roman stations in the N. The ruins of a wall 7 feet in thickness, chequered with ashlar-work, are still remaining on the W. and S.W. sides, and were defended by triple ramparts of earth. In excavating the ruins a hypocaust, altars, urns, and numerous Roman antiquities have been found. Horsley chapel-of-ease, built in 1844, is in this tnshp. It is dedicated to the Holy Trinity. There is a National school, endowed with a small annuity by Lord Redesdale, and under the inspection of government.

ROCHESTOWN, or BALLYWILLIAM, a par. in the bar. of Clanwilliam, co. Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 6 miles S. of Limerick. Six-mile Bridge is its post town. The surface, which consists generally of good land, extends along the river Camogue. The road to Bruff passes through the parish. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Cashel. It is united to Ballybricken in the Roman Catholic division. In this parish are ruins of a castle, built by the Roche family, to whom this territory was granted in the reign of Henry VII.

A monastery was established here by the Clangibbons in the 13th century, remains of which are seen near Six-mile Bridge.

ROCHESTOWN, a par. in the bar. of Iffa and Offa West, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 2½ miles S.E. of Cahir, its post town. The surface lies along the river Suir. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lismore, val. with Ardfinnan, £188, in the patron. of the bishop. The church has long been in ruins. It is united to Ardfinnan in the Roman Catholic arrangement. There is a school. The remains of an old castle and several raths and earthworks are to be traced.

ROCHESTOWN, a hmlt. in the bar. of Rathdown, co. Dublin, Ireland, 2 miles S. of Kingstown, and 7 S.E. of Dublin. It is situated on the S. side of Kingston Bay, and has an obelisk.

ROCHFORD, a hund. in the co. of Essex, contains the pars. of Ashendon, Barling, Canewdon, Eastwood, South Fambridge, Foulness, Hadleigh, Havengore, Hawkwell, Hockley, Leigh, Paglesham, Prittlewell, Rawleth, Rayleigh, Rochford, North and South Shoebury, Shopland, Southchurch, Great and Little Stambridge, Sutton, Great and Little Wakering, and part of Thundorsley, comprising an area of 57,980 acres.

ROCHFORD, a par., post, and market town in the above hund., co. Essex, 4 miles N. of Southend, 6 from Rayleigh, and 19 S.E. of Chelmsford. It is a polling-place for the county elections, and petty sessions town, also a sub-port to Maldon. It is situated on the small river Roche, a feeder of the Crouch, which latter is navigable to Broomhills, within about a mile of the town. It is mentioned in Domesday Book as having belonged to Suene, and in Henry II.'s time came to Guy Fitzeustace or de Rochefort, and through the St. Johns to the Child and Long families. The town is irregularly built, and consists of four streets, which are well paved and lighted with gas. There is an excellent supply of good water from a stream, and from a pump in the market place. The principal public buildings are the timbered townhall, a branch bank, savings-bank, and union poorhouse, erected in 1837. Petty sessions are held weekly on Thursday. A singular but ancient custom is performed by the tenants of this manor, inasmuch as they go from the "King's Head," at midnight on the first Wednesday after Michaelmas, to the Steward's "Lawless Court" on King's Hill, where business is done in whispers, and the minutes made with coal. The Poor-law Union comprises 24 parishes or places. Rochford Hall, the birthplace of Anne Boleyn, queen of Henry VIII., was nearly destroyed by fire at the end of the last century. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £570. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is an ancient structure, with a brick tower. The interior of the church contains a brass of M. Dilcok, bearing date 1514. The parochial charities produce about £42 per annum. There are National and British schools for both sexes, also almshouses for six inmates, founded by R. Rich, Earl of Warwick. The Independents and Wesleyans have each a place of worship. The stewards of the manor are Messrs. Coverdale. Market day is on Thursday. Fairs are held on Easter Tuesday and on the Wednesday following the 29th September.

ROCHFORD, a par. in the hund. of Wolphy, co. Worcester, 2 miles N.E. of Tenbury, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Teme, and is chiefly agricultural. A portion of the land, which is rich and fertile, is in hop grounds. Until recently this parish formed part of the county of Hereford. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £400. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is an ancient structure, exhibiting specimens of early architecture. The parochial charities produce about £8 per annum, distributed to the poor.

ROCHFORT-BRIDGE, a post town in the par. of Castlelost, bar. of Fartullagh, co. Westmeath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 7 miles S.W. of Kinnegad, on the Dublin and Athlone road. It contains the parish church, a police station, and a National school.

ROCK, a par. in the lower div. of Doddingtree hund., co. Worcester, 5 miles S.W. of Bewdley, its post town, and 5 W. of Stourport. It comprises the chplry. of Heightington and the hmlts. of Alton, Lindons, Hollin, and More. The village is wholly agricultural. The land is partly in hop grounds. The road from Bewdley to Tenbury passes through the parish. The neighbouring coal mines afford employment to some of the inhabitants. The living is a rect.* with the cur. of Heightington annexed, in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £1,100. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, is an ancient structure, with a massive square tower containing six bells. It was built prior to the Conquest, and has been thoroughly restored. A church has been recently erected at Far Forest, and is dedicated to the Holy Trinity. The parochial charities produce about £28 per annum, of which £5 goes to Edward VI.'s free grammar school, and £20 to Dr. Wall's almshouses. The Baptists, Wesleyans, and Primitive Methodists have each a place of worship.

ROCK, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Embleton, S. div. of Bambrough ward, co. Northumberland, 4½ miles N.E. of Alnwick, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. The soil is of a clayey and sandy nature, with a subsoil of clay. The chplry. comprises the hmlts. of Rock and Rennington. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Durham, val. £115, in the patron. of the Vicar of Embleton. The church, dedicated to SS. Philip and James, is an ancient stone edifice, with a belfry containing one bell. There is a free school, with an endowment of £7 per annum.

ROCK, a tnshp. in the par. of Stanton Lacy, co. Salop, 1 mile N.E. of Ludlow.

ROCKABILL, an islet off the coast of co. Dublin, Ireland, 5 miles N.E. of the Skerries.

ROCKBEARE, a par. in the hund. of East Budleigh, co. Devon, 6½ miles N.E. of Exeter, its post town, and 5½ W. of Ottery St. Mary. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the high road from Honiton to Exeter, and is wholly agricultural. The par. comprises the hmlts. of Marsh Green, Pithead, Allicombe, and Little Silver. The land is nearly evenly divided between arable and pasture, with about 200 acres of common. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £148, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, or St. Mary, is an ancient edifice, with a tower crowned with four pinnacles, and containing five bells. The parochial charities produce about £9 per annum. There is a village school of recent erection, endowed with an annuity of £25 by Mrs. Bigwood. There is a place of worship for the Independents at Marsh Green. Rockbeare House and Rockbeare Court are the principal residences. T. Porter, Esq., is lord of the manor.

ROCKBOURN, or ROCKBURNE, a par. in the hund. of Fordingbridge, Ringwood div. of co. Hants, 4 miles N.W. of Fordingbridge, its post town, and 9 S.W. of Salisbury. The par., which is of large extent, comprises the hmlts. of Brickhill and Sandhill Heath. The village is small, and wholly agricultural. The surface is hilly, and comprises a considerable extent of downs bordering on Salisbury Plain. The soil is principally a chalky loam, intermixed with clay. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £675, and the glebe contains 116 acres. The living is a don.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £624. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is an ancient structure, with a wooden tower containing a clock and three bells. The chancel was rebuilt in 1830, at the expense of Lady Coote. The church contains several monuments to the Coote family, including one to Sir Eyre Coote, the captor of Pondicherry. There are parochial schools for both sexes. Near the church are traces of an extensive nunnery, now a farmhouse. West Park is the principal residence. The Earl of Shaftesbury is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

ROCK CHANNEL, the southern approach to the Mersey, co. Chester, off New Brighton. It lies between Burbo Sand and the shore, and is in a line with Horse Channel. The passage is marked by a lighthouse 88 feet high, with a revolving minute light seen for 15 miles.

ROCKCLIFFE, a par. in the ward and co. of Cumberland, 4½ miles N.W. of Carlisle, its post town. It is a station on the Carlisle section of the Caledonian railway. The par. includes the tnshps. of Churchtown and Rockcliffe Castle, and the small vil. of Rockcliffe, situated to the E. of Port Carlisle. It is bounded on the N. by the river Esk, on the N.W. by the Solway Frith, and on the S.W. by the navigable river Eden. It anciently belonged to the Ratcliffes, from whom it takes its name, and subsequently to the Dacre and Strong families. Near the seashore is a mineral spring, the scum on which turns paper to a golden colour. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £100, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has a spired tower, and was rebuilt in 1848. The parochial charities produce about £3 per annum. The principal residences are Rockcliffe Hall and Castletown House, near which are the remains of the Dacres' old castle. The Earl of Lonsdale is lord of the manor.

ROCK-CLIFFE, a hmlt. in Darlington ward, co, Durham, 4 miles S.E. of Darlington, and 20 S. of Durham, near the rivers Skerne and Tees.

ROCKCORRY, a market town in the par. of Ematris, bar. of Dartree, co. Monaghan, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 4 miles N.E. of Cootehill. It is situated on the road from Cootehill to Monaghan. It consists chiefly of one well-built street, containing a market house, police station, and meeting-houses for Presbyterians and Wesleyans. There are a dispensary and a school. Wednesday is market day. Fairs are held on the last Wednesday in every month.

ROCKFIELD, a par. in the lower div. of Skenfreth hund., co. Monmouth, 2 miles N.W. of Monmouth, its post town, and 7 from Ragland. It is situated on the river Monnow. The Monmouthshire hounds meet in this parish. The village is small and wholly agricultural. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £60. The church is an ancient structure, dedicated to St. Kenelm. Rockfield House is the principal residence.

ROCKFIELD, a hmlt. in the par. of Tarbat, cos. Ross and Cromarty, Scotland, 5 miles S. of Tain. There are also numerous small places and private seats of this name in Ireland.

ROCKHAM, a hmlt. in the par. of Amberley, hund. of West Easwrith, rape of Arundel, co. Sussex, 6 miles N.E. of Arundel.

ROCKHAMPTON, a par. in the lower div. of Langley hund., co. Gloucester, 2 miles N.E. of Thornbury, its post town, and 6 from the Berkeley Road station on the Birmingham and Bristol railway. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. The surface is hilly, and where flat subject to inundation by the river Severn. The soil is marl, sand, and clay, and about 200 acres are boggy. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £283, and there are 21 acres of glebe. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £249. The church, dedicated to St. Oswald, is an ancient stone structure with a tower containing one bell. The parochial charities produce about £13 per annum. Major Peach is lord of the manor.

ROCKHILL, a hmlt. in the bar. of Upper Connello, co. Limerick, Ireland, 7 miles S. of Croom.

ROCKINGHAM, a par. and post town in the hund. of Corby, co. Northampton, 8 miles N. of Kettering, and 25 N.E. of Northampton. It is a decayed market town, situated on the declivity of a hill in Rockingham Forest, near the river Welland. In the Saxon times it was written Rockingaham, and has on the summit of a hill remains of a castle built by William I. for the protection of the extensive iron-works, then carried on in the adjacent woodlands. A council was held here in 1094 to settle the differences which had arisen between William Rufus and Archbishop Anselm respecting episcopal investiture. Sir Lewis Watson, Lord Rockingham, garrisoned the castle for Charles I., and was besieged in it by the parliamentary forces. The only remains are the two massive bastions which defended the entrance gateway. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £216. The church, dedicated to St. Leonard, is an ancient structure, partly battered by Cromwell. It contains effigies and monuments of Lords Rockingham and Sondes. The parochial charities produce about £17 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes. The trustees of the Hon. R. Watson are lords of the manor.

ROCK-ISLAND, a post-office vil. in the par. of Kilmoe, bar. of West Carbery, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 19 miles S.W. of Skibbereen. It is situated on a rocky peninsula near Crookhaven, and on the new road from Skibbereen. It contains a coastguard station and a dispensary. See also CROOKHAVEN.

ROCKLAND ALL SAINTS, a par. in the hund. of Shropham, co. Norfolk, 5 miles from Hingham, and 4 N.W. of Attleborough, its nearest railway station and post town. The Wayland union poorhouse is in this parish. The inhabitants are principally engaged in agriculture. The glebe comprises 31 acres, and the rector receives a rent-charge of £6 15*s.* out of the tithes of Rockland St. Peters. The living is a rect.* united with that of Rockland St. Andrew, joint val. £546, in the dioc. of Norwich. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient edifice with a square tower containing two bells. The parochial charities produce about £15 per annum. There is a National school.

ROCKLAND ST. ANDREW, a par. in the hund. of Shropham, co. Norfolk, 4 miles W. of Attleborough, its nearest railway station and post town, and 5 from Hingham. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. For ecclesiastical purposes this parish is now united with that of Rockland All Saints, the old church of St. Andrew having long been a ruin.

ROCKLAND ST. MARY, a par. in the hund. of Henstead, co. Norfolk, 6 miles S.E. of Norwich, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated in a valley near the river Yare. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture, and in the extensive market gardens. There are two brickfields and an iron foundry. Within this parish is a lake of 100 acres, navigable to the river Yare. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £400, and a modus of £5 5*s.* for Holverstone; the glebe comprises 33 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £330, in the patron. of Queen's College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is situated on an eminence, and has a thatched roof with a small square tower. In the churchyard are traces of St. Margaret's church. The register dates from 1558. There is a National school, built in 1839. Extreme S. of the village stands the New Inn, a resort for anglers. Sir C. H. Rich, Bart., is lord of the manor.

ROCKLAND ST. PETER, a par. in the hund. of Wayland, co. Norfolk, 5 miles N.W. of Attleborough, its nearest railway station and post town. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. The land is chiefly arable, with some pasture and meadow. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £260, and the glebe comprises 20 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £245. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient edifice with a round tower containing one bell. The Primitive Methodists and Wesleyans have each a place of worship. The parochial charities produce about £13 per annum.

ROCKLEY, a hmlt. in the par. of Askham, South Clay div. of Bassetlaw wap., co. Nottingham, 3 miles N.W. of Tuskford. It is situated on the river Mann, and has a small Wesleyan chapel.

ROCKLEY, a tythg. in the par. of St. Andrew Ogbourne, co. Wilts, 2 miles N.W. of Marlborough. There was formerly a Knights Templars' preceptory, founded in Henry II.'s time.

ROCKLEY, a hmlt. in the par. of Barkway, hund. of Edwinstree, co. Herts, 5 miles N.E. of Buntingford. In a wood here a bronze figure of Mars and some brass plates were found in 1743.

ROCKMILLS, a vil. in the par. of Nathlash, bar. of Fermoy, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 2 miles N.W. of Glanworth. It is situated on the road from Glanworth to Kildorrery, in the valley of the Funcheon. Near the village stands the parish church of Nathlash, and several large flour mills, from which it takes its name. Rockmill Lodge is the neighbouring seat.

ROCKNESS, a hmlt. in the par. of Horsley, co. Gloucester, 3 miles S.W. of Minchinhampton.

ROCKS, a hmlt. in the par. of Marshfield, co. Gloucester, 2 miles S. of Marshfield.

ROCKSAVAGE, a tnshp. in the par. of Runcorn, hund. of Bucklow, co. Chester, 2 miles N.E. of Frodsham. In a wood are the ruins of a mansion erected in Elizabeth's time by Sir John Savage, which afterwards passed to the Barrys and Cholmondeleys, who take hence the title of earl. The soil is of a clayey nature, with a subsoil of clay. The Marquis of Cholmondeley is lord of the manor.

ROCK, THE, a hmlt. in the par. of Mordiford, co. Hereford, 4 miles S.E. of Hereford.

ROCKVILLE, a hmlt. in the bar. of Decies-without-Drum, co. Waterford, Ireland, on the river Phinisk.

ROCKWELL GREEN, a hmlt. in the par. of Wellington, co. Somerset, near Wellington.

ROCKY ISLAND, in the tnshp. of Hartley, par. of Garsdon, co. Northumberland, 4 miles N. of Shields, and 5 S.E. of Blyth.

ROCKY ISLAND, an islet in Cork Harbour, co. Cork, Ireland, 6 miles S. of Cove. It is a limestone rock 42 feet above high-water mark, and is used as a powder magazine.

ROCLIFFE, a tnshp. in the par. of Aldborough, lower div. of Claro wap., West Riding co. York, 1½ mile S.W. of Boroughbridge, its post town, and 5 miles S.E. of Ripon. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the S. side of the river Ure, and is chiefly agricultural. There are brick and tile kilns. The soil is of a clayey nature, with a subsoil of clay. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £101. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has a tower containing one bell. There is a Church school, and a Sunday-school is held at the Church school-room. The Primitive Methodists have a place of worship. A. S. Lawson, Esq., is lord of the manor.

RODANSTOWN, a par. partly in the bar. of Upper Deece, co. Meath, and partly in the bar. of Ikeathy, co. Kildare, Ireland, 18 miles W. of Dublin. It is situated on the river Rye and Royal canal, and contains part of the village of Kilcock. The surface is undulating, and the soil fertile. The substratum abounds in coal and limestone. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Meath, val. with four others £400, in the patron. of the crown. The church is modern. The principal residence is Dollandstown.

RODBASTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Penkridge, co. Stafford, 1½ mile S.E. of Penkridge. It is situated on the line of the North-Western railway.

RODBORNE, or REDBORN, a tythg. and chplry. in the par. of St. Paul, Malmesbury, hund. of Malmesbury, co. Wilts, 2½ mile S.E. of Malmesbury, its post town. It is situated near the line of the Rodborne railway. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to the vic. of Malmesbury, in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol. The church is dedicated to the Holy Rood.

RODBORNE CHENEY, a par. in the hund. of Highworth, co. Wilts, 3 miles N.W. of Swindon, its post town. The parish is traversed by the Cheltenham railway, and by the North Wilts canal, which connects the Wilts and Berks with the Thames and Severn canal. The par. comprises the hmlts. of Even Swindon, Morden, Haydon, and Haydon Wick. Limestone is extensively quarried. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £110. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure with a square tower in the centre containing five bells. The church was restored and enlarged in 1848. The parochial charities produce about £47, of which £43 goes to Wayt's endowed school. The Independents have a place of worship.

RODBOROUGH, a par. in the hund. of Longtree, co. Gloucester, 10 miles from Gloucester, and 1 S.W. of the Stroud railway station. The village, which is large, is situated on the S. bank of Stroud Water, and on the high road from Cirencester to Stroud. It was formerly a hamlet in the parish of Minchinhampton, but is now a separate parish and petty-sessions town belonging to Halliday of Froom Hall. It has traces of a Roman camp and watch-tower on Rodborough Hill, near Woodchester. A large portion of the inhabitants are employed in the woollen mills. The surface is varied by hill and valley. The soil in the uplands is thin, being a mixture of sand and stone upon a subsoil of oolite rock, but in the valleys it is rich and luxuriant pasture. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £300. The church, dedicated to St. Mary Magdalen, is a modern stone structure with a tower containing one bell. The tower is old, and belonged to the ancient church, which was once a chantry of the priory of Minchinhampton. In connection with this church is a morning lectureship endowed by Edmund de Rodborough and Hugh de Neteling, and is in the gift of Brasenose College, Oxford. There are two endowed schools for both sexes in connection with the church, also Foreign and British schools. The Independents have a place of worship. In 1638 Richard Clutterbuck, a blind mechanical genius, was born here, as was also Sir Andrew Halliday. T. Marling, Esq., is lord of the manor.

RODD, a hmlt. in the par. of Presteign, hund. of Wigmore, co. Hereford, 2 miles S.E. of Presteign. It is in conjunction with Little Brampton and Nash to form a township.

RODDAM, a tnshp. in the par. of Ilderton, N. div. of Coquetdale ward, co. Northumberland, 5 miles S.E. of Wooler, and 1 mile S. of Ilderton. It was given to Poulane, or Pulleine, an ancestor of the Roddam family, by Athelstane, after the battle of Brunaburgh. Roddam Hall is the principal residence.

RODDEN, a par. in the hund. of Frome, co. Somerset, 2 miles S.E. of Frome, its post town and railway station, and 116 W. of London. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the road from Frome to Warminster. The inhabitants are engaged in agriculture, and in the manufacture of kerseymeres. The soil is chiefly of a light nature upon a subsoil of clay. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £220. The church, which was erected in 1640, has a small tower containing one bell. The register dates from 1654. There is a school for both sexes, also a Sunday-school.

RODDEN, a hmlt. in the par. of Abbotsbury, co. Dorset, 7 miles S.W. of Dorchester.

RODDEN, a river of the co. of Salop, rises in Whixall Moss, and joins the Tern near Wrockwardine.

RODEN, a tnshp. in the par. of Ercall-Magna, co. Salop, 6 miles N.W. of Wellington, on the river Rodden.

RODE, NORTH, a tnshp. in the par. of Prestbury, hund. of Macclesfield, co. Chester, 3½ miles N.E. of Congleton, its post town, and 5 S.W. of Macclesfield. It is a station on the North Staffordshire railway. The village, which is of small extent, is situated near the canal and the river Dane. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Chester, val. £150. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, has a tower containing a clock and one bell. The church contains several stained windows. There is an endowed school for both sexes. Rode Hall is the principal residence. The Rev. J. Daintry is lord of the manor.

RODE, ODD, a tnshp. in the par. of Astbury, hund. of Norwich, co. Chester, 4 miles S.W. of Congleton. The Grand Trunk canal passes through the township. There is a village school.

RODHUISH, a hmlt. and chplry. in the par. of Carhampton, co. Somerset, 4 miles S.W. of Watchet, and 3 S.E. of Dunster, near the Bristol Channel. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic. of Carhampton, in the dioc. of Bath and Wells.

RODING. See ROOTHING, co. Essex.

RODINGTON, a par. in the Wellington div. of South Bradford hund., co. Salop, 7 miles from Shrewsbury, its post town, and 4½ N.W. of Wellington. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the Shrewsbury canal and river Rodden. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The par. comprises the tnshps. of Rodington and Sugden. The glebe consists of 35 acres. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £270. The church, dedicated to St. George, is a modern edifice. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. The parochial charities produce about £18 per annum, arising from legacies.

RODLEY, a tythg. in the par. of Westbury-on-Severn, co. Gloucester, 3½ miles E. of Newnham. It is situated on the river Severn.

RODLEY, a hmlt. in the par. of Calverley, wap. of Morley, West Riding co. York, 4 miles N.W. of Leeds, and 5 N.E. of Bradford. It is situated near the river Aire, and the line of the North Midland railway.

RODMARTON, a par. and tnshp. in the hund. of Longtree, co. Gloucester, 3 miles S.W. of Tetbury Road railway station, and 6 S.W. of Cirencester. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the Roman Fosse Way, and is chiefly agricultural. Rodmarton comprises the tythg. of Calkerton, and had a grange to a priory cell at Hasledon. Near the site of the Roman station at Hocbery a tessalated pavement was discovered in 1636, and brass coins of Antoninus and Valentinian. The surface is generally level, affording good pasture for sheep, with a small portion of rich meadow land. The soil consists of a light loam upon a subsoil of oolite, which is quarried for building purposes. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Enclosure Act in 1792, and the glebe contains about 600 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £525. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient stone structure with a spired tower. The interior of the church contains several monuments, also a brass of Edwards, a lawyer, bearing date 1471. The register dates from 1605. The parochial charities produce about £19 per annum, of which £4 goes to Coxe's schools. Tarlton Manor House is now a farm dwelling. — Gordon, Esq., is lord of the manor. Samuel Lysons, President of the Royal Society, and author of several learned works, including the "Magna Britannia" and "Reliquiæ Britanniæ Romanæ," was born in 1763, as was also his brother, the author of the "Environs of London."

RODMELL, a par. in the hund. of Holmstrow, rape of Lewes, co. Sussex, 3½ miles S. of Lewes, its post town, and 54 from London. The village, which is of small extent, is situated near the river Ouse, and on the high road from Lewes to Newhaven. It is wholly agricultural. The Roman way Ermine Street passes through the parish. The surface is hilly, and above half the land is meadow and pasture. The soil is a hazel loam. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £480. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £375, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient edifice, with a square tower surmounted by a shingled spire. There was formerly a chapel-of-ease at Northese. The register dates from 1705. The Earl of Abergavenny is lord of the manor.

RODMERSHAM, a par. in the hund. of Milton, lathe of Scray, co. Kent, 1½ mile S.E. of Sittingbourne, its post town, and 10 miles S.E. of Chatham. The village, which is of small extent, is chiefly agricultural. The Tickham hounds meet in this parish. The land is partly in hop-grounds. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £412, and the vicarial for £142, and the glebe comprises 5 acres. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £115. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, originally belonged to the Knights of St. John of Jerusalem. It is a large ancient structure, with a square embattled tower at the W. end, built of square bricks. The interior of the church contains four canopied stalls, and a stained figure of Edward the Confessor. There are two Sunday-schools, also a place of worship for the Bible Christians.

RODNEY, STOKE, a par. in the hund. of Winterstoke, co. Somerset, 5 miles N.E. of Wells, its post town, and 125 W. of London. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. A great portion of the land is devoted to pasture. The par. comprises the hmlt. of Draycott. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £339, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Leonard, is an ancient stone edifice, with a tower containing four bells. The interior of the church contains a screen, bearing date 1624, the gift of Sir E. Rodney, of whose family there are monuments. The register dates from the 17th century. The parochial charities produce about £3 10*s.* per annum, independent of an annuity of £300 for the poor of Draycott hamlet. There is a Church school for both sexes, also a Sunday-school. F. Parsons, Esq., is lord of the manor.

RODSLEY, a hmlt. in the par. of Longford, hund. of Appletree, co. Derby, 4 miles S.E. of Ashborne. There is a chapel for Wesleyans, also a school.

ROE, a river of the co. of Londonderry, Ireland, falling into Lough Foyle.

ROE, an islet in Clew Bay, co. Mayo, Ireland. It has a small but safe harbour.

ROEBURNDALE, a tnshp. in the par. of Melling, hund. of Lonsdale South of the Sands, co. Lancaster, 9 miles N.E. of Lancaster. It is situated on the river Water, which flows to the Hindburn, near Hornby.

ROEHAMPTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Putney, W. div. of Brixton hund., co. Surrey, 8 miles S.W. of St. Paul's, London. It is situated near the Thames, at the western extremity of Putney Heath. In the vicinity are several villas of the nobility and gentry, including Roehampton Grove, formerly called Putney Park, built by the Earl of Portland in the reign of Charles I. It had a chapel attached, which was taken down in 1777 by Thomas Parker, Esq., who built a new chapel at a short distance. This place suffered great injury from a violent hurricane, which occurred 15th October, 1780.

ROE-INCLOSURE COTTAGE, an ext. par. place in Fordingbridge hund., Ringwood div. of co. Hants.

ROEL. See ROWELL, co. Gloucester.

ROFFORD, a lib. in the par. of Chalgrove, hund. of Ewelme, co. Oxford, 4 miles N.W. of Watlington, and 4½ S.W. of Tetsworth.

ROGART, a par. in the co. of Sutherland, Scotland. It extends in length about 17 miles from S.E. to N.W., with an extreme breadth of about 9 miles, and is bounded by the pars. of Farr, Clyne, Golspie, Dornoch, Criech, and Lairg. The surface is of a hilly character, being composed of two valleys, and separated by a group of rocky hills, some of which rise from 800 to 1,000 feet above the level of the sea. It is traversed by the rivers Brora and Fleet, the former rises in the extreme N., and flows into the Clyne, while the river Fleet arises from a lake, and falls into the Dornoch. There are none but wooden bridges. The vales of Strathbrora and Strathfleet, which derive their names from the above-mentioned streams, vary in breadth from a few yards to near a mile, occupying the principal portion of the parochial area. Gneiss is the prevailing rock. The lands in the straths are liable to be overflowed. The soil at the bottom of the valleys and on the skirts of the hills is of a sandy and gravelly nature. Peat moss abounds to a great extent. The village is distant about 6 miles N.W. of Golspie, and is situated nearly on the summit of a high hill; hence it derives its name from Rogh Ard, or "very high." In the parish are many traces of Picts' houses, Danish camps, and tumuli. This par. is in the presb. of Dornoch and synod of Sutherland and Caithness. The stipend of the minister is £155. The church, erected in 1777, is situated on an eminence. There are a Free church, a parochial school, and two other schools. The Duke of Sutherland owns most part of the land.

ROGATE, a par. in the hund. of Dumpford, rape of Chichester, co. Sussex, 4 miles E. of Petersfield, its post town, and 6 W. of Midhurst. The village is situated on the road from Midhurst to Petersfield, near the river Rother, and is chiefly agricultural. Rogate was held by Ralph de Camois in Edward III.'s time, and was subsequently granted by the crown to William Earl of Southampton in the reign of Henry VIII. The parish borders on the county of Hampshire, and the land is partly in common. Limestone is abundant. At Durford, in this parish, are remains of an abbey founded in 1160 by Henry Hoes, for Premonstratensian canons, and dedicated to St. John the Baptist. Its revenue at the Dissolution was estimated at £98 4*s.* 5*d.* The impropriation belongs to the landowners. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £212. The church, dedicated to St. Bartholomew, is of great antiquity, and was enlarged in 1841. The register commences from 1558. The Independents have a place of worship. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum. There is a school of a private character, entirely supported by the Hon. Mrs. Carnegie. Rogate Lodge, Fair-Oak, and Fyning House are the principal residences. A pleasure fair is held 27th September.

ROGERICALVI, an ancient par. in the co. of Cork, Ireland, now united with Templemolaga.

ROGERSTONE, a hmlt. in the par. of Bassaleg, upper div. of Wentllooge hund., co. Monmouth, 2½ miles W. of Newport.

ROGERSTOWN BAY, a harbour on the coast of co. Dublin, Ireland, 2 miles S. of Lusk. It has a pier, but the harbour is shallow.

ROGGIETT, a par. in the lower div. of Caldicott hund., co. Monmouth, 6 miles S.W. of Chepstow, its post town, and 10 from Usk. The village consists of a few scattered houses. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £65 17*s.* The living is a rect. united with that of Ifton, in the dioc. of Llandaff, joint val. £390.

ROGIE, a cascade in Strathgarve, co. Ross, Scotland.

ROKE, a hmlt. in the par. of Bensington, co. Oxford, 2 miles N.E. of Wallingford.

ROKEBY, a par. in the wap. of Gilling-West, North Riding co. York, 17 miles S.W. of Darlington, its post town, and 3 S.E. of Barnard Castle. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the rivers Tees and Greta. The Roman way to Brough led through the parish, which was the site of an ancient encampment, near which various inscribed stones and other Roman relics have been found. The inhabitants are chiefly agricultural. The surface is undulating. The soil is of a loamy and clayey nature, with a subsoil of clay. The par. includes Greta Bridge and Mortham, the old town of the Rokebys, who give name to Sir W. Scott's last poem. This place was also the favourite retreat of the poet Mason. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val £160. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, was erected by Sir Thomas Robinson in the last century, and was fitted up with oak stalls in 1855. There is a parochial school. W. J. S. Morritt, Esq., is lord of the manor and owner of the soil. Rokeby Hall is the principal residence. In a close adjoining the embattled keep of Mortham, the ancient residence of the Rokebys, is a large tomb, removed thither from Egglestone Abbey.

ROLESTOWN, a hmlt. in the bar. of Nethercross, co. Dublin, Ireland, 4 miles N.W. of Swords.

ROLLESBY, a par. in the hund. of West Flegg, co. Norfolk, 5 miles N.E. of Acle, its post town, and 8 N.W. of Yarmouth. The village, which is large but irregularly built, is chiefly agricultural. The Flegg union poorhouse is situated within this parish. The greater part of the land is arable, with some meadow, pasture, and woodland. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £644, and the glebe comprises 7 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £642. The church, dedicated to St. George, is an ancient structure, with a circular tower and octangular turret. The register dates from 1558. The parochial charities produce about £19 per annum. The Baptists have a place of worship. There is a National school, which is maintained by subscriptions.

ROLLESTON, a chplry. in the par. of Billesdon, hund. of Gartree, co. Leicester, 2 miles S.E. of Billesdon, its post town, and 9 S.E. of Leicester. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. The soil consists of a strong stiff clay, and the land is chiefly in pasture. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic.* of Billesdon, in the dioc. of Peterborough. The church, dedicated to St. John, has a square embattled tower, and is nearly obscured from sight by yew trees and shrubs. A cross of great antiquity stands on the S. side, and appears in good condition. Rolleston Hall is the principal residence. It is situated in well-wooded grounds, in which is a pond abounding in fish. The hall contains some paintings of Charles II.'s time. The estate has been improved of late years by H. Greene, Esq., who is lord of the manor.

ROLLESTON, a par. in the wap. of Thurgarton, co. Nottingham, 5 miles S.W. of Newark, its post town, 3 S.E. of Southwell, and 1 mile W. of the Fiskerton railway station. The village, which is small, is situated at the confluence of the rivers Greet and Trent. It is wholly agricultural. The par. includes the tnshps. of Rolleston and Fiskerton. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £246, in the patron. of the Chapter of the Collegiate Church of Southwell. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, is an ancient structure with a tower containing four bells. The parochial charities produce about £7 per annum. J. H. M. Sutton, Esq., is lord of the manor.

ROLLESTON, a par. and tnshp. in the N. div. of Offlow hund., co. Stafford, 3½ miles N.W. of Burton-on-Trent, its post town, and 1½ mile from Tutbury station on the North Staffordshire railway. It comprises the tnshps. of Rolleston and Anslow. The village is situated in a valley on the river Dove, and is chiefly agricultural. Petty sessions are held every Monday. The Hoar Cross hounds meet in this parish. The land is chiefly meadow and pasture, with some arable, and a considerable extent of ozier beds. The soil on the high lands is a strong loam, but in the valleys rich pasture. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £664. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure, with a spired tower containing a clock and five bells. The chancel contains a monument to the Caldwell family, and in the S. aisle is a monument and effigy to Sir E. Mosley, Knt. The church was thoroughly restored in 1845. The register dates from 1569. The parochial charities produce about £195 per annum, of which £142 is the endowment of Roulston's almshouses, called the Hospital, and £37 belongs to Bishop Sherbourne's free school. There is also an infant school, which is under Government inspection. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. Rolleston Hall, the principal residence, is situated in a richly-wooded park. Sir O. Mosley, Bart., is lord of the manor.

ROLLINGTON, a tythg. in the par. of Corfe Castle, co. Dorset, near Corfe Castle.

ROLLRIGHT, or ROLLRICH, GREAT, a par. in the hund. of Chadlington, co. Oxford, 3 miles N.E. of Chipping-Norton, its post town, and 8 from Shipston-on-Stour. The village, which is of small extent, is chiefly agricultural. It is mentioned in Domesday Survey as Rollendri. About two-thirds of the land are arable, and the remainder meadow and pasture. The soil is fertile, and the pasture rich. This place is celebrated for its breed of sheep. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Enclosure Act in 1775. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £250, in the patron. of Brasenose College. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, has a lofty square embattled tower. It contains a tomb to Shepheard, the friend of Prior, and on the S. side a Norman porch, near which last is an ancient cross. The parochial charities produce about £81 per annum, £11 of which goes to the almshouses. There is a school with a small endowment. There is a chapel belonging to the Rev. Mr. Bulteel, also a place of worship for the Baptists.

ROLLRIGHT, LITTLE, a par. in the hund. of Chadlington, co. Oxford, 2 miles S.W. of Great Rollright, and 3 N.W. of Chipping-Norton. In this parish, which is of small extent, bordering on Warwickshire, are the ruins of a Druidical temple, consisting of about 30 stones, varying in height from 5 to 7 feet, and arranged in a circle, with the king stone 9 feet high, 7 feet broad, and 12 inches in thickness, in the adjoining county of Warwick; while to the E. is a kistvaen, or stone chest, and about 300 yards from the circle are also five stones, called the Whispering Stones. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £130. The church was built in 1617.

ROLLS LIBERTY, an ext. par. place in the Holborn div. of Ossulstone hund., co. Middlesex, half a mile W. of St. Paul's, London. It contains the Rolls Court, with chapel, and a large block of building forming one side of the Record Repository.

ROLLSTONE, or ROWLESTON, a par. in the hund. of Elstub, co. Wilts, 10 miles N. of Salisbury, 6½ W. of Amesbury, and half a mile S. of Shrewton. Devizes is its post town. The village, which is of small extent and wholly agricultural, is situated on the road from Salisbury to Devizes. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £170, and the glebe contains 5 acres. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £150. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is an ancient edifice, and has recently undergone thorough restoration. W. A. Heathcote, Esq., is lord of the manor.

ROLVENDEN, a hund. in the lathe of Scray, co. Kent, contains the pars. of Benenden and Rolvenden, comprising an area of 12,450 acres.

ROLVENDEN, a par. and post town in the above hund., lathe of Scray, co. Kent, 3 miles S.W. of Tenterden, and the same distance N. of Newenden. The village, which is considerable, is situated in a healthy spot, and in the neighbourhood are many well-built residences. A portion of the land is in hop grounds. The soil consists of clay and loam. The appropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £558, the vicarial for £43 10*s., and the glebe comprises 8 acres. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £104, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Rochester. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient stone structure, with a lofty tower containing eight bells. The interior of the church contains a font, tablets to the Gybbon and Monypenny families, and a brass inscription bearing date 1444. The chancel has a painted window, the gift of Major Willcock in 1848. The register dates from Henry VIII.'s time. The parochial charities produce about £158 per annum, of which £141 goes towards Gibbon's school. The Wesleyans and Unitarians have each a place of worship. F. Morrison, Esq., is lord of the manor and chief landowner.

ROMALD-KIRK, a par. and tnshp. in the wap. of West Gilling, North Riding co. York, 6 miles S.W. of Barnard-Castle railway station, and 4 N.W. of Middleton-in-Teesdale. Darlington is its post town. Romaldkirk is a polling-place for the county elections, and comprises Laithkirk-in-Lunedale, Cotherston, Hunderthwaite, and three other tnshps. The village, which is considerable, is on the river Tees. A large portion of the land is in moor and pasture. The tithes were commuted for land under an Act of Enclosure in 1811. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £750. The church, dedicated to St. Ronald, is a cruciform structure with a square tower crowned with pinnacles and containing three bells. The interior of the church has an effigy of Sir H. Fitzhugh, bearing date 1320. There is also a district church at Laith-Kirk, the living of which is a perpet. cur.,* val. £103. The parochial charities produce about £47 per annum, of which £20 goes to a free school conducted on the National system. There are almshouses for 6 poor persons, with an annuity of £14 each. The rector is lord of the manor. A cattle fair is held on the first Thursdays in April and October.

ROMAN, a river of the co. of Essex, rises near Coggeshall, and joins the Colne at Wivenhoe.

ROMANBY, a tnshp. and vil. in the par. of Northallerton, wap. of Allertonshire, North Riding co. York, half a mile S.W. of Northallerton, its nearest railway station and post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the Great North of England railway. It derived its name from the Roman way to Stamford Bridge.

ROMANSLEIGH, a par. in the hund. of Witheridge, co. Devon, 3 miles S.E. of South Molton, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the Roman way which came from near Taunton and went to Stratton. The inhabitants are wholly engaged in agriculture. It is a meet for the Eggesford hounds. The glebe comprises 150 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £183. The church is dedicated to St. Rumon. There is a Sunday-school.

ROME, a hmlt. in the tnshp. and par. of Giggleswick, wap. of Staincliff, West Riding co. York, 2 miles N.W. of Settle. It is situated in the vale of the Ribble, under the Scar, a lofty limestone rock.

ROMFIELDS, a hmlt. in the par. of St. Peter, hund. of Thanet and lathe of St. Augustine, co. Kent, near Margate.

ROMFORD, a par., post and market town in the lib. of Havering-atte-Bower, co. Essex, 6 miles S.W. of Brentwood, 8 N.E. of Barking, and 12 N.E. of London. It is a station on the Great Eastern railway. It is supposed to derive its name from a ford over a small stream called the Rom, a branch of the river Thames, which intersects the town, and is now crossed by a bridge. The parish formed part of Hornchurch up to 1786. Romford is a polling-place for the county elections, and a petty sessions town. It was the Roman Durolitum, and after the Roman conquest was held by the Mowbrays, Berkeleys, and Newmans. The town has several good streets, the two principal of which cross each other at right angles. It contains many good houses and shops, and several public buildings. The town is lighted with gas, and well supplied with good water. It was first chartered by Edward the Confessor, but since that monarch's time has received many additions and confirmations to its charter. The government is now invested in a high steward, three justices of the peace, and a local board of health appointed under the Health of Towns' Act. The public buildings consist of a townhall, situated in the market-place, gas works, literary institute, and county court house. Petty sessions are held every Friday, and quarter sessions for the liberty on the Friday succeeding the county quarter sessions. There are agricultural implement works and foundries, also extensive brewing and malting establishments. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in agriculture and in the establishments above mentioned. Market gardening is carried on to a considerable extent. The tithes were given by William of Wickham to the warden and fellows of New College, Oxford. The living is a vic. with the cur. of Noak Hill annexed, in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £700, in the patron. of New College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Edward, has a spired and embattled tower containing a clock and eight bells. It has a side chapel, and in the E. window is the figure of the patron saint in old painted glass. The interior of the church contains effigies of Sir G. Hervey and Sir Anthony Coke, of Gidea Hall, at which place he entertained Queen Elizabeth in 1568. The present structure was rebuilt in 1849—50, on the site of the original structure erected in 1407. The parochial charities produce about £560 per annum. There are National and infant schools. The Independents, Wesleyans, Baptists, and Catholics have places of worship. The union poorhouse is situate a short distance from the town. Quarles the poet, and his son the royalist, were natives of this parish. The market, held on Wednesday, was granted in 1247, and is the general market for all kinds of agricultural produce, cattle, &c.; there is also a market on Tuesday for calves, and one for swine was formerly held on Monday. A fair is held on Midsummer Day for horses and cattle.

ROMILEY. See CHADKIRK, co. Chester.

ROMNEY MARSH, a lib. in the lathe of Shepway, co. Kent, contains the cinque-port town of Romney, and the pars. of Blackmanstone, Burmarsh, Dymchurch, Hope All Saints, Ivychurch, Lydd, St. Mary, Midley, Newchurch, Orgarswick, Snargate, Snave, and parts of Aldington, Appledore, Bilsington, Bonnington, Brenzett, Brookland, Broomhill, Hurst, West Hythe, Kenardington, Lympne, Newington, Orlestone, Rockinge, Sellinge, and Warehorne, comprising together above 45,000 acres, a great part of which has been reclaimed from the sea by various innings, and is protected by a sea-wall called Dymchurch Wall, extending 3 miles in length, and from 12 to 20 feet high, which is the sole barrier that prevents the sea from overflowing the whole of the level. It gives name to a Poor-law Union comprising 19 parishes or places; the workhouse being at New Romney. It is also the seat of new County Court and superintendent registry districts. Denge Marsh, with Southbrooks and Guildford Marsh, both adjoining Walland Marsh, are under the jurisdictions of separate commissions of sewers.

ROMNEY, NEW, a par., cinque-port, post and market town in the lib. of Romney Marsh, having separate jurisdiction, co. Kent, 5 miles N. of Dungeness, and 7 S.E. of Ham Street station on the Hastings and Ashford line of railway. It is a borough by prescription, a polling-place for the county, and a coastguard station. The town is situated near Romney Sound, on an eminence about the centre of the Marsh, and arose from the decay of the haven at Old Romney, by the retiring of the sea, and in contradistinction to that town was called New Romney. It was once a place of considerable importance, and is mentioned in Domesday Survey as Romenel, at which time it consisted of 12 wards, and contained 5 churches, a priory, and a hospital, with a good harbour. It was soon after that period given by William the Conqueror to his brother Odo, Bishop of Bayeux, and subsequently made a cinque port, but in Edward I.'s time it was much damaged by an irruption of the sea, which diverted the course of the river Rother, and ruined its haven on the western shore. In the reigns of Edward III., Henry VII., and Henry VIII., it furnished a complement of five ships to the royal fleet, but has never recovered its ancient prosperity: though still respectably inhabited, it has fallen into decay as a port, and has scarcely any trade except that arising from the grazing of cattle. It received its first charter of incorporation from Edward III., and a new charter from Elizabeth, by which the corporation consists of a mayor, 12 jurates, with a recorder, town-clerk, &c., under the style of "mayor, jurates, and commonalty," who returned two members to parliament till disfranchised by the Reform Bill. A court, called a Brotherhood and Guestling, connected with the business of the various cinque ports, was wont to be held on the Tuesday next after St. Margaret's Day, also sessions quarterly, and by adjournment every six weeks. The population of the parish in 1861 was 1,062. Many of the inhabitants are graziers. The town, which chiefly consists of one long street, with a smaller one intersecting it almost at right angles, is well paved and lighted with gas from works established in 1854. The new County Court is held every alternate month. It contains a small gaol, guildhall, Romney Marsh union poorhouse, and a market-house. This place gives the title of earl and baron to the Marshams of Mote Park. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £161, in the patron. of All Souls' College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, has a lofty square tower at the W. end, containing a peal of eight bells. The interior of the church contains an ancient font, piscina, several tombs, and 3 brasses of T. Lamberd, one bearing date 1570. There are places of worship for Baptists and Wesleyans, also National schools erected in 1820. The parochial charities produce about £123 per annum, of which £112 is the endowment of Southland's hospital or almshouses. Market day is on Saturday. A fair for sheep and lambs is held on 21st August.

ROMNEY, OLD, a par. in the cinque-port lib. of New Romney, lathe of Shepway, co. Kent, 2 miles N.W. of New Romney. The town had a good haven in the Saxon times, but was a decayed place prior to the Conquest, and shortly after was superseded in its maritime privileges and prosperity by New Romney. The greater part of the land is rich marsh pasture, except about 200 acres, which are arable. There was formerly a cell subordinate to the abbey of Pountney, or Pontignac, in France, also a hospital for lepers, founded by Adam de Chorring, and subsequently converted into a chantry, which in 1481 became annexed to the college of St. Mary Magdalene, in Oxford. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £246, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church, dedicated to St. Clement, is an ancient edifice, with a spired tower containing three bells. The interior of the church has been recently restored: it contains some brasses, one of which is to J. Ips.

ROMSEY, or RUMSEY, a post and market town, and municipal borough, locally in the lower half hund. of King's Somborne, Romsey div. of co. Hants, 73 miles S.W. of London, by road, or 80 by the South-Western railway, on which it is a station. It is situated on the left bank of the river Test, here crossed by a bridge, and the Andover canal runs through the town. Romsey is one of the most ancient towns in England, and has been classed by Dr. Stukely as a Roman city under the name of Arminis; the journal of the British Archæological Association also records the finding of Roman coins in the neighbourhood. It was a place of considerable importance under the Saxon kings, and is chiefly famous on account of the abbey of Benedictine nuns, which was founded by Edward the Elder in the 10th century, and of which he made his daughter abbess. Soon afterwards the Danes effected a landing, and pillaged the monastery. Edgar, the grandson of Edward the Elder, greatly enlarged it, and his son was buried here. Another royal lady, in the person of Mary, youngest daughter of King Stephen, subsequently became abbess. After its surrender to Henry VIII. it was made a parish church. The town was first chartered by James I., and is now governed by a mayor, 4 aldermen, and 12 councillors, with the title of "mayor, aldermen, and burgesses of the town of Romsey Infra." The population in 1851 was 2,080, which in 1861 had increased to 2,116. The application of steam to machinery has been the cause of removal of many extensive manufactures to places where coal could be more readily procured, but there are still paper and flax spinning-mills. The town is paved and lighted with gas. It contains a townhall; an audit-house, supported on pillars, with a market below; a borough gaol, union poorhouse, literary and scientific institution, newsrooms, two branch banks, and the hundred bridge over the river Test or Anton, also a young men's reading society and a young men's mutual improvement association. There are tanneries, malt-houses, breweries, gas-works, and corn, paper, and flax mills. The inhabitants are principally engaged in the general trade. The town is a polling-place for the county elections, and the centre of a new County Court district. It is divided into two distinct parishes, distinguished as "Infra" and "Extra." The Infra comprises the municipal borough, with Cherville Street, &c., in parochial matters; while the Extra includes Cupernham, Lee, Mainstone, Ranviels, Spurshot, Stanbridge, Woodbury, and Wools. These two parishes are for all purposes ecclesiastical. The living is a vic.* in the archdeac. and dioc. of Winchester, val. £351, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a venerable cruciform structure, with a low tower, and was originally the abbey church. It has been several times rebuilt since its foundation in the 10th century, and is chiefly in the Norman style of architecture, but much enriched in some parts with zigrag and other ornaments. The W. end of the church is early English, richly decorated within. The whole building has recently been restored, under the auspices of the British Archæological Association. It contains an ancient screen, old frescoes, sculptures on the S. transept, and several monuments, including those of Sir H. Petty, the Surveyor of Ireland, Lady Palmerston, of Broadlands, J. St. Barbe, whose tomb bears a curious epitaph, beginning, "Earth's rich in mines of pretious dust." An old apple-tree, which is said to have grown on the roof for above two centuries, was recently cut down for fear of its injuring the building. The register dates from 1569. The Wesleyans, Baptists, Independents, Primitive Methodists, and Sandemanians have places of worship. The charities produce about £700 per annum, including John Nowe's school for 20 boys, with an endowment of £350; St. Barbe's charity of £25, now attached to the National school; and Bartlett's and Kent's almshouses, with a joint income of £210; there are also National, British, and infant schools, besides an industrial school for girls, which was maintained up to the day of his death by the late Lord Palmerston. Romsey Poor-law Union comprises 20 parishes. The principal residences are Broadlands, for many years the seat of the late Viscount Palmerston, who was lord of the manor, and Embley Park, the seat of W. E. Nightingale, Esq. Jacob, author of the "Law Dictionary," was born here. Market day is on Thursday. Fairs are held on Easter Monday, 26th August, and 8th November.

ROMSLEY, a lib. in the par. of Alveley, Chelmarsh div. of Stottesden hund., co. Salop, 7 miles S.E. of Bridgnorth, within which borough it is included. It is situated near the river Severn.

ROMSLEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Halesowen, hund. of Brimstree, co. Worcester, formerly in Salop, near Halesowen, and 8 miles S.W. of Birmingham. It is situated in the vale of the river Stour, near the Dudley canal and the line of the North-Western railway. Some of the inhabitants are employed in the neighbouring coal and iron mines. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £125, in the patron. of the Vicar of Halesowen. The church, dedicated to St. Kenelm, is a modern structure.

RONA, an island, one of the Hebrides, in the par. of Portree, co. Inverness, Scotland. It extends about 5 miles in length, and nearly 1 mile in breadth. The surface is irregular and barren. It is situated at the northern extremity of Raasay, from which it is separated by a strait just passable for vessels. The prevailing rocks are gneiss. A small portion of arable land surrounds the scattered village, that lies at the bottom of a bay, about 6 miles E. of Skye. In 1856 a lighthouse was constructed upon this island.

RONA, or ROAN, a small island in the par. of Tongue, co. Sutherland, Scotland, 7 miles N. of Tongue. It is situated in the Kyle of Tongue.

RONA, or ROAN, a loch in the co. of Kirkcudbright, Scotland, 5 miles N. of Castle Douglas.

RONA, or RONAY, an island in the par. of North Uist, Outer Hebrides, co. Inverness, Scotland, 2½ miles N.E. of Benbecula. It extends 2 miles in length by about 1½ mile in breadth. Its surface is of an uneven character, rising to an altitude of about 600 feet above sea-level. The land was formerly of little value, but is now much improved, and is one of the best grazing-grounds in the parish of North Uist.

RONA, or RONAY, a small island in the par. of Barvas, Outer Hebrides, Scotland. It is situated 38 miles N.W. of the Butt of Lewis. It is about a mile in length by half a mile in breadth, consisting of two hills, with an altitude varying from 350 to 360 feet, and is the most north-westerly land in Europe. The chief part of the land is arable, with a fertile soil. There are some ruinous huts, one of which appears to have originally been a church, dedicated to St. Ronan, from whom the island takes its name. Some years ago this island was offered gratuitously to the government for a new penal settlement by Sir James Matheson, the proprietor. About four leagues to the eastward is the rock Sulisker, only a quarter of a mile in circumference, but abounding with a great variety of sea fowls.

RONALDSHAY, NORTH, a par. and island in the North-Eastern Orkney Isles, co. Orkney and Shetland, coast of Scotland, 3 miles N. of Sanday Island. It formed part of the par. of Cross till 1831, and was called Rinarseya by the Northmen. It extends in length about 3 miles, with a mean breadth of little over 1 mile. Its surface is low and flat, with the exception of a gentle rise towards the centre. The soil is sandy, with red clay upon red sandstone. The land is tolerably fertile, and large quantities of sea-weed are collected on the shore, from which about 100 tons of kelp are made annually. In various parts ancient tumuli are to be seen, and on a promontory is a lighthouse, visible for 15 miles. Fish and seals are abundant round the coast, which has good anchorage in Linklets Bay, near Bridesness, and at Stromness. The shores are low and rocky, with Reef Dyke, Linay Altars, and other dangerous reefs. This par. is in the presb. of North Isles, and in the patron. of the crown. The stipend of the minister is £120. The parish church was erected by the parliamentary commissioners. There is a Free church. The island belongs to Mr. Trail, of Woodwick.

RONALDSHAY, SOUTH, an island and par. in the South-Eastern Orkney Isles, co. Orkney and Shetland, coast of Scotland, 6 miles N.E. of Duncansby-Head, and 11 S. of Kirkwall. The parish, which is scattered, comprehends, besides the island of South Ronaldshay, the inhabited islands of Burray, Hunda, the Pentland Skerries and Swona, and the uninhabited island of Glimsholm, occupying the south-eastern corner of the Orcadian archipelago. The principal island of this group is South Ronaldshay, lying between Pentland Frith, on the S., which divides it from Caithness, and Water-Sound on the N., which is about a mile broad, and divides it from Burray. It is about 9 miles in length, and from 2 to 6½ in breadth, covering a superficial area of near 18 square miles. Its surface is generally level, or slightly hilly, the highest point not exceeding 300 feet above sea-level. The coast is bold, especially towards the E. and W., where it is protected by several headlands, as Brough-head, near Barsick, or Barwick ferry to Houna, in Caithness, Halero and Stores, or Souse, heads; on the E. Grimness, Hoxa, Barth, and other promontories. On the northern side of the island is St. Margaret's Hope, one of the best harbours for small craft anywhere on this coast, also Water-Sound ferry to Burray; and on the western side is Widewall Bay, with good anchorage for vessels of 500 tons. The prevailing rocks are of the red sandstone formation, with clay, sand, and moss scattered over the surface; but a considerable extent of the land is loamy, and presents a much richer and more generally cultivated appearance than in most parts of the Orkney group. Wild fowl are abundant, and the fisheries off the coast are productive chiefly in cod, herrings, and lobsters. The population of the modern parish of South Ronaldshay and Burray is about 3,100. Three ancient parishes are comprehended in the present parish, viz. St. Mary's, or South Ronaldshay, St. Peter's, or the N. end of South Ronaldshay, and Burray parish, including Hunda and Glimsholm. In the Roman Catholic times the offices of Dean of Orkney and provost of the cathedral were held by the priest of South Ronaldshay, which then contained seven or eight chapels, remains of which still exist. The par. is now in the presb. of Kirkwall and synod of Orkney. The minister's stipend is £210, with glebe. There are two parish churches, St. Mary's at the southern, and St. Peter's at the northern, end of the island of South Ronaldshay, the latter built in the 13th century. There is also an United Presbyterian church, built in 1826. There are two schools, founded and partially endowed by Governor Tomison, of the Hudson's Bay Company. Remains of Picts' houses are scattered over the island, and near the manse is a Pictish granary, or tomb, paved with water-worn stones, also three large standing stones, supposed to be Druidical monuments.

RONAN, an islet in the upper lake of Killarney, co. Kerry, Ireland.

RONANISH, an islet at the entrance to Gweebarra Bay, co. Donegal, Ireland.

RONAY. See RONA, in Outer Hebrides.

RONTON, a par. in the S. div. of Pirehill hund., co. Stafford, 5 miles W. of Stafford, its post town, and 4 S.E. of Eccleshall. It comprises Hextetts, Brough Hall, and 3 other hmlts. The village, which is small, is wholly agricultural. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £93. The church is dedicated to All Saints. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes. The Earl of Lichfield is lord of the manor, and has a shooting box near Ronton Abbey ruins.

RONTON-ABBEY, an ext. par. lib. in the S. div. of Pirehill hund., co. Stafford, 3½ miles S.E. of Eccleshall. The tower, and a small portion of the cloisters, are all that now remain of this ancient abbey, which was founded in the reign of Henry II. by Robert Fitz-Noel, as a priory for Black Canons, subordinate to the Abbey of Haughmond in Shropshire. Its revenue at the Dissolution was valued at £102 11*s.* 1*d.*

ROOGAGH, a river of the co. of Fermanagh, Ireland, rises under Glenkeel mountain, and falls into Lough Melvin.

ROOKHOPE, a chplry. in the par. of Stanhope, co. Durham, 3 miles N.W. of Stanhope, and 8 N.W. of Walsingham. It is situated near the river Burn, a branch of the Wear.

ROOKLEY-WITH-WEEK, a tythg. in the par. of Godshill, Isle of Wight, co. Hants, 3 miles S.E. of Newport.

ROOKSBRIDGE, a hmlt. in the par. of East Brent, co. Somerset, 4 miles S.W. of Axbridge.

ROOKWITH, a tnshp. in the par. of Thornton-Watlass, wap. of East Hang, North Riding co. York, 4 miles N. of Masham, 4 S.W. of Bedale, and 2 W. of Thornton-Watlass. It contains but a few scattered farmhouses. The Marquis of Ailesbury is lord of the manor and sole landowner.

ROOMER, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Swinton, North Riding co. York, 1 mile S.W. of Masham.

ROOS, a par. in the middle div. of Holderness wap., East Riding co. York, 14 miles E. of Hull, its post town, 6 from Patrington, and 4 N. of Ottringham railway station. The par. includes the hmlts. of Oustwick and Bracken Hill. The village, which is chiefly agricultural, is situated near the coast. The soil consists of clay. It takes its name from Peter de Ros, ancestor of Lord de Ros, and sole proprietor of the village in the reign of Henry I. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Enclosure Act in 1783. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of York, val. £602. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient edifice with a tower and a chapel on the N. side, now used for vestry purposes. The chancel has windows bearing the arms of the Seigniory and three barons of Roos. The parochial charities produce about £21 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes, in which a Sunday-school is held. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a place of worship.

ROOSDOWN, or ROUSDON ST. PANCRAS, an ext. par. lib., though locally in the par. of Axminster, co. Devon, 4 miles S. of Axminster, and 3 S.W. of Lyme-Regis. It is situated on the English Channel, and was formerly a separate parish. Its ancient name was Ralphdown, so called from its owner, Ralph de Down, in the reign of Henry II. There is no village, and only one house. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £35. The church has long been in ruins.

ROOSE, a station on the Barrow branch of the Whitehaven and Furness Junction railway, 2 miles from Barrow, co. Lancaster.

ROOSE, ROUSE, or RHOS, a hund. in the co. of Pembroke, contains the town of Milford and the pars. of St. Bride, Burton, Canrose, Dale, Freystrop, Harroldston St. Issell's and West, Hasguard, Herbrandston, Hubberston, St. Ishmael's, Johnston, Lambston, Llangwm, Llanstadwell, Marloes, Nolton, West Robeston, Roch, Rose-Market, Steynton, Talbenny, Treffgnarn, West Walton, Walwin's Castle, and parts of St. Martin and St. Thomas. It gives name to a deanery in the archdeaconry and dioc. of of St. David's.

ROOSKY. See RUSKEY, co. Leitrim.

ROOTHING, or RODING, ABBOT'S or ABBESS. See ABBOT'S ROOTHING, co. Essex.

ROOTHING, AYTHROP, or AYTHORPE ROOTHING, a par. in the hund. of Dunmow, co. Essex, 5 miles S.W. of Great Dunmow, and 31 miles from London. It is a small agricultural village situated on the river Roothing. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £380. The church, dedicated to St. Mary the Virgin, is an ancient structure with a spired tower containing three bells.

ROOTHING, BEAUCHAMP. See BEAUCHAMP ROOTHING.

ROOTHING, BERNERS, or BERNISH RODING, a par. in the hund. of Dunmow, co. Essex, 5½ miles N.E. of Chipping-Ongar. The parish, which derives its distinguishing affix from Hugh de Berners, to whom the manor at one time belonged, is of small extent. About three parts of the surface is arable, and the remainder pasture and woodland. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £224 14*s.* The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £65. The church is an ancient structure, dedication unknown. The register dates from 1583. There is a village school.

ROOTHING, HIGH, a par. in the hund. of Dunmow, co. Essex, 4½ miles S.W. of Great Dunmow. This village, which is situated on elevated ground near the river Roding, takes the affix to its name from its situation higher up the stream than other parishes of the name. The surface is elevated and hilly, and there are several ancient mansions in the parish. It was given by Leofwin to a monastery in the Isle of Ely, in the reign of Edward the Confessor. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £487, and the glebe comprises 25 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £391. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient structure with a bell-turret containing two bells. It has recently been restored at a cost of £1,000. The register dates from 1539. The Earl of Roden takes his title from this place. There is a small National school.

ROOTHING, LEADEN, a par. in the hund. of Dunmow, co. Essex, 6 miles S.W. of Great Dunmow, and 31 from London. The parish, which is of small extent, and wholly agricultural, is situated on the river Roding. The land is chiefly arable, with a small proportion of pasture and woodland. The Essex hounds meet here. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £230. The church is of great antiquity, with a wooden bell-turret, surmounted by a low spire and containing two bells. There is a village school.

ROOTHING, MARGARET, a par. in the hund. of Dunmow, co. Essex, 7 miles N.E. of Chipping-Ongar, its post town. The parish, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. The village is situated on elevated ground. The greater part of the land is arable. Marks, now a hamlet of this parish, was once an independent chapelry belonging to Stondon Massey. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £223. The church, dedicated to St. Margaret, has a Norman porch at the western side, and a turret containing one bell. The register dates from 1538. The charities consist of a small school endowment, and the annual sum of £1 10*s.*, distributed to the poor in bread.

ROOTHING, MORRELL. See MORRELL ROOTHING.

ROOTHING, WHITE, a par. in the hund. of Dunmow, co. Essex, 8 miles N. of Chipping-Ongar, its post town, and 30 from London. The village is situated on elevated ground near the river Roding, and on the road to Hatfield-Regis. It includes the hmlt. of Roothing Morrell. The surface is elevated and diversified with woodland and plantations. The soil is tolerably fertile. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £600, and the glebe comprises 63 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £500. The church, dedicated to St. Martin, has a square embattled tower containing five bells, and surmounted by a lofty spire, visible from a considerable distance. The register dates from 1547. There is a National school. The charities produce £6 per annum.

ROOTSTOWN, a vil. in the bar. of Ardee, co. Louth, Ireland, 2 miles N.E. of Ardee. There are ruins of an old castle.

ROPE, a tnshp. in the par. of Wybunbury, hund. of Nantwich, co. Chester, 2½ miles N.E. of Nantwich, its post town. The village is small and wholly agricultural.

ROPLEY, a par. in the lower half div. of Bishop's-Sutton hund., co. Hants, 4 miles E. of New Alresford, its post town. The parish, which is large, is wholly agricultural. It is a meet for Mr. Scotland's harriers. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £240, and the glebe comprises 7 acres. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic.* of Bishop's Sutton, in the dioc. of Winchester. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, has a wooden tower containing five bells. It is an ancient structure, but was restored and enlarged in 1848. There is a National school for this parish and that of Bishop's Sutton. Dr. Sutton, Archbishop of Canterbury, was born in this parish.

ROPSLEY, a par. in the wap. of Winnibriggs, parts of Kesteven, co. Lincoln, 6 miles S.E. of Grantham, its post town, and 5 N.E. of Great Ponton railway station. The village, which is large, is chiefly agricultural. The par. includes the hmlt. of Little Humby. The Duke of Rutland's hounds are kennelled in this parish. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £940. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient structure, with a spired tower containing two bells. The parochial charities produce about £20 per annum, exclusive of the interest of £28 left in 1795 by an unknown donor. There is an endowed free school for both sexes. The Wesleyan Methodists have a place of worship. Dr. Fox, Bishop of Winchester, was a native of Ropsley. The Duke of Rutland is lord of the manor and chief landowner.

RORRINGTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Chirbury, co. Salop, 14 miles S.W. of Shrewsbury.

ROSALUCHA, a vil. in the bar. of Muskerry, co. Cork, Ireland, 12 miles N.W. of Dunmanway. It is situated in the mountains near the source of the Lee.

ROSBEG, a sandbank in Dublin Bay, a quarter of a mile S.W. of Howth lighthouse.

ROSBERCON, a par. in the bar. of Ida, co. Kilkenny, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, near New Ross, its post town. It extends along the W. bank of the river Barrow, which is here crossed by a wooden bridge connecting this place with New Ross. The village was once chartered as a borough, but is now incorporated with New Ross. It s a chief police station and a petty sessions town, containing a distillery, tannery, and several factories. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ossory, val. with others £328. The Roman Catholic chapel is the head of a union. There are two private schools, and a Sunday-school. There are ruins of the abbey which was founded here in the 13th century by the Graces and Walshes, and given at the Dissolution to the Parkers. Fairs are held on Easter and Whit Mondays, the 2nd and 23rd May, 10th August, and 5th and 18th October.

ROSCLOGHER, a bar. in the co. of Leitrim, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, containing the par. of Killasnet and parts of Clooncläre and Rossinver, comprising about 86,000 acres.

ROSCOBIE, a vil. in the par. of Dunfermline, co. Fife, Scotland, 3½ miles N. of Dunfermline. It adjoins some very extensive lime works. There is a ridge of hills of the same name as the village.

ROSCOMMON, an inland co. of the prov. of Connaught, Ireland. It lies between 53° 16′ to 54° 7′ N. lat., and from 7° 50′ to 8° 46′ W. long. It is bounded on the E. by the river Shannon, on the S. and S.W. by co. Galway, on the W. by cos. Galway and Mayo, on the N. by Sligo, and on the N.E. by Leitrim. It is 60 miles long, and its greatest breadth is 37 miles, comprising an area of 607,691 acres, of which 440,522 are in cultivation, 132,299 uncultivated, 768 occupied by the sites of towns, villages, and roads, 29,370 under water, and 6,732 in plantations. The general character of the surface is undulating or flat, except towards the N., where it becomes mountainous. The Curlew Mountains in the N.W., the Slievebawn range in the W., the Braulieve or Braughlieve on the Leitrim border, and some hills which skirt Lough Allen in the N., are the principal elevations, some of the summits attaining a height of 1,000 to 1,200 feet above the sea level. The principal rivers are the Suck and Shannon; the former traverses the N. boundary, and the latter drains it on the E. The lakes are numerous, and constitute a leading feature in this part of the island; Loughs Key, Garra, Skean, Meelagh, Aelagh, Erritt, and Glynn are the principal waters. The numerous small lakes are sometimes connected in a continued chain for great distances, but are not navigable. There are several turloughs, which leave most luxuriant soil behind them in the summer. The prevailing subsoil is limestone, but silicious sandstone crops up frequently in different parts. The most important geological formations are those belonging to the great carboniferous limestone district of central Ireland, and in the northern part of the county they include a considerable coal field with three beds of coal, and resting on beds of the millstone-grit series, known as the Arigna district. Iron ore is worked here, and extensive smelting and casting operations are carried on, also potters' fire and pipe clays are obtained in different parts. The Curlew Mountains consist of the Old Red sandstone formation, and the Braulieve of shales and sandstones. The soil in the level limestone districts is very fertile, but the bogs in the uplands are numerous. Agriculture is in a backward state, and the poorer classes of the inhabitants are extremely wretched. There are few dairies, though the pastures are luxuriant. The principal crops are oats, wheat, and potatoes. The breeds of cattle and sheep are good; the former long horned, and the latter long woolled. A wide field for reclamation presents itself among the extensive bogs and wastes. This county comprises nine baronies—Athlone, North and South Ballintober, Ballymoe, Boyle, Castlereagh, Frenchpark, Moycarn, and Roscommon, which together include 58 parishes. The population in 1851 was 173,798, and in 1861 100,000. The principal towns are Roscommon, Boyle, and Elphin. The county sent eight members to parliament before the Union, but now it has only two representatives for the county at large. The linen manufacture was at one time extensively diffused over the county, but it is now nearly extinct. Roscommon is included within the Connaught circuit, the assizes being held at Roscommon. The government is entrusted to a lord-lieutenant, assisted by 10 deputy-lieutenants, besides magistrates, coroners, &c. There are 54 police stations, with about 300 men. Athlone, Athleague, Ballagh, Boyle, Castlerea, Croghan, Elphin, and Tulsk have dispensaries. It is in the western military district, and contains 3 barrack stations. The ancient inhabitants of Roscommon are said to have been the Auteri; subsequently the county was divided among the O'Connors in the midland, the MacDermots in the northern, and the O'Kellies in the southern districts. Notices of the Sheriff of Roscommon are found as early as Edward I. The county lies partly within the dioceses of Elphin, Tuam, and Clonfert. There are numerous raths and various monastic remains, some of considerable interest.

ROSCOMMON, a bar. in the co. of Roscommon, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, contains the pars. of Aughrim, Bumlin, Clooncraff, Cloonfinlough, Elphin, Kilcooley, Killukin, Kiltrustan, Lissonuffy, Ogulla, Shankill, with parts of Creeve, Kilbride, and Kilglass, besides the vils. of Strokestown and Tulsk, together comprising about 82,600 acres.

ROSCOMMON, a par., post and market town, and county town of co. Roscommon, prov. of Connaught, Ireland. The par. extends over an area of 7,289 acres of highly cultivated and fertile soil. The town is situated on the road from Dublin to Sligo, 87 miles W. of Dublin, 18 S.E. of Castlerea, and 12 S. of Strokestown. It is built on the side of a gentle acclivity, and consists of one principal street, with several subordinate thoroughfares. The public buildings, including the court-house, county gaol, and infirmary, surround an open space at the extremity of the main street, in which are several excellent shops and good hotels. The principal trade of the town is in grain, and has improved greatly since the opening of the Royal canal navigation, and the Great Northern and Western railway, on which latter it has a station. It is the capital of the county of its name, and was formerly a parliamentary borough, sending two members to parliament before the Union. General sessions are held twice a year, and petty sessions weekly. It was first chartered as a corporate town in the reign of Edward I., and confirmed by James I. and II. The government of the town is now entrusted to a body of commissioners. It contains a police station, revenue and military barracks, and branch bank of the National Bank of Ireland. It gives name to a Poor-law Union, and contains the union workhouse. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Elphin, val. with others £203, in the patron. of the bishop. The Roman Catholic chapel is at the head of a union. This chapel was formerly the court-house of the town, but was purchased by the Roman Catholics, and received the addition of a belfry. There are a Wesleyan meeting-house, and four public, besides several private schools. The principal residences are Carrowroe and Hazelbrook. There is an excellent county infirmary containing fifty beds, adjoining which are a fever hospital and a dispensary. This place is thought to have derived its name from an abbey which was founded here by St. Colman in a fenny spot, near the site of the modern town. In the northern part of the town are ruins of Roscommon Castle, founded in 1268 by Sir Robert de Ufford. In 1642 the English held this fortress with stubborn tenacity, but were at length compelled to surrender. Here are also ruins of a friary founded by MacCashel in the 13th century, and containing the tomb of Croovedearg O'Connor, King of Connaught. Saturday is market day. Fairs are held on 1st March, Whit-Monday, 1st September, and 5th December.

ROSCOMROE, a par. in the bar. of Ballybritt, King's County, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 6 miles S.E. of Parsonstown. Birr is its post town. The Slieve Bloom mountains rise towards the eastern boundary, and the road from Roscrea to Tullamore passes through the parish. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Killaloe, val. with Kinnetty £231, in the patron. of the bishop. It is joined to Kinnetty in the Roman Catholic arrangement.

ROSCONNELL, a par. in the bars. of Fassadining, co. Kilkenny, and Clarmallagh, Queen's County, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 1½ mile S.W. of Ballynakill, its post town. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ossory, val. with Attanagh £408, in the patron. of the bishop. It is united to Ballyragget in the Roman Catholic arrangement. There is a school.

ROSCREA, a par., post, and market town, in the bars. of Clonlisk and Ballybritt, King's County, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 44 miles N.W. of Limerick, and 75 S.W. of Dublin. It has a station on the Great Southern and Western railway at the point where the Parsonstown branch turns off. The parish, which is very extensive, consists chiefly of fertile soil. The town is built on a small stream falling into the Brosna river. It consists of a number of streets, built without any attempt at order, and many of them poor. There is a brisk retail traffic, but the original staple of the town, that of woollen goods, is now extinct. There are several large grain mills, two breweries, tanneries, a savings-bank, and a police station. Petty sessions are held weekly. The Midland Counties Advertiser is published in the town. The Castle of Roscrea was built by King John, and is now used as a military barracks. In 620 St. Cronan made this town an episcopal see, and remains of the cathedral near the old church are still standing. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Killaloe. The church, which was erected in 1812, near the site of an ancient abbey, is a Gothic structure. There are a Roman Catholic chapel and Methodist and Friends' meeting-houses. There are three public schools, and several private establishments. Among the charities are a hospital and a dispensary. Numerous seats surround the locality. A great victory over the Danes was gained here, who thought to surprise the inhabitants, but were defeated, and left 4,000 dead. Saturday and Thursday are market days. Fairs are held on 25th March, 7th May, 21st June, 8th August, 9th October, and 29th November.

ROSEACRE, a hmlt. in the par. of Kirkham, hund. of Amounderness, co. Lancaster, 3¼ miles N.E. of Kirkham. It is in conjunction with Treales and Wharles to form a township.

ROSE-ASH, a par. in the hund. of Witheridge, co. Devon, 6 miles S.E. of South Molton, its post town, and 12 from the Eggesford railway station. It includes the hmlts. of Yarde and Ash-Mill. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. The soil consists of clay, and stone is quarried for repair of the roads. It is a meet for the Knowstone harriers. The glebe comprises near 100 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £608. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, has a square tower containing five bells. The parochial charities produce about £6 per annum, exclusive of 25*s.* invested in books and education for three poor children. There is an endowed National school for both sexes. A revel is held on the last Sunday in July.

ROSEBANK, a vil. in the par. of Under Ward Dalserf, co. Lanark, Scotland, nearly opposite Mauldslie Castle, and 5 miles N.W. of Lanark. It was formed in 1810 for the accommodation of the inhabitants of Dalserf village, now falling to decay. Here is the seat of the Dales.

ROSE-BANK, a hmlt. in the par. of Whalley, co. Lancaster, 2 miles S. of Haslingden, and 14 N.W. of Manchester. It is situated in the valley of the river Irwell, near Edenfield, and on the borders of Rosendale Forest. There are extensive print works.

ROSEBERRY, a demesne in the co. of Edinburgh, Scotland, 6 miles S.E. of Pennycuick. It belongs to Earl Roseberry, who takes from it the title of viscount and baron.

ROSEBERRY TOPPING, a mountain summit in the district of Cleveland, North Riding co. York, 3 miles S.W. of Gainsborough. It is chiefly composed of oölitic rock with iron oar, and beds of alum and shells. It serves as a landmark at sea, and when clouded is a sign of bad weather.

ROSE CASTLE, anciently a border castle, but now the county seat of the Bishop of Carlisle, above the vale of Caldew, co. Cumberland, 7 miles S.W. of Carlisle. It is situated in the midst of hanging woods and plantations of oak and fir, and includes the old keep and other portions of the original castle built in the early Norman times, but restored by Bishop Percy after designs by Rickman. The castle was burnt by King Robert Bruce in 1322, and again by the Scottish army in 1337, and was dismantled after the civil war in the reign of Charles I.

ROSEDALE, an ext. par. place, locally in the par. of Wickenby, wap. of West Wraggoe, co. Lincoln, 4 miles N.W. of Wragby. It is a meet for the Burton hounds.

ROSEDALE, EAST SIDE, a tnshp. in the par. of Middleton, Pickering Lythe, North Riding co. York, 9 miles N.E. of Kirby Moorside, and 10 N.W. of Pickering railway station. It is situated in the moors under Shunner Fell, at the head of the river Severn, which here turns an extensive corn mill. It comprises the hmlt. of Hartoft. There are several quarries of good flagstone, and coal of an inferior quality is found. The chapel-of-ease was rebuilt in 1839. There is a village school.

ROSEDALE, WEST SIDE, a tnshp. in the par. of Lastingham, wap. of Ryedale, North Riding co. York, 11 miles N.W. of Pickering. It is situated near Rosedale, East Side, and had in Richard I.'s time a convent founded by Robert de Stuteville for Cistercian nuns, which at the Dissolution was valued at £42. Through the recent discovery of ironstone of excellent quality in the neighbourhood, this village has considerably improved. The dale is much resorted to in summer by pleasure parties. The soil is of various qualities, but tolerably fertile. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of York, val. £94. The church is dedicated to St. Lawrence.

ROSEDEN, or ROSDON, a tnshp. in the par. of Ilderton, N. div. of Coquetdale ward, co. Northumberland, 5 miles S.E. of Wooler, its post town, and 1 mile S.E. of Ilderton. It includes Roseden Edge, on which are the remains of a semicircular British camp with an inner wall of loose stones, supposed to have been squared by the Romans, and near to it is Bewick Hill camp.

ROSEGILL, a hmlt. in the par. of Shap, co. Westmoreland, 2 miles N.W. of Shap, on the river Lowther.

ROSE GREEN, a hmlt. in the par. of Pagham, hund. of Aldwick, rape of Chichester, co. Sussex, 4 miles S. of Chichester.

ROSE GREEN, a hmlt. in the bar. of Middlethird, co. Tipperary, Ireland, 5 miles S.E. of Cashel.

ROSE GROVE, a station on the Lancashire and Yorkshire railway, where the Burnley and Todmorden branch turns off, 1½ mile from Burnley.

ROSEHALL, a district in the pars. of Creich and Kincardine, co. Ross, Scotland. Its principal attraction is Rosehall House, situated amidst woods and pleasure-grounds near the confluence of Casslie water with the river Oickel. There are a Free Church and a mission chapel.

ROSEHALL, a district in the par. of Old Monkland, co. Lanark, Scotland, 3 miles S.W. of Airdrie. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the mines.

ROSEHEARTY, a burgh of barony, seaport and market town in the par. of Pitsligo, co. Aberdeen, Scotland, 4½ miles W. of Fraserburgh, and 16 N.E. of Banff. It is situated on the coast of the Moray Frith, and was created a burgh of barony by Charles II. It has a harbour capable of admitting vessels of from 80 to 100 tons, made at the expense of the late Earl of Gardenstown. The chief imports are timber, coals, and salt, and the exports fish, potatoes, and grain. Rosehearty chiefly owes its prosperity to the discovery made in 1810 of the shore dues belonging to the feurs, and not to the superior. In connection with the town is a suburb designated Seatown. There are a Presbyterian church and a Free church, the former was erected in 1791, and the latter in 1844. There are a parochial school and a female charity school, besides other schools of a private character.

ROSE HILL, a demesne in the co. of Forfar, Scotland, 4½ miles N.E. of Brechin, belongs to the Earl of Northesk, who takes the title of baron from this place.

ROSE HILL, a hmlt. in Gilsland, co. Cumberland, 5 miles from Haltwhistle. It is the station for Gilsland Spa on the Newcastle and Carlisle railway. It is situated in the vale of the river Irthing.

ROSE ISLE, a hmlt. in the par. of Duffus, co. Elgin, Scotland, 5 miles N.W. of Elgin, near Burghead Bay.

ROSEKEEN. See ROSSKEEN, co. Ross.

ROSELLE, a hmlt. and harbour on Bouley Bay, Isle of Jersey, Channel Islands, 4 miles N.E. of St. Helier's.

ROSE-MARKET, or RHOSMARKET, a par. in the hund. of Roose, co. Pembroke, 4 miles from Milford, its post town, and 5 N.W. of Pembroke. The village, which is of small extent, is situated upon the edge of a well-wooded vale, and is watered by a small rivulet. In the neighbourhood are the ruins of an old mansion, where Lucy Walters, mother of the Duke of Monmouth, was born. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £96. The church is dedicated to St. Ishmael.

ROSEMARKIE, a par. in the district of Wester Ross, cos. Ross and Cromarty, Scotland. It is in conjunction with the town of Fortrose, which is within this parish. It extends in length about 6 miles from S.W. to N.E., and has an average breadth of from 2 to 3 miles. It is bounded by the Moray Frith, and by the pars. of Avoch, Kirkmichael, and Cromarty. The surface is moderately even, rising towards Mullbuy Hill. The coast is rocky in parts, with fearful precipices, full of caves, the resort of seals, otters, &c.; but at the "links," in Rosemarkie Bay, it assumes a more level character, and is frequented by the lovers of the golf game. A large portion of the land is in an excellent state of cultivation, and generally wears a thriving aspect. The town of Rosemarkie is about 6 miles S.W. of Cromarty, and is situated in a healthy spot at Chanonry ferry to Fort George. In the vicinity are the ruins of the cathedral, once the seat of the bishops of Ross, containing the tomb of St. Boniface, the founder; of the Regent Murray, of David II.'s time; and of a Danish chief, who fell at Mullbuy. There are also remains of an ancient cross. The prevailing rocks are the Old Red sandstone formation, but those of the sea cliffs are chiefly gneiss. This par. is in the presb. of Chanonry, synod of Ross, and in the patron. of the crown. The stipend of the minister is £252. The parish church was erected in 1822. At Fortrose are a Free church, Episcopalian chapel, a chapel-of-ease, and a chapel for Baptists. There are also a parochial school and a Free Church school; but the chief school is Fortrose academy, under the superintendence of the rector.

ROSEMOUNT, a station on the Perth, Blairgowrie, and Aberdeen section of the Scottish North-Eastern railway.

ROSENALLIS, or OREGAN, a par. in the bar. of Tinnahinch, Queen's County, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, containing the chief portion of the post town of Mountmellick. The parochial surface includes part of the Slieve-Bloom mountains. The river Barrow passes through the interior, as does also the road from Erno to Birr. There is much bog. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Kildare, val. £575. There are a Roman Catholic chapel, a police station, and several schools. Capard is among the chief seats. See also MOUNTMELLICK.

ROSENEATH, ROSSNEATH, or ROSS-NA-CHOICH, a par. in the co. of Dumbarton, Scotland. It comprises the vil. of its own name, and those of Kilcreggan and Cove. The parish extends in length about 8 miles, with a varying breadth of from 1¼ mile to 2½ miles, and is connected on the N. by an isthmus about 1¼ mile in breadth. It is bounded by Gairloch, the Frith of Clyde, and Loch-Long on its other sides. There is a ferry over the Gare Loch between the parishes of Rossneath and Row, but the current is strong. The surface is of an uneven character, the greatest altitude being at Tamnahara, which rises 800 feet above sea-level. Near to this mountain is a lake a mile in circumference, and abounding in perch. The low grounds in the southern part of the parish are fertile. The extent of coast line is about 13 miles, the shore being partly sandy and partly rocky, and abounding with fish. There are two bays, called Campsaile and Callwattie, the former, celebrated for its anchorage and shores, was at an early period a station of the Scottish royal navies. Near the shore of the bay formerly stood a castle, which was restored in 1630 by the Marquis of Argyll, but was burnt down in the beginning of the present century. The present mansion, which occupies a site near the ruins of the old castle, is in the Italian style of architecture, built by Bononi in 1803. In the grounds is Wallace's Loup rock, from which a wide prospect is obtained. Clay slate is the prevailing formation, and extensively quarried. There are excellent roads traversing the interior, and round the coast. The village of Roseneath, which is inconsiderable, is about 3 miles W. of Helensburgh. It is situated between Lochs Gare and Long, on the N. side of the Frith of Clyde, and is sometimes called by the Gaelic name, Ross-na-Choich, or "virgin's point." Near the village is a convenient quay on Gairloch, where the Glasgow steam-packets stop several times during the day. Steamers also ply several times a day from Kilcreggan, and Cove, on the S.W. coast of the parish. Peats are the common fuel, coal having to be brought down the Clyde from the neighbourhood of Glasgow. This par. is in the presb. of Dumbarton, and synod of Glasgow and Ayr. The stipend of the minister is £190. The parish church was anciently united to the royal chapel of Stirling by James IV. of Scotland, but was afterwards dissolved. The present church was erected in 1853. There are a Free church, a parochial school, and a subscription library. At Craigrownie there is a chapel-of-ease. Matthew Stewart, the mathematician, and the father of Dugald Stewart, was once minister of Roseneath. Anderson, founder of the Glasgow Andersonian University, was a native of this parish. By the chartulary of Paisley, it appears that this parish was given by Amelée, brother of Maldwin, Earl of Lennox, to the Abbey of Paisley in the reign of Alexander II. The Duke of Argyll is the principal landowner.

ROSERK ABBEY, a ruined monastery in the bar. of Tirawley, co. Mayo, Ireland, 5 miles N. of Ballina, and 23 N.E. of Castlebar. It is situated near the sixteen-arched bridge over the river Moy, and was founded by the Joyces in the 15th century for Franciscans. There are still remaining ruins of the church.

ROSEWELL, a vil. in the par. of Lasswade, co. Edinburgh, Scotland, 3 miles S. of Lasswade.

ROSHERVILLE, a hmlt. in the par. of Northfleet, hund. of Toltingtrough, and lathe of Aylesford, co. Kent, 1 mile W. of Gravesend. It is situated on the Thames, near Northfleet Creek, and has a steamboat pier. It is a place of recent growth, containing several lodging-houses, and the Rosherville Gardens, which are laid out in the old chalk pits, and attract numerous visitors during the season.

ROSKEAR, extensive tin and copper mines in the hund. of Penwith, co. Cornwall, 2 miles from Camborne, and 12 S.W. of Truro. They are situated near the Redruth railway, and employ over 800 hands.

ROSKEEN, or RUSHEEN, a par. in the bar. of Duhallow, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 3 miles E. of Kanturk. Queenstown is its post town. The surface lies along the N. bank of the river Blackwater. The soil is mostly good. The road from Kanturk to Mallow traverses the interior. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Cloyne, val. with Clonmeen, £276, in the patron. of the bishop. It is joined to Castlemagner in the Roman Catholic arrangement. Roskeen House is the principal residence.

ROSKELTON, a hmlt. in the bar. of West Maryborough, Queen's County, Ireland, 3 miles S.E. of Mountrath.

ROSLEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Westward, ward of Allerdale-below-Derwent, co. Cumberland, 5 miles S.E. of Wigton, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on an acclivity, and is celebrated for its extensive horse, cattle, and sheep fairs, which occur every alternate Monday, commencing from Whitsuntide and lasting till All Saints' Day.

ROSLIN, a vil. in the par. of Lasswade, co. Edinburgh, Scotland, 4 miles S.W. of Dalkeith, and 12½ from Edinburgh by the Peebles branch of the North British railway, on which it is a station. It was anciently a place of considerable consequence, and was erected into a burgh of barony by James II. of Scotland, at Stirling, in 1456. Near this place the English, under John de Segrave, Regent of Scotland, were thrice defeated on the same day, 24th February, 1302, by the Scots, under their chiefs, Sir Simon Fraser and Sir John Cuming. On 21st April, 1801, Roslin was created an earldom in the ancient and noble family of Erskine. The chapel, which was erected in 1446 by William St. Clair, or Sinclair, Prince of Orkney, is of ancient Gothic architecture, decorated with sculpture, and the capitals of the pillars enriched with foliage. On 11th December, 1681, it suffered some injury from the fury of the mob, but was restored in the beginning of the present century by General Sinclair, the then proprietor, at a considerable outlay. Within the chapel, which is only 68 feet long by 35 broad, is the family vault of the lairds of Roslin, who were buried of old in their armour, without any coffins, and owing to the dryness of the soil the bodies were preserved entire for upwards of 80 years. There are also ruins of the old parish church, the burial ground of which is still used, at a short distance N.W. of the castle, so well known by the pleasing song of Macneill which bears its name. This ancient fortress is said to have been the palace of William St. Clair, Prince of Orkney, who lived here in great state, but was burnt, together with the castle of Craig-Millar, by the forces of Henry VIII. It was subsequently rebuilt on an almost insulated rock, in the glen on the N. side of the river North Esk, which is wooded down to the water edge, and is surrounded by overhanging hills. In the village is a market cross, where a weekly market, on Saturday, and an annual fair on the feast of SS. Simon and Jude, have been held since the reign of James II. of Scotland.

ROSLISTON, a par. in the hund. of Repton, co. Derby, 4 miles S.W. of Burton-on-Trent, its post town, and 4 N.W. of the Oakley railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is chiefly agricultural. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £90, and the glebe comprises 60 acres. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £180. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, was rebuilt by subscription in 1827, with the exception of the spired tower. There are Sunday and day schools, supported by voluntary contributions. The Baptists have a place of worship.

ROSMORE, a rivulet of the co. of Galway, Ireland, rises under the Slieve Aughty mountains, and falls into Lough Derg.

ROSNAKILL, a hmlt. in the bar. of Kilmacrenan, co. Donegal, Ireland, 7 miles N. of Milford, at the head of Mulroy Bay.

ROSNAREE, a hmlt. in the bar. of Lower Duleek, co. Meath, Ireland, 3 miles S.E. of Slane, on the Boyne.

ROSROE, a lough in the co. of Clare, Ireland, near Newmarket. It extends in length about 2½ miles, with a breadth of 1 mile.

ROSS, a par., market town, and nominal borough, in the hund. of Greytree, co. Hereford, between 13 and 14 miles S.E. of Hereford, by road, or 12½ by the Gloucester and Hereford railway, on which it is a station. The par. comprises 3,012 acres, and is situated on the banks of the river Wye, much visited by tourists, and is divided into Ross Borough and Ross Foreign. In former times it belonged to the Bishops of Hereford, who had a palace here, and was made a free borough by Henry III. It sent members to parliament till the 34th year of Edward I., but the privilege was subsequently relinquished at the petition of the inhabitants. It suffered much from a visitation of the plague in 1637, the memory of which is perpetuated by an old stone cross, still standing at the N.E. corner of the churchyard. It is mentioned by Camden as a seat of the iron trade. The town has been immortalised by Pope in his well-known theme, "The Man of Ross," and is at present a rapidly improving place. It occupies the slopes of a rocky eminence, surrounded by loftier hills, overlooking the Wye. The streets of the town are irregularly laid out, and some of the houses are old, but there are many modern residences, and several good streets, as High-street, Broad-street, Brookend-street, St. Mary-street, and the market place. The streets are well paved and lighted with gas. The market house and townhall is an antique structure, supported upon pillars, with a small square clock-tower, situated near the centre of the town. At the E. end is a bust of Charles II., and the upper part of the building is used as the townhall. The other public buildings are the police and railway stations, both of recent erection, a union poorhouse, a mechanics' institute, situated in High-street, a reading and newsroom in the market-place, baths, four commercial banks, a savings-bank, two circulating libraries, and a dispensary. Wilton Bridge is situated near the old castle of the Greys. At the house called the "Great Inn" Charles I. is said to have slept on his journey to Ragland Castle; and at the house opposite to the old market-house, Kyrle, the "Man of Ross," resided. This house, after his death, became the chief posting-house of the district, under the name of the "King's Arms." It is now occupied by a chemist.—The population in 1851 was 2,674, with 517 inhabited houses, but had increased in 1861 to 3,715, with 736 houses, showing an increase in the decennial period of no less than 1,041 persons. There are no manufactures, but two extensive tanyards, a large brewery, machine works, where agricultural implements are also made, an iron foundry, and several flour-mills. Ross is still styled a borough, although there is no corporation, the government being vested in commissioners appointed under the "Ross Improvement Acts." A court-leet is held annually at Michaelmas, at which the town officers are chosen, and a court-baron a few days after by the lord of the manor. The Ross Poor-law Union comprises 2 parishes in Gloucestershire and 27 in Herefordshire. It is also the seat of a new County Court, and head of a superintendent registry district. The horticultural society and the choral society hold their meetings in the town.—Some portion of the tithes belong to the Bishop, Dean, and Precentor of Hereford Cathedral, but the rest of the tithes are attached to the living, which is a rect.* and vic., val. £1,290, in the dioc. of Hereford, and in the patron. of the bishop. The parish church, already alluded to, is dedicated to St. Mary the Virgin, and stands at the S.W. of the town. It is a spacious but irregular pile of building, having been enlarged and altered at various periods subsequent to 1316, amongst others by the "Man of Ross." The spire, about twelve years ago, sustained material damage, for the third time, by lightning, but has since been restored. The church has been recently restored and enlarged under the charge of Mrs. Buckler, of Oxford. The two ugly galleries have been taken down, and the space under the tower, where the organ stood, fitted with seats. We do not learn that the spire, the peculiar incurving outline of which has puzzled many a tourist, has been restored to its original beautiful line; its recent odd shape and increased height were given under the care of John Kyrle himself, whose eye for beauty must have been a peculiar one. The church contains a stained portrait of Bishop de Cantelupe, tombs of the Rudhalls and Westfalings, of Rudhall House, and an elaborate marble monument, erected in 1776 to the memory of Kyrle, the great benefactor of the town. At the E. of the N. aisle three elm-trees, two of them of considerable height, and which seem to grow and thrive in this strange atmosphere, sprang up in Kyrle's pew after some of the elms planted by him in the churchyard outside were cut down, about the middle of the last century. The Wesleyans, Baptists, Independents, Society of Friends, and Plymouth Brethren have places of worship. There are several well-endowed charities, including the Blue-Coat school, at Dean-hill, originally founded by Dr. Whiting, in the early part of the 18th century; further endowed by Lord Scudamore; and restored and endowed by Walter Scott in 1786, who left by will £200 per annum to this charity, which clothes and educates 30 boys, and the like number of girls free: James Baker's charity consists of the interest of £20,000, appropriated to the relief of the poor inhabitants of the parish not receiving parochial relief. There are besides Rudhall's Hospital for five poor men and women, with an income of £10 per annum; Webbe's hospital, or almshouses, for seven poor people, with an income of £90; Perrock's almshouse at Dean Hill for four poor persons; and Pye's and Markye's almshouses. The principal schools are the National schools for boys and girls, to the funds of which is added a yearly rent-charge of £10, originally granted by Lord Weymouth towards the endowment of a grammar school; a British and Foreign school, and an infant school.—Adjoining the town on the S.W. is The Prospect, a promenade formed by the Man of Ross, and left by him to the inhabitants of the town for 500 years. In the centre of the meadow, below the Prospect, formerly stood an oak-tree 33 feet in girth, and said to be upwards of 1,100 years old, but which was almost destroyed by fire in 1850. From this spot a view is obtained of the river Wye which, affords good salmon fishing, and forms a curve, resembling a horse-shoe, a little below the town; there is another promenade, called Kyrle's Walk; and at a short distance from the town are the ruins of Wilton and Goodrich castles, and the mansion of Goodrich Court, with a collection of ancient armour and other antiquities. The banks of the Wye are much visited by tourists. The principal seats in the immediate vicinity of the town are The Chase, situated under the Roman camp on Chase Hill, Lincoln Hill House, Overross, Rudhall, and Springfield.—Market day is Thursday, for corn, cheese, and provisions, and every fourth Thursday a monthly market for cattle. Fairs are held on the Thursday after 10th March for sheep and lambs; on Holy Thursday, and on the Thursday in the second week after Whit Sunday, for pedlary and fancy goods; on the 20th July for wool; on the Thursday after 10th October for cheese; and on 11th December for horses, cattle, and sheep.

ROSS AND CROMARTY, two seaside and highland cos. in the N. of Scotland, so intimately blended as to require to be described geographically as one shire. They comprise a large tract of mountainous country, extending westward from the Moray Frith to the Atlantic Ocean, and southward from Sutherlandshire to the Beauley Frith and Inverness-shire, lying between 57° 7′ 4″ and 58° 7′ 20″ N. lat., and 3° 45′ 30″ and 5° 46′ 20″ W. long. The former county comprises the districts of Easter and Wester Ross, Ardmeanach, or the Black Isle, and the Highland districts of Ardross, Applecross, Fearndonald, Greinord, and the island of Lewis, one of the Western Isles (which see); while the latter county comprehends that part of the peninsula called the Black Isle, stretching between the Friths of Moray and Cromarty, together with ten detached portions on the eastern and north-western sides of Ross-shire, by which they are embosomed. In the earliest times of which we have any record this county was occupied by the British tribes Creones and Cantæ, and subsequently formed part of the Roman province Vespasiana. In later times it was held by the thane Macbeth, who had his chief stronghold at Calder, or Cawdor, Castle, and was an earldom under the Macdonalds till the reign of James III. It subsequently passed to the Mackenzies of Kintail, for one of which family the demesne of Cromarty was made a separate shire and earldom.—The united counties are bounded on the N. by the river Oikel and the county of Sutherland, and on the E. by the Moray Frith and the North Sea, on the S. and S.W. by the county of Inverness, and on the W. by the Minch channel dividing the mainland from the Western Islands. Their area is generally estimated at 3,157 square miles, or 2,046,375 acres, but, according to Sir George S. Mackenzie, the whole district, including Ferrintoch, which belongs to Nairnshire, comprises 8,799 square miles, or 2,431,359 acres, of which 359,893 acres are in the Hebrides, 220,586 acres belong to Cromartyshire, 5,973 to Nairnshire, and 3,445 square miles, or 2,204,800 acres, form Ross-shire. The extreme length of the united counties from N. to S. is 69 miles, and their greatest breadth 67, exclusive of the Hebridean part, comprising Lewis, Rona, and Barra islands, which are described under their respective heads. The whole circuit is 255 miles, of which 55 are along the eastern coast, and 85 along the western coast. The lowland district, in the E., is in general rich and productive, comprising a champaign country of great natural fertility and beauty. It is screened by the Highland ridges of Wester Ross on the W., and indented by the friths of Dornoch, Cromarty, and Beauley on the E., with the Gulf of Moray expanding into the North Sea. The principal points along the eastern coast are Meikleferry, in Dornoch Frith, known to Roman geographers as Abona Æstuarium, Tain and Shandwick harbours, Tarbetness Point, called by the ancients Ara Finium, with a lighthouse, the Sutor rocks, near the entrance into Cromarty Frith, and Fortrose, in the Moray Frith, called by the ancients Varar Æstuarium, and which is skirted by cliffs 300 feet high. The Highland districts to the W. and N. comprise the greater part of Ardmeanach, or the Black Isle, much of which is occupied by the broad and cheerless table-land of Mullbuy and Wester Ross, with the peaks of Ben-Wyvis, variously estimated at from 3,426 to 3,722 feet, towering above the other hills, which are grouped in Cyclopæan masses on a basis averaging about 1,500 feet above sea-level. This region is cleft in all directions by glens, gorges, and the beds of rapid mountain streams, which scarcely partake of the character of valleys; but that portion of Wester Ross which lies on the N. side of the Conon and Orren is comparatively level, comprehending the low country between Contin and the burn of Clyne. The western coast line is rugged, and indented by a continuous series of sea-lochs, the principal of which are lochs Enard, Broom, Little Broom, Greinord, Ewe, Gair, Torridon, with its branches Ardheslag and Shieldag, Carron and Alsh, with its sub-lochs Duich and Ling. The fresh-water lakes are Maree, Tannich, Skinaskink, Valtie, Lurgan, Na-Shallag, Fuir, Monar, Luichart, Glass, and Moir, besides numerous minor lakes, all abounding in trout, and many of them frequented by wild fowl. The chief points along the western coast are the Kyle ferry to Skye, outside Loch Alsh; Applecross Bay; Ewe Loch, from which is a passage of only 45 miles to Stornoway, in Lewis; and the promontories, named Ru Rea, Ru Carnderg, and Ru More. There are numerous small islands off almost every point of the coast, and in several of the sea-lochs. The chief streams flowing eastward are the Carron and Oikell, to the head of the Dornoch Frith; and the Alness, Aultgrand, Balnagowan, and Conan, to the Cromarty Frith; and the chief flowing westward are the Broom, Carron, and Ewe, to the head of the lochs of the same name; and the Shiel to the head of Loch Duich: all these streams abound in salmon and trout, and are much frequented by anglers. On the Raney river are several waterfalls, and in the bed of the Conon pearls have been found. The geological formation of the land on both coasts belongs to the Old Red sandstone, which is the substratum for 3 to 15 miles inland, and often rises into ridges no less than 3,000 feet above the sea-level; but the Highland district of the interior is composed of igneous rocks, chiefly granite and granitic gneiss, which prevail in the Black Isle; gneiss in the central district, from Ben Wyvis, on the E., to the Sutherland border; and mica-slate in the rugged district of Gairloch; some patches of quartz rock also occur near the Sutherland border, and granular limestone in the vicinity of Loch Reeshorn. In the Sutors of Cromarty, which consist chiefly of lias intermixed with sandstone and granite, Hugh Miller discovered the Pterichthys, or winged fish, the Osteolepis, and other rare fossils. Among the principal minerals are ironstone, which abounds in the W., and was formerly worked; copper in the primary limestone near Keeshorn; traces of lead-ore near Loch Moree; and pure bitumen in the shales of Strathpeffer. The soil of the greater part of the lowlands, comprising Easter Ross, Fearndonald, and part of Wester Ross, is a stiff clay, alternating with a sharp gravelly loam, and interspersed with considerable tracts of moorish land, part of which has recently been reclaimed. In the Black Isle much of the land is a poor loam, but in other parts a good black sandy mould, yielding fair crops of wheat, barley, oats, and potatoes. The soil of the uplands in the Highland district, and part of Wester Ross, is for the most part peaty or moorish, alternating with barren rock and sandy mould in the intersecting glens. The climate is moist and changeable, especially in the western districts, where the rainfall is much above the average; but the temperature is more genial than on the eastern coast, neither being as hot in summer, nor as cold in winter, as in the lowlands. The spring is backward, and the heat in July and August often oppressive, exceeding the highest temperature experienced in the S. of England. The prevailing winds blow from the W. and S.W., and occasionally in winter from the N.W. or the N.E., when they frequently bring heavy snowstorms. The whole of the surface appears originally to have been covered by the great Caledonian forest, of which some copses of oak, birch, and Scotch firs still remain, but was almost entirely disafforested in the Middle Ages, to the great detriment of the country. The present woods have been mostly planted since the early part of the last century. The total extent of wood reported in the two counties of Ross and Cromarty in the agricultural returns for 1855 was 26,675 imperial acres. The wild deer, eagle, and hawk, are still to be seen in the mountains, and the fox, badger, and game of all kinds are abundant. Peat is used for fuel, both coals and wood being scarce and dear. The valued rental, according to the old Scotch valuation of 1674, was £75,043, but the real rental under the new valuation Act was, in 1860-1, £180,177. The estates are in general large, but the farms in the lowlands small. The landed property of Ross-shire was distributed in 1854 amongst 69 proprietors, and the total number of proprietors of all kinds on the rolls was 1,117 in Ross-shire and 7 in Cromarty. In the champaign country to the E. the farms are surrounded with gardens and hedgerows, and have good out-buildings and cottages attached; but the people in the Highland districts are still very poor, and much of the land waste. So great have been agricultural improvements in the lowlands since the commencement of the present century that Easter Ross may contrast favourably with any other agricultural district of Great Britain. The estimated gross produce of the chief crops was, in 1855, 233,018 bushels of wheat, 204,417 of barley, 493,042 of oats, 6,167 of bere, 21,834 of beans and pease, and 163,834 tons of turnips, and 20,876 tons of potatoes. A little barley, oats, and potatoes are grown in the more sheltered spots in the Highlands, but the greater portion of the surface is devoted to sheep farming, and the great farmers of the W. keep considerable numbers of black cattle on such parts of their farms as are not well adapted for sheep. The Highland and Ayrshire cattle are the favourite breeds, and improved varieties of horses and pigs are kept. The salmon and herring fisheries on the E. coast are productive, but the fisheries of the W. have recently declined. The only manufactures of any importance are the woollen and hemp, which employ about 600 hands. The principal exports are black cattle, sheep, wool, grain, and fish; and the imports coal, lime, and general merchandise. A small number of vessels are engaged in the coasting trade, and steam-vessels regularly visit the bays and sea-lochs.—The Inverness and Perth and Inverness and Aberdeen Junction railway has recently been continued from Inverness by way of Beauley and Dingwall to Tain, and so by Meikle Ferry to Bonar Bridge. The roads, which have recently been much improved and extended, traverse the county in various directions. The chief are the Edinburgh road, which enters the county from Inverness, and continues northward, through the Black Isle and Easter Ross, to Cromarty; another line also leads northward through Wester Ross, Fearndonald, and part of Easter Ross, by way of Dingwall and Alness, to the Dornoch Frith, and so into Sutherlandshire; while several other lines cross the county from E. to W., following the river valleys and straths. The only towns in Ross and Cromarty having a population above 1,700 are Dingwall, Cromarty, Fortrose, Tain, and Stornoway, the first four being market towns. Dingwall is the capital and election town of both shires, and a royal burgh. Cromarty is the county town of the shire to which it gives name, and was formerly a royal burgh, but resigned its charter, and is now only a municipal burgh. Tain, Fortrose, and Rosemarkie are royal burghs, but the two last are united to form one municipal burgh. Stornoway is a burgh of barony. The other towns and principal villages are Invergordon, Alness, Inver, Bridgend, Barbaraville, Balintore, Drummond, Milntown, Saltburn, Jamima, Portleigh, Shandwick, Hilltown, Portmahomack, Rockfield, Balnabruach, Cononbridge, Evantown, Avoch, Charlestown, Auchterneid, Keithtown, Contin, Maryburgh, Munlochy, Jamestown, Jeantown, Redcastle, Poolewe, Plockton, Dornie, Bundalloch, Shieldag, and Ullapool. The two counties return one member to parliament, the constituency in 1861 being 821 for Ross-shire, and 41 for Cromartyshire; and the population of the joint counties, in 1851, 82,707, which had decreased in 1861 to 82,301, comprising 17,230 separate families, the people being mostly Gaelic speaking. Cromarty, Dingwall, and Tain contribute to Wick, in the county of Caithness, in returning one member to parliament, and Fortrose contributes to Inverness. The two counties are governed by one sheriff, but have each their lord-lieutenant and deputy-lieutenant, assisted by 25 deputy-lieutenants in five subdivisions for the two counties. The sheriff, ordinary, and small-debt and commissary courts are held for Ross-shire at Dingwall, Tain, and Stornoway every Tuesday and Friday during session, and for Cromartyshire, at Cromarty, on the first Thursday of each month during session, but the quarter sessions and commissary court only meet when specially called; small-debt courts are held at Fortrose, Invergordon, Jeantown, and Kincardine. For ecclesiastical purposes Ross and Cromarty shires comprise the three presbyteries of Chanonry, Dingwall, and Tain, which constitute the synod of Ross, and the two presbyteries of Lochcarron and Lewis, which belong to the synod of Glenelg. The ancient diocese of Ross in the Scotch Episcopalian Church is now united to Moray. There are 27 parishes, besides parts of two others on the mainland, and 4 parishes in the island of Lewis; but the number of places of worship belonging to the Established Church in 1851 was 35. There were also 43 Free churches, 2 United Presbyterian, 5 Episcopalian, 1 Independent, 1 Baptist, and 1 Roman Catholic. There is the Easter Ross Union poorhouse for 9 parishes, with accommodation for 175 paupers, and the Black Isle poorhouse for 7 parishes. The only noblemen's seats are Applecross, of Viscount Dunblane, and Loch-Luichart Lodge, of Lord Ashburton; but there are numerous mansions belonging to the landed gentry. This county gives title to a herald in the Lord Lyon's court.—The most interesting antiquities are the cathedral at Fortrose, St. Duthac's old church, Lochlin castle and abbey, Mulvoy church, in the Isle of Lewis, and the castles of Dingwall, Craighouse, Invergordon, Donan, Kinkell, and Strome, also Druidical stones or altars at Fearn, Kincardine, and Loch-Royg, Danish pillars, and vitrified forts on the E. coast, besides cairns, duns, and Picts' houses, scattered through various parts of the county.

ROSS, a tnshp. in the par. of Belford, hund. of Islandshire, co. Northumberland, formerly in Durham, 3 miles N.E. of Belford. It is situated near the coast, on which great quantities of cockles are found.

ROSS, a vil. in the par. of Comrie, co. Perth, Scotland, adjoining the town of Comrie.

ROSS, an ancient par. in the co. of Argyle, Scotland, now joined to Kilfinichen.

ROSS, a vil. in the par. of Mordington, co. Berwick, Scotland. It is situated at the base of a cliff which has a falling rivulet, which swells during rainy weather and forms several cascades. The houses are principally built on the beach, near high-water mark.

ROSS. See ROSSCARBERY, co. Cork.

ROSS, a vil. in the bar. of Moyarta, co. Clare, Ireland, 5 miles W. of Carrigaholt. It gives name to a bay, and has remains of an ancient castle.

ROSS, a bar. in the co. of Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, containing the par. of Ross, and parts of Ballinchalla, Ballinrobe, and Cong, comprising about 98,600 acres.

ROSS, a par. in the bar. of Ross, co. Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 3 miles N.W. of Cong, its post town. The surface consists of a neck of land lying between loughs Corrib and Mask, and contains a large proportion of mountain and bog. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Tuam, val. with Kilmolara, £335, in the patron. of the bishop. Here is a Roman Catholic chapel, also two public schools. Ross Hill and Petersburgh are the chief residences; near the former are the ruins of an old church.

ROSS, a hmlt. in the bar. of Skreen, co. Meath, Ireland, 5 miles N.W. of Dunshaughlin, and 7 S.E. of Navan.

ROSS, a bog in Queen's County, Ireland, near Maryborough.

ROSS, an islet in the lower lake of Killarney, co. Kerry, Ireland. It now belongs to Lord Kenmare, having once been possessed by the O'Donoghues, who built a castle on it, which was taken and dismantled by the parliamentary General Ludlow in 1652. It is chiefly valuable for its lead and copper mines, and commands views of the lakes of Killarney.

ROSS, a lough on the borders of cos. Armagh and Monaghan, Ireland, 5 miles S.E. of Castleblaney.

ROSSCARBERY, a par., post, and market town in the W. div. of East Carbery bar., co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 32 miles S.W. of Cork. The surface consists for the most part of good land, but is hilly. The town is situated on the road from Cork to Skibbereen, and near Ross harbour. It site is slightly elevated, and it consists of four streets and a central square. It contains a market house, court house, police and coastguard stations. Petty sessions are held weekly. The harbour has become useless from the formation of a sandbar across the entrance. The inner bay, which becomes dry at low water, is celebrated for its silver eels. This town originated in an abbey, founded by St. Faughnan, who lived in the early part of the 6th century. It became a seat of learning, and afterwards an episcopal seat and a walled town; but at the time of the English invasion it was in a state of decay, and the wall had disappeared. It received a charter of incorporation in the time of King John. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ross, val. £362, in the patron. of the dean. The Roman Catholic chapel forms the head of a district. There are five public, and as many private schools. The chief seats are Cahermore, Derry, Castle Downeen, Milleen, Millfield, and Farley Cottage. The diocese of Ross lies within the county of Cork, and comprises 26 benefices. It is united in the see of Cork, Cloyne, and Ross. The cathedral is the parish church already mentioned. Wednesday is market day. Fairs are held 26th August and 19th September and December.

ROSSDROIT, a par. in the bar. of Bantry, co. Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles S.W. of Enniscorthy, its post town. The surface consists of a light soil, and is traversed by the road from Enniscorthy to New Ross. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ferns, val. £464, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was erected in 1795 by means of a gift from the late Board of First Fruits. This parish is joined to Davidstown in the Roman Catholic arrangement. There is a school, supported by the Erasmus Smith Charity, besides several private schools. Near the village are ruins of the old church. Fairs are held in February, March, May, October, and December.

ROSSDUFF, a small par. in the bar. of Gualtiere, co. Waterford, prov. of Munster, Ireland. Waterford is its post town. It is situated on Waterford harbour. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Waterford, forming part of the benefice of Killure, which see.

ROSSEE, a par. in the bar. of Carra, co. Mayo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 6 miles S.S.E. of Castlebar. Hollymount is its post town. The soil is fertile, upon a substratum of limestone. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Tuam, val. with Balla, £324, in the patron. of the bishop. It is joined to Balla in the Roman Catholic division. There is a school, also ruins of a castle at Clogher Lucas.

ROSSES, THE, several isles in the bar. of Boylagh, co. Donegal, Ireland, including Inniscu, Innismakadu, and several smaller islands, with a wild district on the mainland belonging to Marquis Conyngham.

ROSSES, UPPER and LOWER, two vils. in the par. of Drumcliffe, bar. of Lower Carbery, co. Sligo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 5 miles N.W. of Sligo. They are situated between Sligo-pool and Drumcliffe Bay, and are frequented as bathing-places. Races take place in the vicinity.

ROSSETT, a station on the Shrewsbury and Chester section of the Great Western railway, co. Denbigh, 4 miles E. of Caergwrle.

ROSSIE, an ancient par. in the co. of Perth, Scotland, now joined to Inchture, which see.

ROSSINAN, a par. in the bars. of Ida and Knocktopher, co. Kilkenny, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 5 miles N.N.W. of Waterford. Innistiogi is its post town. The road from Waterford to Kilkenny passes through the parish. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ossory, val. with Kilbeacon, £214, in the patron. of the bishop. It is joined to Kilmacow in the Roman Catholic arrangement.

ROSSINGTON, a par. and tnshp. in the soke of Doncaster, West Riding co. York, 4¾ miles S.E. of Doncaster, its post town, and 4 N.W. of Bawtry. It is a station on the Great Northern Railway. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the S. side of the river Torne, which is crossed by several bridges. The surface is of a hilly nature, and the land is fertile, with a soil of sand, gravel, and clay, and subsoil of the same. Mr. Lumley's hounds meet in this parish. The manor was for a long period the seat of the Fossard and Mauley families, and was granted by Henry VII. to the corporation of Doncaster, from whom it was purchased by the late J. Brown, Esq., of Harehills Grove, near Leeds, in 1838. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £600, and the glebe comprises 65 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of York, val. £659. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, has a pinnacled tower containing three bells. Boswell, the gipsy king, was buried in the churchyard in 1708. There is a National school for both sexes, founded and endowed by the Rev. William Plaxton in 1650. Rossington Hall is the principal residence. J. Brown, Esq., is lord of the manor and sole landowner.

ROSSINVER, a par., partly in the bar. of Carbery, co. Sligo, and partly in that of Rossclogher, co. Leitrim, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 5½ miles S.W. of Ballyshannon. Kinlough is its post town. The parish is bounded on one side by the river Drowse, and on the N. by Donegal Bay. The soil is of a medium quality, on a subsoil of limestone. The surface is traversed by the road from Ballyshannon to Manor Hamilton. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Kilmore, val. £432, in the patron. of the bishop. The Roman Catholic chapel is the head of a union. There are a parochial and four other public schools. Among the seats are Woodville House, surrounded with plantations, and Mount Prospect. Fairs are held at Kinlough.

ROSSKEEN, a par. in the co. of Ross, Scotland. It contains the vils. of Bridgend, Saltburn, and Invergordon, at which last place is a safe harbour for vessels of 100 tons. It extends in length from 25 to 30 miles, with an extreme breadth of about 12, and is bounded on the S.E. by the Cromarty Frith, and on its other sides by the pars. of Alness, Kincardine, Edderton, and Kelmuir. The portion containing the greater part of the population extends about 10 miles N.W. from the frith, with a mean breadth of about 6 miles. The surface is moderately even, except on the Kincardine boundary, where the Cairn-Coinneag mountains rise to an altitude of about 3,000 feet above sea-level. The land is chiefly in heathy pasture and sheep walks. There are three or four lakes, but none of magnitude. The Balnagowan river takes its rise in this parish, but soon recedes from it into Kilmuir. The lower portion of the south-western boundary is traversed by the river Alness. The coast line is about 6 miles in length, and indented by several small creeks and havens, which facilitate fishing and commerce. The predominant rock is Old Red sandstone, which is quarried to some extent on the southern border. The soil on the high grounds was naturally of a spongy and light nature, but has been improved to a rich loam, and in the low lands it is of various qualities, alternating betwixt gravel, loam, and a strong clay. The parish is traversed by the road from Dingwall to Tain. There is a ferry at Invergordon to Kirkmichael, and an extensive grain mill at Dalmore. In the vicinity are an obelisk and several cairns. This par. is in the presb. of Tain and synod of Ross. The stipend of the minister is £157. The church is situated about 1½ mile W. from Invergordon. There are also a Free church, five Free Church schools, and a private girls' school. W. Mackintosh, author of several works, was born in this parish.

ROOSKEY. See RUSKEY, cos. Longford and Leitrim.

ROSSLAND, a hmlt. in the par. of Erskine, co. Renfrew, Scotland.

ROSSLARE, a par. in the bar. of Forth, co. Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 7 miles S.E. of Wexford. This parish forms a peninsula stretching along the S. side of Wexford Harbour. The soil is mostly good. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Ferns, val. with Tacumshane, £789, in the patron. of the bishop. It is united to Tagoat in the Roman Catholic arrangement. There are two schools. Rosslare House is the principal residence. The herring fishery is carried on to some extent. There is a coastguard station at Rosslare fort, near which is a pilot station. Ruins of the old church are seen.

ROSSLEA, a vil. in the par. of Clones, bar. of Clonkelly, co. Fermanagh, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 4 miles N.N.E. of Clones. It is situated on the road from Lisnakea to Monaghan, near Carnmore Mountain. The river Fin is here spanned by a bridge. It contains a police station, a court-house, and a Roman Catholic chapel. Petty sessions are regularly held, and there is a flax mill in the village. Lake View is a seat commanding an attractive view. Fairs are held on the 8th day of every month.

ROSS, LITTLE, an islet in Kirkcudbright Bay, co. Kirkcudbright, Scotland, 5½ miles S.W. of Kirkcudbright. It is situated near the headland called Great Ross, and has a lighthouse, put up in 1844, and visible for 18 miles at sea.

ROSSMINOGE, a par. in the bars. of Scarawalsh and Gorey, co. Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 5 miles N.E. of Ferns. Gorey is its post town. The surface is intersected by the river Bann. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ferns, val. with Tomb, £526, in the patron. of the bishop. The church has long been in ruins. It is united to Camolin in the Roman Catholic division. There are two private schools.

ROSSMIRE, a par. in the bars. of Decies-without-Drum and Upperthird, co. Waterford, prov. of Munster, Ireland, containing Kilmacthomas, its post town. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lismore, val. with Fews, £206. The church was built by means of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits. There is a Roman Catholic chapel, likewise two private day schools and a Sunday-school.

ROSSMORE, an islet in the co. of Kerry, Ireland, 5 miles S.E. of Sneem.

ROSSMORE, a demesne in the bar. and co. of Monaghan, Ireland. It is situated under Cortolvin Hill, and gives title of baron to Lord Rossmore.

ROSS, NEW, a par., post, and market town in the bars. of Shelburne and Bantry, co. Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 19½ miles N.W. of Wexford. It is situated on the side of a hill declining towards the river Barrow, which is here crossed by a bridge going over to Rossbercon, in the adjoining county of Kilkenny. It contains cavalry barracks, a police station, corn, fish, and meat market, and several large breweries. A considerable business is done in the general trade, and malt liquor is extensively exported. The port is subordinate to that of Waterford. The river Barrow is navigable at high tide for good-sized vessels. The charities comprise a lying-in and a fever hospital, a dispensary, and a poorhouse. There are two branch banks in the town, and seven life and fire assurance agencies. The town is governed by commissioners, who meet once a month. There is a court-house, with bridewell attached, in which quarter sessions are held, and petty sessions once a fortnight. Ross was first chartered in the time of Edward I., and its charter confirmed at various subsequent periods. It returned two members of parliament before the Union, but now returns only one. The constituency in 1859 was 195. The population in 1861 was 7,115. The streets are lighted with gas, and newsrooms have been established. It is the head of a Poor-law Union, and has a custom house, and port and harbour commission. Ross seems to have originated in a monastery founded by St. Abban, and was called Rossglass and Rossmactrevin. Another authority attributes its foundation to Isabella, daughter of Strongbow. It was protected by a wall in 1269. The place was partly destroyed by the Kavanaghs in 1469, and at different subsequent periods the town suffered from repeated aggressions. The Duke of Ormonde besieged the town in 1641, but was repulsed. It was afterwards taken and dismantled by Cromwell. The town was the scene of a collision between the royalists and insurgents in 1798, when the latter were routed after a long and sanguinary fight. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ferns, val. £500, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was erected on the site of the old one in 1813 by means of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits. There are two Roman Catholic chapels and two nunneries, a chapel-of-ease, and Methodist and Friends' meeting-houses. There are good schools, among them the grammar school founded by Sir John Ivory, and the school of the Friends of Education. Oaklands, Talbot Hall, and Macmurragh are among the seats. Ruins of the old church are remaining, as also those of Mountgarret Castle, formerly belonging to the Butler family. Wednesdays and Saturdays are market days. Fairs are held on 10th January, 10th February, 17th March, Easter Monday, 3rd May, Whit-Monday, 10th July, 10th August, 10th September, 18th October, 10th November, and 8th December.

ROSSNOWLAGH, an ancient par. now joined to Drumholm, co. Donegal, Ireland.

ROSS, OLD, or ST. MARY'S, a par. in the bar. of Bantry, co. Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3½ miles E. of New Ross, its post town. The surface is chiefly cultivated, and the soil light. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ferns, forming part of the union of St. Mary's, New Ross. The church was erected in place of the old one, which was destroyed in 1798. There is a Roman Catholic chapel. A mound is the only trace left of Ross Castle, which was built by Strongbow.

ROSSORY, a par. in the bars. of Clanawly and Magheraboy, co. Fermanagh, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, containing part of the outskirts of Enniskillen, its post town. The surface extends along the shore of Lough Erne, and is traversed by the roads from Enniskillen to Sligo and Ballyshannon. The soil is mostly good. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Clogher, val. £298, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is an old building. The parish is united to Enniskillen in the Roman Catholic division. The royal endowed school of Enniskillen is within the parish, and there are several parish schools. In this parish was Lisgoole Abbey, founded in 1106, by MacNoellus Mackenleff, on the site of a previous religious establishment of earlier antiquity. It was rebuilt after the Dissolution, when the site was granted to Sir John Davis.

ROSSREILLY, an abbey now in ruins, in the bar. of Clare, co. Galway, Ireland, 3 miles W. of Headford, and 15 N.W. of Galway. It was founded in the 15th century by Lord Granard for Franciscan friars, and stands on the river Black, near Lough Corrib.

ROSSTHWAITE, a hmlt. in Borrowdale, co. Cumberland, 5 miles S. of Keswick. It is situated on the river Derwent, and has a small chapel. In the vicinity is the Bowder Stone.

ROSSTREVOR, a post town, watering-place, and seaport in the par. of Kilbroney, bar. of Upper Iveagh, co. Down, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 7 miles S.E. of Newry, and 57 N. of Dublin. It is a station on the Newry, Warrenpoint, and Rosstrevor railway. It is situated on rising ground declining towards a small indentation of Lough Carlingford. The town was formerly called Castle Rory from one of the Magennis family, who founded the place, and the remains of whose castle are yet standing in the town. It subsequently came into the possession of the Trevor family, and took its present name from Rose, daughter of Sir Marm. Whitchurch, who married Trevor, Viscount Dungannon. It contains the parish church of Kilbroney, a Roman Catholic chapel, Presbyterian meeting-house, and National and Church educational schools. The trade of the place is entirely local, but there is a convenient harbour and quay. In the S.W. part of the town stands a monument to General Ross, who fell in America. There are a police station, a dispensary, hot and cold baths, and several good hotels in the town. Fairs are held on the first Monday in February, fourth Tuesday in March, second Tuesday in May, first Friday in August, third Friday in September, first Saturday in November, and second Thursday in December.

ROSTELLAN, a par in the bar. of Imokilly, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 3 miles S.W. of Cloyne, its post town. It extends along the eastern side of Cork Harbour. The soil is mostly good. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Cloyne, val. £216, in the patron. of the crown. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Aghada. There are a parochial and three private schools. Rostellan Castle in this parish was the seat of the Marquis of Thomond. There is a holy well in the vicinity held in great veneration by the poor people.

ROSTHERNE, a par. and tnshp., chiefly in the hund. of Bucklow, but partly in that of Macclesfield, co. Chester, 3 miles N.W. of Nether Knutsford, its post town, and 3½ from Bowden station on the South Junction, Manchester, and Altrincham railway. The village is situated near the river Bollin, and is wholly agricultural. The par. includes High Leigh and Marthall chplries., with nine tnshps. The soil is chiefly clay and sand. The impropriate tithes belong to the Dean and Canons of Christ Church, Oxford. The living is a vic.* with the cur. of Bollington annexed, in the dioc. of Chester, val. £300. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient edifice with a pinnacled and embattled tower containing chimes, clock, and six bells. The interior of the church contains several monuments by Bacon, and has a mortuary chapel of the Egerton family. In addition to the parish church are the following district churches, viz. High Leigh, High Leigh Chaplaincy, Marthall, and Over Tabley, the livings of which are all perpet. curs., varying in val. from £160 to £60. The parochial charities produce £7 10*s.* per annum. There are Church schools for both sexes. The boys' school has a lending library adjoining. W. T. Egerton, Esq., is lord of the manor and owner of all the soil.

ROSTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Norbury, hund. of Appletree, co. Derby, 5 miles S.W. of Ashborne. It is in conjunction with Norbury to form a tnshp.

ROSTRUNK, an islet in Clew Bay. co. Mayo, Ireland, 4 miles W. of Newport. On the inner side is a safe harbour, with 3 fathoms water.

ROSYTH, a ruined tower of the Stuarts near Inverkeithing, co. Fife, Scoland. It is situated on the Frith of Forth, and belongs to the Earl of Hopetoun.

ROTHAY, or ROTHER, a stream of the co. of Westmoreland, rises near Langdale Pikes, and flowing through Grasmere joins the Brathay.

ROTHBURY, a par. and post town in the W. div. of Coquetdale ward, co. Northumberland, 12 miles S.W. of Alnwick, and 15 N.W. of Morpeth. It is situated in the sequestered vale of the Coquet, which is here crossed by a stone bridge of four arches, and comprises Cartington, Hepple, Thropton, Tosson, Warton, and 19 other tnshps. Rothbury was formerly a Roman station, and was anciently written Robire, Rathbury, and Routhbyrig. It was given to the Percys in 1330. The magistrates meet at the Black Bull Inn monthly, and the county court is held at the same inn. Malting and brewing are carried on in the neighbourhood. The town, which is wide and airy, consists of three streets, irregularly built, diverging from the market place. There are a mechanics' institute, the union workhouse, and a market cross. A great portion of the land is of a moory nature, and was formerly forest. The subsoil abounds in coal, limestone, ironstone, and lead ore, which are supposed to have been worked by the Romans. In the western part of the parish is a valley encircled with hills, celebrated for goats' milk, which is in much request by valetudinarians, who resort hither during the summer months. On the brow of a hill, on the S. side of the river Coquet, is Whitton Tower, formerly the seat of the Umfravilles, whose arms decorate the western front, now used as the parsonage-house. Rothbury Poor-law Union comprises 25 parishes or places. It is also the seat of new County Court and superintendent registry districts. It gives name to a deanery in the archdeac. of Lindisfarne, and dioc. of Durham. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Durham, val. £1,106, in the patron. of the Bishop of Carlisle. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient cruciform structure with a square tower containing a peal of bells and a clock. It was restored in 1850 at an outlay of £3,000. It contains some monuments and an antique font, on which is rudely sculptured a representation of the Redeemer sitting in judgment. The parochial charities produce about £264 per annum. There is a free grammar school with an endowment of £100, and Thomlinson's girls' free school founded in 1719. The Independents have a place of worship, to which a school is attached. The Duke of Northumberland is lord of the manor. Market day is on Friday, but has fallen into disuse. Fairs are held on the Friday in Easter week, on Whit-Monday, 2nd October, and 1st November.

ROTHER, three rivers of this name in England; one rises near Rotherfield in Sussex, and, flowing along the borders of Sussex and Kent, and round Oxney Isle, falls into the English Channel at Rye; another rises in the parish of Priors Dean, in co. Hants, and, passing the Sussex border, joins the Arun at Stopham; the third rises near Chesterfield, in co. Derby, and joins the Don at Rotherham.

ROTHERAS. See ROTHERWAS, co. Hereford.

ROTHERBRIDGE, a hund. in the rape of Arundel, co. Sussex, contains the pars. of Barlavington, Burton, Duncton, Egdean, Kirdford, Lurgashall, North Chapel, Petworth, Stopham, Sutton, Tillington, and Woolavington; comprising an area of 42,250 acres.

ROTHERBY, a par. in the hund. of East Goscote, co. Leicester, 6 miles S.W. of Melton-Mowbray, its post town, and half a mile E. of the Brooksby railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Wreake. The living is a rect. annexed to that of Hoby, in the dioc. of Peterborough. The church, dedicated to All Saints, has a spired tower containing three bells. The parochial charities produce about £15 per annum. There is a free school for both sexes. L. Wilson, Esq., is lord of the manor.

ROTHERFIELD, a hund. in the rape of Pevensey, co. Sussex, contains the town of Tonbridge Wells and the pars. of Frant and Rotherfield, comprising an area of 24,140 acres.

ROTHERFIELD, a par. in the above hund., rape of Pevensey, co. Sussex, 7 miles S. of Tonbridge Wells, its post town, and 4 W. of Wadhurst railway station. The parish, which is of large extent, is situated on the road from Tonbridge Wells to Lewes, at the source of the river Rother, and is chiefly agricultural. In the year 800 Rotherfield had a priory founded as a cell to St. Denis, in France, by Berthwold, Duke of the South Saxons. The village is built on the declivity of a hill, under which the river Rother has its source. The surface is diversified by hills, including Crowborough Beacon. The soil is chiefly clay, but tolerably fertile. About 500 acres are in hop plantations. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £1,514 10s., and the glebe comprises 110 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £1,354. The church, dedicated to St. Denis, is an ancient structure, with a timber roof and square embattled tower, crowned with a lofty spire and containing five bells. The interior contains many relics of great antiquity, including a carved font and a Norway oak communion table, the gift of the family of the late Rev. R. Crawley, who died in 1836, after having held the rectory upwards of half a century. The register dates from 1539. The parochial charities produce about £334 per annum, of which £313 goes to Sir H. Fermor's school and almshouses. There is a National school for both sexes. The Calvinistic Baptists and Wesleyans have each a place of worship. The Hall, which is the principal residence, is a square building, part of which has been recently restored; the other part is of great antiquity, and has a peculiar stone chimney-piece in the drawing-room. The Earls of Abergavenny and De la Warr are lords of the manor. Fairs are held on 18th June and 20th October.

ROTHERFIELD, a tythg. in the par. of East Tisted, lower half div. of Selborne hund., co. Hants, 4½ miles S.W. of Alton. It is situated on the road from Alton to Gosport, and contains the hmlts. of Heards and Holtham. Rotherfield Park is a modern residence.

ROTHERFIELD-GRAYS, a par. in the hund. of Binfield, co. Oxford, 3 miles S.W. of Henley-on-Thames, its post town, and 7½ from Reading. The village is situated on the Thames, and is principally agricultural. The manor was formerly held by the De Greys, Lovels, and Knollyses, from whom it afterwards passed to the Stapletons of Grey's Court, a venerable mansion containing part of the ancient baronial residence of the De Greys, from whom the parish derives its suffix. The surface is well wooded, the prevailing timber being beech. The soil is gravelly, alternating with flint and chalk. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £714, in the patron. of Trinity College, Oxford. The church has a square wooden belfry. The interior of the church contains a canopied brass of Robert de Grey, bearing date 1387, also tombs of the above-mentioned families, including a monument to Sir Francis Knollys. There are also the district churches of Trinity church and Highmore, the livings of which are perpet. curs.* The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum. There is a parochial school.

ROTHERFIELD-PEPPARD, a par. in the hund. of Binfield, co. Oxford, 4½ miles S.W. of Henley-on-Thames, its post town, and 7 from Reading. It was held in 1225 by William Pipard, from whom it takes its distinguishing name, and afterwards passed to the Botelers, Draytons, &c. The village which is considerable, is chiefly agricultural, but contains a flour-mill and a paper manufactory. The parish is bounded on the E. by the river Thames, and intersected by the road to Reading, also by a road from Nettlebed to Reading. The surface is undulating, and well wooded with about 180 acres of beech-wood. The soil is fertile, producing excellent wheat and grain, upon a subsoil of chalk and flint. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £522, and the glebe comprises 57 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £623, in the patron. of Jesus College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to All Saints, has a wooden tower, supposed to have been built in the reign of Edward I. The parochial charities produce about £8 per annum. There is a free school. The Independents have a place of worship. Near the church is a perennial spring of clear water.

ROTHERHAM, a par., market town, and tnshp., in the S. div. of Strafforth wap., West Riding co. York, 5 miles N.E. of Sheffield, 48 S.W. of York, and 159 N.W. of London, or 172 by railway. It is the Junction station of the Midland and Sheffield and Rotherham railways. The par., which is of large extent, includes, besides the town of Rotherham, the tnshps. of Brinsworth, Catcliffe, Greasbrough, Kimberworth, Orgreave, Tinsley, and part of Dalton, together with the hmlts. of Masbrough and Holmes, which belong to the tnshp. of Kimberworth, but form part of the town of Rotherham. Rotherham is a flourishing manufacturing town, situated on rising ground near the right bank of the river Don, some little distance below its junction with the Rother. It is a place of great antiquity, and, possessing many advantages, has risen considerably of late years in importance both as a manufacturing and commercial town. There are traces of Roman remains, consisting of earthworks and a rectangular encampment called Temple Brough, supposed to have been the station Ad Fines, and Roman coins and other antiquities have been found thereabouts. In the reign of Edward the Confessor it was held by Acune, and after the Norman conquest, the Earl of Mortaigne granted it to Nigel de Lovetot. It then came into the possession of the Vescis, one of whom subsequently gave it to the monks of Rufford Abbey. Henry III. granted many privileges to the town, including a market and a fair. Edward I. further extended its privileges, and granted an additional fair, which was of great advantage to the town, as it lasted many days, and brought a large concourse of merchants from various parts of the country. Thomas Scott, who afterwards became Archbishop of York in the reign of Edward IV., and was born at Rotherham, conferred many benefits on his native town; he founded a college of ecclesiastics, and rebuilt the church; the college was suppressed by Edward VI., but a grammar school was soon afterwards founded in its stead. Henry VIII., on the dissolution of Rufford monastery, granted Rotherham to the Earl of Shrewsbury. It afterwards descended to the Howards, and is still held by one of the younger branches of that family, the Earl of Effingham, who is hereditary lord of the manor, and holds a court-leet by his bailiff for the manors of Rotherham and Kimberworth. Mary Queen of Scots stayed a night at Rotherham after being taken prisoner; and Charles I., when in a similarly unfortunate position, was kept here a night by the Scotch army during the Civil War. Lord Fairfax and the Earl of Newcastle successively held possession of the town for the parliament and the king, but after the battle of Marston Moor the royalists were compelled to yield up the garrisoned town.—The population of the town of Rotherham in 1851 was 6,325 with 1,269 inhabited houses, which in 1861 had increased to 7,598, with 1,484 inhabited houses.—The substratum abounds in coal, iron ore, and sandstone, the latter supplying the cutlers of Sheffield. More than a century ago the Walkers established a manufactory for cast-iron goods, and from this and other large establishments at Rotherham large quantities of cannon were supplied to the English navy during the American and French wars. In the town and its immediate vicinity are extensive collieries, potteries, and glass works, also breweries, flax mills, rope walks, and works for pyroligneous acid and gum. In the ship-yards are occasionally built vessels of 50 tons. Many of the inhabitants are employed in the carrying trade, and there are several wharves on the river Don, which is navigable as far as Sheffield, and affords communication with all the great manufacturing towns of Yorkshire and Lancashire by means of the Don navigation and Tinsley canal. The old bridge over the Don, connecting the suburb of Masbrough, has an ancient chapel standing over the central pier, and until recently used as the town gaol. There is also a viaduct half a mile long, with thirty arches, belonging to the Midland Railway, over the valley of the Don.—The town is chiefly governed by 12 feoffees and a body of commissioners appointed under an Act of Parliament obtained in 1810. The houses are for the most part built of stone, which gives the town a substantial appearance. Several new streets were laid out in 1850. The town is well paved, lighted with gas, and has a good supply of water. The townhall or court-house was erected in 1826, at a cost of £5,000. There are a market-house, shambles, two banks, a savings-bank, a literary and mechanics' institution, newsrooms, subscription library, a dispensary, and a race stand. The midsummer quarter sessions for a division of the West Riding and petty sessions for the town are held in the townhall, the latter twice a month on Mondays. The county court likewise sits here. The police force is under the direction of the town commissioners.—The great tithes belong to the Earl of Effingham. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of York, val. £158. The church, which is dedicated to All Saints, or to St. Mary, is in the early English style, with a tower and crocketed spire of the time of Edward IV. The old font is supposed to be of the Saxon period. The church has lately been put in thorough repair. There are several brasses, and a monument of marble to the memory of fifty persons who were drowned in 1841 in the Don at the launch of a vessel. In addition to the parish church, are the following district churches, viz. at Dalton, Greaseborough, Masbrough, and Kimberworth, the livings of which are perpet. curs.* varying in val. from £200 to £150. The parish register dates from the early part of the 16th century. There are places of worship for Wesleyans, Independents, Baptists, Primitive Methodists, Unitarians, and Roman Catholics. Rotherham cemetery was opened in 1843, and is about 2 acres in extent. The free grammar school was founded in the reign of Queen Elizabeth. There are several other schools, which include the feoffees' school, built in 1775, and endowed with £100 a year, the British and Foreign school for 400 boys and girls; the Parkgate school for 150, built by Earl Fitzwilliam in 1844; Scott's charity school, endowed with £77 per annum; Hollis' Dissenting school for twenty-four poor children; two infant, and a Sunday school. The Independent College for twenty-five students, though founded in 1755, was not opened until forty years subsequently; it is in connection with the University of London. Jesus College, now an inn, was founded in the time of Richard III. The charities are numerous, and include Bellamy's almshouses, endowed with £68 per annum; the Bentley charity, and the Great Dole. The union poorhouse, with grounds, occupies upwards of five acres. Rotherham Poor-law Union comprises 27 parishes and townships.—The Rotherham and Masbrough Advertiser, established in 1858, is published in the town. Market days are Monday and Friday. Fairs are held every other Monday, and on Whit-Monday and 1st December, being the largest for cattle in the N. of England, and a statute fair for hiring servants on the first Monday in November.

ROTHERHITHE, ST. MARY, or REDRIFF, a par. in the div. of Brixton hund., co. Surrey, 2 miles S.E. of St. Paul's, and 1 mile S.E. of Southwark, within which borough it is situated. This place, colloquially called Redriff, was anciently a village and marsh on the S. side of the river Thames, between the Pool and Limehouse reaches, but is now an extensive suburb of London, containing about 25,000 inhabitants. In the latter part of the 18th century a destructive fire occurred, which consumed upwards of 200 houses. The Thames Tunnel, one of the termini of which is at Rotherhithe, is noticed under the article LONDON; the Grand Surrey canal also terminates here, and has inner and outer docks, adjoining which are the Greenland and Commercial Docks, covering 40 acres, the East Country Dock, and the Grand Surrey New Dock. Along the bank of the Thames are numerous ship-building yards, boat and lighter-builders' wharves, timber wharves, ordnance wharves, anchor wharves, a mast yard, iron works, and numerous warehouses for rigging and victualling vessels. The houses are chiefly inhabited by masters of ships, seafaring men, and persons connected with the shipping trade, docks, factories, whitelead and saltpetre works, and other establishments dependent on navigation and commerce. The space between the Grand Surrey canal and the Deptford road is occupied by marsh and fields, and a large extent of market gardens separates this parish from Peckham New Town. The living is a rect.* with the cur. of St. Paul's, Globe-street, annexed, in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £772, in the patron. of Clare Hall, Cambridge. The parochial church, dedicated to St. Mary, is situated nearly opposite the entrance to the Thames Tunnel, and was erected in 1815. It has a portrait of Charles I., and the tombstone of Prince Lee Boo, son of the King of the Pelew Isles, who died in 1784 of the small pox. In addition to the parish church are the following district churches, viz. Trinity, Christ Church, and All Saints, the livings of all which are perpet. curs.,* varying in val. from £310 to £207. There are places of worship for Wesleyans, Independents, Baptists, and other Nonconformist congregations, also National and other schools, one with an endowment of £40 per annum. The parochial charities produce about £350 per annum. This parish, under the new Poor-law Amendment Act, forms a union of itself, and is also a superintendent registry district, but is included in Southwark new county-court. There are some slight traces of the trench cut by Canute the Great from here to Newington and Lambeth, in order to besiege the metropolis, and the channel through which the river was turned in 1173 for the rebuilding of London bridge is supposed to have taken a similar course. See LONDON and SOUTHWARK.

ROTHERSTHORPE, a par. in the hund. of Wymersley, co. Northampton, 4 miles S.W. of Northampton, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the Northampton canal, and near the North-Western railway. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Enclosure Act, in 1809. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £112. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, has a tower containing four bells. The Baptists have a place of worship.

ROTHERWAS, a chplry. in the par. of Dinedor, hund. of Webtree, co. Hereford. There is no village, but an old seat overlooking the Wye. The chapel, a small ancient structure, has long been desecrated, and now serves as a barn.

ROTHERWICK, a par. in the lower half div. of Odiham hund., co. Hants, 3 miles N.W. of Odiham, 4 S.W. of Hartford-Bridge, and 4 from Winchfield station on the London and South Western railway. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. About half the land is arable, and the remainder in meadow, pasture, woodland, and common. Tylney Hall, the ancient seat of the Tylney family, has been taken down, but the park is preserved. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £370. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £300, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is an ancient structure, and contains some monuments to the Tylney family. There is an endowed school.

ROTHES, a par. in the cos. Banff and Elgin, Scotland. It contains a vil. of its own name, and part of the ancient parish of Dundurcos. It extends in length along the course of the river Spey, about 9½ miles from N.E. to S.W., with a breadth averaging 3 miles. It is bounded by the pars. of Speymouth, Boharm, Aberlour, Knockando, Dallas, Birnie, Elgin, and St. Andrew's, Llanbryd. The surface is tolerably level in the valley of the Spey, but is intersected by hills which form four haughs designated Dandaleith, Rothes, Dundurcos, and Orton. From these haughs the surface rises into numerous eminences of considerable altitude, covered with heath or richly wooded. The other parts of the parish are lofty upland of a moory and mossy character, and wear a bleak aspect. At the base of Ben Aigan Hill, on the right bank of the Spey, lies a small detached district of this parish, extending a little over one mile. The soil is in general dry and sandy, but in the higher grounds it is a mossy earth, while at the base of the hills it is a sharp gravelly mould. The village of Rothes is about 11 miles S.E. of Elgin, 8½ S.W. of Fochabers, and 3 N. of Aberlour. It is situated in the valley of the Spey, under Ben Aigan, and is a station on the Great North of Scotland railway. In the vicinity are the ruins of the old castle of the Leslies, who took from hence the title of earl. An extensive distillery was established here in 1840. The valley of the Spey was flooded in 1829. This par. is in the presb. of Aberlour and synod of Moray, and in the patron. of the crown and the Earl of Seafield, who are the principal landowners. The stipend of the minister is £159. The church stands near the centre of the parish on a small brook, which falls into the Spey. There is a Free church, also a parochial school, and five non-parochial. About 2 miles distant from the village of Rothes stands the ruins of old Doncuras church. Fairs are held on the third Thursday in April, second Thursday prior to the 26th May, third Wednesday in July, third Wednesday in October, and the Thursday in November prior to Martinmas.

ROTHESAY, called Killabhruic in Gaelic, a par. post and market town, seaport, and royal burgh, and the capital of Buteshire, Scotland, 9 miles N.W. of Largs, 19 S.W. of Greenock, and 40 N.W. of Glasgow. It is situated at the head of Rothesay Bay on the E. side of the island of Bute, opposite the Kyles of Bute. The par., which extends nearly 10 miles in length by 5 in breadth, comprehends Inchmarcock and part of the island of Bute, including the quoad sacra par. of New Rothesay. It contains, besides the royal burgh of its own name, the post town of Port-Bannatyne, and formerly the village of North Bute, but this last was constituted an independent parish by the court of tiends in March, 1846. It is bounded on the S.E. by Kingarth, and on all other sides by the Kyles of Bute and the Frith of Clyde. Its coast line extends for about 22 miles, along which are Scalpsie, St. Ninian's, and Etterick bays towards the W., and Rothesay and Kaimes bays on the eastern side, the latter distinguished for its safe anchorage. The surface is varied with low hills, the highest point, Kaimes Hill, rising only 875 feet above sea-level. Two valleys extend across the island, between the bays of Scalpsie and Rothesay, and those of Etterick and Kaimes. The underlying rocks in the southern portion of the parish are red sandstone and conglomerate, but those N. of Rothesay Bay are chiefly clay and mica slate, with veins of trap and quartz, and beds of shell and marl. There are several quarries of clay, slate, and greenstone. The soil in the uplands is light and shallow, but in the valleys a strong alluvial loam producing abundant crops. About half the land is under cultivation, and the remainder hilly pasture and moor, with 1,000 acres of moss and woodland. There are seven lakes, including lochs Fadd, Du, and Grenan, also a mineral spring at Bogany point about a mile N.E. of Rothesay. The roads through the parish are good, and there are abundant facilities of communication by steamboat, but no railway has as yet been constructed. The fisheries on the coast are prolific, and a salmon fishery has been established round the coast. The harbour, situated at the head of the bay of Rothesay, which opens just within the E. entrance of the Kyles of Bute, was formed in 1822, at a cost of £6,000, and a slip and building dock were added in 1840. It is a sub-port to Greenock, and has a lighthouse on the N.E. side of the entrance to the bay, and a small battery on the opposite side. Several steamers start from the pier for Glasgow, Greenock, Campbeltown, Inverary, and other points along the coast.—The town was anciently a village attached to the castle, and was made a royal burgh in 1401, but did not come into notice till the establishment of the herring fishery in 1780. It is well laid out, though the streets, 13 in number, are narrow and wanting in airiness. The houses are built of greenstone. Scattered along the shores of the bay are numerous villas and detached houses surrounded with gardens. The principal public buildings are the county-court house and prison, erected in 1832 at a cost of £4,000, a savings bank, three commercial branch banks, gas works, library, and newsrooms. There are also shipbuilding yards, tanneries, a distillery, and a cotton-spinning mill worked by water power.—The castle, which stands near the town, with its lofty walls partially overgrown with ivy, consists of a circular court about 140 feet in diameter, flanked by four round towers at the corners, and Robert III.'s closet jutting out on the north-eastern side between two of the towers, and the whole surrounded by a wide and deep ditch. It is supposed to be of great antiquity, having been taken from the Rodericks by Haco, King of Norway, and subsequently surrendered to Alexander III. of Scotland, in 1263. It served for several centuries the double purpose of a fort and a royal palace, and being held by the English was taken by King Robert Bruce in 1311, but retaken by Baliol in 1334. Robert III., who died in it, gave it to his son David, with the title of Duke of Rothesay, a distinction still held by the Prince of Wales as heir to the Scottish throne. The pile is now in ruins, having been burnt by the Duke of Argyle in 1685.—Many of the working classes are engaged in the fisheries and coasting trade, and some as weavers. The town has of late years been resorted to as a watering place, and a retreat for consumptive patients, on account of its sheltered position. It is the seat of the county, sheriffs', and sessions courts, and is governed by 2 bailies, 14 councillors, dean of guild, and other officers. The burgh court is held on every Thursday, and the commissary court on every Tuesday, and Friday. Prior to the Reform Bill it was a contributory borough to Ayr, but since votes with the county. A newspaper called the Buteman is published in the town every Saturday.—The par. is in the presb. of Dunoon and synod of Argyle. The minister has a stipend of £276, with glebe. The parish church was erected in 1796 near the ruins of the ancient collegiate one, once the Cathedral of the Isles. There is, besides, the quoad sacra parish church of New Rothesay, built in 1798, and the parish church of North Bute, about 3 miles to the N. of the town. There are four Free churches, distinguished as East, West, North, and the Gaelic, also United Presbyterian, Reformed Presbyterian, Episcopalian, Roman Catholic, and Baptist chapels. The schools are numerous, including the parish schools, Free Church schools, three academies, female school of industry, four ladies' boarding schools, and a poors' school. There are various friendly societies and charitable associations.—In this parish is the Bannatyne tower, an ancient seat of the Jamiesons of Kilmorie Castle, now in ruins; also Kaimes Castle, a seat of the Hamiltons. The Marquis of Bute resides at Mountstuart Castle. A Druidical circle is traceable near Etterick Bay, and numerous standing stones, tumuli, and ruins of ancient chapels are scattered about on the hill sides. The celebrated Earl of Bute, the first Scotchman who had held the office of prime minister since the union of the two kingdoms, was born here in 1713.—Market day is Wednesday. Fairs are held on the first Wednesday in May, the third Wednesday in July, and the last Wednesday in October.

ROTHIE, a station on the Banff, Macduff, and Turriff branch of the Great North of Scotland railway, 8 miles from Inveramsey.

ROTHIEMAY, a par. in the co. of Banff, Scotland. It comprises a vil. of its own name, and that of Milltown. It extends in length about 7½ miles from N.W. to S.E., with an extreme breadth of about 5½ miles. It is bounded on the S. and S.W. by Aberdeenshire, and on the other sides by the pars. of Grange, Marnoch, and Inverkeithnie. The surface is of a hilly nature, with wood, moss, &c. The soil is in general rich, and the pasture land bears only a small proportion to the arable. The north-western boundary is watered by the Knock burn, which flows into the Isla, and the western and south-western boundaries by the Isla, which joins the Deveron. This latter stream flows between richly wooded banks, and abounds in salmon, eels, and trout. The northern district lies low, and a large portion of it is tumulated table, or covered with extensive peat mosses, and the rest is in plantations, pasture, and natural woods. The parish is traversed by the road from Banff and Portsay to Huntley, and has a station on the Keith extension of the Great North of Scotland railway. At Avochy the Deveron is crossed by a viaduct of five arches 70 feet in height. The vil. of Rothiemay is about 7 miles E. of Keith, and 6 N.E. of Huntley. It is of small extent, and is situated on the rivers Deveron and Isla. A little E. of the village is the ancient seat called Rothiemay House, which belonged to the Abernethies and Ogilvies, and contains Queen Mary's room, where the unfortunate queen passed one night. Near the mansion is a Druid circle. This par. is in the presb. of Strathbogie, and synod of Moray. The stipend of the minister is £189. There is a Free church. Ferguson the astronomer was a native of this parish.

ROTHIEMURCHUS, formerly a separate par., but now a quoad sacra par., united to the par. of Duthel, co. Inverness, Scotland. It extends about 10 miles in length, with a breadth of about 7 miles, and is bounded by the cos. of Moray and Aberdeen, and by the pars. of Kincardine and Alvie. The surface is moderately even, and is watered by Loch-an-Eilan and other small lakes. In the former is an island on which stands an ancient castle, once the stronghold of the Wolf of Badenoch, and for many generations the principal seat of the family of Shaw. The woods, which once extended over an area of 16 miles, were felled during the great French war, but are now beginning to revive. The parish is traversed by the road from Rothes to Kingussie. The village is situated about 3 miles S.E. of Aviemore, and 12 from Kingussie. It stands on the southern bank of the river Spey, under Cairngorm. This par. is in the presb. of Abernethy, and synod of Moray, and in the patron. of the crown. The stipend of the minister is £120. There is an endowed school. Limestone is extensively quarried, and is much used for manure.

ROTHLEY, a par. and tnshp. in the hunds. of East and West Goscote, co. Leicester, 5½ miles S. of Loughborough, its post town, 1½ mile S.E. of Mountsorrel, and 2 miles S.W. of the Siloby station on the Midland railway. It is situated near the river Soar, and comprises the tnshps. of Grimston, Southend, Mountsorrel, Keyham, Wartnaby, and Wycomb, with the hmlt. of Chadwell. The gavelkind custom prevails in this manor, which is invested with a peculiar jurisdiction, both civil and ecclesiastical, extending over several other parts of the county. A large portion of the inhabitants are engaged in agriculture, and some in frame-work knitting. Rothley was formerly a market town, and is still a considerable village. It was granted by a charter from Henry III. to the Knights Templars, who had a preceptory at Rothley Temple near the village, but which afterwards was given to the Hospitallers. Its revenue at the Dissolution was returned at £87 13*s.* 4*d.* The Barrow union poorhouse is in this parish. The business of the manorial court is held at the Crown public-house, but prior to its adjournment to this house it generally opened at the ancient court-house which stands on the green. The present mansion of Rothley Temple was erected on the site of the ancient preceptory, of which there are still some portions remaining. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1771. The living is a vic.* exclusive of any diocese, being a peculiar and exempt jurisdiction, val. £466, in the patron. of executors of the late C. C. Macaulay, Esq. The church, dedicated to St. John, is an ancient edifice, with a tower containing five bells. In the churchyard are some old tombs, also the stump of an ancient stone cross. There are chapels-of-ease at Chadwell, Gaddesby, Keyham, Mountsorrel, and Wartnaby. The parochial charities produce about £20 per annum. There are National and infant schools, also a free school. The Wesleyans, General Baptists, and Primitive Methodists have each a place of worship. Lady Parker is the lady of the manor. A Roman pavement with foundations of walls was discovered here in 1722.

ROTHLEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Hartburn, W. div. of Morpeth ward, co. Northumberland, 10 miles N.W. of Morpeth. It is situated at the source of the river Font, which rises in one of the lakes in Rothley Park. The castle, situated in the park, was built by the late Sir W. C. Blackett, on a rocky eminence a little to the N. of the village, and resembling in outward appearance an ancient baronial castle.

ROTHLEY-TEMPLE, an ext. par. place in the hund. of West Goscote, co. Leicester. Lord Macaulay was born here, and was created Lord Macaulay of Rothley. See ROTHLEY, co. Leicester.

ROTHWELL, a par. in the wap. of Bradley-Haverstoe, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 2½ miles S.E. of Caistor, its post town, and 5 E. of Moortown. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the Wolds, and is chiefly agricultural. The Laceby hounds meet in this parish. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1765. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £250. The church, dedicated to St. Mary Magdalene, has a tower containing three bells. The church was restored and enlarged in 1849. There is a free school for both sexes.

ROTHWELL, a hund. in the co. of Northampton, contains the pars. of Arthingworth, Barford, Little Bowden, Braybrook, Clipston, Desborough, Draughton, East Farndon, Glendon, Harrington, Haselbeech, Kelmarsh, Loddington, Maidwell, Marston-Trussell, Great Oxendon, Rothwell, Rushton, Sibbertoft, Sulby, Thorpe-Malsor, and part of Theddingworth, comprising an area of 42,640 acres.

ROTHWELL, or ROWELL, a par. in the above hund., co. Northampton, 4 miles N.W. of Kettering, 14 N.E. of Northampton, and 77 from London. It comprises the chplry. of Orton, and the hmlt. of Thorpe Underwood. The town, which is built on the southern side of a rocky hill, was formerly surrounded by a strong wall, and was held under the Clares, who founded an Austin nunnery here, the revenue of which at the Dissolution was valued at £10 10*s.* 4*d.* The unfinished market-house, which is still in good preservation, was commenced in 1577 by Sir T. Tresham, father of the gunpowder plotter. A portion of the inhabitants is engaged in agriculture, and others in the manufacture of silk plush. In the vicinity is the bone well, which at certain seasons throws up numerous small bones, also a petrifying spring. Above half the land is arable, and the remainder meadow, pasture, and woodland. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Enclosure Act in 1812. The living is a vic. with that of Orton annexed, in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £160. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, is an ancient structure, with an embattled tower at the W. end. The interior of the church contains tombs of the Treshams, Lants, and other families, also three brasses of a priest, the earliest bearing date 1361. The chancel has recently been restored. The parochial charities produce about £854 per annum. Jesus Hospital for 26 almsmen was founded in 1591 by Owen Ragsdale, who endowed it with the manor of Olde and the tithes of Overton and Thorpe. There are also six almshouses for the same number of poor widows. The free grammar school was founded prior to the reign of Edward VI., and further endowed in that of Charles II. with the revenues of St. Mary's chapel. There are also National and British and Foreign schools. The Independents and Wesleyans have each a place of worship. T. P. Maunsell, Esq., is lord of the manor. Market day was on Monday, but the market has recently fallen into disuse. A fair for stock and pedlary is held on Trinity Monday.

ROTHWELL, a par. in the lower div. of Agbrigg wap., West Riding co. York, 4 miles N. of Wakefield, and the same distance S.E. of Leeds. This parish, which is of large extent, is situated on the river Aire and near the Leeds canal and North Midland railway. It includes Rothwell manor and the tnshps. of Lofthouse, Middleton, Oulton, Rothwell, Thorpe, and Royd's Green. In the early Saxon times it was included in the parish of Morley, and soon after the Norman conquest was given with the castle of Pontefract to the Lacys, who had a baronial residence here, of which some traces are still visible near the church. The town, which is ancient and irregularly laid out, is situated in a fertile vale, and has recently been much improved. In 1861 the parish contained 8,072, and the township of Rothwell, 3,220 inhabitants. The principal public building is the gaol for the hundred of Pontefract, formerly used as the debtor's prison. The working classes are chiefly employed in agriculture and in the collieries, and in the woollen cloth and hair sieve manufactures. There are also establishments for the making of rope and twine. The district abounds with coal of excellent quality, of which several extensive mines are in operation. The living is a vic.,* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £850. The parish church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, is an ancient structure with a square embattled tower; it was repaired and enlarged in 1826. There are besides three district churches, viz. Christ Church, near Lofthouse; Middleton and Oulton-cum-Woodlesford, the livings of which are all perpet. curs.,* varying in val. from £120 to £300. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have places of worship. The parochial charities produce about £15 per annum. There are National and other schools.

ROTHWELL-HAIGH, a tnshp. in the par. of Rothwell, lower div. of Agbrigg wap., West Riding co. York, 5 miles N. of Wakefield.

ROTSEA, a tnshp. in the par. of Hutton-Cranswick, Bainton-Beacon div. of Harthill wap., East Riding co. York, 6 miles S.E. of Great Driffield.

ROTTEARN, a vil. in the par. of Dunblane, co. Perth, Scotland, 7 miles N.E. of Doune.

ROTTEN ISLAND, an islet in Killybegs Bay, co. Donegal, Ireland, with a lighthouse 67 feet high.

ROTTINGDEAN, a par. and vil. in the hund. of Younsmere, rape of Lewes, co. Sussex, 4 miles E. of Brighton, its post town. This place in ancient records is termed Rottington. It is a bathing-place and coast-guard station, situated on the sea-coast between Brighton and Newhaven, much resorted to by invalids and families preferring the privacy of a secluded village to the beach of Brighton. It contains many well-regulated lodging-houses, private baths, and a large classical academy, for many years conducted by the late Dr. Hooker, and subsequently by Dr. Gavin Smith. The Brighton industrial schools are situated at Warren Farm, in this parish. In the reign of Richard II. the French made a descent at this point, and took the towns of Rye and Hastings, which they burnt in revenge for their loss of the battle of Crecy. This place is noted for its mineral wells, which are nearly empty at high water, but rise as the tide ebbs. The coast beyond Rottingdean is rocky, being defended by cliffs, which rise 200 feet above the sea. Agate pebbles are found on the sea-shore in great abundance, and are known as Rottingdean pebbles, being used for bracelets and other ornaments. About two-thirds of the land are arable, and the remainder meadow, pasture, and common. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £240 10*s., and the vicarial for £400. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £332. The church, dedicated to St. Margaret, is an ancient edifice with a spired tower, and has recently undergone a thorough repair. It has a monument to the late Dr. Hooker. The register dates from 1710. In the village is a National school for both sexes, established in 1839. On Balsdean Hill are traces of two encampments, and in other parts of the parish several barrows and tumuli, on opening which Roman coins and other antiquities have been found.

ROTTINGTON, a tnshp. in the par. of St. Bees, ward of Allerdale-above-Derwent, co. Cumberland, 3 miles S.W. of Whitehaven, near the coast. Here was formerly a cell, subordinate to St. Bee's nunnery.

ROUCAN, a vil. in the par. of Torthorwald, co. Dumfries, Scotland, 4 miles N.E. of Dumfries, and 1¼ mile N. of Collin, on the road from Dumfries to Lochmaben, on a declivity overlooking Locharmoss.

ROUCHESTER, or RUDCHESTER, a tnshp. in the par. of Ovingham, E. div. of Tindale ward, co. Northumberland, 8 miles N.W. of Newcastle. It is situated near the river Tyne, and is supposed to be the site of Vindobala, or Hunnum on the Wall, mentioned by Antonine, where the first cohort of the Frixagi were stationed. In 1766 coins of Otho and other emperors were discovered here, also a Hercules. The Elcho hounds meet in this neighbourhood.

ROUD, a tythg. in the par. of Godshill, Isle of Wight, co. Hants, 6 miles S. of Newport.

ROUDHAM, a par. in the hund. of Shropham, co

Norfolk, 6 miles N.E. of Thetford, its post town, and 2 W. of the Harling Road railway station. The parish, which is of small extent, is situated on the line of the Great Eastern railway, and is wholly agricultural. There is no village, only a few farmhouses. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Norwich. The church is in ruins, having some period back been destroyed by fire. The inhabitants frequent the church of Bridgham. Sir J. G. S. Sebright, Bart., is lord of the manor.

ROUGEMONT, the palace of the West Saxon kings at Exeter, co. Devon. It has remains of the old walls and towers of the ancient castle, and is the place where the sessions court is now held at Exeter.

ROUGHA-BRIDGE, in the par. of Crosthwaite, co. Cumberland, 2 miles S.E. of Keswick, and 23 S.W. of Carlisle. It is situated at the bottom of Derwentwater, and has a view over the vale of the Greta, with Skiddaw, Saddleback, and Helvellyn in the distance.

ROUGHAM, a par. in the hund. of Thedwestry, co. Suffolk, 4 miles S.E. of Bury St. Edmund's, and 1½ mile S. of Thurston railway station on the Bury and Ipswich branch of the Great Eastern railway. The village, which is large but irregularly built, is chiefly agricultural. Rougham was given by Ulfketel, the Saxon, to the abbots of Bury St. Edmund's, and by Henry VII. to the Drurys. The soil is of a loamy and sandy nature, upon a subsoil of gravel and clay. The Suffolk hounds meet in this parish. The tithes were commuted for corn-rents under an Enclosure Act in 1813. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £756. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has a tower containing five bells. The interior of the church contains a brass of Sir R. Drury, bearing date 1405, also other tombs. The register dates from the middle of the 16th century. The parochial charities produce about £150 per annum, £47 of which goes to Edward Sparke's school, founded in 1720. The Baptists have a place of worship. Rougham Hall, the principal residence, has two lofty towers at the E. and W. wings. It is situated in a park celebrated for its oaks.

ROUGHAM, a par. and post town in the hund. of Launditch, co. Norfolk, 14 miles E. of Lynn, and 8 N. of Swaffham railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. The land is chiefly arable, with a small proportion of meadow, woodland, and sheepwalks. The vicarial tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £225, and the glebe comprises 2 acres. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £204. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, contains three brasses of the Yelvertons, bearing date from 1481. The register dates from 1783. There is an infant school, also places of worship for the Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists.

ROUGHAN, a lough in the co. of Tyrone, Ireland, 2 miles S.W. of Stewardstown. On its bank is Roughan Castle.

ROUGHBIRCHWORTH, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Oxspring, and par. of Penistone, West Riding co. York, 2 miles E. of Penistone.

ROUGH COMMON, a hmlt. in the par. of Harbledown, hund. of Westgate, lathe of St. Augustine, co. Kent, near Canterbury.

ROUGHDOWN, an ext. par. place in the hund. of Dibden, co. Hants, 6 miles S. of Southampton.

ROUGHFORT, a vil. in the par. of Templepatrick, bar. of Lower Belfast, co. Antrim, prov. of Ulster, Ireland. Fairs are held on 31st May and 29th November.

ROUGH-LEE-BOOTH, a tnshp. in the par. of Whalley, higher div. of Blackburn hund., co. Lancaster, 3½ miles W. of Colne railway station, and 6 N.W. of Burnley. It is situated at the E. end of the forest of Pendle. The land is principally in pasture. The soil is clay, with a subsoil of rock. There is a cotton-mill in the neighbourhood. There is a school for both sexes, erected and supported by the Messrs. Roberts. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. The Duke of Buccleuch is lord of the manor.

ROUGHMORE, a hmlt. in the par. of Old Cleeve, co. Somerset, 2 miles S.W. of Watchet.

ROUGH PARK, a hmlt. in the par. of Hamstall Ridware, co. Stafford, 7 miles N. of Lichfield.

ROUGHTON, a par. in the soke of Horncastle, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 4 miles S.W. of Horncastle, its post town, and 4½ E. of Kirkstead railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the Horncastle and Witham canal and the river Bain. It is chiefly agricultural. For ecclesiastical purposes this parish was united with that of Haltham-upon-Bain in 1741. The living is a discharged rect.* with that of Haltham-upon-Bain united, in the dioc. of Lincoln, joint val. £401. The old church was dedicated to St. Margaret.

ROUGHTON, a par. in the hund. of North Erpingham, co. Norfolk, 3½ miles S. of Cromer, and 6½ from Aylsham. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. A considerable portion of the land is in open heath, from which the inhabitants cut turf and furze. The surface is undulating, and the cultivated land chiefly arable. The great tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £197, the vicarial for £96, and the glebe comprises 20 acres. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £100, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has a circular embattled tower containing three bells. It has recently been restored and beautified by the insertion of an E. window. The parochial charities produce about £58 per annum, of which £45 goes to Brown's free school. The Primitive Methodists have a place of worship. Lord Suffield is lord of the manor.

ROUGHTY, a stream of the co. of Kerry, Ireland, rises in the bar. of Glanarought, and joins the river Kenmare at Kenmare.

ROUGHWRAY, a tnshp. in the par. and hund. of Wrotham, lathe of Aylesford, co. Kent, 5 miles S.E. of Wrotham.

ROULSTON, or ROWSTON, a par. in the wap. of Flaxwell, parts of Kesteven, co. Lincoln, 7½ miles N.E. of Sleaford, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is chiefly agricultural. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £194. The church, dedicated to St. Clement, has a square spired tower. The register dates from 1562. The charities share with Ruskington. There is a National school, erected in 1852.

ROULSTON. See ROWLSTONE, cos. Hereford and York.

ROUNCTON, EAST, a chplry. in the par. of Rudby-in-Cleveland, W. div. of Langbaurgh lib., North Riding co. York, 2 miles N.E. of Welbury railway station, and 7 N. of Northallerton, its post town. It is situated on the river Wisk. The surface is undulating, and the land nearly equally divided between arable and pasture, with some plantations. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic. of Rudby-in-Cleveland, in the dioc. of York. The church is built on an eminence, and was repaired in 1820. The Grange is the principal residence.

ROUNCTON, WEST, a par. in the wap. of Allertonshire, North Riding co. York, 8 miles N.W. of Northallerton, its post town, 7 S.W. of Yarm, and 1½ mile N.E. of Welbury railway station. The village, which is small, and chiefly agricultural, is situated on an eminence. The lower grounds are watered by the river Wisk. The land is nearly evenly divided between arable and pasture. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £272, and the glebe comprises 78 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of York, val. £344, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. James, is an ancient stone edifice, with some Norman details, and contains two bells. There is a place of worship for Wesleyans; also a village school.

ROUNDAWAY, an eminence in the co. of Wilts, 2 miles N. of Devizes. It is supposed to have been the site of the Roman station Verlucio, on the road to Bath, and has on the summit a large entrenched camp. It was here that Lord Wilmot routed Waller's army during the civil war of Charles I.'s reign.

ROUNDDOWN, a cliff on the coast of Kent, near Dover. It was about 380 feet high before it was blasted in 1843, to make way for the London and South-coast line of railway. In this operation 19,000 lbs. of powder were employed to throw down more than 400,000 cubic yards of chalk, which were scattered over 20 acres.

ROUNDFORT, a hmlt. in the bar. of Kilmaine, co. Mayo, Ireland, 3 miles S.E. of Hollymount.

ROUNDHAY, a tnshp. in the par. of Barwick-in-Elmett, lower div. of Skyrack wap., West Riding co. York, 3 miles N.E. of Leeds, its post town, and 12 from Bradford. This place, which derived its name from being anciently a park, enclosed within a circular pale, belonged to Henry de Lacy, Earl of Lincoln, from whom it passed to Henry, Duke of Lancaster, and afterwards to John of Gaunt, in right of his wife Blanche, and thus became vested in the crown, but was given to Lord D'Arcy by Henry VIII. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Aire, and on the road from Leeds to Wetherby. A portion of the inhabitants are engaged in the stone-quarries. The soil is fertile, and in good cultivation. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £225. The church, dedicated to St. John, is a modern edifice, with a square embattled tower, crowned with pinnacles, and surmounted by a spire containing three bells. The interior of the church contains several monuments. It was erected and partly endowed by the late T. Nicholson, Esq. There is a school for both sexes. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. The neighbourhood is studded with villas and detached residences, chiefly occupied by the merchants of Leeds. Roundhay Park, the seat of the Nicholson family, is surrounded by woods and plantations, and embellished with a lake of 34 acres in extent. William N. Nicholson, Esq., is lord of the manor.

ROUNDHILL, a vil. in the bar. of Kinalmeaky, co. Cork, Ireland, 3 miles from Bandon.

ROUND HORN, a hmlt. in the par. of Iccomb, co. Gloucester, formerly in Worcester, 2 miles S.E. of Stow-on-the-Wold.

ROUND OAK, a station on the West Midland section of the Great Western railway, 2½ miles from Dudley.

ROUNDSTONE, a vil. in the bar. of Ballynahinch, co. Galway, Ireland, 6 miles S.E. of Clifden, and 9 S.E. of Slyne Head. It is situated under Urrisbeg Hill, on Roundstone Bay, at the head of which is a pier harbour, with 4 fathoms' water, and the islet of Innislaken and the Lebros rock in front.

ROUNDTHWAITE, a hmlt. in the par. of Orton, co. Westmoreland, 3 miles S.W. of Orton, near the Lancaster and Carlisle railway and the river Lune.

ROUNDTOWN, a post-office vil. in the par. of Rathfarnham, bar. of Rathdown, co. Dublin, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles S. of the General Post-office, Dublin. It is situated on the Rathfarnham road, and contains numerous suburban residences.

ROUNDWOOD, or TOGHER, a vil. in the par. of Derralossory, bar. of Ballinacor, co. Wicklow, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4½ miles S.S.W. of Newtown-Mount-Kennedy. It is situated on the road from Dublin to Seven Churches, and near the river Vartry, and Lough Dan. It is noted for its fine trout-fishing. Several seats surround the locality. There are a police station and a dispensary. Fairs are held in January, March, May, July, August, and September.

ROUNTON. See Rounton, co. York.

ROUSAY AND EGILSAY, a par. in the district of North Isles, Orkney, co. Orkney and Shetland, Scotland. It comprises the islands of Rousay, Eagleshay, Weir, and Enhallow, also two small uninhabited holms. Rousay, or Rolf's Island, extends about 4 miles in length, by about the same in breadth. It lies to the W. of Eagleshay, from which it is separated by a strait of a mile broad. Its surface is hilly, with moss and much mountain pasture. The E. side of the island, on the declivity of the hills, is fertile, but the interior is covered with heath, giving shelter to abundance of moor-fowl. The island abounds in game, black cattle, and sheep. The village is about 10 miles N. of Kirkwall, and stands near Westray Frith. This par. is in the presb. of North Isles and synod of Orkney. The stipend of the minister is £157. There are two parish churches, one of them being situated in Eagleshay, and the other on the S. side of Rousay, within three quarters of a mile of Weir. There is a Free church of Rousay and Eagleshay; also an United Presbyterian church, and a parochial school, besides other schools. Near Westness House are the ruins of the Castle of Sigard, or Sitric, who was defeated at Clontarf. In other parts of the parish are tumuli, "Picts' houses," and pillar stones. All around the island is safe anchorage for shipping of any burden.

ROUSE, or RHOS. See Roose, co. Pembroke.

ROUSHAM, a par. in the hund. of Wootton, co. Oxford, 5½ miles N.E. of Woodstock, its post town, and within a mile of the Heyford station on the Birmingham and Oxford railway. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the Oxford canal and the river Cherwell. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £240. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has a tower containing a peal of bells. It contains tombs of the Dormer family. A Sunday-school is held at the church. Rousham Park is the principal residence. C. C. Dormer, Esq., is lord of the manor.

ROUSHOLM, a bay in Stronsay Island, Orkney Islands, coast of Scotland. It is 2 miles by 1, and has good anchorage inside Rousholm Head.

ROUTH, a par. in the N. div. of Holderness wap., East Riding co. York, 4 miles N.E. of Beverley, its railway station and post town. The village, which is small and straggling, is situated on the road from Beverley to Bridlington and Hornsea. The inhabitants are wholly agricultural. The soil consists chiefly of loam upon clay. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of York, val. £470. The church, dedicated to Allhallows, has a low tower containing one bell. The interior of the church contains three stone stalls and a broken double canopied brass of Sir J. Routh, being dated 1420. Lord Londesborough is lord of the manor.

ROW, a par. in the co. of Dumbarton, Scotland. It comprises the vils. of Garelochhead and Row, also the chief portion of the town of Helensburgh. It extends 9 miles in length, with a varying breadth of from 2½ to 5 miles, and is bounded on the N. and N.E. by Luss, on the E. by Luss and Cardoss, on the W. by the Gare Loch, and on the S. by the Frith of Clyde, which divides it from Renfrewshire and Argyleshire. The surface is of a hilly character, and abounds in sheep walks. It chiefly consists of two mountain ranges and an intervening valley, its greatest altitude being 2,500 feet above the level of the sea. The Vale of Glenfruim extends between their two ranges. The soil is fertile, and a large portion of it under cultivation. The eastern end of the parish is tolerably flat, and the soil light. The sea-coast, which is 12 miles in extent, is for the most part flat and sandy, and productive of fish. Clay-slate and limestone are the predominant rock. The parish is traversed by the road from Dumbarton to Inverary, and by that from Helensburgh. The village of Row is 8 miles N.W. of Dumbarton, and 2¾ N.W. of Helensburgh. It is situated on the Frith of Clyde, a little to the E. of lochs Gare and Long. In the vicinity is a small quay for steamers. This par. is in the presb. of Dumbarton and synod of Glasgow and Ayr. The stipend of the minister is £241. The parish church was erected in 1850. It was situated on the shore of Gareloch, in the village of Row. The old church, built in 1763, stands near the new one. There are chapels-of-ease at Garelochhead and Helensburgh, Free churches at Helensburgh and Shandon, and an United Presbyterian church at Helensburgh; also chapels for the Independents, Episcopalians, and Baptists. There are parochial and other schools. Row formed part of the parish of Roseneath till 1635, when it was formed into a separate parish. It derives its name from a low point of land which extends into Gareloch opposite the church. In the vicinity are the ruins of stone kistvaens and ancient churches. West Shandon Castle is the principal residence.

ROW, a hmlt. in the par. of Killmadock, co. Perth, Scotland, 1½ mile S.E. of Donne. There was formerly a chapel-of-ease.

ROW, a tnshp. in the par. of Appleby St. Lawrence, East ward, co. Westmoreland, 1 mile S.W. of Appleby. It forms a tnshp. with Hoff, to which it is joined.

ROWALL, a hmlt. in the tnshp. and par. of Kellington, Lower Osgoldcross wap., West Riding co. York, 5 miles N.W. of Snaith, and 6 S.W. of Selby, near the river Aire.

ROWBARROW, a hund. in the South Blandford div. of co. Dorset, contains the pars. of Langton-Matravers, Studland, Swanage, and Worth-Matravers, comprising an area of 12,640 acres.

ROWBERROW, a par. in the hund. of Winterstoke, co. Somerset, 4 miles N.E. of Axbridge, its post town, and 6 S.E. of Yatton railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated among the Mendip hills, near the Bristol and Bridgwater turnpike roads, and is chiefly agricultural. The soil is of a light nature, with a subsoil of limestone brash upon limestone rock. The land is chiefly in pasture. The substratum formerly abounded with lapes calaminaris, of which extensive mines were in operation, but are now exhausted. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £134, in the patron. of the Bishop of Worcester. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is an ancient stone edifice, with a tower containing six bells. The register dates from 1723. There is a National mixed school. E. Leacroft, Esq., of Nottingham, is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

ROW BLUE, a vil. in the par. of East Kilpatrick, co. Dumbarton, Scotland, 10 miles E. of Dumbarton.

ROWBOUND, a tnshp. in the par. of Castle Sowerby, ward of Leath, co. Cumberland, 3 miles S.E. of Hesket-Market.

ROWDE, a par. in the hund. of Potterne, co. Wilts, 2 miles N.W. of Devizes, its post town, and 6 S.W. of Calne. The village, which is well built, is situated on the turnpike road from Devizes to Chippenham, a short distance from the foot of Roundway Down. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The soil consists chiefly of red sand and clay. About three-fourths of the land are in pasture, and the remainder arable, woodland, and gardens. The Kennet and Avon canal passes through the parish. The great tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £24 18*s.*, and the vicarial for £339 5*s.* The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £260. The church, dedicated to St. Matthew, has a square turreted and embattled tower containing five bells. The chief part of the structure, exclusive of the tower and chancel, was rebuilt in 1833. The parochial charities produce about £40 per annum. There are National schools for both sexes The Wesleyans have a place of worship. Rowdiford House is the principal residence. F. A. S. Locke, Esq., is lord of the manor.

ROWDEN, a hmlt. in the par. of Higham-on-the-Hill, hund. of Sparkenhoe, co. Leicester, 3 miles N.W. of Hinckley.

ROWDILL, or ROWADILL, a loch at the southern extremity of Harris Island, Western Isles, coast of Scotland, near Aird Renish.

ROWE, a hmlt. in the par. of Hemington, co. Somerset, 4 miles N.W. of Frome.

ROWE, a hmlt. in the par. of Fylingdales, North Riding co. York, 4 miles S.E. of Whitby.

ROWE LANE, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of North Meols, co. Lancaster, 7 miles N.W. of Ormskirk.

ROWELL, or ROEL, an ext. par. place in the lower div. of Kiftgate hund., co. Gloucester, 3½ miles S.E. of Winchcomb. At the time of Pope Nicholas's survey this place was a parish, and had a church. It is now attached to Hawling for parochial purposes. The Independents have a place of worship.

ROWELL, a hmlt. in the par. of Heversham, Kendal ward, co. Westmoreland, 2 miles N. of Milnthorpe, and 6 S. of Kendal, near the river Kent.

ROWER, or ROAR, a par. in the bar. of Ida, co. Kilkenny, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles S.E. of Inistioge. Bridgetown is its post town. It is situated at the confluence of the rivers Barrow and Nore. There is a considerable extent of mountain and bog. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Ossory, in the patron. of the bishop. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Inistioge. Here are a parochial and a private school. In this parish are ruins of Coolkill castle, and traces of cromlechs.

ROWFANT, a station on the East Grinstead branch of the London and Brighton railway, next the Three Bridges.

ROWINGTON, a par. in the Henley div. of Barlichway hund., co. Warwick, 6 miles N.W. of Warwick, its post town, and 9 from Kenilworth. The parish, which is considerable, is intersected by the Stratford-on-Avon and Warwick and Birmingham canals, and is wholly agricultural. The par. comprises the hmlts. of Pinley, High Cross, and Kingswood. The glebe comprises 40 acres, valued at £80 per annum. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £116. The church, dedicated to St. Lawrence, is a cruciform structure, with a square tower containing five bells. The parochial charities produce about £232, part of which goes to the support of the school.

ROWLAND, a tnshp. and vil. in the par. of Bakewell, hund. of High Peak, co. Derby, 2 miles N. of Bakewell, and 2 S.W. of Stoney-Middleton. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on rising ground, and is sheltered on the N. by a range of hills. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in agriculture. The principal part of the land is devoted to pasture. Colonel Leslie is lord of the manor and chief landowner.

ROWLAND'S CASTLE, a hmlt. in the par. and lib. of Havant, co. Hants, 3 miles N. of Havant, and 20 S.E. of Winchester. It is situated on Langston Harbour, near the bridge to Hayling Island, and has a station on the Guildford, Godalming, and New Portsmouth branch of the London and South-Western railway.

ROWLANDS MARSH, an ext. par. place in the soke of West Bolingbroke, co. Lincoln, near Boston.

ROWLEY, a par. in the Hunsley Beacon div. of Harthill wap., East Riding co. York, 5 miles from Brough, 4 N.E. of South Cave, and 4 S.W. of Beverley. Cottingham is its post town. The par., which is extensive, comprises Bentley, Risby, Hensley, and two other hmlts. The tithes were commuted for land and corn rents under an Enclosure Act in 1801. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of York, val. £1,300. The church is dedicated to St Peter. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum.

ROWLEY, a vil. in the tnshp. of Lepton, par. of Kirk-Heaton, West Riding co. York, 3 miles from Huddersfield. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the cloth trade.

ROWLEY, a hmlt. in the par. of Wingfield, hund. of Bradford, co. Wilts, 2 miles W. of Trowbridge. It is in conjunction with Wingfield.

ROWLEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Worfield, co. Salop, 3 miles E. of Bridgnorth.

ROWLEY, a hmlt. in the par. of Much Wenlock, hund. of Wenlock Borough, co. Salop, 2 miles W. of Much Wenlock, under Wenlock Edge.

ROWLEY, COLD, a hmlt. in the par. of Lanchester, W. div. of Chester ward, co. Durham, 7½ miles N.E. of Wolsingham, near the Stanhope railway. Here was formerly a chapel-of-ease.

ROWLEY-REGIS, a par. in the N. div. of Seisdon hund., co. Stafford, 3 miles S.E. of Dudley, its post town, and 7 W. of Birmingham. It is situated in a rich mineral district, abounding with clay, coal, and ironstone, and is bounded on the S. and S.W. by the river Stour, which separates it from the counties of Salop and Worcester. The par., which is of large extent, comprises the hmlts. of Cradley Heath, Old Hill, and Reddall Hill. The village is a thriving and rapidly-increasing place, and the seat of a prosperous coal and iron trade. The manufacture of nails, and an extensive hardware trade are also carried on. The original village is situated near the old church, but there are numerous hamlets and detached clusters of houses scattered over the parish. A large portion of the inhabitants are employed in the collieries and iron-works. The surface, which is uneven, is traversed by a range of hills, called the Rowley hills, which extend in a northerly direction across the parish, and attain an elevation of near 900 feet above the level of the sea. Numerous streams take their rise in these hills, and flow in opposite directions towards the Trent and Severn; and in the sides of hills are numerous quarries, which supplied materials for paving the streets of Birmingham and other towns in the vicinity. The stratum of coal lies at a depth of from 80 to 200 yards below the surface, varying from 10 to 13 in thickness; and there are numerous collieries in operation. At the Cradley works, which are now chiefly employed for converting pig-iron into bars and rods, the experiment was first tried of manufacturing iron with pit coal instead of charcoal, which had been previously used for that purpose; and in the 19th of James I., Mr. Dudley, at that time proprietor, obtained a patent for that mode of operation. The Birmingham canal enters the parish at the Brades, and passes through Tividale for about a mile, and the Dudley canal at Gosty Hill, through which it is conveyed by a tunnel nearly 1,500 feet in length. The glebe comprises about 61 acres, of which 9 are old enclosure, and the remainder was, by Act of Parliament, in 1799, for enclosing waste lands, allotted in lieu of the vicarial tithes. By the same Act the proprietors of the land were obliged to purchase the rectorial tithes at the valuation of the commissioners, or to give land from their old enclosures in lieu of them. The living formerly belonged to the Abbey of Halesowen, having been annexed to the vicarage of Clent by Robert de Somery. The church, dedicated to St. Giles, has a square tower containing six bells. The tower was rebuilt in 1858. There is also a district church at Reddall Hill, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £300. The parochial charities produce about £101 per annum, of which £73 goes to Lady Monnin's and Macmillan's schools. There are National schools for both sexes. The Wesleyans, Baptists, Primitive Methodists, and New Connexion, have each a place of worship. Sir Stephen Littleton, of Holbech House, in the parish of King's-Swinford, and one of the conspirators in the gunpowder plot, was for some time concealed in the old residence of the Whites.

ROWLSTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Mappleton, partly in the lib. of St. Peter's, and partly in the N. div. of Holderness wap., East Riding co. York, 1 mile S.E. of Hornsey, and 14 miles N.E. of Beverley. It is joined with Mappleton to form a township, and is situated near the coast.

ROWLSTONE, a par. in the hund. of Ewyas-Lacy, co. Hereford, 13 miles S.W. of Hereford, its post town, and 1½ mile W. of the Pontrilas railway station. The village, which is small, is situated near the Abergavenny railway and the river Munnow, and is wholly agricultural. The soil is of a strong nature, upon a subsoil of red sandstone. Limestone is also obtained in the neighbourhood. The living is a perpet. cur. with the perpet. cur. of Llancillo annexed, in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £200. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient stone structure, with a tower containing three bells. The parochial charities produce about £2 per anuum. Colonel Scudamore is lord of the manor. There is a National school for both sexes in Wormbridge.

ROWNALL, a tnshp. in the par. of Cheddleton, N. div. of Totmonslow hund., co. Stafford, 3 miles S.E. of Cheddleton, and 6 N.W. of Cheadle. It contains the hmlt. of Cellar Head.

ROWNER, a par. in the hund. of Titchfield, co. Hants, 2½ miles S.E. of Fareham, its nearest railway station and post town, and 3 N.W. of Gosport. The village, which is small, is situated near Portsmouth harbour, and is chiefly agricultural. The greater part of the land is arable, with a considerable extent of woodland and common. The Gosport branch of the South-Western railway passes through the parish. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £400, and the glebe comprises 7 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £399. The church is an ancient edifice, with a small tower. Near the church are remains of an old priory, at which place there is a mineral spring.

ROWNHAM, a hmlt. in the par. of Long Ashton, co. Somerset, 2 miles W. of Bristol.

ROWSHAM, a hmlt. in the hund. of Cottesloe, co. Bucks, 3 miles N.E. of Aylesbury, in conjunction with Wingrave. The Rothschild hounds meet in this neighbourhood. There was formerly a chapel, dedicated to St. Lawrence.

ROWSLEY-MAGNA, a tnshp. in the par. of Bakewell, hund. of High Peak, co. Derby, 3 miles S.E. of Bakewell, its post town, and 5½ from Matlock. It is a station on the Ambergate and Buxton branch of the Midland railway. The village, which is of small extent, is situated near the confluence of the Wye with the river Derwent, and the inhabitants are wholly agricultural. The Derwent is here crossed by an ancient bridge, and the river Wye is also crossed by a stone bridge of modern construction. The par. includes the hmlt. of Allport, and is a resort for anglers. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £50. Divine service is performed in the schoolhouse, licensed for that purpose by the bishop. It was erected in 1841 at the expense of the Duke of Rutland, who is lord of the manor.

ROWSTON. See ROULSTON, co. Lincoln.

ROWTHORNE, a hmlt. in the par. of Ault-Hucknall, co. Derby, 7 miles N.E. of Alfreton.

ROWTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Christleton, lower div. of Broxton hund. co. Chester, 3 miles S.E. of Chester, and 1 mile S. of the church. The village, which is small, is situated near the Crew railway, and the Nantwich and Chester canal. It is wholly agricultural. On Rowton Heath, in 1645, Poyntz defeated the forces of Charles I., who witnessed the battle from the Phœnix tower, on Chester walls; and in 1659 the Cheshire gentry assembled here, and declared for a free parliament, on the attempt of Sir George Booth to restore Charles II. Rowton Hall is the principal residence.

ROWTON, a tnshp. in the pars. of Clungerford, Hopesay, and Stokesay, co. Salop, 7 miles N.W. of Ludlow. It is in conjunction with Broom.

ROWTON, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Alberbury, hund. of Ford, co. Salop, 7 miles W. of Shrewsbury. It includes Rowton Castle. Richard Baxter, the eminent divine, was born here in 1615.

ROWTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Ercall Magna, co. Salop, 7 miles N.E. of Shrewsbury. The living is a perpet cur., val. £100.

ROWTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Swine, N. div. of Holderness wap., East Riding co. York, 8 miles N.E. of Beverley. It is in conjunction with North Skirlaugh, to form a tnshp.

ROXBOROUGH, several small places of this name in Ireland: one the seat of the Earl of Charlemont, near Moy, co. Tyrone; another near Middleton, co. Cork; and a third near Loughrea, co. Galway.

ROXBURGH, a par. in the Kelso district, co. Roxburgh, Scotland. It is situated in the lower part of Teviotdale, where the Teviot joins the Tweed, and near the line of the ancient road Watling Street. It is bounded by the pars. of Ancrum, Crailing, Eckford, Kelso, Makerston, and Maxton, the river Tweed forming a large part of its northern boundary. Its length from N.E. to S.W. is about 8 miles, and its breadth varies from 1½ mile to 6 miles. The par. contains, besides the site of Old Roxburgh, now extinct, the modern vil. of Roxburgh, the post-office vil. of Heightoun, and the hmlt. of Newton. The town of Old Roxburgh, or Rokesburgh, as it is written by ancient historians, was once the fourth town in Scotland, both in populousness and in general importance. It is a market town, royal burgh, mint town, and strongly fortified post at the embouchure of the Teviot. Its famous border castle, which stood opposite to Kelso, is said to have been originally built by the Saxon kings of Northumbria, which kingdom included this part of Scotland, and having been given by Alexander I. to his brother David, Earl of Northumberland, became a royal seat on the accession of that prince to the Scottish throne. In 1207, and again in 1216, it was taken and burnt by the English, but was subsequently restored; and in 1239 Alexander II. kept his marriage festivities here, and had his first son, afterwards Alexander III., who married the daughter of Henry III. of England. For many generations it continued to be a royal residence, and the centre of intrigue, pomp, and battle, being at once the political glory and social bane of Teviotdale. In the Scottish wars of succession it was held by Edward I. of England, who kept his court of King's Bench here in 1292, and shut up Bruce's sister Mary in the castle till 1310. It was subsequently captured by Douglas in 1313, and having been demolished by Bruce, was rebuilt by Edward III., who several times visited it. In 1342 it was taken by the Scottish forces under Sir A. Ramsey, and remained in their possession for four years, when it was recovered by the English, who held it till 1460, when it surrendered after a long siege by the Scots, in which their king, James II., was killed by the bursting of a cannon, but the castle at length being taken, was dismantled. In this state it remained for nearly a century, till the English army, in 1547, under the Protector Somerset, encamped on the plain between the ruins of the castle and the confluence of the Tweed and Teviot. Observing the strength and convenience of its situation, the Protector resolved to repair the works, and garrisoned it with a considerable force under Sir Ralph Bulmer. Three years afterwards, however, it was finally demolished, and all that now remains of this once imposing border fortress are a few fragments of the outer walls, crowning the tabular summit of a rock, which rises above 40 feet perpendicular from the level of the plain. The noble family of Ker, of Cessford, takes the title of Duke of Roxburghe from the site of the ruined town and castle, which was granted to their ancestor in 1499 by James IV., and lies nearly opposite to their seat of Fleurs Castle; John, the third Duke of Roxburghe, lived in celibacy, and founded the Roxburghe Club.—The town, which was surrounded by a wall and ditch, as well as the castle, is now entirely extinct, and has been annexed to the adjoining parish of Kelso, the modern village of Roxburgh being situated 2 miles to the S. of the original fortress, and 3 S.W. of Kelso. The surface of the surrounding country is varied with hill and dale, the highest ground being at Dunselaw fort, near the western extremity of the parish, where it rises about 500 feet above the sea-level. The land is fertile and well cultivated, even the moorish districts of the S. and W. having been recently drained and brought under tillage. The soil is in general a gravelly or sandy alluvium, alternating with a fertile loam, and in some parts a mossy mould. The substratum is chiefly sandstone and trap, the latter rock frequently cropping up to the surface, and at one point in the bed of the Tweed forming an immense natural dam, called the Trow-Craigs, where the water flows in four separate channels or slits, scooped out of the rock by the wear of ages. The streams which traverse the parish, and fall into the Tweed and Teviot, are replete with purple trout, and there are two petrifying springs near the Tweed. Above half the parish is the property of the Duke of Roxburghe, and the rest is divided between four principal proprietors. The parish is traversed by the Kelso and Jedburgh branches of the North British railway.—This par. is in the presb. of Kelso and synod of Merse and Teviotdale. The minister has a stipend of £263 0*s.* 7*d.* The parish church was erected in 1752, and repaired in 1828. There was once a chapel-of-ease on the estate of Fairnington, and traces of a Franciscan house still exist at Old Roxburgh, close to the Friars. Two parochial schools are situated respectively at Roxburgh and Heitoun. Near the bank of the Teviot are remains of a fortalice, known as Sunlaw's, or Wallace's tower, connected with which are many legends. Vestiges of a Roman camp, and of forts, trenches, and earthworks, are scattered through the parish.

ROXBURGHSHIRE, or TEVIOTDALE, an inland co. in the S. of Scotland. It is situated near the English border, and is bounded on the N. by Berwickshire, on the E. and S.E. by Northumberland and the Cheviots, on the S. and S.W. by Cumberland and Dumfries shires, on the W. by Selkirk, and on the N.W. by Edinburghshire and the southerly projection of Mid-Lothian. It lies between 55° 6′ and 55° 42′ N. lat., and between 2° 12′ and 3° 8′ W. long. Its form is very irregular, being broad and ragged at the N. and tapering towards the S. Its greatest length from N.E. to S.S.W. is about 40 miles, but its medium does not exceed 30, with an extreme breadth at right angles to the length of 29 miles. Its superficial extent is 720 square miles, or about 460,938 acres, of which nearly three-fifths are cultivated. In the earliest times of which we have any record it was the seat of the Gadeni and Ottadini, and after the subjugation of the country by the Romans it formed part of the province of Valentia. The Saxons added it to their kingdom of Northumbria, of which it formed part till 1026, and in common with Lothian was distinguished by the name of Saxonia. It was invaded and wasted by Kenneth, the conqueror of the Picts, but continued to be occupied by the Scoto-Saxon race, as proved by the vast majority of terms in the present topographical nomenclature of the country. It was made shire ground by Alexander I., who gave it to his brother David, Earl of Northumberland, as sovereign lord, and when David ascended the Scottish throne as David I. he governed this country rather as a portion of his kingdom than as a separate lordship. He is recorded to have made profuse grants of lands to his English followers, the Percys, Berkeleys, Comyns, Corbetts, Morvilles, Riddells, and Vesseys, who established powerful families here; and the remainder of the lands not so bestowed he gave as the endowments of Melrose, Kelso, and Jedburgh abbeys, all founded in his reign. The subsequent events which took place are more particularly connected with the history of Roxburgh Castle, as indicated in the preceding article (which see).—The surface, which is greatly diversified by hills and extensive valleys, bearing the general names of Teviotdale, Eskdale, Liddesdale, and Tweeddale, from the rivers which traverse them, rises gradually towards the eastern boundary, where the Cheviot hills separate this county from Northumberland and Dumfries shires. Some of the highest peaks of this range are Cheviot top, 2,988 feet above sea-level, Carter Fell, about 2,000 feet, Peel Fell, under which the Teviot and Liddel take their rise, and the Lauriston Crags. From the head of Jed Water this range of hills turns westward, and runs through the county into Dumfriesshire, separating the basin of the Tweed from Liddesdale and Eskdale. From each side of the range innumerable spurs are thrown off, forming groups of hills, covering a wild, pastoral district, which extending in a south-westerly direction joins another Alpine range, which separates Teviotdale from Liddesdale. In the northern part of the county are the Eildon hills, which attain an elevation of 1,364 feet near Melrose. The other summits are Ruberslaw and Dunian, near Jedburgh, which are 1,419 and 1,120 feet respectively, and the heights of Minto only 720 feet. In general the uplands of the county are smooth, and rounded near the summits, supplying excellent pasturage and sheepwalks. Very few of the heights are cheerless, and not even those which rise in Alpine peaks are rugged or tremendous, but command good prospects, and are frequently clothed with herbage to the summit. The rivers of Roxburghshire are both large and numerous, and far more celebrated in song than those of any other county of Scotland. The Tweed, which excels the other streams both in the volume of its waters and the scenery on its banks, enters the county from Selkirkshire, and flowing sometimes northward and sometimes eastward, traces part of the boundary between Berwickshire, and leaves the county at the point of its beginning to divide Scotland from England. Its tributaries in this county are the Ettrick, Allan, Gala, Eden, which has a fall of 40 feet, Leader, which gives name to Lauderdale, and several minor streams, all joining the Tweed on its left bank. The Teviot, the other great river, belongs wholly to this county, having its source near the south-western border, and after traversing the centre of the county joins the Tweed near Kelso. Its tributaries are the Ale, Borthwick, Jed, Kail, Oxnam, Rule, Slitrig, and numerous rivulets. The Liddel, which does not belong to the basin of the Tweed, rises under Windburgh Hill, near the English border, and flowing in a south-western direction through Liddesdale, joins the Esk above Cannoby. Its tributaries are the Hermitage and Tinnis on the right bank, and the Blackburn and Kershope on the left, besides some smaller tributaries. Several small English streams, including the Bowmont and Coquet, touch it on the eastern border. The Blackburn Water has a fall of 38 feet, forming a cascade near a natural bridge of 50 feet span. The lakes include Primside, Galashiels, and other small lochs, chiefly in the parishes of Ashkirk, Galashiels, Linton, Morebattle, and Roberton, all of them abounding in pike, perch, and eels. Petrifying springs occur in the parishes of Roxburgh, Castleton, and Minto, and several mineral springs in Liddesdale. The western part of the county is chiefly composed of the greywacke and slaty rocks of the Transition formation, while the northern and central districts are chiefly red marl or Old Red sandstone, which gives place to trap and felspar porphyry in the neighbourhood of the Cheviot hills. In various parts of the county isolated masses of trap, greenstone, basalt, amygdaloid, wacke, and other igneous rocks, appear protruding through and often dislocating the superincumbent sandstone. Towards the English border a considerable district, comprising the greater part of Liddesdale, and parts of Ednam, Kelso, Jedburgh, Bedrule, and Sprouston, belongs to the carboniferous formation, being the continuation of the Northumberland coal field. The coal, however, is only minable in Liddesdale, and limestone and clay-ironstone, which also occur in this formation and at Hobkirk and Southdean, are but partially worked. Marl is abundant, and red and white building-stone are quarried near Jedburgh, and at other places. Peat is cut in the marshes for fuel. The soil varies considerably, according to the nature of the underlying rock, being chiefly clay in the uplands and sandy in Liddesdale, but along the rivers and in the hollows it is a rich loam. In the arable districts the soil is partly light and partly heavy, consisting of mixtures of sand and loam, gravel and loam, and sand, gravel and clay in every variety of proportion, and on different kinds of subsoil. The pastoral lands eastward of the Jed are in general dry, and admirably adapted for sheep farming, being clothed with a thick crop of sweet grass interspersed with patches of heath. Perhaps the most unprofitable district is that which lies between the southern skirt of Ruberslaw and the confines of Liddesdale, consisting of a stubborn clay upon a subsoil of impenetrable till. About the middle of the last century vast improvements were made in agriculture, and in the twenty years immediately preceding 1795 the value of the whole lands of the county was doubled mainly through the amelioration of soil produced by drainage and improved modes of tillage. Since this period Roxburghshire has not been distanced by any other county of Scotland, and can now boast of having one-third of the entire area under the plough. The rent, according to the old valuation, was £26,222, but the new, for 1861, was £341,011, exclusive of railways. The farms are in general large, the arable ranging from 400 to 600 acres, and the pastoral from 1,000 to 3,000, but a great number are from 600 to 1,400 acres, being partly arable and partly pastoral. By the returns made to the Board of Trade in 1855 there appeared to be 1,027 occupiers of farms paying a yearly rent of £10 and upwards, and 134,781 acres cultivated by them. The chief crops are wheat, barley, turnips, potatoes, oats, beans, pease, vetches, and artificial grasses. The breed of cattle most in vogue are crosses of the Teesdale, Ayrshire, and Highland varieties, and the sheep Cheviot and Leicester. Orchards have long flourished round Jedburgh, and in other sheltered spots.—Numerous seats of the nobility and gentry adorn the country, as Melrose, of the Duke of Buccleuch; Fleurs Castle, of the Duke of Roxburghe; Mount Teviot, of the Marquis of Lothian; Minto Castle, of Earl Minto; Dryburgh Abbey, of the Earl of Buchan; Mertoun House, of Lord Polworth; The Pavilion, of Lord Somerville; Stichel, of Pringle, Bart.; Springwood, of Douglas, Bart.; Makerstoun, of Brisbane, Bart.; Ancrum, of Scott, Bart.; Riddell House, of Riddle, Bart.; Newton-Don, of Don, Bart.; besides many mansions of the landed gentry. —Several branches of the North British railway traverse the county, the principal line entering viâ Dalkeith follows the vales of Galawater and Melrose, branching off at Newton toward Hawick and Kelso respectively, from which latter place it follows the Tweed into England, while a sub-branch goes to Roxburgh and Jedburgh. The manufactures, which include woollens, tartans, stockings, and linens, have their seats chiefly in Hawick, Jedburgh, Galashiels, Melrose, and Kelso. Both roads and bridges here were defective, and in some parts of the country almost impassable for wheeled carriages previous to the middle of the last century, but great efforts have been made to remedy this evil.—For administrative purposes Roxburghshire is divided into the four districts of Castleton, with Melrose, Hawick, Jedburgh, and Kelso, comprising 31 parishes, and parts of 4 others. The county town is Jedburgh, the only royal and parliamentary burgh contributing to Haddington in returning one member to parliament, and a market town. The other market towns are Hawick, Kelso, and Melrose, which are all burghs of barony, as is also Yetholm. The county returns one member to parliament, and had in 1860 a constituency of 1,566. It is governed by a lord-lieutenant, sheriff, and sheriff substitute, and 18 deputy lieutenants. The population in 1851 was 51,642, and the inhabited houses 7,255, which in 1861 had increased to 54,109 and 7,738 respectively. The sheriff court for the county and the commissary court are held at Jedburgh on every Monday and Thursday during session. The sheriff small-debt courts are held at Jedburgh every Thursday during session, and at stated times at Kelso, Hawick, and Melrose. Quarter sessions are held at Jedburgh on the first Tuesdays in March, May, and August, and on the last Tuesday in October. Justice of peace courts are held at Jedburgh on the last Tuesday, at Kelso on the first Friday, at Hawick on the first Thursday, and at Melrose on the first Saturday in each month. For ecclesiastical purposes the 35 parishes are thus grouped—16 of them compose the presbytery of Jedburgh, 18 belong to the presbytery of Kelso, 8 to the presbytery of Selkirk, and 1 to the presbytery of Lauder, all within the synod of Merse and Teviotdale, while Castleton, owing to its remoteness, is placed under the synod of Dumfries. Two chapelries have recently been added, one within the presbytery of Jedburgh, and the other in the presbytery of Kelso. The Free church has 16 places of worship, the United Presbyterians 17, the Episcopalians 4, the Independents 9, the Original Secession 2, the Baptists 3, and the Roman Catholics 1. Fine abbey ruins are remaining at Melrose, Kelso, and Jedburgh, also the remains of the early Saxon monastery of Old Melrose, or Red-Abbey, and the church of Old Jedburgh, founded in the 9th century by Bishop Eccrede. There are besides above 40 baronial castles, border towers, and peels, many of which are celebrated in story, as Branxholme, the scene of Sir Walter Scott's "Lay of the Last Minstrel;" the Hermitage, once occupied by Bothwell, who was here visited by Mary Queen of Scots; Lintalee, where Douglas vanquished the proud Earl of Brittany; Peniel heugh camp, surmounted by the Waterloo pillar, and near which is Ancrum Moor, where the English were defeated in 1544. The principal Roman works are the military way called Watling Street, a fortified camp near Jedburgh, and the branch road bearing the modern name of the Wheel Causeway. There are also extensive British works connecting fortified camps on the hills, supposed to have been constructed by the Romanised Britons as barriers against the Saxons, the most remarkable of which is the Catrail, extending over 18 miles, from Roberton, in Selkirkshire, by Northouse, Langburn, and Maiden Paps, to Peel-Fell. Besides these there are many Picts' houses, cairns, and Druidical stones, chiefly in Liddesdale.

ROXBY, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Hinderwell, E. div. of Langbaurgh lib., North Riding co. York, 10 miles N.W. of Whitby. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1804. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect.* of Hinderwell, in the dioc. of York. The church has a small tower.

ROXBY, a tnshp. in the par. of Pickhill, wap. of Hallikeld, North Riding co. York, 6 miles N.W. of Thirsk.

ROXBY-CUM-RISBY, a par. in the N. div. of Manley wap., parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 9 miles S.W. of Barton-upon-Humber, its post town, and 1 mile S. of Winterton. The village, which is small, is situated on an eminence commanding a prospect of the Humber. It is of a remote date. The par. which includes the hmlts. of Risby and Sawcliffe, is bounded on the E. by the river Ancholme. Good stone for building is quarried. The vicarial tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £420, and the glebe comprises 123 acres. The living is a vic. with that of Risby annexed, in the dioc. of Lincoln, joint val. £389. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient edifice, in good preservation. The register dates from 1689. The old church of Risby has long been demolished. There is a school, supported by voluntary contributions. In a field S.W. of the church a Roman tesselated pavement, about seven yards square, was discovered in 1709, and at a short distance from the spot is a thermal spring. C. C. Elves, Esq., is lord of the manor.

ROXETH, a hmlt. in the par. of Harrow-on-the-Hill, co. Middlesex, 1 mile S.W. of Harrow.

ROXHAM, a par. in the hund. of Clackclose, co. Norfolk, 3 miles S.E. of Downham Market, its railway station and post town. The parish, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. The soil is of various qualities, but tolerably fertile. There is no village, only a few farmhouses. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to that of Ryston, in the dioc. of Norwich. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, has a square tower, and for a considerable period was in a ruinous state, but has recently been restored. The interior of the church contains some monuments to the Pratt family. Ryston Hall is the principal residence. E. R. Pratt, Esq., is lord of the manor.

ROXHOLM, a hmlt. in the par. of Leasingham, wap. of Flaxwell, parts of Kesteven, co. Lincoln, 2 miles N. of Sleaford.

ROXTON, a par. in the hund. of Barford, co. Bedford, 5 miles S.W. of St. Neot's, its post town, and 8 N.E. of Bedford. The village, which is of small extent, is situated near the river Ouse, and on the great N. road. The par. includes the hmlts. of Chawson and Collesdon, and is chiefly agricultural. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Enclosure Act in 1810. The living is a vic. annexed to the vic.* of Great Barford, in the dioc. of Ely, val. £288, in the patron. of Trinity College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure with a square embattled tower containing four bells. The interior of the church contains an altar-tomb of Roger Hunt, bearing date 1439. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum. The Independents have a place of worship. Roxton House is the principal residence. The Rev. R. Delap is lord of the manor.

ROXTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Immingham, co. Lincoln, 7 miles N.E. of Caistor.

ROXWELL, a par. in the hund. of Chelmsford, co. Essex, 4½ miles N.W. of Chelmsford, its post town, and 7 from Ingatestone. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Chelmer, and is wholly agricultural. There are two flour mills. The soil is cold and wet, but has been much improved by drainage. Near Boyton Cross is a stream which after rain acquires the force of a mountain torrent. The appropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £1,020, payable to New College, Oxford, and one of £43 to the impropriator. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £250, in the patron. of New College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, was restored and enlarged in 1854. It contains some monuments. The parochial charities produce about £28 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes. Lord Petre is lord of the manor.

ROY, an island in the par. of Mevagh, bar. of Kilmacrenan, co. Donegal, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 1 mile N. of Carrickart, and 5 miles N.E. of Glen. It lies in Mulroy Bay.

ROY, or RUAIG, a river of the co. of Inverness, Scotland, rises near Loch Oich, in Lochaber, and joins the Spean near Keppoch House.

ROYAL-OAK, a vil. in the par. of Killinane, bar. of Idrone West, co. Carlow, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 1 mile S.W. of Bagnalstown. It is situated on the river Barrow, and on the road from Dublin to Carlow. It is named from an old inn which stood here.

ROYAL-OAK, a hmlt. in the New Forest, co. Hants, 4 miles E. of Fordingbridge. It is supposed to be the spot where William Rufus was accidentally shot by Tyrell whilst hunting in the New Forest.

ROYALTY FARM, an ext. par. place in the wap. of Kirton, parts of Holland, co. Lincoln, near Swineshead, to which par. it is annexed for parochial purposes.

ROYDHOUSE, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Shelley, West Riding co. York, 4 miles S.E. of Huddersfield.

ROYDON, or WOODREDON, a par. in the hunds. of Harlow and Waltham, co. Essex, 4½ miles S.W. of Harlow, its post town, 5¾ N.E. of Cheshunt, and 5 S.E. of Ware. It is a station on the Great Eastern line of railway. The village, which is considerable, is situated near the confluence of the rivers Lea and Stort, and was once a market town. It contains the remains of New Hall, or Nether Hall, which, though converted into farm buildings, still retains traces of its former grandeur —particularly the gateway tower, which is entire. More than half the land is arable, and the remainder meadow, pasture, and woodland. The Cambridge section of the Great Eastern railway passes through the parish. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £99. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, has a square embattled tower, and contains three brasses of the Coltes and other families, bearing date from 1471. The parochial charities produce about £28 per annum, of which £17 goes to Manning's school. Roydon House is the principal residence.

ROYDON, a par. in the hund. of Diss, co. Norfolk, 1½ mile W. of Diss, its railway station and post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Waveney, which bounds the parish on the S., and near the line of the Great Eastern railway. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The greater part of the land is arable, a small proportion of meadow and pasture. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £440, and the glebe comprises 46 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £385. The church, dedicated to St. Remigius, is an ancient structure with a round tower containing three bells. It contains several monuments. The parochial charities produce about £57 per annum. There is a free school, supported by the rector. Mr. S. Brook and G. E. Frere, Esq., are lords of the manors—the former of Roydon Tufts and the latter of Gissing Hall. About 20 acres of land are let in small lots to the poor.

ROYDON, a par. in the hund. of Freebridge-Lynn, co. Norfolk, 6 miles N.E. of Lynn, its post town, and 2 S.E. of Castle Rising. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. There is a considerable tract of common and heath. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £160, and the glebe comprises about three acres. The living is a rect. consolidated with the rect.* of Castle Rising, in the dioc. of Norwich. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is a small ancient edifice with a square embattled tower containing one bell. The register dates from 1754. There is a National school. The Hon. Mrs. Howard, of Castle Rising, is lady of the manor.

ROYD'S HALL, a hmlt. in the chplry. of Lindley, and par. of Huddersfield, West Riding co. York, 2 miles N.W. of Huddersfield.

ROYSTON, a par., post and market town, chiefly in the hund. of Odsey, co. Herts, but partly in the hund. of Armingford, co. Cambridge, 18 miles N.E. of Hertford, and 38 from London by road, or 45 by the Hitchin and Cambridge section of the Great Eastern railway, on which it is a station. It is situated at the intersection of the Icknield Way and the Ermine Street, under the Downs, in a bleak open country. It is a polling and petty sessions town, and was formed into a separate parish about 1540. Its present name is derived from Roisia de Vere, Countess of Norfolk, by whom a cross was set up, and near to which an Austin priory was founded in Henry II.'s time by Eustace-de-Mere, which led to the erection of houses, and the place acquired the appellation of Royse's Town, or Royston. The town consists of one long and narrow street, crossed by two shorter streets, the houses being chiefly built of brick. It is lighted with gas, but scantily supplied with water. It contains a townhall, two branch banks, and a market-house, built in 1830 at the expense of Lord Dacre. Barrows exist on the Downs, which are frequented in winter by the bird called the "Royston crow," which takes its flight to Sweden and Germany in the spring. An extensive trade is done in malt and corn. Royston gives title of viscount to the Earl of Hardwicke, of Wimpole. A hunting-seat was built here by James I., who made it his occasional residence, and Charles I. removed here from Hampton Court at the breaking out of the civil war, previously to setting up his standard at Nottingham. That unfortunate monarch afterwards passed two nights here in June, 1647, when a prisoner to the army which had its headquarters at this place. The survey of the palace made during the Commonwealth describes it as in good condition, but it has since been partly taken down. The Poor-law Union of Royston comprises 29 parishes, or places. The revenue of the monastery at the Dissolution was valued at £89 16*s*. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £107. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is an ancient structure, and originally belonged to the priory, but was purchased by the inhabitants at the dissolution of the monasteries. It contains effigies of a knight, a canopied brass bearing date 1420, and two others. The parochial charities produce about £42 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes. Market day is on Wednesday, chiefly for corn, sheep, pigs, and straw-plait. Fairs are held on Whit-Wednesday, Shrove Wednesday, St. Thomas-à-Becket's day, and Easter Wednesday, and a statute fair for the hiring of servants on the first Wednesday after 10th October.

ROYSTON, or ROYSTONE, a par. and tnshp. in the wap. of Staincross, West Riding co. York, 4 miles N.E. of Barnsley, its post town, and 6 S. of Wakefield. It is a station on the North Midland railway. The village is situated on an eminence near the Barnsley canal, and on the North Midland railway, which passes through a tunnel at Chevet 700 yards long. The par., which is very extensive, comprises the tnshps. of Monk-Bretton, Carlton, Chevet, Cudworth, Netton, Royston, and Woolley. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The district abounds with coal, and there are some extensive quarries of freestone. The soil is productive, and the land in good cultivation. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of York, val. £166, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is an ancient structure with a square embattled tower crowned with pinnacles, and containing a peal of six bells. It was restored and beautified in 1837. There are also district churches at Monk-Bretton and Woolley, the livings of which are perpet. curs., val. respectively £200 and £150. The parochial charities produce about £209 per annum, £88 of which belongs to the free grammar school founded in James I.'s time. There is a National school for both sexes, built in 1844. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. The late Sir G. Wood, Baron of the Exchequer, was a native of Royston. At Monk-Bretton are the remains of an ancient monastery.

ROYTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Bangor, hund. of Bromfield, co. Denbigh, 4 miles S.E. of Wrexham. It is situated near the river Dee. Its principal attraction is Royton Hall.

ROYTON, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Prestwich, hund. of Salford, co. Lancaster, 2 miles N.W. of Oldham, its post town, and 3 N.E. of Middleton. It is a junction station on the Oldham and Rochdale branch of the Lancashire and Yorkshire railway. The village is situated on the road to Rochdale. Previous to the commencement of the present century, it contained only a few straggling cottages, but has now assumed the appearance of a considerable town, consisting of several regular streets and large factories. A large portion of the inhabitants are engaged in the cotton mills, and in the extensive coal mine, and brass and iron foundries. Stone is quarried to some extent. There is a public bath. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £300, in the patron. of the Rector of Prestwich. The church, dedicated to St. Paul, was built by subscription in 1754. There is a National school; also a village school. John Butterworth, and his friend, John Kay, were natives of this parish. The Wesleyans, Calvinistic Methodists, and Society of Friends, have each a place of worship.

RUABON, RHUABON, or RHIWABON, a par. in the hund. of Bromfield, co. Denbigh, 4 miles S.W. of Wrexham, its post town, and 6 from Llangollen. It is a station on the Shrewsbury and Cheshire railway. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on a branch of the river Dee, and near Offa's and Wat's Dyke. It is a petty sessions town. The par. comprises the chplries. of Rhos-y-Medre and Rhos-Llanerchrugog-with-Christionydd, and nine other tnshps. A large portion of the inhabitants are employed in the extensive collieries and iron-works at Cefn Mawr and Acrevair. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of St. Asaph, val. £588, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, contains effigies and monuments. There are also the district churches of Rhos-y-Medre and Rhos-Llanerchrugog, the livings of which are perpet. curs., val. £300 and £50 respectively. The parochial charities produce about £466. There is a free school. The Dissenters have several places of worship. The mansion of Wynnstay is situated in one of the largest parks in Wales. Fairs occur on the 22nd May, and 20th November.

RUAIL, a trout stream of the co. of Argyle, Scotland, rises near Kilmodan, and falls into Loch Ridon.

RUAN. See DYSERT, co. Clare.

RUAN-LANIHORNE, a par. in the W. div. of Powder hund., co. Cornwall, 2½ miles S. of Tregony, its post town, and 10 S.E. of Truro. The village, which is of small extent, is situated in a valley at the head of a wide creek or inlet from the river Fal, and is wholly agricultural. The substratum is rich in minerals, and operations for streaming tin were formerly carried on in the adjacent moors. The land is divided between pasture, arable, and meadow. The parish is bounded on the S.E. by the par. of Veryan, on the N. by Cornelly, on the W. by Lamorran and St. Michael Penkivel, and on the S. by the pars. of Philleigh and St. Just. Here was formerly a castle of the Arcedecknes. The river Fal affords facility of communication with the town of Truro and the harbour of Falmouth. There is a quay, principally used for the landing of coal, timber, slate, and other articles, for the supply of the neighbourhood. Petty sessions for the division are held at the hamlet of Highlaws in this parish. The glebe comprises 123 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £414, in the patron. of Corpus Christi College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Rumon, or Ruan, is a massive structure, with a tower. Its pillars, arches, and doorways are of granite. It contains several monuments, among which is one to the Rev. John Whittaker, the learned historian and antiquary, who was once rector of this parish. The Wesleyans have a place of worship; and there is a village school, supported by subscriptions.

RUAN, MAJOR, a. par. in the hund. of Kerrier, co. Cornwall, 7 miles S.E. of Helston, its post town. The village is of small extent, and wholly agricultural. About half the land is in cultivation, and the remainder, chiefly moorland, pasture. The surface is hilly, and the soil clay and marl. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £170, and the glebe comprises 95 acres. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £191. The church is dedicated to St. Rumon, or Ruan.

RUAN, MINOR, a par. in the hund. of Kerrier, co. Cornwall, 9 miles S.E. of Helston, its post town, and 2 S.E. of Ruan-Lanihorne. The village, which is of small extent, is situated near the coast of the English channel. The par. includes Cadgwith Cove, a great resort of fishermen. The manor formerly belonged to the Carminow and Robinson families. The surface is elevated and hilly. The soil is chiefly a clayey marl, interspersed with rock. There are stone-quarries and serpentine works. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £100; and the glebe comprises 5 acres. The living is a rect. annexed to the rect.* of Grade, in the dioc. of Exeter. The church, dedicated to St. Ruan, is an ancient structure, with an embattled tower containing three bells. It has several painted windows. There is an endowed school for both sexes, and a Sunday-school is held within the same building. The Wesleyans and Association Methodists have each a place of worship. C. Hawkins, Esq., is lord of the manor and sole landowner.

RUARDEAN, a par. in the hund. of St. Briavel's, co. Gloucester, 6 miles from Ross, its post town, the same distance N.W. of Newnham, and 3 from Mitcheldean Road railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on a lofty ridge, overlooking the valley of the river Wye. The Severn and Wye railway passes through the parish. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The surface is elevated, and is watered by a small brook, called Bishop's Brook, which separates this parish from the county of Hereford. The substratum contains limestone and coal. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £100, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, has a spired tower containing six bells. The W. window is enriched with tracery. The parochial charities produce about £14 per annum. Kingsmill Manby Power, Esq., is lord of the manor. There are ruins of an ancient castle.

RUBERSLAW, a mountain in the co. of Roxburgh, Scotland, 6 miles E. of Hawick. It attains an elevation of about 1,400 feet above sea-level,, commanding a view of Teviotdale. There are caves in which the Covenanters are said to have found shelter.

RUCHIL, a stream of the co. of Perth, Scotland, flowing through Glenartney to the Earn at Comrie.

RUCKCROFT, a vil. in the par. of Ainstable, co. Cumberland, 3 miles N.W. of Kirkoswald, near the Eden.

RUCKINGE, a par. in the hund. of Newchurch, lathe of Shepway, co. Kent, 7 miles S.E. of Ashford, its post town, and 1 mile from Ham Street railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated near the Military canal, and at Ruckinge Bridge is a commodious wharf. It is noticed in Domesday Survey as Rocinge and Rocking. The survey is hilly, and the uplands command views of the whole of Romney Marsh and of the sea from Hythe to Winchelsea. The soil is of a loamy nature, and very fertile. Half the land is in meadow and pasture, the remainder being arable and woodland, with about 18 acres of hop-ground. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £291, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church, dedicated to St. Mary Magdalene, is an ancient stone edifice, with a tower containing five bells. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum. There is a parochial school, which is held at the church. The Wesleyans have a place of worship.

RUCKLAND, a par. in the Wold div. of the hund. of Louth-Eske, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 6½ miles S.E. of Louth, its post town, and 7 W. of Claythorpe railway station. The village, which is small, is situated on the Wolds, and is wholly agricultural. In the valley is a stream abounding with trout. The living is a rect. with that of Farforth and the vic. of Maiden-Well united, in the dioc. of Lincoln, joint val. £315. The church, dedicated to St. Olave, is an ancient edifice, with a turret containing one bell. It is situated on the brow of a hill. The parochial charities produce about £2 a year. J. W. Dawber, Esq., is lord of the manor and sole landowner.

RUCKLEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Acton-Burnell, hund. of Condover, co. Salop, 6 miles W. of Much-Wenlock, and 1 mile E. of Acton. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. The surface is generally level, and the soil fertile. The chapel is an ancient edifice, situated at Langley, in which Divine service is performed twice a year, at Easter and Christmas. Sir C. F. Smythe, Bart., is lord of the manor.

RUDBAXTON, a par. in the hund. of Dungleddy, co. Pembroke, 3 miles N. of Haverfordwest, its post town, and 12 from Narberth. It is situated near the river Cleddy, and includes Poyston, the native place of General Picton. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £199. The church is dedicated to St. Michael. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum. Wythy Bush is the principal residence.

RUDBY-IN-CLEVELAND, a par. in the W. div. of Langbaurgh lib., North Riding co. York, 3½ miles S.W. of Stokesley, its post town. It is situated on the river Leaven, and comprises the tnshps. of Middleton, East Rouncton, Hutton-Rudby, Skutterskelf, and Sexhow. The living is a vic. with the curs. of Middleton and East Rouncton annexed, in the dioc. of York, val. £270. The church is dedicated to All Saints. The parochial charities produce about £8 per annum, which goes to a free school, &c.

RUDCHESTER. See ROUCHESTER, co. Northumberland.

RUDDINGTON, a par. in the N. div. of the wap. of Rushcliffe, co. Nottingham, 4½ miles S. of Nottingham, its post town, and 10½ N.W. of Loughborough. The village, which is large, is chiefly agricultural. Here was a college, founded by William Babyngton, in Henry VI.'s time, the revenue of which was valued at the Dissolution at £30. Some of the inhabitants are employed in frame-work knitting, and in the weaving of lace. There is a brick-kiln. The surface is undulating, and in some parts hilly. The land is nearly evenly divided between arable and pasture, with a considerable tract of moorland. The soil is generally clay, but tolerably fertile. The lower grounds are watered by numerous springs. The tithes were commuted for land under an Act of Enclosure in 1767. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £135. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, was, with the exception of the tower and chancel, rebuilt in 1824 at an expense of £1,100. About a mile from the present church are the ruins of an ancient church, and an extensive burial-ground, called Flawford. The parochial charities produce about £89 per annum, £69 of which goes to Peacock's free school, founded in 1641. The General Baptists and Primitive Methodists have each a place of worship. Sir T. G. A. Parkyns, Bart., is lord of the manor.

RUDDLE. See RUDHALL, co. Gloucester.

RUDDRY, VAN, or RUDDRY-RHYGWYRN, a par. in the hund. of Caerphilly, co. Glamorgan, 2 miles E. of Caerphilly, its post town, and 7 from Cardiff. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Romney. There is a mineral well. In the limestone rock lead ore has been found. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect.* of Bedwas, in the dioc. of Llandaff. The church is dedicated to St. James.

RUDFORD, a par. in the hunds. of Botloe and Dud-stone, co. Gloucester, 3½ miles N.W. of Gloucester, its post town, and 4 S.E. of Newent. It comprises the hmlt. of Highleadon. The village, which is of small extent, is situated near the Hereford canal and the river Leadon, a branch of the Severn. The canal is here crossed by three bridges. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agricultural pursuits. Fruit trees are abundant, and excellent cider and perry is made. The meadows along the bank of the river are subject to inundation. The surface is level and the soil clayey. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £330, and the glebe comprises 8 acres. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £353, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has a low tower containing three bells. The chancel has lately been restored. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum. The Dean and Chapter of Gloucester are lords of the manor.

RUDGE, a tythg. in the par. and hund. of Crediton, co. Devon, near Crediton.

RUDGE, a tnshp. in the par. of Pattingham, Chelmarsh div. of Stottesden hund., co. Salop, 6½ miles N.E. of Bridgnorth.

RUDGE, a hmlt. in the par. of Beckington, co. Somerset, 3 miles N.E. of Frome.

RUDGE, a tythg. in the par. of Froxfield, co. Wilts, 4 miles N.W. of Hungerford.

RUDGE, a tythg. in the par. of Chilmark, co. Wilts, 3 miles S.E. of Hindon.

RUDGWICK, a par. in the hund. of West Easwrith, rape of Arundel, co. Sussex, 6 miles N.W. of Horsham, its post town, and 10 N.E. of Petworth. It is a station on the Horsham and Guildford railway. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The village is situated on the road from Guildford to Worthing by way of Crawley, and is built on an eminence. The surface is hilly and richly wooded. The lower grounds are watered by the small river Wanford. The soil is clay upon a substratum of sandstone. There are quarries of paving and roofing stone. The great tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £122 11*s., and the vicarial for £250. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £260, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, has a low square tower, containing a clock and six bells. It has several stained windows. The register dates from 1539. There is a village school for both sexes. The Independents have a place of worship.

RUDHALL, a seat of Lord Ashburton, co. Hereford, 2 miles N.E. of Ross.

RUDHALL, or RUDDLE, a tythg. in the par. of Newnham, co. Gloucester, 2 miles from Newnham, on the Severn.

RUDHAM, EAST, a par. in the hund. of Gallow, co. Norfolk, 7 miles W. of Fakenham, and 5 N. of Rougham, its post town. The Lynn road passes through the village. The manor anciently belonged to the Belets, who founded here the priory of Coxford, of which there are some slight remains. The land is chiefly arable, with a small proportion of meadow and pasture, and a little heath. The great tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £505, and the vicarial for £280. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. with the vic. of West Rudham annexed, £560. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has a square embattled tower containing three bells. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a chapel. There is a National school. Fairs are held on 17th May and 14th October for cattle and general merchandise.

RUDHAM, WEST, a par. in the hund. of Gallow, co. Norfolk, 8 miles from Fakenham, and 5 N.W. of Rougham, its post town. It is in conjunction with East Rudham. The village is small and wholly agricultural. A brook flows through the parish to join the river Wensum. The land is chiefly arable, with a small proportion of meadow and pasture, and about 200 acres of common and heath. The living is a vic. annexed to the vic.* of East Rudham, in the dioc. of Norwich. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, has a low square tower.

RUDHEATH, a tnshp. and lordship in the par. of Davenham, hund. of Northwich, co. Chester, 2 miles S.E. of Northwich, its post town, and 4 N.E. of Middlewich. The village, which is of small extent, is situated near the Grand Trunk canal. Here the battle was fought between the royal and parliamentary forces in 1643. The chapel-of-ease, situated at a short distance from Broken Cross, was built in 1835. There is a National school for both sexes. A great portion of the land is devoted to pasture. T. H. Marshall, Esq., is lord of the manor.

RUDSTON, a par. in the wap. of Dickering, East Riding co. York, 5 miles W. of Bridlington, its post town. The village, which is small, is situated on the road to Sledmere, and is chiefly agricultural. Rudston is mentioned in Domesday Book as Rodestane, and is supposed to derive its name from a gritstone pillar in the churchyard, which resembles both in shape and substance the well-known stones called Devil's Arrows, near Boroughbridge. The breadth of the pillar is nearly 6 feet by 2 feet in thickness, and it rises 29 feet above ground, exclusively of a considerable portion buried in the ground. Its weight is assumed to be over 40 tons. The par. is large, including the hmlts. of Caythorpe and Thorpe. The surface is boldly undulating, and the uplands embellished with thriving plantations. The soil is of a loamy and gravelly nature, upon a subsoil of limestone and gravel. Sir T. Syke's hounds meet in this parish. The vale is intersected by a stream, on the banks of which are luxuriant pastures. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Enclosure Act in 1774. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of York, val. £236, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient stone edifice, with a square tower containing three bells. It is situated on the brow of a hill, and contains a piscina and sedilia, also a font of great antiquity. There are several marble tablets and two old brasses. There is also a parochial school for both sexes, and at which a Sunday-school is also held. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a place of worship. Sir H. Boynton, Bart., is lord of the manor. Thorpe Hall is the principal residence. While enlarging the fishponds in the grounds of this mansion, in 1830, some Roman relics, consisting of urns, swords, and spurs, were discovered.

RUDYARD, a tnshp. in the par. of Leek, S. div. of Totmonslow hund., co. Stafford, 2½ miles N.W. of Leek, its post town, and within half a mile of the Rudyard station on the Churnet Valley section of the North Staffordshire line. The village, which is of small extent, is situated near the reservoir for the Uttoxeter canal, which extends 2 miles in length, and from 200 to 300 feet in breadth. The Earl of Macclesfield is lord of the manor.

RUE, or RHIW, a river of the co. of Montgomery, joins the Severn at Aber-Rhiw.

RUEVAL, a sea loch between the islands of North Uist and Benbecula, Western Isles, coast of Scotland.

RUFFORD, a par. in the hund. of Leyland, co. Lancaster, 5 miles N.E. of Ormskirk, its post town, and 12½ S.W. of Preston. It is a station on the W. section of the Lancashire and Yorkshire railway. This place, formerly a chapelry in the parish of Croston, was made parochial by Act of Parliament. The village is situated near the Leeds and Liverpool branch canal and the river Douglas. It is intersected by the high road from Preston to Liverpool. Petty sessions for the division are held at the Hesketh Arms monthly, in rotation with Chorley, Cuerdon, Leyland, and Penwortham. The land is nearly evenly divided between arable and pasture, with a small tract of heath and common. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £390, and the rector receives £190 out of those of Ulneswalton. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £495. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is crowned by a cupola containing one bell. The interior of the church contains monuments and effigies of a knight and his lady. The parochial charities produce about £22 per annum.

There are National schools for both sexes, supported by Lady A. Hesketh and Sir T. G. Hesketh, Bart. The principal residence is Hesketh Hall.

RUFFORD, an ext. par. place in the Hatfield div. of Bassetlaw wap., co. Nottingham, 2 miles S. of Ollerton. The chief part of the land is in forest and park, extending for near six miles along the banks of the Rainworth-water. It was formerly celebrated as the site of an abbey for Cistercian monks founded by Gilbert de Ghente, Earl of Lincoln, in 1148, as a cell to the Abbey of Rievaulx. Its revenue at the Dissolution was valued at £254 6*s.* 8*d.* The site eventually passed into the hands of the Talbot family, who converted the ancient abbey into the present seat of that name, situated in a wooded park of 1,400 acres in extent. Portions of the old house in which James I. and his son were entertained when hunting have been incorporated into the present building. The hall contains several relics and numerous pictures of persons of note. The Rufford hounds hunt here. There are schools supported by the Earl of Scarborough.

RUFFORTH, a par. partly in the Ainsty and partly in the West Riding co. York, 5 miles W. of York, its post town, and 2½ from Hessay railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is chiefly agricultural. The soil is principally clay. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Enclosure Act in 1794. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of York, val. £100. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient edifice, with a tower containing two bells. There is a parochial school, also a place of worship for the Wesleyans. J. Clayton, Esq., is lord of the manor and the chief landowner.

RUGANTINE, a tnshp. in the par. of Bettus, co. Salop, 9 miles S.W. of Bishop's Castle.

RUGBY, a div. of the hund. of Knightlow, co. Warwick, contains the pars. of Bilton, Bourton, Clifton, Church Lawford, Church Over, Dunchurch, Frankton, Hillmorton, Newbold-on-Avon, Newnham-Regis, Rugby, Ryton, Stretton-upon-Dunsmoor, Willoughby, and part of Wolston, comprising about 40,000 acres.

RUGBY, a par. and market town in the Rugby div. of Knightlow hund., co. Warwick, 15 miles N.E. of Warwick, and 83 from London by the London and North-Western railway, which here forms a junction with the North Midland, the Leamington and Warwick, the Trent Valley, and the Rugby and Stamford lines. It is situated on high ground close to the left bank of the river Avon, and near to the Oxford canal. Rugby does not possess any especial historical interest, and though supposed to be of some antiquity, nothing is certainly known about it previous to the time of Edward the Confessor. In Domesday Book it is called Rocheberie, and as late as the reign of Elizabeth was written Rokeby. In the reign of King Stephen a castle was built near this spot, some of the earthworks of which are still to be seen. During the civil war Oliver Cromwell was quartered here with a large body of troops; and William III. stopped here just before taking command of his army previous to the battle of the Boyne. The town, which is well paved and lighted with gas, has been considerably improved of late years in the principal streets, but what contributes most to the importance of Rugby is its grammar school. This school was originally founded by Lawrence Sheriff, grocer and native of Brownsover, in 1567, and is now sought after by the best families in England for the education of their sons, and in consequence has induced many opulent families to settle in the town. The buildings which form the school are situated in the southern part of the town; they are in the Elizabethan style, and built of white brick and stone, the greater part comparatively modern, the chapel being the last portion erected. The exhibitions consists of twenty-one scholarships varying from £40 to £80 per annum, and tenable for four years. These are given to boys going to the universities by trustees at the annual elections in June. When Dr. Wood was head master in 1810 the schools were rebuilt, and the number of scholars gradually increased under the able administration of the late Dr. Arnold; in Dr. Tait's time the number reached nearly 500; there are now some 450 scholars, including 50 on the foundation. Dr. Frederick Temple is the head master, and there are 10 assistant masters. The endowment originally consisted of a small property in Brownsover, to which the founder afterwards added about 8 acres of land, now occupied by Lamb's Conduit-street, close to the Foundling Hospital, London, and which yields a revenue of upwards of £5,000 per annum. Out of these funds, besides the school endowments, 7*s.* a-week with residence are granted to fourteen poor persons natives of Rugby.—The population in 1851 was 6,317, with 1,103 inhabited houses, which in 1861 had increased to 7,818, with 1,417 inhabited houses. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in trade, but there are no manufacturing establishments except some breweries, an iron foundry, and tile and brick work. Railway communication has largely contributed to the trade of the town, and the London and North-Western railway station is an extensive structure. The Midland Counties railway commences here, and so does the Trent Valley, and there are other branch railways, so that upwards of a hundred trains leave Rugby station every day. Rugby Poor-law Union contains 41 parishes and townships. There are a literary institution and a savings-bank. A county-court is held every month, and petty sessions every week in the townhall, which was erected in 1856 at a cost of £7,000.—The living is a rect.* with the cur. of Trinity annexed, in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £510. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, has a massive square embattled tower at the W. end, but possesses no especial architectural feature of interest. It has been considerably enlarged thrice within the last eighty years. The register dates from 1620, and there is a register of the incumbents from 1253. There are also the district churches of St. Matthew and the Holy Trinity, the livings of both which are perpet. curs.* The former was erected in 1841, and Holy Trinity opened in 1854, the latter being a cruciform structure with a square tower in the centre. The Roman Catholics have likewise a chapel with a college and convent, and there are places of worship for Wesleyans, Baptists, and Primitive Methodists. Besides Rugby school, there are the Elborough school and almshouses, founded by Richard Elborough about a century ago, where 250 scholars of both sexes are educated, also the parochial schools built in 1830, and infant school erected in 1846. Sheriff's almshouses have twelve inmates, and there is a college for the deaf and dumb, which was established by Mr. Bingham for the upper classes.—Saturday is the ordinary market day, but there is also a corn market held on Tuesday. Fairs are held on the Tuesday after 6th January, 17th February, 31st March, last Monday in April, 5th May, second Monday in June, 7th July, ninth Monday before Michaelmas, 21st August, Mondays before Michaelmas and before 22nd October, 22nd November, Tuesday before St. Thomas's Day, and Monday after Christmas.

RUGELEY, a par., post and market town in the E. div. of Cuttlestone hund., co. Stafford, 7 miles N.W. of Lichfield, and 9 S.E. of Stafford. It is a station on the Trent Valley branch of the London and North-Western railway, and a new branch has been added, called the Cannock Mineral line, which runs from Cannock to Walsall, thus affording a communication to all parts of the W. of England. It is situated on the Grand Trunk canal and the river Trent, and contains the chplry. of Brereton, and a portion of Cannock chase. It is a polling and petty sessions town. The manor was formerly held by the Rudgeleys and the Bishops of Lichfield, but was given to the Pagets, ancestors of the Marquis of Anglesey, the present lord of the manor, by Henry VIII. The town is situated near the S. bank of the Trent, on the road from Stafford to Lichfield. It is well paved and lighted with gas, and has a clean and respectable appearance. It consists of several good streets, and contains two banks, a savings-bank, gas works, a mechanics' institute, and townhall situated nearly central of the town. A court-leet is held in October by the Marquis of Anglesey, at which two constables are appointed, and petty sessions for the division are held monthly in the townhall. There are extensive collieries, iron, and brass foundries, corn mills, brewery, and a manufactory for sugar of lead and verdigris. Hats were formerly made here, but this branch of trade has entirely declined. At Brereton in this parish are extensive collieries belonging to Earl Talbot and the Marquis of Anglesey. The appropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £405, and the vicarial for £315, with a glebe of 8 acres. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £213, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, dedicated to St. Augustine, has a tower containing six bells. The church was erected in 1822. At a short distance from the present church are the tower and chancel of the old edifice, and the latter is used as a school-room. There is also a district church at Brereton, the living of which is a perpet. cur.,* val. £120, in the patron. of the vicar. The parochial charities produce about £200 per annum. There are National and infant schools, also a free grammar school endowed with an annuity of £300, besides Bramford's free writing-school endowed with £35 per annum. The Roman Catholics have a school. There are places of worship for the Independents, Wesleyans, and Roman Catholics. Hagley Hall, the principal residence, is an ancient mansion, situated in a well-wooded park. Market day is Thursday. Fairs are held on the 15th April, 1st June, and lasting for six days, for the sale of colts and first-class horses, 21st October for cattle, sheep, and horses, and on the second Tuesday in December. There are also monthly sales of fat stock at Smithfield, which place has been recently established by the late Earl of Shrewsbury. Races occur in September upon a 1½ mile course at Hitchen Hill, about a mile from the town.

RUGLEN. See RUTHERGLEN, co. Lanark.

RUGLEY, a hmlt. in the tnshp. and par. of Alnwick, ward of East Coquetdale, co. Northumberland, 3 miles S. of Alnwick, near the river Alne.

RUISHTON, a par. in the hund. of Taunton, co. Somerset, 2½ miles E. of Taunton, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the navigable river Tone, and is separated from the hamlet of Henlade by the London road. The par. is traversed on its N. side by the Bristol and Exeter railway, and includes the hmlt. of Henlade. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The surface is elevated towards the S., but in the lower parts is flat and marshy. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £74. The church, dedicated to St. George, is situated close to the river, and is an ancient edifice with a square embattled tower of three stages, crowned with crocketed pinnacles, and containing three bells. The parochial charities produce about £54 per annum. Henlade House and Woodlands are the principal residences.

RUISLIP, or RISELIP, a par. in the hund. of Elthorne, co. Middlesex, 4 miles N.E. of Uxbridge, its post town, and 4 from the Pinner railway station. It comprises the hmlts. of Eastcott and North-Wood. It is mentioned in Domesday Book as Risleps, and was given by Ernulf de Hêding to Bec Abbey, in Normandy. At the suppression of alien priories it was seized by Henry IV. for his son John Duke of Bedford, and subsequently granted by Edward IV. to King's College, Cambridge. The village, which is considerable, is chiefly agricultural. There is some woodland and common. The Regent's Canal Company have a reservoir covering an area of 80 acres in this parish. The tithes were commuted for land and corn rents under an Enclosure Act in 1804. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of London, val. £462, in the patron. of the Dean and Canons of Windsor. The church, dedicated to St. Martin, is an ancient structure with an oaken roof. It contains many ancient tombs and brasses, including that of Lady Banks, who defended Corfe Castle in 1643 for Charles I. There is also a district church at Norwood, or North-Wood, the living of which is a perpet. cur.,* val. £30. The parochial charities produce about £54 per annum. Park Wood is the principal residence.

RULE, a trout stream of the co. of Roxburgh, Scotland, rises under Maryburgh, and joins the Teviot at Bedrule.

RULE, a hmlt. in the pars. of Gnosall and Bradley, co. Stafford, 5 miles N.W. of Penkridge.

RUM, an island, one of the Hebrides, in the par. of Small Isles and district of Mull, co. Argyle, Scotland, 16 miles N.N.W. of Ardnamurchan Point, and 6½ S.W. of Dunan Point. It lies between the Isles of Eigg and Canna. The island extends in length about 8 miles from S. to N., with an extreme breadth of about 7 miles. The surface is of a mountainous, rugged, and barren character, rising at Ben More to the height of 2,210 feet, and at Oreval to 1,800 feet above sea-level. Its shores are rocky and dangerous, and in some parts the cliffs attain an altitude of 400 feet. The prevailing rocks are red sandstone and trap, with bloodstone and onyx in places. The island abounds in springs. The climate is stormy and changeable. Loch Skresort, or Sgriosard, on the E. side of the island, affords a large and safe harbour, with an excellent quay. At the bottom of the bay is the little village of Kinloch. Prior to the forests being felled deer abounded in the hills, and there is still a good supply of grouse and other game. It originally belonged to Clanranald, but was purchased by Maclean of Coll, and subsequently by the Marquis of Salisbury, who purchased it with the view of converting it into a deer forest. The agricultural value of Rum Island is less than any other of the Hebrides, being only adapted for sheep-farming.

RUMBALD'S MOOR, a hmlt. in the par. of Ilkley, West Riding co. York, 4 miles W. of Otley, near the river Wharfe and the Leeds and Thirsk railway.

RUMBLE, a small island, one of the Shetland Isles, coast of Scotland, 8 miles N.E. of the Mull of Eswick.

RUMBLING BRIDGE, the terminus of the Devon Valley branch of the North British railway, on the river Devon, co. Clackmannan, Scotland, near Dollar.

RUMBOLDS-WYKE, a par. in the hund. of Box, rape of Chichester, co. Sussex. It is a small parish adjoining Chichester, its post town. It is situated on the South-Coast railway, and on a branch of the Portsmouth and Arundel canal. The par. includes the hmlt. of Hornet, which may be considered a suburb of Chichester. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £234, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, dedicated to St. Rumbold, is built of rubble, and contains one bell.

RUMBRIDGE, a tythg. in the par. of Eling, co. Hants, 4 miles N.W. of Southampton. It comprises the Forest union poorhouse.

RUMBURGH, a par. in the hund. of Blything, co. Suffolk, 4 miles N.W. of Halesworth, its post town, and 6 S. of Bungay. The village is straggling and chiefly agricultural. On a farm are traces of a Benedictine cell to Holme Abbey, founded at the Conquest by Stephen Earl of Bretagne, and suppressed in 1528, when its revenue was given to Cardinal Wolsey towards the endowment of his college at Ipswich. The land is well cultivated, and the soil clayey. The living is a perpet. cur. with the vic. of St. Michael's, South Elmham, annexed, in the dioc. of Norwich, joint val. £130. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, once belonged to the monastery, and is an ancient edifice with a low square tower. The parochial charities produce £43 in town estate, of which £6 goes to a Sunday-school. There is a National school for both sexes. The Wesleyans have a place of worship.

RUMFORD, a hmlt. in the par. of Muiravonside, co Stirling, Scotland, 5 miles S.E. of Falkirk.

RUMNEY, a par. in the upper div. of the hund. of Wentllooge, co. Monmouth, 3 miles N.E. of Cardiff, its post town, and 9 S.W. of Newport. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Rumney, which flows 30 miles S. to the Bristol Channel, through a mineral valley, traversing the Brecon and Glamorganshire borders. The river is navigable for small craft, and the London road to Milford passes through the parish. There are quarries of building-stone. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £86, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Bristol. The church, dedicated to St. Augustine, has an embattled tower. On an eminence overlooking the river is an ancient encampment surrounded by a fosse.

RUMSDALE, a district in the par. of Halkirk, co. Caithness, Scotland, 9 miles S.E. of Thurso.

RUMWORTH, a tnshp. in the par. of Deane, hund. of Salford, co. Lancaster, 3 miles S.W. of Bolton. In this tnshp. are situated the village and parochial church of Deane, on the road from Bolton to Liverpool. There is a school endowed by James Crompton in 1636, with land now producing £37 per annum.

RUNCKTON, a hmlt. in the par. of North Mundham, hund. of Box, rape of Chichester, co. Sussex, 2 miles S. of Chichester.

RUNCORN, a par., market town, and seaport in the hund. of Bucklow, co. Chester, 17 miles E.S.E. of Liverpool, 15 N.E. of Chester, and 187 from London by road, or 182 by the London and North-Western railway, which has stations on either side of the river. The Lancashire and Cheshire, and Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire lines also have stations here—the latter at Widnes. The par., which extends over a large surface, contains, besides the town of Runcorn, which formerly comprised two tnshps., the four chplries. of Aston, Daresbury, Halton, and Thelwall, and the tnshps. of Acton Grange, Aston Grange, Clifton or Rock Savage, Kekewick, Moore, Newton-by-Daresbury, Norton, Preston-on-the-Hill, Stockham, Sutton, Walton Inferior, Walton Superior, and Weston. The town, consisting of two divisions, higher and lower, is situated near the confluence of the Weaver and Mersey, on the left bank of the latter river, which at this point is contracted to about 400 yards wide at high water, by a projection from the Lancashire side called Runcorn Gap. It is much resorted to during the summer months by persons from Liverpool and the surrounding neighbourhood as a bathing-place. It was called Runcora by the Saxons; and Ethelfleda, a daughter of Alfred the Great, refounded the town and built a castle here in the early part of the 10th century, every vestige of which has since disappeared, though the rock on which the castle stood still retains the name of the Castle Rock. In 1134 a priory was founded by William Fitz-Nigel, which was subsequently removed to Norton. The commercial prosperity of Runcorn, however, is of comparatively modern growth, having originated with the construction of the Duke of Bridgewater's, the Mersey and Irwell, and Trent and Mersey canals, towards the close of the last century. The level of the water in the canal being considerably above that of the Mersey, it here suddenly falls by a series of ten locks. There are also large wet docks and basins, and extensive warehouses have been constructed to supply the demands of the yearly-increasing traffic—a considerable part of which is transacted by the Old Quay Navigation Company. Runcorn was formerly a sub-port to Liverpool, but became an independent bonding port in 1847. A steam-packet boat plies between Runcorn and Liverpool daily, and another boat between Runcorn and Manchester during the season. The coasting and carrying trades occupy a large proportion of the inhabitants, and others are engaged in the various manufactures and trades, the principal being iron-foundries, anchor forges, corn-mills, collieries, tanneries, slate and stone quarries, ship-building yards, rope-walks, soap-works, chemical works, works for distilling turpentine, &c.—the chimneys of some of these factories being between 200 and 300 feet high. The principal exports are grain, salt, coal, culm, iron, soap, school-slates, and stone.—The town is paved, and lighted with gas from works in Gas-street. It contains the townhall, built in 1830, with a bridewell beneath, also the Forester's Hall, in Devonshire-place, a subscription newsroom, savings-bank, and the baths, close to the ferry, where boats ply every five minutes to and from Runcorn Gap. A county court is held in the town.—The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Chester, val. £350, in the patron. of Christ Church, Oxford. The church, dedicated to All Saints, has a square tower surmounted by an octagonal spire, and containing a peal of eight bells. It was completed in 1849, and stands on the site of an ancient edifice erected before the Norman conquest, and dedicated to St. Bartholomew. The interior contains a painted E. window, the gift of Sir R. Brooke, Bart., and several monuments. In addition to the parish church there are the Church of the Holy Trinity, built in 1838, a chapel-of-ease to this church, and a floating chapel on the Bridgewater canal for mariners, also several district churches in the rural parts of the parish—viz. Aston-by-Sutton, Daresbury, Halton, Thelwall, and Christ Church, Weston Point, the livings of all which are perpet. curs., varying in val. from £88 to £213. The Roman Catholics have a chapel, built in 1845, and there are places of worship for Baptists, Independents, Wesleyans, and Countess of Huntingdon's Connexion. There are National, Sunday, and infant and Wesleyan schools. Runcorn Poor-law Union contains 37 pars. and tnshps., but the rates are applied solely to out-door relief.—Market day is on Friday. Fairs are held on the last Friday in April and in October.

RUNCTON, NORTH, a par. and tnshp. in the hund. of Freebridge-Lynn, co. Norfolk, 3 miles S.E. of Lynn, its post town. The par. comprises the hmlts. of Hardwick and Setchy. The village, which is small, is wholly agricultural. The surface is undulating, and the soil is of various quality. The land is nearly evenly divided between arable and pasture, with a small tract of common. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £623, and the glebe comprises 26 acres. The living is a rect.* with the rects. of Hardwick and Setchy annexed, in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £711. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is a Grecian structure with a cupola, having been rebuilt in 1839, after being for many years in ruins from the fall of the tower in 1701. There is besides a district church at Setchy, built by Mrs. Gurney in 1840. The register dates from 1563. The parochial charities produce about £10 per annum. There are a National school for both sexes, and an infant school. Runcton Hall, the principal residence, is situated in well-wooded grounds. Joseph Gee, Esq., is lord of the manor.

RUNCTON, SOUTH, a par. in the hund. of Clackclose, co. Norfolk, 4 miles N.E. of Downham-Market, its post town, and 7 S. of Lynn. The village, which is of small extent and wholly agricultural, is situated on the road to Lynn. The land is chiefly arable, with a small proportion of meadow and pasture. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £246 13*s.*, and the glebe comprises 13½ acres. The living is a rect. consolidated with those of Holme and Wallington, in the dioc. of Norwich, joint val. £650. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is an ancient structure with a turret containing one bell. It was restored in 1839 at the expense of £700. The interior of the church contains tablets to the Peel family, and has an E. window on which is represented the figure of St. Andrew. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum. In the neighbourhood are remains of a Saxon or Norman church. The Master and Fellows of Caius College, Cambridge, are lords of the manor.

RUNFOLD, a tythg. in the par. and hund. of Farnham, co. Surrey, 2 miles N.E. of Farnham.

RUNHALL, a par. in the hund. of Forehoe, co. Norfolk, 4 miles N.E. of Hingham, 1 mile E. of the Hardingham railway station, and 5 miles N.W. of Wymondham, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated near the line of the Great Eastern railway and the river Blackwater. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The greater part of the land is arable, the remainder being meadow, pasture, and about 70 acres of open common. The living is a vic. annexed to the rect.* of Coston, in the dioc. of Norwich. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient edifice, with a round tower. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum.

RUNHAM, a par. in the hund. of East Flegg, co.

Norfolk, 6 miles N.W. of Yarmouth. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the banks of the navigable river Bure, which bounds the parish on the S., and is here crossed by Runham Swim ferry. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The suspension bridge and Vauxhall gardens are within the limits of this parish. It was formerly a market town, and forms part of the East and West Flegg in corporation. The great tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £223 16*s.*, and the vicarial for £145 5*s.*, with a rent-charge of £32 4*s.* to the Vicar of Gorleston; and the glebe comprises 24 acres. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £207, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, is an ancient structure, with a square embattled tower. The church has been recently restored. The parochial charities produce about £34 per annum, the produce of land awarded under an Enclosure Act in the 42nd of George III., as fuel allotment. There is a National school.

RUNNEMEDE, or RUNNY MEAD, a meadow on the bank of the Thames, opposite Charter Island, co. Surrey, 2 miles W. of Staines. It is celebrated as being the spot where King John met the barons for the signing of Magna Charta, on 15th June, 1215. Races take place here during the first week of September.

RUNNINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Milverton, co. Somerset, 2 miles N.W. of Wellington, its post town and railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Tone. The woollen manufacture is carried on to a small extent. The Taunton and Tiverton canal passes near the boundary of the parish. The soil consists of a loam-sand upon a subsoil of rock and limestone, which latter is quarried for manure. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £84, and the glebe comprises 16 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £103. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient stone structure, with a square tower containing two bells. The register dates from 1586. The charities produce about £8 per annum, which goes to the clerk. There is a school for both sexes, in which a Sunday-school is held.

RUNSELL, a hmlt. in the par. of Danbury, co. Essex, 3 miles S.W. of Maldon.

RUNSTON, a hmlt. in the par. of St. Pierre, upper div. of Caldicott hund., co. Monmouth, 3½ miles S.W. of Chepstow. There was formerly a chapel-of-ease.

RUNSWICK, a vil. in the tnshp. and par. of Hinderwell, lib. of East Langbaurgh, North Riding co. York, 7 miles N.W. of Whitby. It is situated on the cliffs of Runswick Bay, the entrance to which is choked with sand, though it contains anchorage in 5 fathoms. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the fisheries.

RUNTON, a par. in the hund. of North Erpingham, co. Norfolk, 2 miles N.W. of Cromer, its post town. The parish, which is of small extent, is situated on the coast, and is chiefly agricultural. There are two villages, distinguished as East and West Runton; the former is built round a green, sheltered by hills, and open to the beach, where a considerable fishery is carried on. The greater part of the land is arable, with some extensive plantations, and about 45 acres of common. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £240, and the glebe comprises 20 acres. The living is a rect. united to that of Aylmerton, in the dioc. of Norwich. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, is an ancient structure, with a square embattled tower containing one bell. The chancel has recently been restored, and contains a piscina, and a stained window inserted. The exterior of the church has also been restored. The parochial charities produce about £40 per annum.

RUNWELL, a par. in the hund. of Chelmsford, co. Essex, 5 miles E. of Billericay, and 1 mile N.E. of Wickford. Ingatestone is its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the navigable river Crouch, and is wholly agricultural. The surface is partially hilly. The soil is generally a deep loam. The greater part of the land is arable, and the remainder meadow, pasture, and woodland. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £570. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has a square embattled tower of stone, surmounted by a shingled spire. It contains some ancient monuments and brasses. The principal residence is Runwell Hall.

RUNWICK, a tythg. in the par. and hund. of Farnham, co. Surrey, 2 miles from Farnham.

RUPERRAH, an ancient seat in the par. of Eglwysilan, co. Glamorgan, 3 miles E. of Caerphilly. It is situated on the river Rumney, and was built after designs by Inigo Jones.

RUSCAR, a vil. in the bar. of Magheraboy, co. Fermanagh, Ireland, 3 miles S.E. of Belleck.

RUSCOMBE, a par. in the hund. of Sonning, co. Berks, 6 miles N.E. of Reading, its post town, and 1 mile from the Twyford station on the Great Western railway. The parish, which is of small extent, is intersected by the Great Western railway, and is wholly agricultural. The appropriate tithes, belonging to the Dean of Salisbury, have been commuted for a rent-charge of £275. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £200, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. James, has an embattled tower containing two bells. The nave and tower were erected in 1687. The parochial charities produce about £3 per annum. The Independents have a place of worship.

RUSH, a small maritime and post town in the par. of Lusk, bar. of Balrothery, co. Dublin, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 6 miles N.E. of Swords, and 17 N.E. of Dublin, on the line to Drogheda. It is situated on the E. coast, and was a fishing town of some note. It contains a Roman Catholic chapel, a dispensary, police and coast-guard stations, and National schools. The harbour will only admit small craft. The Duke of Ormonde built the pier in the time of James II. Near the town is Kenure Park, the demesne of Sir W. H. Roger Palmer, with ruins of an ancient castle.

RUSHALL, a par. in the hund. of Earsham, co. Norfolk, 3 miles W. of Harleston, and 4 E. of Burton railway station. Scole is its post town. The village, which is of small extent and scattered, is chiefly agricultural. It was formerly a grange to Buckenham Priory. The impropriate tithes belong to the Master and Fellows of Emanuel College, Cambridge. The glebe comprises 15 acres. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £100. The church, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, has a round tower of ancient date. The parochial charities produce about £10 per annum. The Duke of Norfolk is lord of the manor.

RUSHALL, a par. in the S. div. of the hund. of Offlow, co. Stafford, 1 mile N.E. of Walsall. It is a station on the South Staffordshire section of the London and North-Western railway. The village, which is large, is situated on the road from Walsall to Lichfield, and the Wyrley and Essington canal passes through the parish. The surface is undulating, and in parts hilly. The substratum abounds in limestone and ironstone, both of which are extensively worked. The inhabitants are chiefly miners and colliers. The glebe comprises about 80 acres, valued at £150 per annum. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £300. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, was rebuilt in 1444, and recently repaired. It contains a piscina, an old cross, and several monuments to the Leigh family, of whom was Edward Leigh, author of "Critica Sacra." There is a National school.

RUSHALL, a par. in the hund. of Swanborough, co. Wilts, 3 miles S.W. of Pewsey, and 9 N.W. of Ludgershall. The village, which is small, and chiefly agricultural, is situated on the river Avon. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Salisbury, val. £400, in the patron. of the Warden and Fellows of Merton College, Oxford. The Baptists have a place of worship. There is a school, partly supported by subscriptions. The principal residence is the Hall, belonging to Sir E. Poore, Bart., of Cufnalls.

RUSHBROOKE, a par. in the hund. of Thedwestry, co. Suffolk, 3 miles S.E. of Bury St. Edmund's, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the E. side of the river Lark. The manor formerly belonged to the Abbey of Bury, and came to the Jermyns, of whom Henry, Charles II.'s lord chamberlain, married Queen Henrietta Maria. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £260. The living is a rect. annexed to that of Bradfield, in the dioc. of Ely. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is an ancient edifice, with a square tower containing three bells. The interior of the church contains a brass of T. Badby, which bears date 1583; also tombs of the Jermyns, and tablets of the Davers and Moyle families. Over the communion table is a stained window. The charities comprise Daver's almshouses, and Lord Jermyn's almshouses, built in 1700. There are besides several male charities. Rushbrooke Hall is an ancient moated quadrangular pile, built at different periods, the E. wing being of King John's time, and the W. wing of Elizabeth's, who was entertained here by the Jermyns in 1578. It is situated in a well-wooded park. It is a meet for the Suffolk hounds.

RUSHBURY, a par. in the upper div. of the hund. of Munslow, co. Salop, 4½ miles E. of Church-Stretton, its post town. It comprises the tnshps. of East Wall, Gretton, Stone Acton, Wilderhope, and Wall, or Etocetum. It is presumed to be the site of the Roman station Bravinium, situated between Old Radnor and Worcester, on Watling and Ryknield Streets. The village is situated on Eaton Brook, under Wenlock Edge, and is chiefly agricultural. Rushbury was formerly a market town, under grant from Edward I. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £449, in the patron. of the Bishop of Worcester. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient structure, with a tower containing five bells. It was thoroughly restored in 1855. The parochial charities produce about £21 per annum. There is a parochial school for both sexes. The Rev. H. T. Pelham is lord of the manor.

RUSHCLIFFE, NORTH, a wap. in the co. of Nottingham, contains the pars. of Barton, Bradmore, Bunny, Clifton, Edwalton, Keyworth, Ratcliffe-on-Soar, Ruddington, Stanton-on-the-Wolds, Thurmpton, Wilford, and parts of West Bridgford and Plumtree, comprising an area of 19,230 acres.

RUSHCLIFFE, SOUTH, a wap. in the co. of Nottingham, contains the pars. of Kingston, Normanton, and Stanfold-on-Soar, Costock, Gotham, East and West Leake, Rempstone, Sutton Bonnington, Thorpe-Bochart, Widmer Pool, Willoughby, and Wysall, comprising an area of 22,340 acres.

RUSHDEN, a par. in the hund. of Odsey, co. Hertford, 4½ miles N.W. of Buntingford, its post town, and 5 S.E. of Baldock. The village, which is of small extent, is chiefly agricultural. Three parts of the land are arable, and the remainder meadow and pasture, with 127 acres of woodland. The impropriate tithes belong to the Dean and Chapter of Lincoln. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £141, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Lincoln. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure, with a square tower, containing five bells. It contains a monument to Sir Adolph Meetkerke, removed in 1754 from the church of St. Botolph, Aldersgate. The register dates from 1560. A. Meetkerke, Esq., is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

RUSHDEN, a par. in the hund. of Higham-Ferrers, co. Northampton, 1½ mile S. of Higham-Ferrers, its post town. It is an extensive parish, and its staple trade is the manufacture of boots and shoes for the neighbouring towns of Higham-Ferrers and Wellingborough. Rushden is mentioned in Domesday Book, and was a seat of the Dukes of Lancaster. A considerable trade is carried on in coal, timber, and corn, by means of the river Nene, which flows through the parish. The substratum contains blue limestone, which is quarried for building purposes. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment, under an Enclosure Act in 1778, and the glebe contains 400 acres of inferior land. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £350, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, was formerly collegiate. It is a cruciform structure, with a tower, surmounted by a crocketed spire over 190 feet in height, and containing six bells. The interior of the church contains three early English stalls, and various monuments and tombs of the Pemberton, Ekins, Fletcher, and Williams families. The parochial charities produce about £26 per annum. There are places of worship for the General and Particular Baptists and Wesleyans. Rushden Hall is the principal residence.

RUSHEN. See KIRK-CHRIST-RUSHEN, Isle of Man.

RUSHFORD WITH SNAREHILL, a par. partly in the hund. of Guiltcross, co. Norfolk, and partly in that of Blackburn, co. Suffolk, 3½ miles S.E. of Thetford, its post town, and 7 from East Harling. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the Little Ouse, which here separates the cos. of Norfolk and Suffolk. It formerly had a college, founded by Sir Edmund de Gonville in 1342, for a master and five priests. Its revenue at the Dissolution was valued at £85 15*s.* per annum, when it was given to the Howards. The par. includes the hmlts. of Snarehill and Schadwell, with the mansion of Schadwell Park, the seat of the Buxton family. In the grounds of this mansion is St. Chad's Well, anciently much frequented by pilgrims on their route to the shrine of Our Lady of Walsingham. The living is a don. cur., and forms an exempt jurisdiction. The church, dedicated to St. John the Evangelist, is believed to have been the conventual church, and was originally a cruciform structure, of which only the tower and nave are remaining. At Schadwell Roman sepulchral urns have been found, and at Snarehill are tumuli, which mark the spot where a battle was fought between Edmund King of East Anglia, and the Danes, in 871.

RUSHHALL, a seat in Queen's County, Ireland, near Castleton. It is situated near a bog of the same name.

RUSHLEY, a hmlt. in the par. of Ilam, co. Stafford, 9 miles N.E. of Cheadle, on the river Manifold.

RUSHMERE, a par. in the hund. of Carlford and borough of Ipswich, co. Suffolk, 2 miles N.E. of Ipswich, its post town and railway station, and 6 S.W. of Woodbridge. The parish is partly within the liberties of the borough of Ipswich. The impropriate tithes belong to the Marquis of Bristol. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £180. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is an ancient edifice, with a tower containing five bells. The register dates from 1582. The Marquis of Bristol is lord of the manor. There is a National school.

RUSHMERE, a par. in the hund. of Mutford, co. Suffolk, 5 miles S.W. of Lowestoft, its post town, and 5½ S.W. of Wangford. The village, which is of small extent, is situated in a sequestered valley. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. Sandpits exist in the neighbourhood. The land is divided between arable and pasture. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £210, and the glebe comprises 7 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £220. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, or to All Saints, is an ancient edifice with a thatched roof and a round tower containing two bells. The church has recently been thoroughly restored. The register dates from 1719. There is a parochial school for both sexes entirely supported by the rector.

RUSHMONDEN, a hund. in the rape of Pevensey, co. Sussex, contains the pars. of Fletching, Little Horsted, and Maresfield, comprising an area of 15,820 acres.

RUSHMOORE, a tnshp. in the par. of Wrockwardine, co. Salop, 3 miles N.W. of Wellington.

RUSHMORE, a hund. in the North Blandford div. of co. Dorset, contains the par. of Winterborne Zelstone comprising about 840 acres.

RUSHMORE LODGE, a seat of Lord Rivers in Cranborne Chase, co. Wilts, near Tollard Royal.

RUSHOCK, a hmlt. in the par. of Kington, hund. of Huntingdon, co. Hereford, 6 miles N.E. of Kington. It is in conjunction with Barton.

RUSHOCK, a par. in the lower div. of the hund. of Halfshire, co. Worcester, 5 miles N. of Droitwich, its post town, and 4 N.W. of Bromsgrove. The village, which is of small extent and wholly agricultural, is situated on the road from Kidderminster to Droitwich. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £280. The church, dedicated to St. John, is a modern structure, with a belfry containing two bells. The parochial charities produce about £12 per annum, which goes to the free school.

RUSHOLME, a tnshp. in the par. of Manchester, hund. of Salford, co. Lancaster, 2 miles S.E. of Manchester, its post town, and 5 from Stockport. The village, which is large, forms a suburb of Manchester, and in the neighbourhood are numerous gentlemen's seats. An Act of Parliament was obtained in 1837 for laying out and maintaining an ornamental park within this and the adjoining townships of Chorlton-upon-Medlock and Moss-side. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Manchester. The church is a modern structure.

RUSHROFT, a hmlt. in the par. of Ainstable, Leath ward, co. Cumberland, 3 miles N.W. of Kirk-Oswald.

RUSHTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Tarporley, first div. of Eddisbury hund. co. Chester, 2 miles N.E. of Tarporley. The village, which is irregularly built, is chiefly agricultural. There are places of worship for Wesleyans respectively at Cotebrook and Eaton.

RUSHTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Wroxeter, co. Salop, 3 miles S.W. of Wellington.

RUSHTON ALL SAINTS AND ST. PETER, a par. in the hund. of Rothwell, co. Northampton, 2 miles N.E. of Rothwell, and 4 miles N.W. of Kettering, its post town. It is a station on the Midland railway. The par. comprises the hmlt. of Pipewell. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the Ise, a branch of the river Nen. It anciently formed two separate parishes. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £674. The church is dedicated to All Saints. The parochial charities produce about £4 per annum. W. W. Hope, Esq., is lord of the manor.

RUSHTON GRANGE, a vil. in the par. of Burslem, N. div. of Pirehill hund. co. Stafford, 2 miles from Burslem. It is mentioned in Domesday Book as Riston.

RUSHTON JAMES, and RUSHTON SPENCER, tnshps. in the par. of Leek, N. div. of Totmonslow hund., co. Stafford, 5 miles N.W. of Leek, its post town, and 7 from Macclesfield by road, or 8½ by the North Staffordshire railway, on which it is a station. The villages, which are of small extent, are situated near the Leek and Macclesfield turnpike road, and at a short distance from the Churnet Valley railway station. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture, and in the spinning of cotton. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £148, in the patron. of the Vicar of Leek. The church, dedicated to St. Lawrence, is of great antiquity, and contains one bell. It is supposed to have been formed prior to Leek, and went by the name of "the chapel in the wilderness." There are various small charities; also a free school for both sexes. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. The manor of Rushton Spencer is in the possession of the freeholders, and that of Rushton James in that of Crawford Antrobus, Esq.

RUSHYFORD, a hmlt. in the par. of St. Andrew Auckland, co. Durham, 5 miles S.E. of Bishop Auckland, and 12 S. of Durham. It is situated near the confluence of the rivers Gaunless and Wear. Petty sessions are held in the village, which has a post-office.

RUSK AND RAM, a sand-bank off Glascarrick Point, co. Wexford, Ireland.

RUSKEY, or ROOSKEY, a post and market town, partly in the par. and bar. of Mohill, co. Leitrim, prov. of Leinster, and partly in the par. of Termonbarry, bar. of Ballintober, co. Roscommon, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 8 miles N.W. of Longford, and 66 N.W. of Dublin. It is situated on the river Shannon, and on the road from Dublin to Sligo. It contains Termonbarry church, a Roman Catholic chapel, and a police station. Petty sessions are held once a fortnight. A nine-arched bridge crosses the Shannon at this point.

RUSKIE, a vil. in the par. of Port-of-Monteith, co. Perth, Scotland, 2 miles from Port-of-Monteith, and 15 N.W. of Stirling, near the Frith of Forth.

RUSKINGTON, a par. in the wap. of Flaxwell, parts of Kesteven, co. Lincoln, 3½ miles N.E. of Sleaford, its post town, and 2 from the Sleaford canal. The village is situated on the old road from Sleaford to Lincoln, and is intersected by a stream of pure water. The Sleaford canal bounds the parish on the S.E. The tithes were commuted for land on the enclosure of the parish, the rectorial glebe comprising 247 acres, and the vicarial 66 acres. The living consists of two medieties, viz. a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Lincoln, the former val. £300, the latter £102. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient edifice, with a low tower rebuilt in 1620. The register dates from 1686. The parochial charities produce about £46, which goes to Hodgson's school and almshouses. There are a National school and a place of worship for the Wesleyans. The Earl of Winchilsea is lord of the manor.

RUSLAND, a chplry. in the par. of Colton, hund. of Lonsdale, co. Lancaster, 7 miles N.E. of Ulverstone. It is situated in the neighbourhood of Windermere, on the river Leven. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £64, in the patron. of the Incumbent of Colton. The church, dedicated to St. Paul, was built in 1745.

RUSLEY, an island in the par. of Great Wakering, co. Essex, 5 miles S.E. of Rochford. It is situated in the Thames, near the Essex shore.

RUSPER, a par. in the hund. of Singlecross, rape of Bramber, co. Sussex, 5 miles N.E. of Horsham, its post town, and 3 N.W. of Faygate station on the Mid-Sussex railway. It had in Richard I.'s time a Black nunnery founded by Gervaise, of Canterbury, and refounded by William de Braose in 1231. Its revenue at the Dissolution was valued at £40. The inhabitants of the village, which is considerable, are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The surface is varied with hill and dale, and is well wooded. The soil consists of a strong clay. The parish borders on the county of Surrey on the N. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £202. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has an embattled tower containing six bells. The interior of the church contains a brass of J. de Kyggesfolde, bearing date 1380, and several monuments. The body of the church was re-erected in 1855. The register dates from 1560. The parochial charities produce about £16 per annum, which goes to the repairs of highways. There is a small school.

RUSSAGH, a par. in the bar. of Moygoish, co. Westmeath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4½ miles S.E. of Edgeworthstown. Rathowen is its post town. The surface lies along the N. bank of the river Inny. The soil is good, but there is a great deal of bog. Lough Gar is within the limits. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ardagh, val. with Rathaspick, £200. The church has long been in ruins. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Rathaspick. There is a school.

RUSSBOROUGH, a demesne of the Earl of Milltown, co. Wicklow, Ireland, near Blessington.

RUSSELL, GREAT and LITTLE, two channels leading to St. Peter's Port, Isle of Guernsey, Channel Islands. The former lies between Herm and Sercq, and the latter between Herm and Guernsey.

RUSSELLS, a hmlt. in the par. of Danbury, co. Essex, 1 mile E. of Danbury.

RUSTINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Poling, rape of Arundel, co. Sussex, 1½ mile N.E. of Little Hampton, its post town, 7 miles from Worthing, and half a mile from Angmering railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated near the coast of the English Channel. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agricultural pursuits. The soil is generally a rich loam, and the land well cultivated. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £390, and the vicarial for £127, and the glebe contains nearly an acre. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £159, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, is an ancient structure, and has recently undergone restoration. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes, erected in 1860. W. G. K. Gratwicke, Esq., is lord of the manor.

RUSTON, a vil. in the par. of Wykeham, North Riding co. York, 5 miles S.W. of Scarborough.

RUSTON, EAST, a par. in the hund. of Happing, co. Norfolk, 3 miles N. of Stalham, its post town, and 6 E. of North Walsham. The village, which is considerable, is included within the Tunstead and Happing corporation. About a third of the land is marsh, and the remainder principally arable. The great tithes belonging to the Dean and Canons of Windsor have been commuted for a rent-charge of £940, and the glebe comprises 6½ acres. The living is a vic. annexed to the rect. of Ridlington, in the dioc. of Norwich. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure with a square embattled tower. There is a National school for boys and girls. Professor Porson was born here in 1759.

RUSTON PARVA, or LITTLE RUSTON, a par. in the wap. of Dickering, East Riding co. York, 4 miles N.E. of Driffield, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated in a valley, and is wholly agricultural. Limestone is abundant, and great quantities are annually burnt into lime for the supply of the adjacent district. The tithes were commuted for land in 1801. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of York, val. £51. The church, dedicated to All Saints, has a bell turret containing two bells. The church was rebuilt in 1832. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. W. H. Quinton, Esq., is lord of the manor.

RUSTON, SOUTH, or RUSTON SCO, a par. in the hund. of Tunstead, co. Norfolk, 2 miles from Collishall, its post town, and 5½ S. of North Walsham. The village, which is inconsiderable, is wholly agricultural. This parish forms part of the Tunstead and Happing corporation. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £135, and the vicarial for £52 10*s*. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic.* of Tunstead, in the dioc. of Norwich. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is an ancient edifice with a tower, now in ruins, and mantled with ivy. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum.

RUSWARP, a tnshp. in the par. of Whitby, lib. of Whitby-Strand, North Riding co. York, 1½ mile S. of Whitby. It is a station on the North-Eastern railway. The village, which is considerable, is situated on the river Esk, here spanned by a suspension bridge, the expense of which was defrayed by the late Colonel Wilson. The tnshp. comprises the hmlt. of Stakesby. There are two Lancasterian schools, partly supported by subscription.

RUTCHESTER. See RUDCHESTER.

RUTHALL, a hmlt. in the par. of Prior's-Ditton, hund. of Munslow, co. Salop, 7 miles S. of Wenlock, and 8 S.W. of Bridgnorth. It is in conjunction with Ashfield to form a tnshp.

RUTHERFORD, a vil. in the par. of Maxton, district of Melrose, co. Roxburgh, Scotland, 6 miles S.E. of Melrose. It is a station on the Kelso branch of the North British railway. It is situated near the river Tweed, and was once an independent parish. There was formerly a hospital, dedicated to St. Mary Magdalene, which was given by Robert III., in 1396, to the Abbey of Jedburgh.

RUTHERGLEN, pronounced Ruglen, a par., post town, and royal burgh in the lower ward of co. Lanark, Scotland, 2 miles S.E. of Glasgow. It has a station on the Clydesdale Junction branch of the Caledonian railway. It was anciently a place of much more importance than at present, and once excelled Glasgow in population and commerce. It was made a royal burgh by David I. in 1126, and received new charters from five several kings of Scotland. Its bounds were rectified in 1226, so as to exclude the whole of the city of Glasgow, which had previously been partly included within its limits. The old castle was demolished by the Regent Murray after the battle of Langside, and the town gradually declined as the neighbouring city of Glasgow grew in prosperity. The parish, which extends in length about 3 miles, with a breadth of 1½ mile, is bounded by Renfrewshire, and by the river Clyde, separating it from the pars. of Barony of Glasgow, Cambuslang, Carmunnock, and Govan. The surface near the bank of the Clyde is low and very fertile, but as it recedes inland it is diversified by hill and dale, and terminates at the skirts of the Cathkin hills. The substratum abounds in coal, iron stone and good building-stone, all of which are extensively worked. The soil is of various qualities, but is highly cultivated, and nearly all arable or gardens. The parish is connected by a bridge with the Barrowfield suburb of Glasgow, and is traversed by the Clydesdale Junction branch of the Caledonian railway, and by the S. road from Glasgow to Hamilton. The town stands near the bank of the river, from which it is separated only by the Green, a low rich tract of burgh land. It consists chiefly of one long and wide, but irregularly-built, street crossed at right angles by a number of wynds or alleys, diverging to the N. and S. The houses are generally plain two-storied buildings, intermixed with low thatched cottages. It contains a court-house and gaol, a branch of the City of Glasgow Bank Insurance Office, public library, gas works, cotton mill, dyé works, chemical works, and print works. In 1851 the population was 7,954, and in 1861 8,474, inhabiting 675 houses. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the neighbouring collieries and iron works, and as hand-loom weavers for the manufacturers of Glasgow. The Rutherglen ploughs were invented by Lady Stewart of Coltness, and first manufactured here. The town is governed under the new Municipal Reform Act by a provost, 2 bailies, a treasurer, dean of guild, and 13 councillors. The corporation revenue is about £1,000, and the corporate income from the burgh property about £450. Its municipal boundaries are more extensive than its parliamentary. The municipal constituency in 1856 was 176, and the parliamentary 193. It unites with Dumbarton, Renfrew, Port-Glasgow, and Kilmarnock in returning one member to parliament. Rutherglen gave title of earl to the Queensberrys. The par. was anciently a vic. of the Abbey of Paisley. It is now in the presb. of Glasgow and synod of Glasgow and Ayr, and in the patron. of the town council and feuars. The minister has a stipend of £307, with 5 acres of glebe. The parish church stands near the centre of the town at a little distance from the steeple of the old church, where the treaty was made in 1297 with Edward I., when Sir John Monteith agreed with the English to betray Wallace. There is a so a chapel-of-ease called West church, at present unoccupied, also a Free church, United Presbyterian church, and a Roman Catholic chapel. Fairs are held on the first Friday after 11th March, Friday after 4th May, called the Beltane fair, Tuesday after 4th June, Friday after 25th July, Friday after 25th August, Wednesday before the first Friday in November, Friday after 25th November, and on the Friday after 25th December, chiefly for the sale of horses and cattle.

RUTHIN, a hund. in the co. of Denbigh, contains the pars. of Clocaenog, Derwen, Efenechtyd, Gyffylliog, Llanbedr Dyffryn Clwyd, Llanfair-Dyffryn-Clwyd, Llandyrnog, Llanelidan, Llanfwrog, Llanganhafal, Llan gwyfan, Llanrhydd, Llanychan, Llanynys, Ruthin, and parts of Bodfary and Nannerch. It was formerly a lordship of the Greys, and is now held by the Myddletons.

RUTHIN, or RHUTHYN, a par. assize, sessions, and market town, and parliamentary and municipal borough, in the hund. of Ruthin, co. Denbigh, 7 miles S.E. of Denbigh, and 13 N.W. of Llangollen. It is a station on the Vale of Clwydd and Denbigh, Ruthin, and Corwen railway. The town, which consists chiefly of one long street, running E. and W., is built on a hill in the most fertile part of the Vale of Clwydd, and on the river of that name, over which is a bridge. It is said to have derived its name from the red castle, in Welsh "rhudd-ddinn," built here in 1281 by Reginald

Grey of Ruthin, which subsequently became the head of a barony, and was stormed in 1400 by Owain Glyndwr, who burnt the town. Ruthin was incorporated by charter of 23 Henry VII., and was given by Henry VIII. to his natural son Henry Fitzroy, and by Queen Elizabeth to the Dudleys. The castle was finally taken by General Mytton in 1646, and dismantled by order of parliament. The principal public buildings, besides the castle now in ruins, are the county court-house, a house of correction, built from designs by Turner; the town-hall, erected in 1663 near the Maen Huail stone, where tradition relates that King Arthur beheaded Huail; a commercial bank, savings-bank, Union poorhouse, and the old Whitefriars Mill. The population of the parish of Ruthin in 1861 was 1,299, but of the borough 3,372, the latter including parts of the adjoining parishes of Llanfwrog, Llanrhydd, and Llanynys. Under the new Municipal Act, it is governed by a mayor, 4 aldermen, and 12 town councillors, the legal style being "the aldermen and burgesses of the borough of Ruthin." The revenue of the borough, arising chiefly from rents, tolls, and dues, amounts to about £150. It is contributory to Denbigh in returning one member to parliament, and is also a polling-place for the county elections. The prosperity of the town now depends chiefly on agriculture and the general trade, flax weaving and spinning having long since been superseded by the trade in Irish linens; a few hands are also engaged in a barytes factory. The assizes for the county are held here, also quarter-sessions alternately with Denbigh. The Ruthin lordship court, established in 1284, is held by adjournment on every alternate Saturday, but suits are now rarely instituted in this court. The Ruthin Poor-law Union comprehends 21 parishes or places. It is also the seat of new County Court and superintendent registry districts. This place gave title of Baroness Grey de "Ruthyn" to Barbara Yelverton, of Efford. The principal seats in the vicinity are Ruthin Castle, of the Honourable F. West, in the grounds of which are the old walls and corner towers of the ancient fortress; Pool Park, of Lord Bagot; and Bathafern, formerly of the Thelwalls. There is a racecourse on the northern side of the town. The living is a rect.* with that of Llanrhydd annexed, val. £450, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Westminster. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, once belonged to the White Friary, and was made collegiate by John de Grey, in 1310. It is a venerable structure with an oaken roof, and contains an ancient brass of E. Goodman bearing date 1583. Adjoining it is a ruined cloister, now converted into the warden's house. The Independents, Wesleyan and Calvinistic Methodists, Baptists, and Society of Friends have each a place of worship. There is a free grammar school, founded in 1595 by Dean Gabriel Woodman, which has an income from endowment of about £300, besides six exhibitions to the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge. Many eminent men, including Archbishop Williams, Bishop Wynne, Deans Tucker and Cotton, Lord Kenyon and Davies, the Welsh lexicographer, were educated at this school. The parochial charities produce about £1,130, including the endowment of the above school, and the income of Christ's Hospital, another foundation of Dean Goodman's, for a warden and 12 poor persons. There are besides National, infant, denominational, and 5 daily schools. Market day is on Monday. Fairs are held on the Monday following 12th January, Friday before Whit-Sunday, and on the 19th March, 8th August, 30th September, and 10th November.

RUTHRIESTON, a station on the Aboyne section of the Deeside railway, 2 miles from Aberdeen.

RUTHVEN or RIVEN, a par. in the district and co. of Forfar, Scotland, 3 miles E. of Alyth, and 10 W. of Forfar. The par. contains the vils. of Bridgend, Balbirnie, Barberswells, and Whines. It extends in length about 2 miles by about the same in breadth, and is bounded by Perthshire and the parish of Airlie. It is situated on the N. side of the vale of Strathmore, near the foot of the Grampian mountains. The surface is moderately even, and on the N. side of Strathmore takes a gentle southerly slope. It is watered by the river Isla, which flows partly through the interior, and partly on the northern boundary. The soil, which is a light brown mould on a gravelly subsoil, is fertile and well cultivated, especially in wet seasons. In various parts of the parish, stone, shell, marl, and peat, abound; and there are mineral springs. The parish is traversed by the road from Kerrumuir to Blairgowrie. Agriculture has recently been much improved. The village is situated on the western bank of the river Isla, and within easy access of the Scottish Midland railway. On the banks of the Isla are flour and other mills. In the vicinity are some Druidical stones and kistavens; also the ruins of Castledyke fort, and a cairn on the moor. Isla-Bank, or, as it is often called, Ruthven House, is situated near the site of the Crawfords' and Ogilvies' old castle, which, being ruinous, was pulled down at the commencement of the present century. This par. is in the presb. of Meigle and synod of Angus and Mearns, and in the patron. of the crown. The stipend of the minister is about £160. The parish church is situated near Inverquoich. The minister is titular of the tithes by a gift in the year 1634, from the Marquis of Hamilton, then proprietor of the abbey lands.

RUTHVEN, an ancient par. in the co. of Aberdeen, Scotland, now joined to Cairnie.

RUTHVEN, a stream of the co. of Perth, Scotland, rises under the Ochil hills, and joins the Earn near Auchterarder.

RUTHVEN, or RUTHVENFIELD, a vil. in the par. of Tibbermore, co. Perth, Scotland, 2½ miles W. of Perth. It is a station on the Perth, Almond Valley, and Methven railway. Its principal attraction is Huntingtower Castle, situated on the southern bank of the Almond, and which formerly belonged to the Ruthvens, or Gowries, who detained James VI. as prisoner here in 1582. This enterprise is usually styled by historians the "Raid of Ruthven," and brought on those concerned the penalties of high treason. After the forfeiture by the last Earl of Gowrie, this castle and the adjoining manor were bestowed by JamesVI. upon the family of Tullibardine, now united, by marriage, to the illustrious family of Athol, in whose possession they still remain. This castle, in which the proud and powerful baron once confined his sovereign as a prisoner, was, at the commencement of the present century, occupied by a colony of calico-printers.

RUTHWELL, or RUTHWALD, anciently RYVAL, a par. and burgh of barony in the district of Annandale, co. Dumfries, Scotland. It contains a vil. of its own name, and that of Clarencefield; also the hmlt. of Brow. It extends in length about 5½ miles from N.W. to S.E., with an extreme breadth of 3 miles, stretching along the northern shore of the Solway Frith. It is bounded by the Solway Frith and by the pars. of Caerlaverock, Mouswald, Dalton, and Cummertrees. The surface is flat, and the soil shallow, but fertile. Peat abounds at Locharmoss, a considerable tract lying westward, and separated from Caerlaveroch by the dreary estuary of Lochar-water. The prevailing rocks are limestone, of which there are extensive quarries near Comlongan. The principal seat is Comlongan Castle, belonging to the Earl of Mansfield, and formerly inhabited by the Murrays, of Cockpool, a family of power and eminence in Annandale, and who were created earls of Annandale by James VI. of Scotland. At the mouth of the river Lochar there is a small port where little coasting vessels deliver coals and grain. The parish is traversed by the road from Dumfries to Annan, and by the great military road from Carlisle to Port-Patrick; also by the line of the Glasgow and South-Western railway, on which it has a station 8¼ miles from Dumfries. The village of Ruthwell is about 6 miles W. of Annan, and 10½ S.E. of Dumfries. It is situated on the Solway Frith, and was rebuilt at the expense of Viscount Stormont about the beginning of the present century. It has a southern exposure, and is much resorted to as a bathing-place.

Near the shore is the Brow well and hamlet where the poet Burns spent several of the last weeks of his life. At an early period salt was manufactured here, which was made exempt from taxes by a grant of James VI. It is a burgh of barony, and is privileged to hold markets and fairs, by a grant in favour of Sir John Murray in 1509. This par. is in the presb. of Annan and synod of Dumfries. The stipend of the minister is about £262. There are a Free church, two parochial schools, and a parochial library; also a grammar school, endowed with 300 merks, Scotch. The Earl of Mansfield is principal landowner.

RUTLAND, an islet near Aran Island, co. Donegal, Ireland, 4 miles N.W. of Dunglow.

RUTLANDSHIRE, an inland co. and the smallest in England, bounded N. by Leicestershire and Lincolnshire, E. by Lincolnshire, S. by Northamptonshire, and W. by Leicestershire. It lies between 51° 31′ and 52° 46′ N. lat., and between 0° 23′ and 0° 49′ W. long. Its extreme length from N.E. to S.W. is nearly 20 miles, and its greatest breadth from N.W. to S.E. is about 16 miles. Its area is 150 square miles, or 95,805 acres, nearly all of which is arable. The population in 1851 was 22,983; in 1861 it was 21,861, occupying 4,641 houses—183 were uninhabited, and 16 were in process of construction. The amount assessed for property tax in 1861 was £160,120; the total amount, according to the poor-law valuation, was £150,012, and the net rateable value was estimated at £135,317. From a historical point of view Rutland is uninteresting. It seems to have formed a portion of the kingdom of the Coritani, and to have been included in the province of Flavia Cæsariensis on the conquest of Britain by the Romans, and a Roman road named Ermine Street was formed across the eastern side of the county: this road may still be traced in a bank about 4 feet high. Other Roman remains are preserved at Great Casterton, where a military station formerly existed on a well-chosen position, guarded on the S. and W. by the river Wash. The county or shire was under the Saxon heptarchy included with the kingdom of Mercia. It is referred to in Domesday Book as Roteland, and was crown land, having been bequeathed by Edward the Confessor to his queen Edith, and on her decease to Westminster Abbey. Under William the Conqueror the lands were divided among his Norman followers, but the tithes remained to the abbey. From this time till the reign of Henry II. it was crown manor, being merged in the adjoining shires of Northampton and Nottingham, and in the reign of John it is first named as a county, and formed part of the dower of his queen Isabel. In 1468, during the wars of the rival Roses, Edward IV. gained a signal victory over the followers of Henry VI., under Sir Robert Wells, at Hornfield, in this county. The flying soldiers threw off their coats that they might more readily escape, and the battle is consequently known as Lose Coat Field. Edward, son of Edmund of Langley, and grandson of Edward III., is the first known Earl of Rutland, though a person is referred to under that title in the reign of Henry I. The race became extinct on the death of the young son of Richard Duke of York, after the battle of Wakefield, in 1460, when he was stabbed by Lord Clifford, who had previously killed his father; but it was revived under Henry VIII. in favour of the family of Roos, and was subsequently conferred on the Manners family. In 1703 it was raised to a dukedom, in which form it still continues.—The general aspect of the county is diversified, abounding in valleys and gently-rising hills. The Vale of Catmose, which occupies the centre of the county, and in which stands the town of Oakham, is the largest and most fertile in Rutland. It forms part of the basin of the river Welland, and extends from the W. to the centre of the county. Towards its eastern limits are slight elevations separated by vales about half-a-mile in breadth. The effect is much improved by the numbers of private residences, which are perhaps more frequent here than in any equal extent of country in England. The principal rivers are the Welland, the Gwash, or Wash, and the Eye. The Welland forms the south-eastern boundary of the county along the Northamptonshire border, and then passes into Lincolnshire. It is not navigable above Stamford in the last-named county. The Gwash, a tributary to the Welland, flows across the centre of Rutland. The Eye, which forms the boundary with Leicestershire on the N., also flows into the Welland at Rockingham. The Oakham canal runs in a winding course N.W. from Oakham, and joins the Melton Mowbray Navigation near Melton Mowbray. It is 15 miles long, of which nearly half belongs to this county. The principal roads are the road from London to Melton Mowbray, passing Uppingham and Oakham, and the great N. road, which runs through the eastern edge of the county. Other roads are numerous, and kept in excellent order. The Rugby and Peterborough line, and a branch of the Midland railway from Syston to Peterborough, pass through the county, and afford easy communication with the rest of the country.—Rutlandshire is included in the district occupied by the lower formation of the oolitic series. The prevailing rock is a close-grained limestone; quarries of good building-stone and of limestone, both hard and soft, are found in many places. A substratum of the lower oolite is found on the N. and E., with a thin soil, which has been much improved by sheep and turnip farming; and in other parts lias prevails, the soil of which is rich clay and loam. In the S. and S.E. districts clay of shallow staple is mostly found on limestone rock, and in other places a strong red loam resting on blue clay. The name of the county is said to have been given in consequence of this reddish colour of the soil, which also seems to indicate the presence of iron ore, as also do several chalybeate springs through the county; but no further traces have yet been discovered. The climate is mild and healthy. The soil is almost universally loamy and suited for agriculture, which is extensively practised on the most improved principles. The W. of the county is chiefly under grass, and the eastern parts are devoted to tillage. In 1836 there were not 30 acres of waste land, and now scarcely an acre is lost. The produce is principally barley, but wheat and oats are also largely grown, and a considerable extent is laid down in permanent pasture. Great attention is paid to the rearing of cattle and sheep, for which last the county is celebrated. The lias clay furnishes the richest pastures, which will produce, in the opinion of some graziers, 40 to 50 stone of meat per acre in each year. The low meadow lands through which the Welland and Gwash flow are liable to floods, which considerably increase their fertility. The sheep most approved of are of the improved Leicester breed, but some graziers prefer South Downs. The cattle are almost exclusively short horns, but North Devons, Hereford, and Scotch breeds are also met with. Horses are for the most part large and strong, the Suffolk punches being much liked; and the hogs fattened for market are mostly of the Suffolk and Berkshire breeds. Dairies are not numerous; butter is prepared for the London market. Large quantities of cheese are made and sold as Stilton. The farms are generally small and held from year to year, and farm buildings, though old fashioned, are neat and substantial. The manufactures are small and unimportant; a considerable trade is done in corn and coals. Of the population over twenty years of age in 1861, 381, or 3 per cent., belonged to the liberal professions; 5,091, or 39·7 per cent., were employed in domestic occupations; 183, or 1·4 per cent., were engaged in commerce; 4,334, or 33·9 per cent., in agriculture; 2,211, or 17·3 per cent., at various industrial pursuits, and 599, or 4·7 per cent., were unclassed. Several coppices and tracts of woodlands are scattered through the county, which was formerly distinguished for extensive native woods and plantations; but these are now almost wholly destroyed, and the plantings are generally confined to ornamental copses and demesnes. They still, however, occupy nearly 3,000 acres. Seafield, or Lyfield forest, once occupied the greater part of the soke of Oakham, and Beaumont Chase, adjoining, extended over a considerable portion of Martinsley hundred.—For civil purposes

Rutland is divided into five hundreds—viz. Alstoe, East, Martinsley, soke of Oakham, and Wrangdike, and contains about 61 townships. In the ecclesiastical arrangement it is all in the archdeaconry of Northampton and diocese of Peterborough, and province of Canterbury, except the parishes of Ketton, Empingham, and Liddington, which are prebends, and exempt from episcopal jurisdiction. There are 53 churches, and about 40 Dissenting chapels. The county contains two poor-law unions, Oakham and Uppingham. It has no municipal or parliamentary borough, and returns only two members to serve in parliament, both for the county at large, constituency 1,774 in 1865. The polling is at Oakham, which is the chief town. Rutland belongs to the Midland Circuit, and assizes and quarter sessions are held at Oakham. Petty sessions are held at Empingham, which was once a market town. Markets are held at Oakham and Uppingham. The civil government is entrusted to a lord lieutenant and custos rotulorum, high sheriff, and about 24 deputy-lieutenants and magistrates.—The principal seats in the county are—Normanton Hall, Hon. G. H. Heathcote, M.P.; Exton Hall, or Park, Earl of Gainsborough; Burghley Park, Marquis of Exeter; and Burley House, Finch, Esq. Normanton Hall is about 2 miles from Luffenham station, on the Syston and Peterborough railway. It stands in a well-wooded demesne, and consists of a centre flanked by wings. The grounds about Exton Hall present large specimens of elm, oak, beech, and ash. The house is in the Tudor style. Burghley Park also is well laid out, and abundantly stocked with wood. Burley House belonged in the reign of Elizabeth to the Harringtons, and was subsequently purchased and considerably enlarged by the Duke of Buckingham, who was a staunch royalist, and entertained James I. and Charles I. on many occasions. The parliamentary troops seized it and committed sad ravages, and the place was going to ruin when the Earl of Nottingham purchased it, and erected the present residence in the Doric style of architecture. From him it descended to the present possessor. The antiquities of the county are of little importance. There are some barrows, and the remains of some old castles, of which Oakham is the most interesting; but the antiquities are chiefly ecclesiastical. At Empingham there is a cruciform church of early English and Norman character, in which is a large window of old painted glass, bearing numerous armorial designs; and at Exton is an ancient Gothic church with some old monuments. Essendine, about 4 miles from Oakham, has a small church, partly English and partly Norman, with nave and chancel; an old Norman gateway still remains on the S., and at the western end is a gable for two bells. At Ketton is a cruciform church, with lofty tower and spire, partly in the Norman, but chiefly in the old English style.

RUXLEY, a hund. in the lathe of Sutton-at-Hone, co. Kent, contains the pars. of Bexley, Chelsfield, Chiselhurst, Foot's Cray, North Cray, St. Mary and St. Paul's Cray, Cudham, Downe, Farnborough, Hayes, Keston, Knockholt, Orpington, and West Wickham, comprising an area of 36,321 acres.

RUYTON-OF-THE-ELEVEN-TOWNS, a par. in the lower div. of Oswestry hund., co. Salop, 10 miles N.W. of Shrewsbury, its post town, and 2½ from Baschurch railway station. The parish, which is extensive, is situated on the river Perry, and on the N.E. side of the road from Shrewsbury to Oswestry and Holyhead. A portion of the inhabitants are engaged in agriculture. The par. comprises the tnshps. of Cottan, Eardiston, Shelvock, Shotatton, and Wykey. The soil is principally of a loamy nature upon a subsoil of red sandstone. The village is spacious, and had anciently a weekly market, granted by charter of Edmund Earl of Arundel. There are quarries of good building-stone. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £304, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is an ancient stone structure with a tower. It was restored and enlarged in 1845. There is a partly endowed National school for both sexes. The Independents and Primitive Methodists have each a place of worship. Major Edwards is lord of the manor. Fairs are held on April 2nd and July 5th for live stock.

RYALL, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Stamfordham, N.E. div. of Tindale ward, co. Northumberland, 2 miles N. of West Matfen, and 7 N.W. of Wylam, its nearest railway station, and 9 N.E. of Hexham. The soil is of a clayey and loamy nature, with a subsoil of limestone and freestone. The church is an ancient structure, and was formerly a chapel-of-ease to Stamfordham, but is now in the district of West Matfen.

RYAN, a loch inside Corsill Point, co. Wigtown, Scotland, close to Stranraer. It is supposed to be the Roman Retigonius Sinus, and is about 9 miles long by 2 broad, and has a lighthouse at Cairn Ryan Point with a fixed light visible for ten miles at sea.

RYARSH, a par. in the hund. of Larkfield, lathe of Aylesford, co. Kent, 7 miles N.W. of Maidstone, its post town, and 2 N.W. of Malling. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. The par. includes the hmlt. of Aldon. The land is partly in hop grounds. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £294. The church, dedicated to St. Martin, is an ancient edifice with a tower. The register dates from the first year of Elizabeth's reign.

RYBURGH, GREAT, a par. in the hund. of Gallow, co. Norfolk, 4 miles S.E. of Fakenham, its post town. It is a station on the Wells branch of the Great Eastern railway. The village, which is considerable, is situated on the river Wensum, which here flows between steep and thickly wooded acclivities. About three parts of the lands are arable, and the remainder meadow, pasture, and woodland. The tithes were commuted for 270 acres of land under an Enclosure Act in 1808. The living is a rect.* with the vic. of Little Ryburgh annexed, in the dioc. of Norwich, joint val. £569. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is an ancient edifice with a tower, circular in the lower part, but octagonal above. It contains a stained E. window, and the altar-tomb of Sir Robert Bacon and his lady. The parochial charities produce about £20 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes. The trustees of John Morse, Esq., are lords of the manor. The principal residence is Sennow Lodge, situated on an eminence overlooking the river Wensum.

RYBURGH, LITTLE, a par. in the hund. of Gallow, co. Norfolk, 3¾ miles S.E. of Fakenham, its post town, and 1 mile N.E. of Great Ryburgh railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Wensum, which bounds the parish on the W. The land is chiefly arable, with some meadow and pasture. The tithes were commuted for 66 acres of land under an Enclosure Act in 1808. The living is a vic. annexed to the rect.* of Great Ryburgh, in the dioc. of Norwich. The church is in ruins. The parochial charities produce about £6 per annum. The Primitive Methodists have a place of worship.

RYCOTE, a lib. in the par. of Great Haseley, hund. of Ewelme, co. Oxford, 2 miles S.W. of Thame. It was formerly held by the Ricotes, Quatremains, Herons, Williamses, Norrises, and is now the property of the Earl of Abingdon. The principal seat is Rycote Park, where Elizabeth was received as a prisoner by Lord Williams. There is a chapel-of-ease dedicated to St. Michael and All Angels.

RYCROFT, a hmlt. in the chplry. of Tong, West Riding co. York, 4 miles S.E. of Bradford.

RYDAL, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Grasmere, ward of Kendal, co. Westmoreland, 1½ mile N.W. of Ambleside, its post town. It is in conjunction with the hmlt. of Loughrigg to form a tnshp. The village is situated on Rydal water, or Routhmere, which extends a mile in length by about half a mile in breadth. The lake contains some wooded islands of circular form, and abounds in fish. Its waters are supplied by the Ryedale stream, which, rising under Fairfield, or Rydal Head, flows through a romantic country, and its course forms two cascades. At Loughrigg is a tarn extending over 12 acres. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc.

of Carlisle, val. £100. The church, dedicated to St. Mary the Virgin, has a tower surmounted by an octagonal spire and containing one bell. The church was erected and endowed at the expense of Lady Le Fleming in 1825. The same lady founded a school here for children of both sexes. Rydal Hall, Heversham House, Leas Gill House, Plumtree Hall, and Summerlands are the principal residences. Wordsworth resided at Rydal Mount, and died here in 1850.

RYDE, a chplry., post and market town, in the par. of Newchurch, lib. of East Medina, Isle of Wight, co. Hants, 5 miles S.W. of Portsmouth, 7 N.E. of Newport, and 79 S.W. of London. It is situated on the declivity of a hill extending to the shores of the Solent Water, and opposite to Stokes Bay and Portsmouth Harbour. It is a sub-port to Cowes, and is a coastguard station. It was anciently called La Rye, or Ride, and was burnt by the French in 1377. Less than a century back Ryde was but a small fishing village, but within the last 50 years it has rapidly risen into a thriving and prosperous town, and now ranks as one of the most pleasant bathing places on the S. coast. The town is well paved, lighted with gas, and amply provided with excellent water. The principal streets are well laid out and enlivened with numerous shops, especially in Union-street. From its advantageous situation it commands a sea prospect, taking in Spithead and the Motherbank, with a more distant view of Haslar Hospital and the town of Portsmouth. There are several hotels and numerous lodging-houses, also the Victoria arcade, freemasons' hall, literary institute, theatre, assembly rooms, two banks, a savings-bank, market-house, and townhall, which last has a Doric portico, erected in 1830 from designs by J. Sanderson, whose bust by Chantrey is here. On the eastern, southern, and western sides the town is rapidly extending, and there is a newly constructed railway from Ryde to Shanklin. The pier, which is constructed of timber, was opened in 1814, but since that period has undergone considerable improvements. It extends in length about 2,000 feet across the flats, and is from 12 to 20 feet in width, serving as an excellent promenade. There is also an esplanade facing the sea, the carriage way being nearly 1 mile in extent, and the foot-path extending 3 miles to a place called Sea View. There are besides docks and a new iron pier, both of which have recently been erected by the Isle of Wight Steam Ferry and Stokes Bay Railway Company. During the summer season steamboats run to and from Portsmouth every half-hour during the day, and in the winter months between eight and ten times per day. Steamboats also run to Cowes, Southampton, Portsea, and Southsea. On the W. side of the pier stands the Royal Victoria Yacht Club house, the first stone of which was laid in 1846 by the late Prince Consort. The reservoirs for the supply of the town and the shipping with pure spring water, were formed by the pier company in 1840. Soles and lobsters are caught on the coast, and the herring fishery affords employment to many of the poorer residents. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic.* of Newchurch, in the dioc. of Winchester. The church, dedicated to St. Thomas, has a tower surmounted by a light spire. It was erected in 1827 at the expense of G. Player, Esq., of Ryde Hall, to whom the manor of Ashey came through the Dillingtons. There are also St. James's Episcopal chapel, a modern structure, with a campanile turret over the western entrance, and a new church with a spire 146 feet high, dedicated to the Holy Trinity. The charities are numerous, including almshouses, Erected in 1854 at the expense of Mrs. F. Wilder. There are several National, British, and infant schools, also a naval school, and a Roman Catholic school. The Independents, Wesleyans, Primitive Methodists, Baptists, and Roman Catholics have each a place of worship. The neighbourhood is studded with residences mostly surrounded by pleasure gardens; among the principal are West Mount, Appleby, St. John's, St. Clare, Fairy Hill, Quarr Abbey, Wootton Bridge, St. Helen's, and the mansions of the Duke of Buckingham and Earl Spencer. Market days are Tuesday and Friday. A fair is held on the 5th July. A regatta takes place at the latter end of August, or the beginning of September.

RYE, a tythg. in the par. of Odiham, co. Hants, 3 miles E. of Odiham. It is joined with Stapeley to form a tnshp

RYE, a par., cinque port, post and market town, parliamentary and municipal borough, locally in the hunds of Goldspur and Gostrow, rape of Hastings, co. Sussex, but exercising separate jurisdiction, 9 miles N.E. of Hastings, and 63 S.E. of London by road, or 81 by the South-Eastern line of railway. A branch line of railway called the Rye Harbour line has been opened to Hastings chiefly for goods traffic. It is situated near the Military canal and the navigable river Rother, which has been improved by cutting a new channel so as to permit vessels not exceeding 200 tons burden to approach the quay. It is supposed to have been the Roman Portus Novus, and was the place where the Danes landed in 893. At the Norman conquest it was given by Edward the Confessor to Fiscamp Abbey in France, and was first chartered by Richard I. Henry III. annexed it with Winchelsea to the Cinque Ports, and in the reign of Edward III. it was surrounded by a strong wall with several gates, of which that called the North or Land Gate, the only one remaining, now forms an entrance to the town from the London and Dover roads. There are also on the S. side of the town remains of a strong castle or tower, erected in the 12th century by William de Ypres, Earl of Kent, and now forming part of the gaol. About the same period the course of the river Rother was diverted this way through an inundation of the sea, which greatly improved the natural harbour, so that the town soon became so considerable a port that it was able to furnish nine ships towards the royal fleet for the siege of Calais. The town was twice burnt by the French, in 1377 and again in 1447, from which it scarcely recovered till the reign of Elizabeth, who bestowed on it several additional privileges, and was entertained by the corporation in 1573. The trade done is chiefly in corn, coal, timber, hops, oak-bark, and wool, this last being largely exported to France. Ship-building is also extensively carried on, and mackerel in immense quantities are caught here in kettle nets erected on the sea shore near Rye Harbour, during the summer season. The Rye Harbour line of railway, opened in 1851, does immense traffic in coal, which is landed here to be forwarded to Hastings. Extensive works have recently been established by Lee & Sons for the manufacture of concrete blocks, each weighing eight or ten tons, and formed out of shingle and cement, to be used in the construction of the Admiralty pier at Dover. The town, which is ancient, and has many interesting historical reminiscences, consists of several regular and well-formed streets. It is built upon a hill, the sides of which towards the S. and S.W. are rocky and precipitous, but slope down gradually on the land side, beyond which a range of hills rises sheltering the town on the N. and N.W., while the river Rother skirts it on the E., and the united streams of the Brede and Tillingham forming a branch of the Rother on the S.W. It is well paved, lighted with gas, and supplied with water from a reservoir under Playden heights. The townhall and market house is built on pillars in the centre of the town, the upper story being used for the borough sessions, and the area for the market, now fallen into disuse. The other public buildings include the customhouse, a theatre, union poorhouse, three bridges, a theatre, savings-bank, two commercial branch banks, a gaol, police station, gas works, mechanics' institute, and a literary and scientific institution established in 1839. Its government, anciently styled the "mayor, jurats, and commonalty, of the ancient town of Rye," is vested, under the new Municipal Reform Act, in a mayor, four aldermen, and 12 councillors, and a commission of the peace has also been granted, consisting of six magistrates appointed by the crown. The mayor acts as returning officer. The borough revenue is about £1,000. Prior to the Reform Act Rye returned two members to parliament from the reign of Henry III.; it now returns but one for the extended bounds, including Udimore, East Guildeford, Icklesham, Iden, Peasmarsh, Playden, Winchelsea, and part of Brede. The parliamentary borough is the most extensive, containing (in 1861) 8,202 inhabitants, while the municipal borough contains only, 3,738, and the parish of Rye 4,288. Many of the inhabitants are engaged on the coasting trade and the fisheries, and some in lodging-letting, the various improvements made in the town and its approaches, together with the natural advantages of its situation, having latterly caused it to be resorted to as a watering-place.—An embankment has been constructed along the sides of the harbour, the marshes in the neighbourhood, formerly covered by the tide, drained, and a new tidal harbour formed at the mouth of the river to the S.W. of the town, though even this is partially impeded by the accumulation of sand and shingle, which choked the old one. The depth of water in the harbour is about 14 feet, the tide rising from 12 to 17 feet, and beyond is West Bay, with from two to four fathoms. A wooden pier runs out to a considerable distance, and is thence continued by a stone wall stretching out over the flats. There are two lighthouses respectively 36 and 26 feet above sea-level, and visible for about 10 miles. Much of the land in the vicinity of Rye is in hop-grounds.—Rye is a polling-place for East Sussex, and the seat of a Poor-law Union comprising twelve parishes, the union workhouse being situated at Rye Hill, where the board of guardians hold their meetings. It is also the head of superintendent registry and new County Court districts. Petty sessions for the division are held here by the county magistrates on Wednesdays, and the borough justices hold sessions every Monday and Thursday. The living is a vic.* in the dioc of Chichester, val. £410. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient cruciform structure with an embattled tower and a clock on the N. face of it said to be the oldest in England. The interior of the church contains some ancient brasses. The register dates from 1538. The parochial charities produce about £171 per annum, besides two almshouses for widows. There are National schools for both sexes, also Peacock's free grammar school, in which the art of navigation is taught. At the harbour mouth is a church designated the Church of the Holy Spirit, and frequented chiefly by the coast-guard and their families. There are places of worship for the Independents and Baptists.—On the London road are traces of the town walls, also of an Austin friary founded prior to Edward III.'s time, now used as a storehouse. Market days are Wednesdays and Saturdays. A fair is held on the 10th August.

RYE, a river of the co. of York, rises under Wainstone Fell, North Riding, and joins the Derwent at Ryton.

RYEDALE, a wap. in the North Riding co. York, contains the pars. of Appleton-le-Street, Great Edstone, Gilling, Helmsley, Kirkby-Moorside, Kirkdale, Lastingham, New and Old Malton, Normanby, Nunnington, Oswaldkirk, Salton, Scawton, Slingsby, Stonegrave, and parts of Ampleforth and Barton-le-Street, Hovingham, and Sinnington, comprising an area of 121,976 acres. It is situated in the vale of the Rye.

RYE HILL, a hmlt. in the par. of Rothbury, W. div. of Coquetdale ward, co. Northumberland, 2½ miles S.W. of Rothbury. It is joined with the hamlet of Great Tosson to form a tnshp.

RYEHILL, a hmlt. in the par. of Epping, hund. of Waltham, co. Essex, 2½ miles N.W. of Epping.

RYEHILL, an ext. par. place, adjoining the par. of Warden, co. Northumberland, 2 miles N.W. of Hexham.

RYE HOUSE, a hmlt. in the par. of Broxbourne, co. Herts, 2 miles N.E. of Hoddesden, and 3 E. of Hertford. It is a station on the Cambridge section of the Great Eastern railway. It has remains of the ancient seat of the Orgards, built in the reign of Henry VI., and now used as a workhouse. It was here that the pretended plot of 1683 was said to have been formed by Lord William Russell and Algernon Sidney for killing the king, and for which they were both executed.

RYELANDS, a hmlt. in the par. of Leominster, hund. of Wolphy, co. Hereford, 1 mile S.W. of Leominster. It is situated in a valley on the river Lug.

RYEWATER, a stream of the co. of Ayr, Scotland, rises in Largs, and joins the Garnoch, near Dalry.

RYHALL, a par. and tnshp. in the hund. of East, co. Rutland, 2½ miles N.E. of Stamford, its post town, and 93 from London. It is a station on the Stamford and Essendine branch of the Great Northern railway. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on either side of the river Wash, and is wholly agricultural. Ryhall includes the hmlt. of Belmisthorpe, and had the shrine of St. Tibba, the patroness of fowlers. It was once held by Harding the Saxon, and afterwards by Earl Siward, the Spencers, Greys, &c. A large portion of the land is in heath, and the lower grounds are watered by a rivulet, which sometimes overflows the adjacent meadows. The impropriate tithes belong to the Marquis of Exeter. The glebe comprises 164 acres. The living is a vic. with the cur. of Essendine annexed, in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £259. The church, dedicated to St. John the Evangelist, has a spired tower containing five bells. The interior of the church contains some monuments. The church was erected in Henry IV.'s time. The parochial charities, consisting of the interest of £500 in the 3 per cent. consols, are distributed among the poor in coals. There is a National school for both sexes. The ancient manor house is noted for its peculiar cellars. The Marquis of Exeter is lord of the manor.

RYHILL, a tnshp. in the par. of Burstwick, S. div. of Holderness wap., East Riding co. York, 3 miles S.E. of Hedon, and 1 mile S. of Burstwick. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Enclosure Act in 1805. TheWesleyans have a place of worship. It derives its present appellation from the ancient family De Ryell.

RYHILL, a tnshp. in the par. of Wragby, wap. of Staincross, West Riding co. York, 6 miles S.E. of Wakefield, and 3 E. of Wragby church. The township, situated on rising ground, contains part of the reservoir which supplies the Barnsley canal. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. C. Winn, Esq., is lord of the manor.

RYHOPE, an ecclesiastical district and tnshp. in the par. of Bishop Wearmouth, N. div. of Easington ward, co. Durham, 3½ miles S. of Sunderland, its post town, the same distance N. of Seaham harbour. It is a station on the Seaham and Sunderland section of the North-Eastern railway. The tnshp. is situated in the south-eastern part of the parish, and in the heart of a fertile tract of country. The village is a small bathing place situated on Ryhope Bay, on the coast of the German Ocean, and has a smooth sandy beach. It is much frequented during the summer season. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The soil consists of a light loam. There are in the township several collieries, two corn mills, and a limestone quarry. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Durham, val. £400, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Paul. There is a parochial school, also a place of worship for the Wesleyans. The Ecclesiastical Commissioners are lords of the manor.

RYLAND, a hmlt. in the par. of Wilton, wap. of Lawress, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 6 miles N.E. of Lincoln.

RYLE, GREAT and LITTLE, tnshps. in the par. of Whittingham, co. Northumberland, 8 miles N.W. of Alnwick. The estate belongs to the Liddell family. The soil consists of loam, and is remarkably fertile.

RYME-INTRINSICA, a par. in the lib. of Ryme-Intrinsica, Sherborne div. of co. Dorset, 6¼ miles S.W. of Sherborne, its post town, and 5 S. of Yeovil. The village, which is of small extent, is situated in Blackmore, or White Hart Forest, and was formerly a market town, by grant of Edward I., but the market and fair have both been long disused. Here was formerly a royal hunting-seat, the site of which is now called Court

Hill. The low lands are watered by the Rye brook, and are principally in dairy farms. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £170, and the glebe comprises 19 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £200. The church is dedicated to St. Hypolite. The manor belongs to the Duchy of Cornwall.

RYMER, an ext. par. place in the hund. of Blackbourn, co. Suffolk, 5 miles S. of Thetford.

RYSHWORTH, a hmlt. in the tnshp. and par. of Bingley, wap. of Upper Skyrack, West Riding co. York, 2 miles from Bingley, and 32 S.W. of York. It is situated in the valley of the river Aire, near the Leeds and Liverpool canal.

RYSOME, a vil. in the tnshp. of Hollym, East Riding co. York, 2 miles N.E. of Patrington.

RYSTON, or RISTON, a par. in the hund. of Clackclose, co. Norfolk, 1½ mile S.E. of Downham Market, its post town and nearest railway station. About half the land is arable, and the remainder meadow, pasture, and woodland. The soil is of a sandy nature, but tolerably productive. The village is small, and wholly agricultural. The principal residence is Ryston Hall, the seat of E. R. Pratt, Esq., surrounded by a well-wooded park, stretching towards West Dereham. In this park stands Ket's Oak, or the Oak of Reformation, under which Coniers, the chaplain of the rebels under Ket, is said to have preached, and where their court sat to administer justice and regulate disorders. The appropriate tithes, belonging to the Dean and Chapter of Norwich, have been commuted for a rent-charge of £277, and the glebe comprises 13 acres. The living is a perpet. cur. with that of Roxham annexed, joint val. £61, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Norwich. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, after being many years in a ruinous state, has recently been restored. It contains several monuments to the Pratt family. E. Roger Pratt, Esq., is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

RYTHER, a par. and tnshp. in the lower and upper divs. of Barkstone Ash wap., West Riding co. York, 6 miles E. of Tadcaster, its post town, 6 N.W. of Selby, and 3 W. of Ulleskelf railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Wharfe, near its junction with the Ouse, and is wholly agricultural. The soil is of a light and loamy nature. The land is chiefly arable, with some pasture and woodland. The par. comprises the hmlts. of Ozendike and Ledd. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £613 14*s., and the glebe comprises 12 acres. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of York, val. £573, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church is dedicated to All Saints. The register dates from 1558. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. W. S. Morritt, Esq., is lord of the manor.

RYTHIN, a hmlt. in the par. of St. Mary Hill, co. Glamorgan, 4 miles N.W. of Cowbridge.

RYTON, a par. and tnshp. in the W. div. of Chester ward, co. Durham, 7 miles W. of Newcastle, and 8 W. of Gateshead. It is a station on the Newcastle and Carlisle railway. The par., which is situated between the rivers Tyne and Derwent, comprises the tnshps. of Ryton, Crawcrook, and Ryton Woodside. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture, and in the extensive works for the preparation of iron and steel wares. The village is a petty sessions town, and in the neighbourhood are many villas. It was burnt by the Scots in 1297. There are limestone quarries and collieries, and ironstone is worked to some extent. Ryton savings-bank was the first established in England. The soil consists of gravel, but is tolerably fertile. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Durham, val. £956, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to the Holy Cross, is a stone edifice, with a tower surmounted by a lofty spire. The interior of the church contains a carved screen and some ancient oaken stalls. The register dates from 1581. At Winlaton in this parish is also the district church of St. Cuthberts-Stella, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £276. The church was built in 1828. The parochial charities produce about £20 per annum. There is a parochial school for both sexes, conducted on the National system, and endowed with £5 per annum, the bequest of Lord Crewe. The Congregationalists have a place of worship.

RYTON, a par. in the Shiffnal div. of Brimstree hund., co. Salop, 3½ miles S.E. of Shiffnal, its post town, and 3 from the Albrighton station. The village, which is small, is situated on the river Worf, and is chiefly agricultural. It had anciently a market, and gave title of baron to the Cravens, but the market and fair have long been discontinued. The soil is of a sandy nature, with a subsoil of red sandstone. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £445, and the glebe comprises 59 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £545. The church is a stone structure, with a tower containing three bells. The church, which has lately been restored, has an E. window. There is a National school for both sexes. R. H. Cheney, Esq., is lord of the manor.

RYTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Worksop, co. Nottingham, near Worksop.

RYTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Bulkington, co. Warwick, 4 miles S.E. of Nuneaton.

RYTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Kirkby-Misperton, Pickering lythe, North Riding co. York, 7 miles from Pickering, and 3 N.E. of New Malton. The township, which is wholly agricultural, is situated on the river Rye. The soil is a mixture of loam, clay, and sand, with a subsoil of loam and clay. T. Barstow, Esq., is lord of the manor.

RYTON-UPON-DUNSMORE, a par. in the Rugby div. of Knightlow hund., co. Warwick, 4½ miles S.E. of Coventry, its post town, and 2 S.W. of Brandon railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Avon, and is wholly agricultural. A portion of the inhabitants are employed in ribbon-weaving. It is a meet for the North Warwick hounds. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1761. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £113, in the patron. of the Prebend of Ryton, in the cathedral of Lichfield. The church, dedicated to St. Leonard, has a square tower containing three bells. The interior of the church contains several monuments of antiquity. The register dates from 1662. The parochial charities produce about £5 per annum.

RYTON WOODSIDE, a tnshp. in the par. of Ryton, W. div. of Chester ward, co. Durham, 2 miles from Ryton, its post town, and nearest station on the Newcastle and Carlisle railway. The village, which is of small extent, is situated about a mile S. of the turnpike road from Newcastle to Hexham. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The soil consists of clay, and coal is found in some places. There is a place of worship for Wesleyan Reformers; also a school for both sexes. The tnshp. includes the vil. of Greenside.

S.

SAARTAY, an islet in Harris Sound, one of the Western Isles, coast of Scotland.

SABDEN, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Pendleton, par. of Whalley, co. Lancaster, 4 miles N.W. of Burnley, and 3 S.E. of Clitheroe. It is situated under Pendle Hill, and contains Sheriff's print-works.

SACKETT'S HILL, a hmlt. in the par. of St. Peter's, Isle of Thanet, co. Kent, 2 miles from Margate.

SACOMB, a par. in the hund. of Broadwater, co. Hertford, 4 miles N.W. of Ware, its post town, and 2 N.E. of Stapleford. It is mentioned in Domesday Book as Sevechampe, and was held by Peter de Valoignes. The manor subsequently came to the Fitzwalters, Babthorpes, Plumptons, Rolts, Caswells, and others. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. The soil is of various qualities, and the land is partly in common. Woodhall Park, the seat of the Smiths, is a modern mansion, situated in a well-wooded park, containing some oak-trees of great age. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £335 15s., and the glebe comprises 12 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £266. The church, dedicated to St. Catherine, or to St. Mary, has a square tower, formerly embattled, containing three bells. It was thoroughly restored in 1856, the expense being defrayed by the late John Abel Smith, Esq., of Woodhall Park. The interior contains two stone stalls, a piscina under trefoil arches, and monuments of the Rolt family. The parochial charities produce about £10 per annum. There is a village school. A. Smith, Esq., is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

SACRISTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Whitton-Gilbert, co. Durham, 3½ miles N.W. of Durham. There is a large colliery.

SADBERGE, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Haughton-le-Skerne, S.W. div. of Stockton ward, co. Durham, 4 miles N.E. of Darlington, its post town, and 7 from Stockton-on-Tees. The village is situated on the great road betwixt Darlington and Stockton, and near the line of the Stockton and Darlington railway. It is now an inconsiderable village, but was once a place of great importance, and the capital of a district or county of the same name, having its sheriff, coroner, and other officers. It was purchased by Bishop Pudsey of Richard I. for £10,000, to be held during his life. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to the rect. of Haughton-le-Skerne, in the dioc. of Durham. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, has a cemetery adjoining. The parochial charities produce about £9 per annum. There is a National school, with a small endowment. The Wesleyans have a place of worship.

SADDEL AND SKIPNESS, a par. in the district of Kintyre, co. Argyle, Scotland. The united parishes extend in length about 25 miles, with an extreme breadth of about 4½ miles. The surface is hilly, but fertile, the greatest altitude being Ben Turk Hill, which rises 2,170 feet above sea-level, and from which there is an extensive prospect. The hills are of easy ascent, and are appropriated to pasturage and sheep walks. The prevailing rocks are mica slate. The soil consists of a fine alluvial earth in the bottom of the glens and near the sea coast, while that of the uplands is light and gravelly. The parish is traversed by a road from one end to the other along the coast. The herring fisheries are prosecuted with great success, and are considered the most productive in Scotland. The only harbours are Carradale, Sunnadale, and Skipness, on the coast, which are convenient for vessels of from 15 to 30 tons. In this parish are the ruins of a Cistercian abbey, founded by Somerled, Lord of Cantyre and the Isles, in 1163, and given to the see of Argyll by James IV.; also the ancient castles of Skipness and Saddell. Upon almost every projecting headland along the coast are the remains of small Danish forts, the most considerable of which is the Aird of Carradale, upon a high, precipitous rock, 240 feet in length. The village of Saddell is about 14 miles N.E. of Campbelltown, and is situated on Kilbrannon Sound, near Glensaddle. It formed part of Killian till 1753. This par. is in the presb. of Kintyre and synod of Argyll. The stipend of the minister is £146. There are two parish churches, nearly 13 miles apart, also two parochial schools. Both the churches have been built since 1753.

SADDINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Gartree, co. Leicester, 6 miles N.W. of Harborough, its post town, and 5 N. of Theddingworth railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on a hill near the Leicester and Northampton section of the Union canal, which here passes through a tunnel 880 yards in length. The canal has a reservoir covering an area of 80 acres, and situated near the S.E. end of the village. The soil is clay alternated with gravel, and the land is chiefly in pasture. A few of the inhabitants are engaged in framework knitting. Fossils exist, also a mineral spring. The tithes were commuted for 230 acres of land, under an Enclosure Act in 1770. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £280. The church, dedicated to St. Helen, has a square embattled tower, containing a clock and five bells, and has recently been repaired. The parochial charities produce about £12 per annum. The Baptists have a place of worship. Mrs. Dorothy Evans is lady of the manor.

SADDLEBACK FELL, a mountain of the co. of Cumberland, 6 miles N.E. of Keswick. It is situated near Scales Tarn, and has an elevation of 2,787 feet above sea-level.

SADDLEWOOD, a tythg. in the par. of Hawkesbury, upper div. of Grumbalds-Ash hund., co. Gloucester, 5 miles S.W. of Tetbury. It is in connection with the hamlets of Killcott and Tresham to form a township.

SADDLEWORTH, a tnshp. in the par. of Rochdale, upper div. of Agbrigg wap., West Riding co. York, 6 miles N.W. of Ashton-under-Lyne, and 12 N.E. of Manchester. It has two stations on the Manchester, Huddersfield, and Leeds section of the London and North-Western railway. The township, which is very extensive, is intersected by the river Tame and the Huddersfield canal, and until recently formed part of the county of Lancaster. It is divided into four parts, designated Friars' Mere to the N.E., Lord's Mere to the S.E., Quick Mere to the W., and Shaw Mere to the S.W., all comprising numerous villages and hamlets. At the time of the Conquest this place was constituted a manor, and belonged in the 12th century to the Stapletons, from whom it was purchased by the Ramsden family, who granted that portion of it since called Friars' Mere to the monks of Roche Abbey, which after the Dissolution was given by Henry VIII. to Arthur Ashton, and ultimately was divided amongst various persons. A large portion of the land is in a barren state, though in the valleys and on the declivities of the hills the land is fertile, affording excellent pasture. The subsoil abounds in coal and freestone for building. The surface is mountainous, interspersed with rich valleys watered by the river Tame and numerous rivulets. The roads through the hills and valleys are excellent, and have been formed upon a graduating level at great expense. The Huddersfield canal, which traverses the township from N. to S., is carried under Stanedge Hill through a tunnel 3 miles in length. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £150, in the patron. of the Vicar of Rochdale. The original church was founded in 1200 by William de Stapleton, who made it subordinate to the mother church of St. Chad, at Rochdale. There are besides district churches at Dobcross, Friars' Mere, Lydgate, and other places. The charities produce about £17 per annum, which goes to the support of three schools. Throughout the whole district woollen, linen, and cotton manufactures are extensively carried on, there being 100 mills turned by water power, besides steam-engines. The inhabitants, numbering, in 1861, 18,631, reside chiefly in large villages and hamlets, as Old Delph, Dobcross, New Delph, Upper Mill, Spring-head, Bagulay, Castleshaw, Deanshaw, Kilgreen, and other places. Many Druidical remains occur in various parts of this district, and formerly a rocking-stone, also Roman and British earthworks at Castleshaw, where the former people had an intermediate post between their stations at Manchester and Almondbury.

SAFFRON HILL, a lib. in the par. of St. Andrew, Holborn div. of Ossulstone hund., co. Middlesex. See LONDON.

SAFFRON WALDEN, a par., market town, and municipal borough in the hund. of Uttlesford, co. Essex, 3 miles N. of Newport, and 40 N.E. of London, or 45 by the new branch railroad from Audley End station on the Great Eastern line. This place, which is situated near the borders of Cambridgeshire on the right bank of the river Cam, or Granta, is supposed to have derived its name from saffron having been formerly grown on the den or hill on which the town now stands, in the midst of a forest or wald. It is of considerable antiquity, having been held at the time of the Domesday Survey by Geoffrey de Magnaville, a friend and companion of William the Conqueror, who as lord of the honour of Walden, which then comprised 118 lordships, built a castle here, part of the ruins of which may still be seen occupying the highest part of the town. The foundations were composed of flint stones and mortar, and were apparently of great strength. This nobleman's grandson Geoffrey founded, in 1136, a Benedictine priory, which was subsequently made an abbey, and at the Dissolution by Henry VIII. had a revenue of more than £406 per annum. It then became the property of Sir Thomas Audley, lord chancellor, to whom the king gave the title of Lord Audley of Walden. The present seat at Audley End was not, however, erected until the reign of James I., when Thomas Howard, Earl of Suffolk, inherited the estate and built the mansion at a cost of little less than £200,000. In 1549 Edward VI. granted a charter of incorporation to Saffron Walden, and under the new Municipal Corporation Act it is now governed by a mayor, four aldermen, and twelve town councillors, with the style of "mayor and aldermen of the town of Saffron Walden."—The town is irregularly built, the houses being of all styles of architecture, and some of great antiquity. There are, however, many buildings of modern date, and the streets are paved and lighted with gas. The population of the borough, which is co-extensive with the parish, was, in 1851, 5,911, but had decreased in 1861 to 5,474. The principal public buildings are the townhall, situated in the market-place, and in which a county court is held monthly; the corn exchange, recently built in the Italian style; a new post-office, savings-bank, two commercial banks, a museum of local antiquities, literary institution, with reading rooms and library attached, and a new cattle market opened in 1834. There are also a bridge over the Slade brook, a cemetery situated about half a mile from the town, and a new hospital built by money left by the late W. G. Gibson, Esq. The chief trade is in malt, which is extensively carried on, and there is an iron foundry. —The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of London, val. £237. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is of the time of Henry VII. It consists of a nave, chancel, tower, and three aisles, with a roof of oak. Leche, one of the first vicars, Lord Chancellor Audley, and Thomas Howard all helped to build the church. In 1831 the tower, which had bold buttresses crowned with crocketed turrets and long plain pinnacles, was surmounted by a belfry with a peal of eight bells, and a spire nearly 200 feet in height, in place of the old wooden belfry and spire. As late as 1860 the present interior fittings were substituted for the old ones, and the church was thoroughly restored. There are monuments to Lord Chancellor Audley, and to two sons of the late Lord Braybrooke, who were killed in the Crimean war. There are also places of worship for Baptists, Independents, Society of Friends, Wesleyans, and Primitive Methodists. Leche's free grammar school was founded in the early part of the 16th century; it has an endowment of £60 a-year, and Sir Thomas Smith, successively Secretary of State to Edward VI. and Queen Elizabeth, was educated here, and caused the school to be raised to a royal foundation, to which twenty-four boys, elected by trustees from the adjacent villages, are now admitted on a payment of 10*s.* entrance, and 15*s.* quarterly each to the head master. There are also infant and National schools. The almshouses for thirty decayed housekeepers of either sex were erected in the place of a former range endowed by Edward VI. The union workhouse was built in 1836, and cost about £8,000. Saffron Walden Union contains 24 parishes and townships, and comprises an area of 63,140 acres. The Maze and the Pell Ditches camp, 730 feet long, are of great antiquity. Saffron Walden gives the title of Baron Howard de Walden to the Ellises. Market day is Saturday. Fairs are held on Mid-Lent Saturday, Monday after 3rd August, and on 1st and 2nd November.

SAGGART, or TASSAGGART, a par. in the bar. of Newcastle, co. Dublin, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 1 mile S.E. of Rathcoole. The surface is mountainous, and is traversed by the road from Dublin to Naas. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Dublin. The old church is in ruins. In the Roman Catholic arrangement the parish gives name to a union. There are a Roman Catholic chapel and a public school. Saggart House, Kingswood, and Ashtree Cottage are the principal residences. The parish is the reputed site of a monastery existing in the 7th century. Fairs are held in October and November.

SAHAM-TONEY, a par. in the hund. of Wayland, co. Norfolk, 1½ mile N.W. of Watton, its post town. The parish, which is of large extent, is situated near the river Wissey. Nearly central of the parish is a mere of 13 acres abounding in fish. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The glebe comprises about 50 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £796, in the patron. of New College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. George, has a lofty tower containing six bells, and a painted window. The church has been improved and restored. The parochial charities produce about £136 per annum, chiefly the rents of 54 acres of land allotted to the poor on the enclosure of waste lands in 1800, besides a bequest of £50, which goes to Goffe's schools and almshouses. There are places of worship for Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists, also a National school built in 1832.

SAIGHTON, a tnshp. in the par. of St. Oswald, lower div. of Broxton hund., co. Chester, 4 miles S.E. of Chester, and 1½ mile S.W. of the Waverton railway station. It is a small agricultural village, situated near the Crewe railway and Nantwich canal.

SAINTBURY, a par. in the upper div. of Kiftsgate hund., co. Gloucester, 2 miles W. of Chipping-Campden, its post town, and 7 from Evesham. The surface is diversified with hills and valleys, and in the latter are some rich meadows. The village, which is of small extent, is chiefly agricultural. It was designated Suineberie, after King Sweyne, who had a camp at Castle Bank, communicating with a larger one upon the summit of the same hill in the adjoining parish of Willersley. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £415. The church is dedicated to St. Nicholas. The parochial charities produce about £6 per annum.

SAINTFIELD, or TONAGHNIEVE, a par. and post town in the bar. of Upper Castlereagh, co. Down, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 9 miles N.W. of Downpatrick, and 78 N.E. of Dublin. It is a station on the Belfast and Downpatrick railway. The town is an improving place, containing a police station, market house, hotel, &c. The linen trade is carried on to some extent. Petty sessions are held here. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Down, val. £240. The church, which stands in the town, is in the early English style. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Killinchy. There are a parochial and several other public schools. Saintfield House is the chief seat. Monday is market day. Fairs are held once a month.

SALCEY-LODGE, an ext. par. place in the pars. of Grafton Regis and Hartwell, hund. of Cleley, co. Northampton, 6 miles S.E. of Northampton. It is the seat of the Duke of Grafton, situated in the honour of Grafton and Salcey Forest, which latter comprises about 1,847 acres in 4 walks. The government of the forest is vested in a warden, deputy-warden, surveyor, two verderers, three yeomen keepers, and a woodward. It contains an oak measuring 47 feet in circumference. The forest, which contains about 1,000 head of deer, has 1,121 acres enclosed for navy timber.

SALCOMBE, a chplry. in the par. of Malborough, hund. of Stanborough, co. Devon, 4 miles S. of Kingsbridge, its post town. It is situated on an arm of the sea, at the western side of the entrance to Kingsbridge Harbour, and is a sub-port to Dartmouth. The village has more than trebled itself during the last half century, and has water sufficient for the anchorage of vessels of from 60 to 70 tons burthen. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the coasting trade and in shipbuilding. From the mildness of its climate and the salubrity of the air it has been termed the Montpelier of England, and is much resorted to by consumptive patients. In the vicinity are many villas and marine residences. It is celebrated for the manufacture of white ale. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £200. The church was erected in the 14th century, but rebuilt in 1801. There are places of worship for Baptists and Wesleyans. A fair is held on Whit-Monday. There are traces of an ancient castle.

SALCOMBE REGIS, a par. in the hund. of East Budleigh, co. Devon, 2 miles N.E. of Sidmouth, its post town, and 16 S.E. of Exeter railway station. The village is situated on the E. bank of the river Sid, near the coast of the English Channel, which bounds the parish on the S. It includes part of Sid Hill, and is wholly agricultural. It is a coastguard station, and several of the females are employed in lace-making. The surface, which is diversified with hills, is generally elevated table land. The soil is of a sandy and flinty character, upon a subsoil of limestone and Old Red sandstone. The hills afford good pasturage for sheep. Gypsum and lime are worked. The great tithes, belonging to the Dean and Chapter of Exeter, have been commuted for a rent-charge of £135, and the vicarial for £150; the glebe comprises 9 acres. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £143, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Mary, is an ancient stone structure, with an embattled tower surmounted with a circular turret, and containing three bells. There was formerly a chapel-of-ease, dedicated to SS. Clement and Mary Magdalene. There is a parochial school for both sexes. Mrs. Harriet Cornish is lady of the manor.

SALCOTT, a par. in the hund. of Winstree, co. Essex, 9 miles N.E. of Maldon, its post town, and 8 S.W. of Colchester. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the S. bank of the Verley Channel, which is navigable to this place, and near the mouth of the river Blackwater. The land is chiefly of a marshy character, bordering on a creek, which separates this parish from that of Great Wigborough. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £75. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £112. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure, with a square embattled tower. The parochial charities produce about £3 per annum, which goes towards the repairs of the church. A fair is held on 4th September for pedlary.

SALDEN, a hmlt. in the par. of Mursley, hund. of Cottesloe, co. Bucks, 4 miles N.E. of Winslow. It is a meet for the Whaddon Chase hounds.

SALE, a tnshp. and ecclesiastical district in the par. of Aston-upon-Mersey, hund. of Bucklow, co. Chester, 5½ miles S.E. of Manchester, its post town, 3 N.E. of Altrincham, and 2 from Aston. It has a station at Sale Moor, on the Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire railway. It is situated near the Bridgwater canal and river Mersey. The soil is of a rich, sandy character, and very fertile. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Chester, val. £513. The church, dedicated to St. Anne, has a spired tower containing one bell. There is an endowed parochial school for both sexes, also a Sunday-school held at the assembly rooms. The Independents, Wesleyans, Primitive Methodists, and Unitarians have each a place of worship.

SALEBY, a par. in the Wold div. of Calceworth hund., parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 2 miles N.E. of Alford, its post town, and 11 from Louth. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. The par. includes the hmlt. of Thoresthorpe. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Enclosure Act in 1803, and the glebe comprises 230 acres. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £227, in the patron. of the Trustees of Alford Grammar School. The church, dedicated to St. Margaret, has a turret containing two bells. It has lately been rebuilt, and contains an E. window in three compartments. The register dates from 1555. The parochial charities produce about £17 per annum, £6 of which goes to Faulkner's school. A new school-house was erected in 1845. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. The parishioners have the privilege of sending their children to the Alford free grammar school. A barrow exists in the neighbourhood. The Master and Fellows of Sidney Sussex College, Cambridge, are lords of the manor.

SALEEN, a hmlt. in the bar. of Imokilly, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, on Cork Harbour.

SALEEN, a lough in the co. of Mayo, Ireland, near Castlebar.

SALEHURST, a par. in the hund. of Henhurst, rape of Hastings, co. Sussex, 5 miles N. of Battle, and near the Robertsbridge railway station. The village, which is large and of considerable antiquity, is situated on the river Rother, and is chiefly agricultural. The par. comprises the hmlts. of Hurst Green and Robertsbridge, at the former of which petty sessions are held monthly. The land is partly in hop grounds and partly woodland. The surface is elevated, and from some points commands extensive views. The district abounds with iron and sandstone, of which the former was wrought to a considerable extent. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £503. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has a square embattled tower containing eight bells. The register dates from 1575. The church has been recently restored and repaired. The parochial charities produce about £49 per annum, of which £17 goes to Munn's school. There is a National school for both sexes. The Wesleyans and Calvinistic Methodists have each a place of worship.

SALEN, a quoad sacra par. in the pars. of Kilminian and Torosay, co. Argyle, Scotland, in Mull Island. It is in the presb. of Mull, and in the patron. of the crown. The stipend of the minister is £120. The church was erected in 1783 by the government commissioners.

SALENDINE-NOOK, a hmlt. in the chplry. of Lindley and par. of Huddersfield, West Riding co. York, 2 miles N.W. of Huddersfield.

SALESBURY, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. and lower div. of Blackburn hund., co. Lancaster, 4 miles N. of Blackburn, its post town. The village is situated on a branch of the Ribble. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £118, in the patron. of the Vicar of Blackburn. The church is dedicated to St. Peter. Talbot, the antiquary, was born here. In the vicinity are the ruins of a seat of the Salesburys, Clitheroes, Talbots, and other families, who successively held the manor.

SALFORD, a hund. in the co. of Lancaster, contains the pars. of Ashton-under-Lyne, Bolton-le-Moors, Deane, Eccles, Flixton, Middleton, Prestwich-cum-Oldham, and Ratcliffe, with parts of Bury, Manchester, Rochdale, and Wigan, comprising an area of 207,580 acres.

SALFORD, a tnshp., market town, municipal and parliamentary borough, having separate jurisdiction, but locally in the par. of Manchester, hund. of Salford, co. Lancaster, adjoining Manchester, under which article it has already been described. The borough, as distinguished from Manchester, includes the ecclesiastical districts of Christ Church, St. Bartholomew, St. Matthias, St. Philip, St. Simon, St. Stephen, and Holy Trinity, together containing a population of 102,440, according to the census of 1861. See MANCHESTER.

SALFORD, a par. in the hund. of Manshead, co. Bedford, 4 miles N.W. of Woburn, its post town. It is in conjunction with the par. of Holcutt, and is situated on Crawley Brook. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The land is partly in common. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1807. The living is a vic. annexed to the rect.* of Holcutt, in the dioc. of Ely. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, contains monuments, and a stone coffin of great antiquity, also a brass to J. Peddar, bearing date 1505. The parochial charities produce about £40 per annum. The Wesleyans have a chapel.

SALFORD, a par. in the hund. of Chadlington, co. Oxford, 2 miles N.W. of Chipping-Norton, its post town, and 79 from London. The village, which is of small extent, is chiefly agricultural. The land is divided betwixt arable, meadow, pasture, and coppice. In the vicinity are the remains of two old crosses. The surface is hilly, and the soil of various qualities. The substratum abounds with good building stone. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1769. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £251. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient edifice with a tower. The parochial charities consist of the interest of £12, which is distributed to the poor in bread every Easter. The Dissenters have a place of worship. H. Dawkins, Esq., is lord of the manor.

SALFORD, a hmlt. in the par. of Old Radnor, co. Radnor. It is in conjunction with Kinnerton, and is included within the borough of New Radnor.

SALFORD PRIORS, a par. in the Stratford div. of Barlichway hund., co. Warwick, 4 miles N.E. of Evesham, and 5 S.W. of Alcester. The par., which is large, includes, besides the vil. of Priors Salford, the hmlts. of Abbots Salford and Dunnington. It is watered by several streams flowing into the river Avon and its tributary the Arrow, which last is here crossed by a bridge. The surface slopes gradually towards the Avon, along the banks of which are some rich alluvial meadow lands. The soil is generally light, consisting of gravel and marl, but interspersed with patches of stiff clay, upon a substratum of lias rock. There are numerous marl pits, but few are at present used. The village is considerable, and part of the female population not engaged in agriculture are employed in glove-making for houses in Worcester. Orchards are largely cultivated, and a good deal of cider is made. Tradition says that there was anciently a priory, but all traces of it have disappeared. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £111. The church, dedicated to St. Matthew, and situated at the extremity of the parish, is an ancient spacious structure with a square tower 60 feet high, and containing a peal of eight bells. The interior has recently been restored, and contains several ancient monuments of the Woodchurch Clarke family. There was formerly a chapel-of-ease called Woodchurch, near Bevington Wood. At Abbots Salford is a Roman Catholic chapel, and at Dunnington are places of worship for Wesleyans and Baptists. A Benedictine nunnery came here from France during the troubles of the Revolution, but has recently been removed to the neighbourhood of Worcester. There is a free school, founded in 1656 by William Perkins, which has an income from endowment of £50, also a Sunday-school, and a day school for girls at Dunnington. The parochial charities include a bequest of £6 annually, to be given in clothing to six poor men. Part of Ragley Park lies in this parish, which is chiefly the property of the Marquis of Hertford. In a field called the Vineyard, near the church, are ruins of the ancient seat of the Clarkes. There are saline and petrifying springs. At Parkhall farm many fossils have been found belonging to the lias era, and on the banks of the Arrow Roman remains, including pottery, spear-heads, urns, ornaments, and a few coins.

SALHOUSE, a par. in the hund. of Taverham, co. Norfolk, 6 miles N.E. of Norwich. Coltishall is its post town. The village, which is chiefly agricultural, is situated near the navigable river Bure, which bounds the parish on the E. The surface is varied by several large sheets of water. The living is a vic. annexed to that of Wroxham, in the dioc. of Norwich. The church, dedicated to All Saints, has a square embattled tower, and has been restored. The register dates from 1568. The parochial charities produce about £28 per annum. There is a National school. The Baptists have two places of worship, and the Wesleyans one. Salhouse Hall, the principal residence, contains a choice collection of pictures. W. H. Trafford, Esq., is lord of the manor.

SALINE, a par. in the district of Dunfermline, co. Fife, Scotland. It contains a vil. of the same name. It extends in length about 6¼ miles from W. to E., with an extreme breadth of 4½ miles. It is bounded by the cos. of Clackmannan Perth, and Kinross, and by the pars. of Dunfermline and Carnock. The surface of the eastern district rises into a lofty ridge, designated the Saline hills, while that of the western district is level. The elevated parts are in pasture and marsh, while the lower parts are chiefly clay and loam, and in some places very fertile. There are several collieries, and limestone and ironstone works near Rescobie and Lathalmond. The village of Saline is about 5 miles N.W. of Dunfermline, and is within easy access of the Oakley railway station. The village is situated in a hollow near the extremity of the Saline hills, on the river Blackdevon. The high road from Dunfermline to Auchterarder passes through the parish. In the vicinity are ruins of Killerney and Kirkland towers, also of two circular camps and of a military station on Bandrum Hill, where Roman urns have been found. This par. is in the presb. of Dunfermline and synod of Fife, and in the patron. of the crown. The stipend of the minister is £156. The parish church is situated in a commanding position in the village. There is a parochial school, also a non-parochial school. The principal residences are Upper and Nether Kinnedder, Bandrum, Balgonar, Hillside, Grey Craigs, West Saline, Turmygask, and Tullohill.

SALING, GREAT, a par. in the hund. of Hinckford, co. Essex, 6 miles N.W. of Braintree, its post town, and the same distance N.E. of Dunmow. The village, which is small, but of great antiquity, is situated near the Podsbrook or Pondsbrook rivulet, which falls into the river Blackwater. The houses are built round a triangular green comprising about 5 acres. The parish formerly included the adjoining parish of Bardfield, or Little Saling, as it was then termed. The tithes have been commuted for several rent-charges, including one to Guy's Hospital, in London, of £55. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £148. The church, dedicated to St. James, has a tower containing two bells. The register dates from 1715. The church contains monuments to the Yeldham, Goodrich, and Sheddon families. The parochial charities produce about £5 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes.

SALING, LITTLE. See BARDFIELD SALING, co. Essex.

SALISBURY, or NEW SARUM, a city, market town, municipal and parliamentary borough, having separate civil jurisdiction, but locally in the hund. of Underditch, co. Wilts, 82 miles S.W. of London, and 28½ from Winchester. It has stations on the Basingstoke section of the London and South-Western and Salisbury and Warminster branch of the Great Western railways, communicating directly with the metropolis, and another on the Bishopstoke branch of the South-Western, connecting it with the port of Southampton. This city owes its origin to the decline of Old Sarum, which is believed to have been a seat of the Belgæ prior to the Roman invasion of Britain, and was selected by the latter people as a station on the highway to the W., the three roads to Winchester, Silchester, and Dorchester branching off at this point, and probably three others to Bath, Ilchester, and a station on the Kennet; but these last are only traceable in certain localities: numerous coins of the several Roman emperors have also been found within its area. Under the West Saxons it first became the seat of a bishopric, founded by Ina in 704, but for a time resident at Sherborne, in Dorsetshire, whence the see was removed in 905 to Wilton, in Wilts, and afterwards to Old Sarum, or the ancient Salisbury, which William of Malmesbury describes as more properly a castle than a city, being situated on a barren hill, and encompassed with a high wall. In this area the cathedral church was built by Bishops Herman and Osmond, shortly after the Norman conquest; but King Stephen having quarrelled with Bishop Roger, placed a strong garrison in the castle, which was considered a gross violation of the liberties of the church, and the military occupants of which levied contributions on the property of the churchmen. From this dreary spot Bishop Poore, in 1215, obtained license from Pope Honorius to remove his see, and the site for the new cathedral was revealed to the reverend prelate in a vision of the night, in the fertile plain below, "that they might begin at the house of God," observes Camden, "the bishop, in a pleasant meadow, before called Merifield, laid the foundation of the great church, a stately pile of building, the which, with its high steeple and double cross aisles, by its venerable grandeur, strikes its spectators with a sacred joy, and was, in forty-three years' space, finished at a great expense, and dedicated to the Blessed Virgin in 1258, in the presence of King Henry III." This monarch conferred upon the rising town the privileges of a free city, with the same immunities as were enjoyed by the people of Winchester. Old Sarum was speedily deserted, not only by the members of the establishment, but by the greater part of its lay inhabitants, who rebuilt their houses in the vale, under the shadow of the sacred precincts, and modern Salisbury consequently soon increased in extent, and became one of the most flourishing cities in the kingdom. In the succeeding reign of Edward I. Bishop Bridport built the bridge at Harnham, over the Avon, thus diverting the great western road, which formerly passed through Old Sarum, and that place became completely deserted, as it continues at present, the hill on which it stood rising like a desolate mound on the N. side of the present city, with its sides furrowed by deep fosses and stupendous earthern ramparts, now called Old Castle, or Castle Hill, and parochially included within the village of Stratford-sub-Castle. Two parliaments were held here, one by Edward I., to deliberate concerning the rescue of the province of Gascoigne from Philip of France, and the other by Edward III., to which Mortimer, Earl of March, came with his followers in arms, and but for the intervention of the clergy blood would have flowed. In the reign of Richard II. the Lollards assembled here in considerable numbers, and the citizens refusing to assist the bishop in his efforts to suppress their meetings, their charter was temporarily suspended; and in the reign of Richard III., the Duke of Buckingham having been taken prisoner, was brought here and executed without trial. Both James I. and Charles I. confirmed its ancient charters, but no historical event of importance occurred in connection with the city till after the close of the parliamentary war, when, during the interregnum, Colonel Wyndham, with 200 armed men, marched into the town and proclaimed Charles II., but not being joined by the citizens they again dispersed. After the Restoration Charles II. renewed the charters, which were confirmed by Queen Anne, and which served as the governing charters till 1835, when, by the passing of the Municipal Corporations Act the government was vested in a mayor, 6 aldermen, and 18 councillors, with the usual corporate style, and a separate commission of peace. By the same Act the municipal boundaries were made co-extensive with those for parliamentary purposes, and the city was divided into three wards. The city first exercised the elective franchise in the 23rd of Edward I., since which time it has regularly returned two members to parliament. The bounds, which were formerly confined to the city, including the three city parishes, St. Edmund, St. Martin, and St. Thomas, except a small portion of the parish of St. Martin, were enlarged by the Reform Act of 1832, so as to include the liberty of the Close and parts of Milford and Fisherton-Anger parishes. The population of the parliamentary and municipal borough in 1851 was 11,657, and in 1861 12,278. Previous to the Reform Act the franchise was in the corporation, 57 in number, but since then has been enjoyed by the £10 householders and about six freemen, the mayor being the returning officer. Salisbury is a polling-place, and the principal place of election, for the southern division of the county of Wilts. The old tree near Stratford-sub-Castle, the nominal place of election for the decayed borough of Old Sarum, was blown down in a storm a few years after the passing of the Reform Act, but the stump is still visited by the curious.—The city occupies a site at the confluence of the four rivers Avon, Wiley, Nadder, and Bourne. The principal streets are parallel, and crossed at right angles, or nearly so, by others, forming towards the rear of the houses quadrangular "chequers," laid out as courts and gardens, while the river Avon is conducted in a miniature Venetian style through the streets, in bricked channels, formerly open and crossed by miniature bridges; but these canals, as they were locally termed, have recently been covered in, thus destroying the peculiar feature for which the city had long been celebrated. The principal stream of the Avon, also on the W., is crossed by two stone bridges of six arches each, connecting the city with the suburban village of Fisherton-Anger, and on the S. by another connecting it with East Harnham. On the latter ancient bridge of ten arches, built by Bishop Bingham in the year 1244, stood at one time a chapel dedicated to St. John, occupying a small islet near the centre of the bridge, which is thus divided into two parts. Most of the houses are of brick; many of the more ancient are irregular in form and size, and constructed with gable ends of timber and brickwork plastered over, exhibiting curious specimens of ancient domestic architecture. In the centre of the town is the market-place, an open area surrounded by shops and public buildings. The council and sessions house, at the south-eastern corner of the market-place, was rebuilt in 1795, at the expense of the late Earl of Radnor, on the site of the ancient guildhall, which was burnt down. It is of white brick, with rustic stone quoins and cornices, and a Doric portico, also of stone. It contains on one floor two court-rooms, a council-room for the corporation, and numerous other apartments. At the N.W. corner of the market-place is the new corn and wool market-house, connected by a branch line with the railway stations at Fisherton; also, at the S.W. corner of the market-place, forming a small square, a curious old hexagonal building, known as the Poultry Cross, built in the reign of Edward III., and thoroughly restored in 1855. The county gaol and bridewell was erected in 1818, at the cost of £30,000, in the suburb of Fisherton-Anger, where also is situated the infirmary. Other public buildings are the literary and scientific institution, assembly and concert rooms, baths, and several subscription libraries.—The most conspicuous object, however, in Salisbury is its cathedral, considered one of the purest and noblest specimens of the early Gothic or pointed style of architecture extant. It is built in the form of a double cross, with an enriched tower and spire rising from the intersection of the nave and larger transepts to the height of 404 feet from the pavement, being the highest in England, and no less than 70 feet higher than the dome and cross of St. Paul's. It is supported on four slender piers and pointed arches, 80 feet high. Some of these piers are much warped, and it is an evidence of the artistic skill of the architect that, although owing to an original settlement of the foundations, the spire declined 23 inches from the perpendicular towards the S.W., not the slightest variation has since been detected in the course of above two centuries. The western front and buttresses all round are adorned with canopied niches for statues, a few of which alone now remain. The cloisters are the largest and most magnificent of any in the kingdom, and in the nave, choir, and transepts are numerous monuments to the bishops of the see, the Earls of Salisbury and other noble families, including those of Bishops Joceline and Roger—the latter perhaps the earliest specimen of monumental sculpture extant. The E. window is filled with stained glass in memory of the late dean, and in the choir is a painted window designed by Mortimer, and presented by the late Earl of Radnor, representing the Elevation of the Brazen Serpent in the Wilderness. The cathedral has been twice damaged by lightning—the first time it was repaired by Sir Christopher Wren, and more recently by Mr. Wyatt, at an expense of £26,000. The chapels in the transepts have been removed, and their principal ornaments distributed in various parts of the interior. The chapter house has been lately completely renovated as a memorial to Bishop Denison. The close of the cathedral, which is separated from the city on one side by a lofty wall, comprises an area of nearly half a square mile, resembling a spacious meadow, shaded by lofty trees, and besides the cathedral, the bishop's palace, and the residences of the canons, and others connected with the cathedral, contains also the residences of several private families, from one of which sprang the present Earl of Malmesbury's family. Most of these houses environing the close are detached. The palace, which stands near the S.E. corner of the cathedral, is in various and discordant styles of architecture, surrounded by gardens, and having access to the Exeter road by the old bridge over the Avon, which is nearly as old as the cathedral. The three gates which give approach to the close are ancient—that at the southern end communicates with the suburb of Harnham; that at the northern with the High-street, running in a direct line between the old and new cities, and not, as in most towns, forming part of the London road; and that at the eastern end opens out into St. Ann's-street and the Southampton-road. A broad gravelled and shaded mall, crossing the close from N. to S., forms the approach to the great western entrance of the cathedral. The diocese of Salisbury, as modified under the provisions of the Act 6 and 7 William IV., cap. 77, consists of the whole of the counties of Dorset and Wilts. It is divided into the archdeaconries of Sarum, Wilts, and Dorset, the first comprising the deaneries of Amesbury, Chalk, Wilton, and Wylye; the second the deaneries of Avebury, Marlborough, and Pottern; and the third the deaneries of Bridport, Dorchester, Pimperne, Shaftesbury, and Whitchurch. The capitular establishment consists of a bishop, dean, precentor, chancellor, treasurer, 4 canons residentiary, who are also prebendaries, three archdeacons, subdean, succentor, 38 prebendaries, 4 priest vicars, 6 singing men, 8 choristers, organist, and other officers. The dean and chapter, which consists of the 4 residentiary canons, have the patronage of the 4 minor canonries, forming a corporate body of themselves, and of 16 benefices out of the 427 included within this diocese.—In addition to the cathedral, the city contains three parish churches: St. Martin's, St. Edmund's, and St. Thomas's; the livings of the two first are rects., val. respectively £189 and £180, while St. Thomas's, originally erected in 1240 as a chapel-of-ease to the cathedral, is a perpet. cur., val. £140, in the gift of the dean and chapter. St. Martin's church, situated at the south-eastern extremity of the city, is an ancient building, repaired in 1850, with a square tower surmounted by a spire, and containing a peal of six bells. On the N. side of the chancel is a monument to the Swayne family, and a brass bearing date 1632. The register, which is written in Latin up to 1620, commences with the reign of Elizabeth. St. Edmund's church, formerly collegiate, has a square embattled tower surmounted by pinnacles and containing six bells. The tower was rebuilt in 1653, after its fall, by which the nave was injured, and at the same time the nave was entirely pulled down, and the large choir made to serve the purposes of nave and chancel. In 1766 a mean chancel was built to the E. of the choir, which has lately been replaced by one more in harmony with the original building, from designs by G. G. Scott, Esq. It contains a brass bearing date 1586, and the register commences in 1538. The church of St. Thomas has a square tower on the S. side of the S. aisle, containing a peal of eight bells and a set of chimes. The interior is spacious, with an E. window of stained glass representing Christ blessing the Eleven Apostles, and a roof of carved oak. Among the monuments are two kneeling figures and the supposed tomb of the Duke of Buckingham, who was executed here in the reign of Richard III. The register commences in 1570. There are also churches in the suburban districts of Fisherton-Anger, East Harnham, West Harnham, Stratford-under-the-Castle, but these are described under their separate headings or the parishes of which they form part. Two cemeteries have recently been formed, in accordance with the provisions of the Extramural Interment Act: one of 8 acres is situated a mile N.E. of the town, on the London road, and the other, of 2½ acres, on the Devizes road, both having mortuary chapels.—The environs are diversified with villas and mansions, including Wilton House, of the Earl of Pembroke, Longford Castle, of Viscount Folkestone, Trafalgar House, presented by the national gratitude to the illustrious Lord Nelson, and Clarendon Park, the seat of the Bathurst family, in the grounds of which are preserved the ruins of the palace of Henry II., from which the constitutions of Clarendon were issued. The woollen manufacture was formerly extensively carried on, and Salisbury flannel was once in high repute, as were also scissors and ornamental cutlery made here; but these branches of industry have gradually declined. The trade of Salisbury is now limited to the supply of the city and neighbourhood, and a considerable business in agricultural produce of all kinds is done weekly in connection with the various markets and fairs mentioned below.—The county assizes and spring quarter sessions are held here, but the Lent, or winter assize, has latterly been transferred for greater convenience to Devizes. General sessions and a bishop's court of record were formerly granted, but the latter, under the new Municipal Act, has become merged in the borough court, over which the recorder is the presiding officer. Petty sessions are held every Monday, and a court-leet annually on behalf of the bishop, as lord of the manor, when a bailiff and deputy-bailiff are appointed.—Salisbury gives the title of marquis to the family of Cecil. Three newspapers are published in the town, and races are held on the Downs beyond Harnham Hill for two days in August. There are places of worship for Independents, Baptists, Wesleyans, and Primitive Methodists, also a Roman Catholic church in Exeter-street, built in 1851 from a design by Pugin. The charitable and educational establishments are numerous, and many of them well endowed, the gross income derived from the whole being above £5,000, the smaller part of which is under the immediate supervision of the municipal charity trustees appointed in 1837. Some of the principal charities are the College of Matrons, founded by Dr. Seth Ward, Bishop of Salisbury, for the maintenance of ten clergymen's widows of the diocese, and endowed with about £700 per annum; St. Nicholas's Hospital, near Harnham Bridge, founded by Bishop Poore, for a master and 12 brethren and sisters, with an income of £1,200, besides fines; Trinity Hospital, founded in the reign of Richard II. for 12 aged brethren, income about £50. To these may be added Eyre's, Brichet's, Frowd's, Taylor's, and Blechynden's hospitals or almshouses for aged or infirm persons, and Sir Thomas White's charity for loans without interest to poor citizens, in sums of £25 for ten years. The schools include one for the choristers, situated in the close, at which the poet Addison received the rudiments of his education; and a grammar school for the sons of citizens, founded and partially endowed by Queen Elizabeth, which is under the control of the municipal charity trustees. In the close is also a normal training school for female teachers, under the management of the bishop and a committee of clergy and laity. Another school was founded by the Godolphin family for 8 orphan daughters of poor gentlemen, and has an endowment of about £300 per annum. There are besides several Church of England, Wesleyan, and Roman Catholic schools, also central National schools, 8 other public and 25 private day schools, and 8 Sunday-schools, in connection with the various places of worship. A college, formerly of secular canons, adjoining to St. Edmund's church, has been converted into a private residence, and in its grounds numerous antique weapons and accoutrements have been dug up, marking it as the site of a battle between the Danes and Saxons.—Numerous antiquities, including the foundations of the original cathedral, and still earlier Roman remains, are visible on Castle Hill, the site of Old Sarum, where some years since a curious double key, supposed to be that of the church, was found. The neighbourhood abounds with flints, found in the alluvial soil and in the chalk, containing a variety of organic remains of the spongia and alcyonia genera; and some of those found in the gravel appear to have been artificially fractured.—The market days are Tuesday and Saturday, the former chiefly for corn; also a cattle market every other Tuesday. Fairs are held on the Monday prior to the 5th April, and the 22nd October, also a large sheep and cattle fair at the village of Britford on the 12th August; but the pleasure fair formerly held during Whitsun week in the cathedral close has for several years been discontinued.

SALISBURY CRAIGS, a hill adjoining Arthur's Seat, co. Edinburgh, Scotland. It attains an elevation of 575 feet, and commands a view of the city of Edinburgh.

SALISBURY PLAIN, an extensive level tract of unenclosed country running across the county of Wilts, formerly extending into Hampshire on the E., and Dorsetshire on the W., but now much circumscribed, including only the open downs to the S. of Salisbury, and the level plain, or plateau, to the S. of that city, chiefly occupied as sheep walks. In the dreariest part of this plain, about 6 miles N. of Salisbury, stands Stonehenge.

SALISBURY SANDS, a bank at the mouth of the river Dee, co. Chester, 4 miles E. of Point of Ayr. It extends nearly 7 miles in length, but is traversed by a narrow channel called Salisbury Gut.

SALKELD, GREAT, a par. in the ward of Leath, co. Cumberland, 5½ miles N.E. of Penrith, its post town, and 4½ S.E. of Plumpton railway station. The village is situated at the bridge over the river Eden, near Force Mill fall, and is chiefly agricultural. In the vicinity are traces of Dyke and Aikton-Castle camps, the ramparts of which are still 12 feet high, also the pier of an ancient bridge, which was swept away by a great flood in 1360. The soil consists of a light gravel upon a subsoil of gravel and freestone. About two-thirds of the land are arable, and the remainder rough pasture and woodland. There is a mineral spring on the common having chalybeate properties. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £345, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Cuthbert, is an ancient stone structure with an old fortified tower, and dungeon underneath. The churchyard contains several ancient tombs. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes. The Independents and Wesleyans have each a place of worship. Dr. Benson, the Nonconformist, Chief Justice Ellenborough, and other eminent men, were natives of this parish. The Duke of Devonshire is lord of the manor.

SALKELD, LITTLE, a tnshp. in the par. of Addingham, ward of Leath, co. Cumberland, 1 mile E. of Great Salkeld, and 3 miles S. of Kirk-Oswald, near the Druid circle called Long Meg.

SALL, a par. in the hund. of Eynsford, co. Norfolk, 1½ mile N. of Reepham, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated near a branch of the river Wensum, and is wholly agricultural. About two-thirds of the land are arable, and the remainder pasture and woodland. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £560, and the glebe contains 30 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £390, in the patron. of Pembroke College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, is a cruciform structure with a lofty tower, crowned with pinnacles, and containing six bells. The interior contains a carved and painted screen, thirteen stalls, and numerous monuments. The register dates from 1559. The parochial charities produce about £18 per annum. Sall House, the principal residence, is situated in a well-wooded park.

SALLINS, a post-office vil. in the pars. of Osberstown and Bodenstown, bar. of North Naas, co. Kildare, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles N. of Naas. It is a station on the Great Southern and Western railway. It is situated on the Grand canal, and contains a police station. Sallins Lodge is the principal residence.

SALLROCK, a mountain of the co. of Galway, Ireland, at the head of Killery harbour, commanding a view of the coast and the country adjoining.

SALLYBROOK, a vil. in the bar. of Imokilly, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 4 miles N.E. of Cork, on Cork harbour.

SALLY-GAP, a pass in the Wicklow mountains, co. Wicklow, Ireland, 9 miles S.W. of Bray.

SALLYSBURGH, a vil. in the par. of Shotts, co. Lanark, Scotland, 9 miles N.E. of Hamilton, on the S. road from Glasgow to Edinburgh.

SALMONBY, a par. in the hund. of Hill, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 5½ miles N.E. of Horncastle, its post town, and 8 S.W. of Alford. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Steeping, and is wholly agricultural. There is a mineral spring. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £308. The church, dedicated to St. Margaret, is an ancient ivy-mantled edifice with a bell-turret. It is said to have been erected in the reign of Edward III., and contains a piscina. The register dates from 1558. There is a school for the instruction of children of this parish, and that of Tetford, chiefly supported from lands bequeathed by Mr. E. Richardson in 1714.

SALOP. See SHROPSHIRE.

SALPERTON, a par. in the hund. of Bradley, co. Gloucester, 5 miles N.W. of Northleach, its post town, and 9 E. of Cheltenham. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the Cotswold hills, and is chiefly agricultural. The surface is undulating, and the soil shallow, but of a loamy description. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1780. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £107. The church is dedicated to All Saints. There is a day school. Salperton Park is the principal residence. T. B. Browne, Esq., is lord of the manor and chief landowner.

SALT, a bar. in the co. of Kildare, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. It is in two divs., N. and S. The former comprises the pars. of Confey, Donaghmore, Kildrought, Killadoon, Kilmacredock, Laraghbryan, Straffan, Taghadoe, with parts of those of Leixlip and Donaghcumper, and the towns of Maynooth and Celbridge. South Salt contains the pars. of Castledillon, Clonaghlis, Donaghcumper, Forenaghts, Haynestown, Kilteel, Lyons, Oughterard, Slacumny, and part of that of Kill.

SALT, a lough in the co. of Donegal, Ireland, 5 miles W. of Milford. It is near 1 mile in length, by half a mile in breadth, and 205 feet deep. Near its head is Salt-hill, rising about 1,550 feet above sea level.

SALT, a cove in the estuary of the river Ribble, co. Lancaster, 5 miles S.W. of Kirkham.

SALT AND ENSON, a tnshp. in the pars. of SS. Mary and Chad, S. div. of Pirehill hund., co. Stafford, 4 miles N.E. of Stafford. Sandon is its post town. The village is situated on the Grand Trunk canal and the river Trent. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agricultural pursuits. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £110. The church, dedicated to St. James, was erected in 1842 at the expense of the late Earl of Shrewsbury. There is a National school for both sexes, erected in 1857, also at the expense of the earl in commemoration of his eldest daughter, whose death occured at Naples in 1856.

SALTAIRE, a hmlt. in the par. of Bradford, West Riding co. York, 5 miles N.W. of Bradford. It is a station on the Midland railway

SALTASH, or ESSAY, a chplry., market town, and municipal borough in the par. of St. Stephen's, S. div. of East hund., co. Cornwall, 4 miles N.W. of Plymouth, and 20 S.E. of Launceston. It is a station on the junction line connecting the South Devon with the West of Cornwall railway, and has hourly communication with Devonport by steamboat. It was anciently a place of more importance than at present, and in the 14th century the assizes for the county were regularly held in the town. During the civil war in the reign of Charles I. it was fortified for the king, but was alternately possessed by both parties. The town, which belongs to the Duchy of Cornwall, was made a borough by the Valletorts of Trematon under charter of Henry III., and is now governed under a charter of George III. by a mayor, six aldermen, recorder, town clerk, and freemen, with the style of the "council of the borough of Saltash." The mayor is water coroner over all the liberties of the Tamar water, as well as coroner for the town. The property of the oyster fishery to the mouth of the Tamar, except between Candlemas and Easter, with river dues for anchorage, buoyage, and salvage, and a right of ferry, is vested in the corporation. From the reign of Edward VI. it returned two members to parliament till disfranchised by the Reform Act. It contains only about 1,900 inhabitants, but is an improving place, and has recently been greatly enlarged. The town, which consists principally of three narrow streets irregularly formed, is built on a steep rocky acclivity rising abruptly from the western bank of the river Tamar, which is here crossed by a steam ferry bridge free to the inhabitants. The houses in the older part of the town are in general of ancient appearance, but an entirely new town has risen up within the last few years at Port View. The corporation have recently reformed the paving and sewage of the town, which was formerly defective. There are still some extensive malting establishments, for which the place was formerly celebrated, but the chief industries are now connected with the fisheries and the coasting trade. It is also considered as a nursery for seamen for the royal navy. Many of the women are employed in the cockle and mussel fisheries, and are celebrated for their achievements as rowers, having won prizes at many regattas. The principal public buildings are the townhall, called Tamar Hall, built on pillars, and used for assemblies and exhibitions as well as municipal purposes; conduit for the supply of the town with water, and a tubular bridge constructed by Brunel, by which the railway is carried across the Tamar at such an elevation as to allow of the largest ships passing beneath it. There is a mechanics' institute with library attached, but the lectures are held in the townhall. It forms a Poor-law Union of itself, maintaining its own poor. The great tithes belong to the Dean and Canons of Windsor, by whom they are leased to a lay proprietor. The glebe comprises about 4 acres, besides 7 acres belonging to the mother church of St. Stephen's. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £120. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is an ancient structure with a massive tower. The parish church of St. Stephen's is about 1½ mile from Saltash. The Baptists and Wesleyans have each a place of worship. There are National schools for boys and girls, both at Saltash and St. Stephen's, partially endowed. The charities produce about £60 per annum. From Trematon Castle, about a mile from the town, a view is obtained over the surrounding country and the shores of the bay. Market days are Tuesday and Saturday, also quarterly great markets on the Tuesday preceding each quarter day. Fairs are held on 2nd February and 25th July for cattle, and on 26th July for pleasure.

SALTBURN, a vil. in the par. of Rosskeen, co. Ross and Cromarty, 3 miles W. of Inver-Gordon, near the northern shore of the Frith of Cromarty.

SALTBURN-BY-SEA, a hmlt. in the par. of Brotton, lib. of East Langbaurgh, North Riding co. York, 6 miles N.E. of Guisborough. It is situated on the coast, and is the terminus of the Stockton and Darlington section of the North-Eastern railway. It was until recently an insignificant village, wholly inhabited by fishermen, but has considerably improved since the opening of the railway.

SALTBY, a par. in the hund. of Framland, co. Leicester, 9 miles N.E. of Melton-Mowbray, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the Saltway, and is wholly agricultural. The small river Eye rises in this parish. There is also a mineral spring. The living is a vic. consolidated with that of Sproxton, in the dioc. of Peterborough. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient structure, with a square pinnacled tower. Near the church is a cross of great antiquity. The parochial charities produce about £6 per annum. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. The Belvoir hounds meet in this parish. The Duke of Rutland is lord of the manor.

SALTCOATS, a seaport town in the pars. of Ardrossan and Stevenston, co. Ayr, Scotland, 7 miles W. of Irvine, and 1 mile S.E. of Ardrossan. It has a station on the Ardrossan branch of the Glasgow and South-Western railway. It is a sub-port to Irvine, and a bathing place on the Frith of Clyde. It was created a burgh of barony by James II., but having become decayed was refounded in 1684 by Sir R. Cunningham, who also built the harbour. The salt trade is still carried on, but not to its former magnitude. The site of the town is low, and its appearance unattractive. During the French war it was the seat of an extensive trade, and shipbuilding was carried on with great spirit, but its commerce is now nearly confined to the importation of timber and the exportation of coals to Ireland. A large portion of the inhabitants are employed in cotton weaving, and there are extensive chemical works. The townhall, surmounted by a steeple, is a prominent object when approaching the town. There are a savings-bank, and a branch office of the Ayrshire bank. The places of worship comprise an Established church, a Free church, three churches for the United Presbyterians, and a Baptist meeting-house. There are Free, parochial, and Sabbath schools, also several benefit societies. A fair for cattle is held the last Thursday in May.

SALTEE ISLANDS, in the bar. of Bargy, co. Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. They consist of a group of two islands, distinguished as Great and Little, and several outstanding rocks. They are situated about 4 miles off the coast in the parish of Kilmore, and are the property of H. Morgan, Esq. Traces of numerous buildings suggest that the islands have been formerly of greater importance. Beyond the rocks is a floating light, visible at a distance of 9 miles.

SALTER-BRIDGE, a hmlt. in the bar. of Coshmore, co. Waterford, Ireland, 2 miles from Cappoquin, and 26 W. of Waterford, on the river Blackwater.

SALTERFORD, a manor in the par. of Calverton, co. Notts, 6 miles N.E. of Nottingham.

SALTERFORTH, a tnshp. in the par. of Barnoldswick, E. div. of Staincliff wap., West Riding co. York, 7½ miles S.W. of Skipton. It is situated on the Leeds and Liverpool canal, and included the common called Whitsmoor, the greater part of which was enclosed in 1815. The village stands on the bank of the canal.

SALTER-HEBBLE, a vil. and ecclesiastical district in the tnshp. of Skircoat, and par. of Halifax, West Riding co. York, 1 mile S. of Halifax, of which it may be considered a suburb. It is a populous place, containing in 1861 4,258 inhabitants. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £160, in the patron. of the crown and bishop alternately. The church is modern. See HALIFAX.

SALTERNESS. See SOUTHERNESS, co. Kirkcudbright.

SALTERNS, GREAT, an ext. par. place in the hund. of Portsdown, co. Hants, 3 miles N.E. of Portsmouth. It is situated on Langston harbour, and contains some ancient saltworks, which employ the principal part of the inhabitants.

SALTERSFORD, a chplry. in the par. of Prestbury, hund. of Macclesfield, co. Chester, 4 miles N.E. of Macclesfield. It is situated near the river Bollin, and line of the Manchester railway. Some of the inhabitants are employed in the neighbouring silk and cotton mills. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Chester, val. £70, in the patron. of the Vicar of Prestbury. The church was erected in 1731. This place gives the title of baron to the family of Stopford, earls of Courtown.

SALTERSTOWN, a par. in the bar. of Ferrard, co. Louth, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles S.E. of Castle-Bellingham. Dunleer is its post town. It is situated on Dundalk Bay. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Armagh, val. with Dunany, £116. The par. is joined to Dysart and Clonmore in the Roman Catholic arrangement. This parish was a possession of Millifont Abbey. Copper and lead were formerly worked.

SALTERTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Durnford, co. Wilts, 4 miles N.W. of Salisbury, on the river Avon.

SALTERTON, an ecclesiastical district in the hund. of Wonford, co. Devon, 3 miles E. of Topsham, and 5 S.E. of Exeter, near the confluence of the rivers Clyst and Exe. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £133. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, is a modern edifice.

SALTERTON, BUDLEIGH. See BUDLEIGH SALTERTON, co. Devon.

SALTER WITH ESKAT, an ext. par. place in the ward of Allerdale-above-Derwent, co. Cumberland, 6 miles E. of Whitehaven. It was formerly a separate parish, but contains now only two or three farmhouses.

SALTFLEETBY ALL SAINTS, a par. in the Marsh div. of Louth-Eske hund., parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 9¼ miles N.E. of Louth, its post town. The village, which is small and irregularly built, is chiefly agricultural. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £305, and the glebe comprises 28 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £317, in the patron. of Magdalen College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to All Saints, has a square tower containing five bells. The parochial charities produce about £33 per annum, accruing from a bequest of the Rev. Dr. Cholmeley, rector of this parish, in 1785. There is a National school. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a place of worship. S. T. Scrope, Esq., and the President of Magdalen College, are lords of the manor.

SALTFLEETBY ST. CLEMENT, a par. in the Marsh div. of Louth-Eske hund., parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 10 miles N.E. of Louth, its post town. The village, which is small, is situated near the coast, and is wholly agricultural. The surface is level, but well drained, and the soil a rich loam. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £263 7*s., and the glebe contains 3 acres. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £210. The church, dedicated to St. Clement, was restored in 1841. S. T. Scrope, Esq., is lord of the manor.

SALTFLEETBY ST. PETER, a par. in the Marsh div. of Louth-Eske hund., co. Lincoln, 8 miles N.E. of Louth, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £240, and the rectorial for a like sum; the glebe comprises 20 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £229, in the patron. of Oriel College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, has a square tower. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. In the vicinity is an observatory. S. T. Scrope, Esq., is lord of the manor.

SALTFLEET-HAVEN, a hmlt. in the par. of Skidbrooke, Marsh div. of Louth-Eske hund., parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 9 miles N.E. of Louth, and 38 N.E. of Lincoln. It is situated on the sea-coast, and is a sub-port to Boston. At a short distance is an oyster bed. The hamlet is much frequented for sea bathing. A small trade is done in coals and fish. In the vicinity are numerous springs of water. The Wesleyans and Free Methodists have each a place of worship. A fair is held on 3rd October.

SALTFORD, a par. in the hund. of Keynsham, co. Somerset, 2 miles of Keynsham, and 5 N.W. of Bath, its post town. It is a station on the Great Western railway. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Avon, which bounds the parish on the E. and N. The soil is of various qualities, resting upon a substratum of blue lias. A portion of the inhabitants are engaged in the extensive brass works situated on the river bank. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £185, and the glebe comprises 13 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £200. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient stone edifice, with a tower containing one bell. There is a parochial school for both sexes, also a Sunday-school. Saltford House is the principal residence.

SALTHILL, a bathing-place on Galway Bay, co. Galway, Ireland, adjoining Galway, of which it is a suburb.

SALT-HILL, a vil. partly in the par. of Upton, hund. of Stoke, and partly in the par. of Farnham-Royal, hund. of Burnham, co. Bucks, 2 miles N. of Windsor. It is a petty sessions town, and up to 1848 was the scene of a triennial ceremony of the Eton scholars, termed the Montem, when a procession repaired to a tumulus on the S. side of the road, called the Salt-hill. The line of the Great Western railway passes near the village.

SALTHOUSE, a par. in the hund. of Holt, co. Norfolk, 3 miles N. of Holt, its post town, and 2¼ E. of Cley. The village, which is chiefly agricultural, is situated near the coast. The surface is undulating, and the higher grounds command sea views. A portion of the land is of a marshy character, and abounds in wild fowl, and in the pools are great numbers of eels. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £219 11*s.* The living is a rect. annexed to that of Kelling, in the dioc. of Norwich. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, has a lofty, square embattled tower, formerly surmounted by a spire. The interior contains a font of great antiquity. There is a place of worship for Primitive Methodists.

SALTHROP, a tythg. in the par. of Wroughton, co. Wilts, 3 miles S.W. of Swindon.

SALTLEY WITH WASHWOOD, a hmlt. in the par. of Aston, co. Warwick, 2 miles N.E. of Birmingham, its post town. It is situated on the Wednesbury canal and North-Western railway, on which latter it is a station. In the neighbourhood is a diocesan training school, with accommodation for 160 pupils. It was erected by B. Ferrey in 1850, and includes a chapel. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £150.

SALTMARSH, an ext. par. place in the hund. of Broxash, co. Hereford, near Bromyard.

SALTMARSH, a tnshp. in the par. of Howden, wap. of Howdenshire, East Riding co. York, 4 miles S.E. of Howden, its post town. The village is situated on the river Humber. The inhabitants are chiefly agricultural. There is a ferry across the river Ouse. The soil is of a light character, upon a subsoil of sand and clay. Saltmarsh Hall is the principal residence, and has been held by the Saltmarsh family from the Conquest.

SALT-MILLS, a vil. in the par. of Tintern, bar. of Shelburne, co. Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles N. of Fethard. It is situated on Bannow Bay, and has a dispensary and school. In the vicinity are the ruins of Tintern Abbey, Donough Castle, and the church of St. Kieran. Tintern Abbey is the residence of the proprietor. Straw-plaiting employs the greater part of the female population.

SALTNEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Hawarden, hund. of Mold, co. Flint, 2 miles from Hawarden, and 7 W. of Chester. It is a station on the Chester and Shrewsbury section of the Great Western railway. It is situated near the river Dee. At this place Henry II. encamped in 1157. It was formerly marsh land, but since 1778 has been considerably improved. Saltney formerly belonged to Basingwick Abbey.

SALTON, a par. and tnshp. locally in the wap. of Ryedale, North Riding co. York, 5 miles S.E. of Kirby Moorside, its post town, and 3½ N. of Barton railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Rye, and is wholly agricultural. The par. includes the tnshp. of Brawby. The soil consists of a deep loam, with subsoil of clay. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of York, val. £140. The church is dedicated to St. John of Beverley. There is a school for both sexes, in which a Sunday-school is also held. J. Woodall, Esq., is lord of the manor.

SALTON, or SALTOUN, a par. in the co. of Haddington, Scotland. It contains the vils. of East Salton and West Salton. It extends in length about 3¾ miles, with an extreme breadth of nearly 3 miles, and is bounded by the pars. of Pencaitland, Gladsmuir, Haddington, Bolton, Humbie, and Ormiston. The surface is moderately even, the highest point being reached by the Skimmer hills, which rise about 600 feet above the level of the sea, and stand nearly central of the parish. The soil is of great variety, including loam, light sand, clayey loam, and clay. The land is chiefly arable, with a portion wood and pasture. The climate is dry and healthy. Limestone and freestone are worked to some extent. The Salton and Tyne waters here unite their streams, and nearly encircle the parish. The parish is traversed by the road from Edinburgh across the Lammermoor hills to Dunse. The village of East Salton, which contains the parish church, is about 16 miles S.E. of Edinburgh, and 5½ S.W. of Haddington. It is situated on the Edinburgh road and the river Tyne, about half a mile distant from West Salton, which stands on the Salton burn, near the western border of the parish. The lordship anciently belonged to the Morvilles, lords of Galloway and the Abernethies, but was purchased in 1643 by Sir Andrew Fletcher, the patriot, who introduced the manufactures of pot-barley, fanning corn, weaving, and bleaching from Holland; and his nephew, Lord Milton, established the first bleach-field of the British Linen Company in 1750. There are now no manufactures except a small bleach-field, starch works, and a paper mill. This par. is in the presb. of Haddington and synod of Lothian and Tweeddale. The stipend of the minister is £312. The parish church is an ancient cruciform structure, with a modern spire. There is a Free church for Salton and Boulton. At West Salton is an endowed school. The principal seats are Salton Hall and Herdmanston House, the latter the property of Lord Sinclair. The living was formerly held by Patrick Scougall, the celebrated Bishop of Aberdeen, whose son Henry, author of "The Life of God in the Soul of Man," was born here in 1660. The poet William Dunbar, often named the Scottish Horace, was born here in 1465, as was also Lord Milton, who held the office of Lord Justice Clerk during the rebellion of 1745. A cattle fair is held on the last Thursday in May.

SALTONSALL, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Warley, West Riding co. York, 3 miles W. of Halifax.

SALTPANS, a vil. in the par. of Campbeltown, co. Argyle, Scotland, 5 miles W. of Campbeltown. It is situated at the extremity of a headland flanking Machrihanish Bay, and is principally inhabited by fishermen. It derives its name from an ancient salt-work, now extinct.

SALT PRESTON. See PRESTON-PANS, co. Haddington.

SALTRAM, the seat of the Earl of Morley, co. Devon, 3 miles N.E. of Plymouth. It is situated at Laira bridge on the Catwater, and has a collection of paintings by the old masters.

SALTRON, a hmlt. in the chplry. of Muker, par. of Grinton, North Riding co. York, 2 miles from Muker, and 57 N.W. of York. It is situated among the moorlands, near the river Swale and Shunner Fell.

SALTWICK WITH DUDDO, a tnshp. in the par. of Stannington, co. Northumberland, 4½ miles S.W. of Morpeth.

SALTWOOD, a par. in the hund. of Hayne, lathe of Shepway, co. Kent, half a mile N. of Hythe, its post town, and 2½ miles S.E. of Westhanger railway station. The village, which is small, is situated near the coast, commanding a prospect of the sea, which is supposed to have formerly come up to this place. The par. comprises the hmlts. of Saltwood-Green and Pedlinge. It is celebrated for its ruined castle, situated near the village, and formerly the seat of the archbishops of Canterbury. It was first built by the son of Hengist, the Saxon, in 448, and restored by Hugo de Montfort. In the reign of Henry II. it became the rendezvous of Becket's murderers, and was exchanged by Cranmer with Henry VIII., who gave it to the Clintons. The ruins, consisting of the walls, towers, gateway, Archbishop Courtenay's keep, hall, and chapel, convey some idea of its former magnificence. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £784, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, is an ancient edifice, with a square tower containing five bells. The church was principally built in the reign of Edward III., but has had a stained window inserted, and been thoroughly restored. It contains a piscina, and three brasses of J. Vernew, the earliest bearing date 1350. The parochial charities produce about £31 a year. There are National and infant schools. Sandling Park and Brockhill House are the principal residences.

SALUTATION, a vil. in the tnshp. of Little Smeaton, North Riding co. York, 6 miles N. of Northallerton.

SALUTATION, a hmlt. in the par. of Kirkby Fleetham, North Riding co. York, 3 miles N. of Bedale.

SALVINGTON, a hmlt. in the par. of West Tarring, hund. of Tarring, rape of Bramber, co. Sussex, 2 miles N.W. of Worthing, near the line of the Brighton and Chichester railway. John Selden was born here in 1584, and died in 1654.

SALWARPE, a par. in the borough of Droitwich, upper div. of Halfshire hund., co. Worcester, 5½ miles N. of Worcester, its post town, and 2 S.W. of Droitwich. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the Droitwich canal and the river Salwarpe; the latter takes its rise under Lickey hills, thence flows 14 miles S.W. past Bromsgrove, Stoke-Prior, and Droitwich, to the Severn, at Hawford Bridge. Salwarpe, in Leland's time, was called Salop. The celebrated Earl of Warwick, Richard Beauchamp, was born here in 1351. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The tithes have been commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1813, and the glebe comprises 306 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £520. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, has a tower containing six bells. The interior of the church contains the effigy of a priest, also a monument to T. Talbot, bearing date 1613. The chancel was reconstructed in 1848, and the body and roof of the church were improved. The parochial charities produce about £45 per annum, of which £25 goes to Barker's school. R. A. Douglas Gresley, Esq., of High Park, is lord of the manor.

SALWICK, a hmlt. in the par. of Kirkham, hund. of Amounderness, co. Lancaster, 4 miles N.W. of Preston. It has a station on the Lancashire and Yorkshire railway, and is in conjunction with Clifton to form a township.

SAMBOURN, a hmlt. in the par. of Coughton, Alcester div. of Barlichway hund., co. Warwick, 3½ miles N.W. of Alcester. The manufacture of needles is carried on.

SAMBROOK, a tnshp. in the par. of Cheswardine, co. Salop, 4 miles N.W. of Newport.

SAMBROOK, a tnshp. in the par. of Chetwynd, co. Salop, 3 miles N.W. of Newport. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £165.

SAMFORD, a hund. in the co. of Suffolk, contains the pars. of Bentley, Belstead, East Beigholt, Brantham, Burstall, Capel St. Mary, Chattisham, Chelmondiston, Copdock, Erwarton, Freston, Harkstead, Higham, Hintlesham, Holbrook, Holton St. Mary, Raydon, Shelley, Shotley, Stratford St. Mary, Stutton, Tattingstone, Washbrook, Great and Little Wenham, Wherstead, Woolverstone, and part of Sproughton, comprising an area of 44,620 acres. It gives name to a deanery in the archdeac. of Suffolk and dioc. of Norwich; also to a Poor-law Union and superintendent registry district.

SAMLESBURY, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Blackburn, lower div. of Blackburn hund., co. Lancaster, 4 miles N.E. of Preston. The village, which is considerable, is situated betwixt the rivers Ribble and Darwen. The land is chiefly meadow and pasture, with a small proportion of arable and woodland. The soil is chiefly of a clayey character. Some of the inhabitants are employed in the cotton-mill. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £150, in the patron. of the Vicar of Blackburn. The church, dedicated to St. Leonard, is an ancient stone structure with a bell turret.

The parochial charities produce about £35 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes. The Roman Catholics have a place of worship. In the vicinity is the old mansion of the Southworths, now occupied as a ladies' boarding-school.

SAMPFORD-ARUNDEL, a par. in the hund. of Milverton, co. Somerset, 2¾ miles S.W. of Wellington, its post town and railway station, and 9½ S.W. of Taunton. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the great western road from Bath to Exeter, under Black Down hill. The parish is traversed by the line of the Great Western railway. The soil consists of a rich loam, with a subsoil of clay and sand. Sampford-Arundel gives name and title of baron to Lord Arundell of Wardour. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £150, and the vicarial for £125. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £146. The church, dedicated to the Holy Cross, has an embattled tower containing five bells. The interior of the church contains a monument of C. Baker, Esq., sheriff of the county in 1724; also monuments to the Browns. The parochial charities produce about £3 per annum. There is a parochial school for both sexes. T. Were, Esq., is lord of the manor and chief landowner.

SAMPFORD-BRETT, a par. in the hund. of Williton, co. Somerset, 15 miles N.W. of Taunton, its post town, and 1¾ mile S.W. of Williton station on the West Somerset railway. The village, which is of small extent, and chiefly agricultural, is supposed to take the adjunct to its name from the family of De Brett, to whom it anciently belonged. The soil is a mixture of sand and loam upon a subsoil of marl and clay. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £300, and the glebe comprises 36 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £358. The church, dedicated to St. George, has a square tower containing five bells. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum. There is a Sunday-school for both sexes. Sir A. A. Hood, Bart., is lord of the manor.

SAMPFORD-COURTNEY, a par. in the hund. of Black Torrington, co. Devon, 2 miles from North Tawton, and 5 N.E. of Okehampton. The village, which is extensive, is situated on the road to Bude. The par. contains the vils. of Willy and Corscombe, and the chplry. of Sticklepath, which, in the reign of Henry V., was a separate parish. At Brightley in this parish are traces of a Cistercian abbey, founded in 1136 by Richard Fitz-Baldwin de Brionies, which was afterwards removed to Ford. At the time of the Reformation this place was the scene of a serious rising under Humphrey Arundell in 1549. The Forest of Dartmoor joins the parish of Dartmoor on the S.. The lower grounds are watered by the river Taw and its tributary streams. About half the land is arable, a third moorland, and the remainder pasture, orchard, and woodland. The soil is generally a red loam, alternating with a stiff clay. A copper mine was opened near Sticklepath, but has been abandoned. The living is a rect.* with the cur. of Sticklepath annexed, in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £510, in the patron. of King's College, Cambridge. The church is dedicated to St. Andrew. The parochial charities produce about £6 per annum.

SAMPFORD, GREAT, a par. in the hund. of Freshwell, co. Essex, 7 miles S.E. of Saffron-Walden, and 4 N.E. of Thaxted. The village, which contains several good houses, is situated on the eastern bank of the small river Pant, and is chiefly agricultural. The straw-plait manufacture was introduced in the early part of the present century. The surface is undulating and enriched with wood. About two-thirds of the land are arable, and the remainder rich meadow and woodland. The soil is fertile. The living is a vic. with the cur. of Hempstead annexed, in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £255. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, has a tower at the W. end. The parochial charities produce about £7 per annum. The Baptists have a place of worship. There are National schools. Tindon End is the principal residence. A fair is held on Whit-Monday.

SAMPFORD, LITTLE, a par. in the hund. of Freshwell, co. Essex, 7 miles from Haverhill, 9 from Saffron-Walden, and 14 N.W. of Braintree, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on a branch of the river Pant, and is wholly agricultural. The Essex hounds meet in this parish. The land is principally arable, with some meadow, pasture, and woodland. Near the Manor House of Friers are traces of an ancient chapel of the Knights Hospitallers, to whom the manor once belonged. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £494, in the patron. of New College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has a lofty tower, surmounted by a spire. It contains some ancient monuments. The parochial charities produce about £12 per annum. The tithes were commuted in 1839.

SAMPFORD-PEVERELL, a par. in the hund. of Halberton, co. Devon, 4 miles S.E. of Tavistock, its post town, and 2½ N.E. of Tiverton Road railway station. The village, which is said to have been anciently a borough, is situated on the Grand Western canal, and on the high road from Taunton to Tiverton. The woollen manufacture was formerly extensively carried on at this place. The soil is of a sandy nature, upon a subsoil of rock and gravel. The line of the Bristol and Exeter railway passes through the parish. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £270. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, has a tower containing a clock and five bells. The interior of the church contains tombs of the Peverels and Pauletts, to whom the manor formerly belonged. From the churchyard a view is obtained as far as Sidmouth Gap, about 25 miles distant. There is a National school for both sexes. The Wesleyans and Bible Christians have each a place of worship. The old Manor House, once occupied by Margaret Countess of Richmond, and mother of Henry VII., and subsequently by Sir Amias Paulett, who had the custody of Mary Queen of Scotts at the time of her execution, was taken down in 1775. An annual fair occurs on the following Monday after Crediton great market.

SAMPFORD-SPINEY, a par. in the hund. of Roborough, co. Devon, 4 miles S.E. of Tavistock. Plympton is its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Spiney, and is wholly agricultural. Here is a mine where cobalt and silver have been worked. This parish borders on the confines of Dartmoor, and is intersected by the Plymouth tramway. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to that of Shaugh, in the dioc. of Exeter, val. respectively £107 and £54, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Windsor, to whom the impropriate tithes belong. The church was partially built by the Incorporated Society.

SAMPHREY, an islet in the par. of Yell, Shetland Isles, coast of Scotland, 2 miles S. of Yell.

SAMPSON, one of the Scilly Islands, in the par. of St. Mary, co. Cornwall. It comprises about 80 acres, and has several ancient barrows.

SAMPSON, ST., a par. in the E. div. of Powder hund., co. Cornwall, 4 miles S.E. of Lostwithiel. The navigable river Fowey bounds the parish on the E. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £53. At a spot called Castle-Dore was formerly a castle of the earls of Salisbury.

SAMPSON, ST., a par. in the Isle of Guernsey, Channel Islands, 2 miles N.E. of St. Peter's Port. The village, which is situated on the harbour of the same name, is said to have derived its name from Archbishop Sampson, to whom Childebert, king of the West Saxons, in 550 gave large estates in the Channel Isles, and who built a chapel in this parish opposite to St. Michael's castle. After the Norman conquest it was given by William I. to Sampson d'Anneville, as a fief or royalty, and is still called the fief d'Anneville. This fief is held by the noblest tenure in the island, the lord of the seignory ranking next after the clergy, and being bound to attend the sovereign as his esquire whenever he shall visit the island. The lord holds a court at Michaelmas, composed of a seneschal, three vavasers, or judges, a greffier or clerk, and a provost, which last officer is elected by the tenants. The surface is low, but not marshy, being nearly on a level with high-water mark, except only a few gentle elevations. The soil is fertile and well cultivated, producing good crops of grain and fruit. Many of the inhabitants are employed in the working and exportation of granite, which is largely quarried in the northern part of the island. A new breakwater and quay have been constructed for the better protection of the harbour. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £120, in the patron. of the Governor of Guernsey. The church of St. Sampson is the oldest in the island, having been built in 1110. It is without either tower or spire. There is a place of worship for French Methodists, also several schools.

SAMUELSTON, a vil. in the par. of Gladsmuir, co. Haddington, 3½ miles S.W. of Haddington, and 5½ E. of Tranet. It is a small scattered village situated on the left bank of the river Tyne. There are two corn mills and a saw mill.

SANCREED, or SANCREET, a par. in the hund. of Penwith, co. Cornwall, 4 miles S.W. of Penzance, its post town. The parish, which is of large extent and chiefly agricultural, is traversed on the S. by the road from Penzance to the Land's End, and on the N. by that to St. Just. The soil consists of killas upon a subsoil of granite. The substratum abounds in mineral wealth, and granite of excellent quality is found. There are some ancient tin-works on Beacon Hill, and a stream work on Trevenyan Moor, but the latter is now exhausted. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £509 10*s.* 7*d., of which £344 belongs to the vicarage, and the glebe comprises 152 acres, but the greater part is unenclosed. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £265, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, dedicated to St. Creed, has a square embattled tower containing three bells. The interior of the church contains several monuments. There were formerly three chapels, of which some traces remain. A Sunday-school is held at the church. There are places of worship belonging to the Baptists, Wesleyans, and Bible Christians, also a mixed National school for both sexes. Viscount Falmouth is lord of the manor and principal landowner. In the churchyard is an ancient cross, and at Drift are two rude upright stones supposed to mark the grave of some ancient warrior. Near the village of Braham are remains of an ancient castle called Caer-bran, and at a place called Bodinnar is a monument consisting of two concentric walls, the larger 55 feet in diameter.

SANCTON, a par. in the Hunsley-Beacon div. of Harthill wap., East Riding co. York, 2½ miles S.E. of Market Weighton, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the high road between Market Weighton and South Cave. The inhabitants are chiefly agricultural. The soil is of a loamy nature. The par. includes the tnshps. of North Cliffe and Sancton, with the hmlt. of Houghton. The great tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1769. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of York, val. £49. The church, dedicated to All Saints, has a crocketed and pinnacled tower. The parochial charities produce about £20 per annum, which goes towards the support of the free school. The Hon. Charles Langdale is lord of the manor.

SANDA, or SANDAY, one of the N. isles of Orkney, Scotland, 1½ mile E. of Eday, and 6¾ miles E. of Westray. It is situated betwixt Stronsay and North Ronaldshay, and is a sub-port to Kirkwall. It contains the pars. of Burness, Cross, and Lady. It extends in length about 12 miles from N.E. to S.W., with a mean breadth of 1½ mile. It is one of the most extensive of the N. Isles of Orkney. The surface is of an even character, having many extended points with bays running a considerable way inland. On its E. coast it is low and flat, but on the W. side is a hilly ridge rising to an altitude of 200 feet. The soil is light and sandy, but generally productive, when well manured with seaweed. The principal points along the coast are, Tafstness, Start Point, upon which is a lighthouse, Tressness, Spurness, Holms of Ire, and Otterswick, Stywick, and Rooswick Bays. The two principal harbours are Kettletofit on the S. side and Otterswick on the N. side of the island, which is watered by several lakes, the largest being about 2¼ miles in circumference. The disadvantages under which the island labours are the scarcity of fuel, and the inundations caused by easterly gales during spring tide. The coasts abound with fish, and the shores produce abundance of kelp. The air is moist and raw, but not unhealthy.

SANDA, an island in the par. of Southend, co. Argyle, Scotland, 6 miles S.E. of the Mull of Kintyre, and 9 S.W. of Campbeltown. It extends in length about 1½ mile by about half a mile in breadth. It is situated at the W. side of the entrance of the Frith of Clyde. Its surface is of an uneven character, and its greatest altitude 300 feet above sea-level. There is an excellent natural harbour for the small vessels that navigate the Clyde. In 1850 a lighthouse with a fixed red light was erected on Ship of Sanda rock, and is about 165 feet above sea-level. Paterson's rock is about 1½ mile S.E. of Sanda, and upwards of a mile in circumference, but only visible at low water. One of the cliffs has been worn into the shape of a large arch. The whole of the surface is devoted to sheep-walks. The rocks are all sandstone. The island was anciently famed for having been the rendezvous of the Danish fleets, from which circumstance it was formerly called Avona Porticosa, and it is still sometimes called Avon. On the island are the ruins of St. Columba's chapel, with burial-ground and two crosses, and in Fordun's time there was another chapel dedicated to St. Annian, regarded as a sanctuary for the refuge of criminals.

SANDA, or SANDAY, an island in the par. of Small Isles, co. Argyle, Scotland, 2½ miles from Rum, and about a league S. of the peninsula of Cantyre. It extends in length about 1¾ mile from E. to W., with a mean breadth of about half a mile. The surface near Canna is low, and that part approaching Rum swells into gentle eminences, finally ending in abrupt cliffs, which are skirted by detached masses of rock of great altitude. There are two rocks designated Dun-na-Feulan, or the "gull rocks," which stand near the cliffs and are about 100 feet in altitude. One of these rocks somewhat resembles a steeple in form, and is partly of conglomerate, and partly of trap, divided from each other by a vertical plane, which is a singular phenomenon well worthy of the geologist's consideration. The island is inhabited by only four families, who are engaged in agriculture and fishing.

SANDAL, KIRK, or LITTLE, a par. in the S. div. of Strafforth wap., West Riding co. York, 4 miles N.E. of Doncaster. The village, of small extent, is situated on the E. bank of the Don, and the Don canal passes through the parish. The surface is undulating and well wooded. The principal residences are Sandal Hall, and Sandal Grange. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Enclosure Act in 1806. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of York, val. £400, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church is dedicated to St. Oswald. There is a free school founded in 1626 by the Rev. George Wood, who endowed it with land now producing £80 per annum.

SANDAL, LONG, a tnshp. in the par. and soke of Doncaster, West Riding co. York, 3 miles N.E. of Doncaster, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the bank of the river Don, and near the Doncaster and Thorne turnpike road. The tnshp. includes the hmlt. of Wheatley. The South Yorkshire railway and the Keadby extension pass near the village. The corporation of Doncaster, to whom the manor belongs, have expended considerable sums on the enclosure and improvement of the lands. The principal residence is Wheatley Hall.

SANDAL MAGNA, or GREAT SANDAL, a par. and tnshp. in the lower div. of Agbrigg wap.,

West Riding co. York, 2 miles S.E. of Wakefield, its post town. The village, which is large and old, is situated on the S. side of the Vale of Calder, and on the road from Wakefield to Barnsley. The Barnsley canal and the North Midland railway pass through the par., which comprises the tnshps. of West Bretton, Chapelthorpe, Crigglestone, Walton, and 5 hmlts. Near the village are slight traces of a castle erected by John Plantagenet, the last Earl of Warren, in 1320, which passed to Richard Plantagenet, Duke of York, who fell in the battle of Wakefield in 1460, and was subsequently the residence of his son, afterwards Richard III. During the parliamentary war in the reign of Charles I. the castle was taken and dismantled by order of parliament. The district abounds with coal, of which several mines are wrought, and there are quarries of good freestone. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The Wakefield cemetery is included in this parish. Nevison, the highway robber, was apprehended here in 1684, at a publichouse with the sign of "Sandal Three Horses." The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £157. The church, dedicated to St. Helen, has a square embattled tower containing a clock and six bells. There is also a district church at Chapelthorpe, the living of which is a perpet. cur.,* val. £189. The church is of recent erection. The parochial charities produce about £300 per annum. There are two almshouses for women, founded by George Grice, and rebuilt in 1823, also an endowed school founded by Alderman Scholey of London in 1839. The parish contains several seats, as Brooke House, Castle Grove, Manygates, Portobello, Sandal Hall, Sandal Grange, Sandal House, Springbank Villa, Woodlands, and Woolgreaves. Sir L. M. S. Pilkington, Bart., of Chevet Hall, is lord of the manor.

SANDBACH, a par., tnshp., and market town in the hunds. of Northwich and Nantwich, co. Chester, 26½ miles S.E. of Chester, and 4½ from Crewe. It is a station on the Manchester and Crewe section of the London and North-Western railway. The par., which is situated in the midst of a fertile tract of country, is extensive, comprising the tnshps. of Arclid, Betchton, Bradwell, Blackden, Cotton, Cranage, Hassall, Leese, Radheeth, Sandbach, Twemlow, and Wheelock, with the chplries. of Elworth, Church-Hulme, Wheelock, and Goostrey. The parish is traversed by the Grand Trunk canal and the Manchester and Crewe railway. The surface is in general flat, but from certain points views are obtained of the Vale Royal, the hills of Staffordshire and Derbyshire, and the distant mountains of Wales. The land is peculiarly adapted for grazing, the pasture being rich and luxuriant. The town stands on an eminence overlooking the small river Wheelock, which falls into the Dane, after putting in motion a large silk mill. The town is irregularly built, but contains several good streets, and the houses are in general neat. It has been considerably improved of late years, and is now lighted with gas and amply supplied with water. The principal public buildings are the townhall, occupying the S. side of the market place, with the butter market beneath; the assembly rooms, erected in 1857 at a cost of £2,800, containing a public hall, library, reading rooms for the upper and lower classes, and county offices, with lock-ups, constables' rooms, and residence for the principal police officer. There are besides a savings-bank, erected in 1854 in the Elizabethan style of architecture; gasworks, constructed in 1847; and public baths. The inhabitants formerly carried on a brisk trade in malt, and the manufacture of worsted yarn and stuffs, but these have been superseded by the throwsting and manufacture of silk, for which there are extensive factories. The manufacture of boots and shoes is also carried on to a considerable extent for houses in Manchester and Liverpool. There are brine springs, salt works, and steam and water corn-mills in the parish. The population of the parish in 1851 was 8,552, and of the township, 4,567, but these numbers had increased by 1861 to 9,046 and 4,989 respectively. The limits of the town, however, are not co-extensive with the township, comprising only 3,252 inhabitants. Petty sessions are held in the townhall every alternate Monday, and two constables are appointed yearly at the petty sessions of the county magistrates. A court leet and baron is held annually by Lord Crewe, of Crewe Hall, who is lord of the manor and principal landowner. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Chester, val. £1,000, with 50 acres of glebe. The parish church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure with an open arched tower at the W. end, surmounted by crocketed pinnacles, containing a clock and peal of eight bells. It has been recently recased with stone, and the tower rebuilt from the foundation. In addition to the parish church are the following district churches, viz. St. John, at Sandbach Heath, St. Peter's, Elworth, Church-Hulme, Goostrey, and Wheelock, the livings of which are perpet. curs.,* varying in val. from £175 to £120. There are places of worship for Wesleyan, Primitive, and Association Methodists, and Independents. The charities comprise several benefactions originally amounting to only £420, but having been laid out in 1790 in the purchase of land in the neighbourhood of Burslem, under which some valuable strata of coal have been discovered, they now produce between £1,000 and £2,000 a year. The grammar school, founded in 1694 by Francis Wells, has an income from endowment of £200 per annum. The school buildings are an Elizabethan pile situated in the Wheelock road, and were erected at a cost of £5,000. There are besides large National schools for boys, girls, and infants, British and Foreign schools, industrial schools, and several private seminaries. In the market place are two ancient obelisks or crosses, covered with rude sculptures, and asserted by tradition to have been erected by Penda, the Saxon king of Northumbria, on his conversion to Christianity in 609. Market day is Thursday. Fairs are held on Easter Tuesday, the first Tuesday after 12th September, and on 28th December, on which last day a statute fair is also held for hiring farm servants.

SANDBECK PARK, the seat of the Earl of Scarborough in the wap. of Strafforth and Tickhill, West Riding co. York, 3 miles S.W. of Tickhill, and 47 S. of York. In the grounds are the remains of Roche Abbey.

SANDBOROUGH, a hmlt. in the par. of Hamstall-Ridware, co. Stafford, 6 miles N. of Lichfield.

SANDCROFT, a par. in the hund. of Wangford, co. Suffolk. See ELMHAM, SOUTH, ST. CROSS.

SANDEND, a vil. in the par. of Fordyce, co. Banff, Scotland, 4 miles W. of Portsoy.

SANDEN FEE, a tythg. in the par. of Hungerford, hund. of Kintbury Eagle, co. Berks, near Hungerford.

SANDERA, or SANDRAY, an island in the par. of Barra, co. Inverness, Scotland, 3¼ miles S.W. of Barra, and 2½ N.E. of Pabba. It is of nearly circular form, the chord of the arc being about 1½ mile. It has an indented coast line, and the interior consists of a single hill of gneiss, rising about 800 feet above sea-level. The summit appears at a distance as if covered with snow, owing to its being strewn with calcareous sand. An extensive Danish dun exists on the E. coast.

SANDERINGHAM, or SANDRINGHAM, a par. in the hund. of Freebridge-Lynn, co. Norfolk, 3 miles N.E. of Castle-Rising, and 7 N.E. of Lynn, its post town. It is a small secluded village, containing, in 1861, only 56 inhabitants. The surface is varied, and the scenery enriched with wood, but the land is comparatively barren, nearly half consisting of heath, peat, woodland, and rabbit warren. The soil is generally light and sandy, with clay in parts, and at the E. end of the parish the subsoil is chalk. Sandringham Hall, late the seat of the Hon. Charles Spenser Cowper, was purchased by the Prince of Wales in 1862, who frequently resides here for the enjoyment of hunting and sporting. The West Norfolk hunt frequently meets here. Sandringham heath comprises nearly 200 acres, extending hence to Wolverton, the woods at which afford good sporting, especially for woodcocks. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £90, and the glebe contains 15 acres. The living is a rect.* with that of Babingley annexed, in the dioc. of Norwich, joint val. £171. The church, dedicated to St. Mary Magdalene, is an ancient structure with a tower at the W. end containing one bell. It has an E. window of stained glass, and was restored and beautified in 1857. The register dates from 1557. There is a parochial school for girls.

SANDERSTEAD, a par. in the first div. of Wallington hund., co. Surrey, 3 miles S.E. of Croydon, its post town, and 13 from London. Here was formerly a college for priests, founded by Reginald Lord Cobham in the reign of Henry VI., the revenue of which at the Dissolution was valued at £79 15*s*. The village, which is of small extent, is chiefly agricultural. The Surrey hounds meet in the neighbourhood. The parish is intersected by the line of the London and Brighton railway. The surface is well wooded, and the land chiefly arable, with a small proportion of meadow and pasture. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £500. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient edifice with a low spired tower containing two bells. It has been recently restored, and the chancel rebuilt. The register dates from 1600. The parochial charities produce about £11 per annum. There is a parochial school for both sexes. Purley House is the principal residence, and was formerly the residence of J. Horne Tooke, author of "The Diversions of Purley."

SANDFIELD, a hmlt. in the par. of Willoughby, Wold div. of Calceworth hund., parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 2 miles S.E. of Alford.

SANDFIELD, a hmlt. in the bar. of Athlone, co. Roscommon, Ireland, 5 miles S.E. of Roscommon.

SANDFORD, a par. in the hund. of Crediton, co. Devon, 2 miles N.W. of Crediton, its nearest railway station and post town. The village, which is of large extent, is situated near the small river Creedy, and on the turnpike road from Crediton to South Molton. The par. contains the hmlts. of West Sandford, New Buildings, and East Village. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The surface is varied, and the soil a rich red loam. There are quarries of good building stone. The appropriate tithes, belonging to the Governors of the Crediton Charity, have been commuted for a rent-charge of £1,150. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £250, in the patron. of three Governors. The church, dedicated to St. Swithin, was formerly a chapel-of-ease to the mother church of Crediton, and is an ancient stone edifice with a low square tower containing a clock and five bells. The church has a painted E. window inserted as a memorial to the late Sir H. P. Davie, Bart., also several brasses to the Dowrich family. The parochial charities produce about £65 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes, built in 1849, and partly endowed. The Independents have a place of worship. Creedy Park and Dowrich House are the principal residences. Fairs are held on the third Monday in March, and the last Monday in July for the sale of cattle.

SANDFORD, a par. in the hund. of Bullingdon, co. Oxford, 3½ miles S.E. of Oxford, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the E. bank of the river Isis, and on the road from Oxford to London. The inhabitants are principally agricultural, but there is a paper mill on the bank of the Isis. The Knights Templars had formerly a preceptory, founded by Queen Maud, the site of which was given to the Powell family, of whom was descended Milton's first wife, Mary Powell. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £75. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, was built in the 12th century. The parochial charities produce about £5 per annum.

SANDFORD, a par. in the hund. of Wootton, co. Oxford, 7 miles N.W. of Woodstock, its post town, 3¼ N.E. of Neat Enstone, and 2 from Great Tew. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Dorme, and is wholly agricultural. The par. includes the hmlt. of Ledwell. The surface is varied with hills of no great elevation. The soil is a strong clay alternated with sand. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Enclosure Act in 1767. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £200. The church was restored in 1845 at the expense of the Rev. Thomas Curme. The chancel has been lately rebuilt, and a painted window inserted. The interior contains a pulpit of carved stone, also a carved oak screen. The parochial charities produce about £33 per annum, of which £6 goes to Mead's school. Sandford Park and the manor house are the principal residences.

SANDFORD, a tnshp. in the par. of Prees, co. Salop, 5 miles W. of Market Drayton.

SANDFORD, a tnshp. in the par. of Felton, co. Salop, 5 miles S.E. of Oswestry.

SANDFORD, a hmlt. in the par. of Warcop, E. ward, co. Westmoreland, 3 miles S.E. of Appleby, and 4 N.W. of Brough. It is situated on the river Eden, and was formerly held by the Sandfords, Viponts, and Warcops. In the vicinity are four large tumuli, one of which was opened in 1766, and found to contain calcined bones and military weapons, and near them was formerly a circle of stones about 50 yards in diameter.

SANDFORD, a hmlt. in the par. of Morden, co. Dorset, 5 miles N. of Wareham.

SANDFORD, a hmlt. in the par. of Cheltenham, co. Gloucester, near Cheltenham.

SANDFORD, a tythg. in the par. of Godshill, Isle of Wight, co. Hants, 5 miles S.E. of Newport.

SANDFORD, a tythg. in the par. of Kingsclere, co. Hants, near Kingsclere.

SANDFORD, a lib. in the par. and hund. of Sonning, co. Berks, 3 miles E. of Reading. It is joined with Woodley to form a township.

SANDFORD, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of St. Helen, Abingdon, hund. of Hormer, co. Berks, 3 miles N.W. of Abingdon, and 7 S.W. of Oxford. It is situated at the confluence of the river Ock with the Thames, and near the Wilts and Berks canal. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic. of Abingdon, in the dioc. of Oxford. The church was erected on the site of an old chapel in 1850.

SANDFORD, a vil. in the par. of Stonehouse, co. Lanark, Scotland, near Strathavon.

SANDFORD, a vil. in the par. of St. Peter, bar. of Uppercross, co. Dublin, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 1½ mile S. of Dublin, near Ranelagh, on the road to Enniskerry. A chapel was founded here by Lord Mountsandford, from which circumstance the place derives its name. There is a school and a library.

SANDFORD-ORCAS, a par. in the hund. of Horethorne, co. Somerset, 3 miles N. of Sherborne, its post town, and 2 S.E. of Marston railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. The land is chiefly in pasture. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £260, and the glebe comprises 45 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £283. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is an ancient structure, with a tower containing five bells. The register dates from 1538. The parochial charities produce about £1 10*s*. per annum. There is a school for both sexes, in which a Sunday-school is also held. Hubert Hutchings, Esq., is lord of the manor.

SANDGATE, a chplry., post town, and watering-place, partly in the lib. of the town of Folkestone, and partly in the par. of Cheriton, lathe of Shepway, co. Kent, 1½ mile S.W. of Folkestone, and 8 W. of Dover. The South-Eastern railway has a junction station for Shorncliffe and Sandgate. The name of the village is derived from its situation at one of those gaps or gates of the sea so frequent along the E. coast, and from the sandy nature of the soil on which it is built. The castle is said to have been originally built in the reign of Richard II., but was entirely reconstructed by Henry VIII. on the plan of Deal and Walmer castles, and at the commencement of the present century was modernised, and the central tower converted into a martello tower. Barracks have also been erected, and a permanent military camp formed in 1855 on the plateau above the town, capable of accommodating 6,000 men. At the bottom of the hill commences the New Military canal, cut in a zigzag course along the coast, and following the direction of the hills for near 23 miles to Cliff End, near Rye, in Sussex. The village, which is close to the sea, commands a clear view of the French coast, and is sheltered by a range of hills rising immediately behind. The air is salubrious, and since the establishment of the Local Board of Health the drainage has been improved and the water supply abundant from the Seabrook springs. It consists principally of one long street of well-built but irregularly planned houses, and numerous detached villas, all built since 1773, when a shipbuilder of the name of Wilson established two shipbuilding yards, and laid the foundation of the modern town. It possesses hot and cold baths, circulating library, reading-rooms, a dispensary, and a literary institution. The population of the ecclesiastical district in 1861 was 1,669, exclusive of about 5,500 soldiers in the camp. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £260. The church was founded in 1822 by John fourth Earl of Darnley, but subsequently enlarged and rebuilt. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. There are National schools, built in 1846, also infant schools. On the summit of a neighbouring hill are traces of an elliptical camp of two acres, attributed to King Ethelbert, and a little N. of the village, on Shorncliffe Hill, a summer camp, formed during the great French war. A pleasure fair is held on 23rd July.

SANDHAM. See SANDOWN, co. Hants.

SANDHAVEN, a small fishing vil. and seaport town in the par of Pitsligo, co. Aberdeen, Scotland. It has a safe and commodious harbour. The dues are free for everything in connection with the fishing.

SANDHEAD, a vil. in the par. of Stoneykirk, co. Wigtown, Scotland, 6 miles S.E. of Port Patrick. It has a natural harbour in Luce Bay, with accommodation for the anchorage of lime and coal sloops. Some of the inhabitants are employed in the mackerel and cod fisheries.

SANDHILL-HEATH, a hmlt. in the par. of Rockbourne, co. Hants, 2 miles N.W. of Fordingbridge.

SANDHILLS, a station on the W. section of the Lancashire and Yorkshire railway, the first after leaving Liverpool.

SANDHOE, a tnshp. in the par. of St. John Lee, S. div. of Tindale ward, co. Northumberland, 2½ miles N.E. of Hexham, its post town, and 2 N.W. of Corbridge railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the N. side of the river Tyne. Beaufort House and Sandhoe House are the principal residences, and near the former is a Roman Catholic chapel now in disuse.

SANDHOLME, a hmlt. in the par. of St. John, and lib. of the borough of Beverley, East Riding co. York, 2 miles from Beverley. It is in conjunction with Storkhill to form a tnshp. The Wesleyans have a place of worship.

SANDHOLME, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Gilberdike, par. of Eastrington, East Riding co. York, 5 miles N.E. of Howden. It is in conjunction with Hive and Owstrop.

SANDHURST, a par. in the hund. of Sonning, co. Berks, 5 miles S.E. of Wokingham, its post town, and about a quarter of a mile from the Reading and Reigate railway. The village, which is small, is situated on the river Blackwater. The soil is of a sandy nature. In the neighbourhood are a Roman camp and several barrows. Sandhurst Royal Military College is situated in extensive grounds, with a sheet of water in front, and surrounded by plantations. It was originally founded by the late Duke of York in 1799, and first temporarily placed at High Wycombe, but thence removed to Great Marlow in 1802, and finally to its present site in 1812. The edifice, which has a Doric portico of eight columns, has a main front 434 feet in length, but the whole principal façade is 900 feet. It is furnished with a chapel, observatory, riding-school, 110 feet by 50, study and dining halls, dormitories, and an octagonal room in which the public examinations are held, besides houses set apart for the governor, lieutenant-governor, and officers. The various branches of study consist of mathematics, fortification, surveying, drawing, history, classics, &c. The library has a choice collection of books, also portraits of George III. and his queen, and of the late governors. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £150, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, has a spired tower containing two bells. The interior of the church contains a brass to the Haile family. The whole edifice has been rebuilt at an outlay of £1,300, chiefly defrayed by the present incumbent. The parochial charities produce about £15. There is a National school for both sexes. Robert Gibson, Esq., is lord of the manor. Sandhurst Lodge is the principal residence.

SANDHURST, a par. in the upper div. of Dudstone hund., co. Gloucester, 3 miles N. of Gloucester, its post town. The village is situated near the Severn, and is chiefly agricultural. The soil is various, being in some parts sandy, and in others clay, but near the river bank it is of a red loam. There are some brick kilns. The great tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £480, the vicarial for £205, and the glebe comprises 12 acres. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £310, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Lawrence, has a tower containing six bells. The parochial charities produce about £30 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes. The manor once belonged to Edmar the Saxon, but soon after the death of Edward the Confessor it was taken from him by Earl Harold, and eventually passed into the family of the De Willingtons. Wallsworth Hall is the principal residence. The Dean and Chapter of Gloucester and Captain De Winton are lords of the manor.

SANDHURST, a par. in the hund. of Selbrittenden, lower div. of Scray lathe, co. Kent, 7 miles S.E. of Cranbrook, 7 S.W. of Tenterden, and 6 N.E. of Etchingham railway station. Staplehurst is its post town. The village, which is large, is chiefly agricultural. It is situated on the river Rother, which divides this parish from the county of Sussex. The land is partly in hop grounds and common. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £880, and the glebe comprises 9 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £613, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is an ancient structure, with a tower containing five bells. The register dates from 1563. The parochial charities produce about £6 per annum. There are National and British schools. The Wesleyans and Baptists have each a place of worship. Downgate is the principal residence. A fair is held on 25th May for cattle and pedlary.

SAND-HUTTON. See HUTTON, SAND, co. York.

SANDIACRE, a par. in the hund. of Morleston, co. Derby, 9 miles E. of Derby, its post town, and 25 from Leicester. It is a station on a branch line of the Midland railway. The village is situated on the river Erewash, and on the road from Derby to Nottingham. It was formerly a market town, and comprises the tnshp. of Springfarm. In the vicinity are brick kilns and a starch manufactory. Some of the females are employed in warp net-making, and in the manufacture of lace by power loom. The Erewash and Derby canal, communicating with the Grand Junction, passes through the parish. The impropriate tithes belong to the Prebendary of Sandiacre, in the cathedral of Lichfield. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £300, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Giles, is partly Saxon, with a spired tower containing three bells. It is mentioned in Domesday Survey, and forms a conspicuous object in the surrounding landscape. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a place of worship.

SANDILANDS, a station on the Douglas and Lanark branch of the Caledonian railway, 3½ miles from Douglas.

SANDILANDS. See SANDYLANDS, co. Northumberland.

SANDIWAY, a hmlt. in the lordship of Weaverham, co. Chester, 3 miles S.W. of Northwich.

SANDLEFORD PRIORY, an ext. par. place in the hund. of Faircross, co. Berks, 2 miles S. of Newbury. It is situated on the river Emborne, and was once the site of a priory founded by Geoffrey Earl of Perche, in 1200.

SANDLIN, a hmlt. in the par. of Leigh, co. Worcester, 6 miles S.W. of Worcester.

SANDNESS, a district in the par. of Walls in the Mainland, co. Orkney and Shetland Islands, Scotland, 3 miles S. of Papa Stour. It is situated on the W. side of the Mainland, and on the S. coast of St. Magnus bar. Sandness is often called Sannes, and derives its name from the headland of Sandness, which flanks the S. side of the entrance of Papa Sound. It was formerly a separate parish, but is now in conjunction with the parish of Walls. The village is about 6 miles distant from the church at Walls, but Divine service is performed here once a month. There is a charity school.

SANDON, a par. in the hund. of Chelmsford, co. Essex, 3 miles S.E. of Chelmsford, its post town, and 7 W. of Maldon. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on Sandon Brook, which flows to the river Chelmer. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The soil is of a varied nature, being sandy in the higher parts, but a stiff wet loam upon a substratum of clay in the lower. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £607, in the patron. of Queen's College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, has a square tower containing five bells. The interior of the church contains a monument to the wife of Dr. Walton, the polyglottist, who was once rector. The parochial charities produce about £23 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes. George B. M. Lovibond, Esq., of London, is lord of the manor and chief landowner.

SANDON a par. in the hund. of Odsey, co. Herts, 5 miles S.W. of Royston, its post town, and 4 N.W. of Buntingford. It is situated under the range of chalk hills, and comprises the hmlt. of Red Hill. The inhabitants of the village, which is considerable, are chiefly engaged in agricultural pursuits. The appropriate tithes belong to the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's, London. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £323, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient structure, with a square tower containing five bells. The register dates from 1678. The parochial charities produce about £3 per annum. At Sandon Church Ende there is a National school. The Independents have a place of worship at Red Hill.

SANDON, a par. in the S. div. of Pirehill hund., co. Stafford, 4¾ miles S.E. of Stone, its post town, and 5 N.E. of Stafford. It is a station on the North Staffordshire line of railway. The village, which is situated near the Grand Trunk canal and the river Trent, is chiefly agricultural. The par. includes the hmlts. of Day-Hills and Smallrice, and was formerly held by the Saxon Eorl Alfgar, Hugh Lupus, the De Malbancs, Verdons, Erdeswicks, and Hamiltons, who rebuilt the seat. During the civil war in 1642 a battle was fought at Hopton Heath between the parliamentary forces, under Sir William Brereton, and the royal army, under the Earl of Northampton. The surface rises gradually from the N. bank of the river Trent. There are quarries of good building-stone. Sandon Hall, the seat of the Earl of Harrowby, is situated in the midst of an extensive park. On an eminence in the park stands an obelisk or Doric pillar 75 feet high, erected by the late Earl of Harrowby in 1806, in commemoration of William Pitt, and in the midst of a cluster of trees on the E. side of the park is a Gothic shrine with a roof, containing two tablets to the Right Hon. Spencer Percival. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £366, and the vicarial for £356, besides a glebe comprising 8 acres. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £355. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient stone structure with a tower containing four bells. The interior of the church is decorated with several stained windows, the E. one bearing the arms of the Staffords, Ferrers, and other families, also a brass of the late Earl of Harrowby, and a marble monument to his countess. The register dates from 1635. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum. There are parochial schools for both sexes, entirely supported by the Earl of Harrowby, who is lord of the manor and principal landowner. Sandon confers the inferior title of viscount on the family of Ryder, Earls of Harrowby.

SANDOWN, a castle in the par. of Sholden, hund. of Cornilo, lathe of St. Augustine, co. Kent, 1 mile N. of Deal. It was built by Henry VIII. to protect the S. coast against France, and takes its name from its situation, which abounds in sand hills.

SANDOWN, or SANDHAM, a district par. and watering-place in the par. of Brading, Isle of Wight, co. Hants, 6 miles S. of Ryde, 6½ from Ventnor, and 8 S.E. of Newport. It is a station on the Isle of Wight railway. This place, which was only a quarter of a century ago a poor fishing village, is now a prosperous town, containing three first-class hotels and numerous marine villas and mansions. It is situated on the S. side of the island, occupying a gentle acclivity at the head of Sandown Bay, which stretches 5 miles from Dunnose to Culver Cliff, and commands varied views of sea and land. The bathing is considered peculiarly invigorating on account of the saltness of the sea-water at this point, and the shore is smooth, firm, and free from shingle, rendering no artificial appliances requisite; there are, however, numerous bathing-machines on the beach, and a bath-house for hot and cold sea-baths. The shops are abundantly supplied, and there are numerous inns and lodging-houses. At the W. end of the village are the barracks, at present occupied by the Isle of Wight militia, and a little to the E. stands Sandown Castle, built by Henry VIII., flanked by bastions and surrounded by a moat. It is still used as a fort, and commands the bay. The population in 1851 was 1,030, and in 1861 1,743. The strata in the vicinity consist of green sandstone and wealden clay, with iron pyrites in the cliffs and mottled pebbles resembling agate on the beach. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £200, in the patron. of the Church Patronage Society. The church, called Christ Church, was built in 1848, at a cost of £4,000. There are three Dissenting places of worship and a National school Near the village is Sandown Cottage, once the residence of John Wilkes, editor of the Northern Star, who set up a pillar here to his friend Churchill the poet.

SANDRA. See SANDERA ISLAND, co. Inverness.

SANDRIDGE, a par. in the hund. of Cashio, or lib. of St. Alban's, co. Herts, 2½ miles N.E. of St. Alban's, its post town, and 4½ N.W. of Hatfield. The village, which is chiefly agricultural, is situated amongst the hills. The soil is of a light nature, with a gravelly subsoil. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £313. The church, dedicated to St. Leonard, has a square tower containing two bells. The parochial charities produce about £3 per annum. There is a parochial school for both sexes.

SANDRIDGE, a demesne of Lord Audley, in the hund. of Melksham, co. Wilts, 2 miles N.E. of Melksham, and 27 N.W. of Forest Salisbury. It is situated on the river Avon, near Chippenham.

SANDRINGHAM. See SANDERINGHAM, co. Norfolk.

SANDS, or THE SANDS, a hmlt. in the par. of Great Farringdon, co. Berks, 2 miles S.E. of Farringdon.

SANDSEND, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Lythe, North Riding co. York, 3 miles N.W. of Whitby. It is a subport to Whitby.

SANDSIDE BAY, on the coast of Caithness, Scotland, 1 mile N.W. of Reay.

SANDSTING, an ancient par. in the Mainland, co. Orkney and Shetland, coast of Scotland. It is in conjunction with Aithsting (which see).

SANDTOFT, a hmlt. in the par. of Belton, co. Lincoln, 1 mile N. of Epworth.

SANDWELL PARK, a seat of the Earl of Dartmouth, co. Stafford, 4 miles N.W. of Birmingham.

SANDWICH, a cinque port, market town, and municipal and parliamentary borough in the hund. of Eastry, lathe of St. Augustine, co. Kent, 12 miles E. of Canterbury, and 68 S.E. of London by road, or 98 miles by the South-Eastern railway, which has a station here. It is situated on the flats or marsh lands of the Stour, about 2 miles from the sea at Pegwell Bay, between Ramsgate and Deal. The town has always been of importance, and is associated with many historical events of interest. It most probably grew out of the ruins of the important Roman station Rutupium, or Ritupæ, popularly known as Richboro' Castle, which stands about 1 mile to the N.W., and was built in the reign of the Emperor Vespasian. The walls, which are built of chalk and cement, faced with square blocks of granite, are still 24 feet high after a lapse of near 2,000 years. To the southward of the castle are traces of an amphitheatre 210 feet in diameter, where coins and other antiquities have been found, proving this to have been once an important station. It continued to flourish after the departure of the Roman legions, and was the Saxon Sondwic, or sand town. The Danes attacked it twice during the first half of the 9th century, but were repulsed; they, however, pillaged the town several times between the years 852 and 1046. Canute landed here in 1010, and again in 1029, when he gave it to Christ Church, Canterbury. It was also visited by Hardicanute in 1039, and was made a cinque port by Edward the Confessor. At Domesday Survey there were nearly 400 houses, but they were all burnt or razed to the ground by the French in 1217. Richard Cœur-de-Lion landed here after his return from captivity in Germany; and it was here that Edward III. embarked for France on several occasions, as also Henry V. in 1416; and Edward the Black Prince landed, in company with the French king, his prisoner. In the reigns of Henry IV. and Henry VI., Sandwich was plundered or burnt by the French several times, to avoid which Edward IV. considerably strengthened the town by fortifications. Henry VIII., Elizabeth, Cromwell, and Charles II. successively visited the town, and Queen Elizabeth contributed greatly to its prosperity by directing the harbour, which was then nearly choked up, to be cleansed, and by allowing the Walloons, or French Protestants, to settle in the town. It has returned two members to parliament since the reign of Edward III., but by the Reform Bill is grouped in conjunction with Deal and Walmer. It was incorporated by Edward the Confessor, and is now governed by a mayor (who is returning officer), 4 aldermen, and 12 councillors, with the style of "mayor, jurats, and commonalty of the town and port of Sandwich." The population of the municipal borough in 1851 was 2,966, with 602 inhabited houses, which in 1861 had decreased to 2,944, with 649 inhabited houses; but the parliamentary borough, including Deal, had increased in the same period from 12,710 to 13,750 in 1861. The principal export trade is in corn, malt, flour, wool, and hops, and the import in iron, coals, and timber.—Sandwich is irregularly built, consisting chiefly of narrow streets, and the houses are for the most part old-fashioned, but many of them large. The streets are in general paved and lighted with gas, and the town supplied with good water. A portion of the town wall and the old Fishergate are still remaining. The guildhall was erected in 1579, and in it the cucking-stool for scolds is still kept, and a quarterly court of sessions for the peace is held. The gaol was built in 1830. It contains two commercial banks, a savings-bank, ship-building yard, iron foundry, seed-crushing mill, besides several breweries and malting establishments.—For ecclesiastical purposes it is divided into the three parishes of St. Peter, St. Clement, and St. Mary, within the dioc. of Canterbury: the first is a rect.,* val. £150, in the patron. of the lord chancellor and the mayor; the other two are both vics.,* val. respectively £310 and £117, in the patron. of the archdeacon. St. Peter's church is an ancient structure with a tower, the lower part of which is of stone and the upper brick, and was formerly surmounted by a spire, which fell in 1661, demolishing the S. aisle. It had formerly a chantry, and contains effigies of Sir J. Grove and one Ellis. St. Clement's church is a massive structure with a Norman tower rising from the centre, supported by four semicircular arches, and built of Caen stone. It contains several old wooden stalls, and an ancient octagonal font. The architectural effect has been greatly marred by injudicious repairs and alterations. The tower has been lately restored at a cost of more than £1,000. St. Mary's church, though an ancient structure, has been partially rebuilt and a steeple added in 1718. It had formerly a chantry, Lady chapel, and hermitage attached. The interior contains a monument to Knollys, author of "The History of the Turks." The Independents, Wesleyans, and Baptists have each a place of worship. The free grammar school was founded in the reign of Elizabeth by Sir Roger Manwood, a native, and has four scholarships, two in Oxford and two in Cambridge University. There are also National schools, four Sunday-schools, and twelve private schools. There are three hospitals, or almshouses; the largest and most ancient, St. Bartholomew's, for 16 aged persons, has a revenue of £800 per annum; St. Thomas's, for 12 persons, and St. John's, were founded in the 13th and 14th centuries—though both have been since rebuilt.—There is a stone bridge, with a swing-bridge in the centre for the passage of vessels. The harbour is in great need of being restored and enlarged; only small vessels can come up to the town, and although an Act was passed in 1847 to improve and maintain the haven, but little has been done to effect that object—the one steam vessel employed not being sufficient to effect any permanent improvement, so that the harbour is becoming more shallow. Hoys sail weekly for London. Shocks of an earthquake were felt here in 1579. The plague raged here with considerable violence on three occasions during the reign of Charles I., and again in 1666. It gives the title of earl to the Montague family.—Market days are Wednesday and Saturday. Fairs are held every alternate Monday for cattle, and a pleasure fair on 4th December.

SANDWICK, a par. on the W. side of Mainland, Orkney Islands, coast of Scotland. It extends 7½ miles in length, with an extreme breadth of 4½ miles, and is bounded by the Atlantic ocean, and by the pars. of Birsay, Harray, Stennis, and Stromness. The surface is of a diversified character, abounding in hills, the highest rising from 300 to 400 feet. The interior is watered by two or three small lochs. The prevailing rocks are trap, sandstone, flagstone, and granite. It has a rocky coast rising sheer from 400 to 500 feet, but one point is a harbour for small vessels. The soil is of various qualities. Near the shore stands the ruins of Snusgar Castle, and in other parts of the parish are many tumuli and other antiquities. This par. is in the presb. of Cairston, synod of Orkney. The stipend of the minister is £158. The parish church was erected in 1836. There is a Free church for this and the parish of Harray. There are also an United Presbyterian church, and Independent chapel, a parochial library, and a non-parochial school.

SANDWICK AND CONINGSBURGH, a quoad sacra par. in the southern part of the Mainland, co. Orkney and Shetland, Scotland, 14 miles S.W. of Lerwick. It is situated near Sandwick Bay, which has 7 fathoms water, but is exposed to the E. winds. It is in the presb. of Lerwick, and in the patron. of the crown. The stipend of the minister is £120. The church is a government one erected in 1807. The Independents and Wesleyans have each a place of worship. There are a parochial school and a library.

SANDWITH, a tnshp. in the par. of St. Bees, ward of Allerdale-above-Derwent, co. Cumberland, 2 miles S. of Whitehaven. It is situated near the coast, under St. Bees Head, where is a lighthouse. Samphire grows in abundance on the cliffs.

SANDY, a par. in the hunds. of Wixamtree and Biggleswade, co. Bedford, 4 miles N.W. of Biggleswade, and 3½ W. of Potton. It is a station on the Great Northern railway. The village, which is extensive, is situated on the river Irvel, and on the road from Potton to Bedford. A large portion of the land is laid out in garden grounds, and cucumbers are grown in the open air. The soil is chiefly of a sandy nature, but is rich and fertile. The substratum is sandstone intermixed with iron, fossil wood, and small pebbles, in which yellow quartz predominates. The hmlts. of Beeston Green, Gritford, and Stratford are within this parish. It was formerly a Roman station on the way from St. Alban's to Godmanchester, and was designated Salinæ. In the vicinity are traces of two camps, one of which is called Cæsar's camp, of about 30 acres. At Sandy Warren is a meet for the Cambridgeshire hounds. The tithes were commuted for land and money payments under Enclosure Acts in 1789 and 1798, and the glebe comprises 323 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £769. The church, dedicated to St. Swithin, is an ancient edifice, with a tower containing a clock and five bells. The parochial charities produce about £90 per annum. A free school for girls was built in 1840, and a public one for boys in 1843. The Wesleyans and Baptists have each a place of worship. Several Roman coins, urns, and fragments of pottery have been found here and at Chesterfield. The Hasells is the principal residence. Francis Pym, Esq., is lord of the manor.

SANDYCOVE, a vil. in the bar. of Rathdown, co. Dublin, Ireland, half a mile from Kingstown. It is a station on the Kingstown and Bray branch of the Dublin, Wicklow, and Wexford railway.

SANDYCOVE, a vil. in the par. of Ringrone, bar. of Kinsale, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 1½ mile S. of Kinsale. The village is situated on Sandycove Bay, and has the parish church in the vicinity, and the remains of Ringrone castle erected in the time of Richard II. by the De Courcey family.

SANDY END, a reach or bend of the river Thames, opposite Battersea New Park, where the Imperial gasworks now stand. It was once the spot where Addison and Steele resided in 1708.

SANDYFORD, a vil. in the bar. of Rathdown, co. Dublin, 1 mile S.E. of Dundrum.

SANDYFORD, a vil. in the par. of Wolstanton, co. Stafford, 2 miles N. of Newcastle-under-Lyme.

SANDY-GATE, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Upper Hallam, West Riding co. York, 3 miles S.W. of Sheffield.

SANDY ISLAND, a sandbank in the North Sea, 1 mile W. of Heligoland.

SANDYLANDS, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Cartington, par. of Rothbury, co. Northumberland, 2 miles N.W. of Rothbury.

SANDY LANE HEAD, a hmlt. in the par. of Drayton-in-Hales, co. Stafford, near Drayton.

SANDYMOUNT, a post-office vil. in the par. of St. Mary, Donnybrook, co. of the city of Dublin, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles S.E. of Dublin. It is situated on the S. side of Dublin Bay, and is a suburb. There are a parish school, library, savings-bank, and a branch establishment of the Sisters of Charity, with its chapel.

SANDY-VALE, a suburb of Ashton-under-Lyne, hund. of Salford, co. Lancaster. It contains Hoyle's print and dye works.

SANKEY, GREAT, a chplry. in the par. of Prescot, co. Lancaster, 2½ miles S.W. of Warrington, its post town, and 7½ N.E. of Prescot. It has a station at Sankey Bridges, on the Grand Junction railway. The village is situated on Sankey Brook, and on the old Manchester and Liverpool turnpike road. The railway viaduct crosses the Sankey canal near this place. The latter was constructed in the years 1755-68, being the first canal made in England. It is 10 miles in length, and has 10 locks, with a fall of 78 feet from St. Helen's, where it commences, to the Mersey, from which place it was lengthened 3½ miles to Runcorn Gap. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Chester, val. £103. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure, with a tower containing a clock and one bell. The parochial charities produce about £3 per annum. There is a day school for both sexes, in which a Sunday-school is also held. Lord Lilford is lord of the manor.

SANKEY, LITTLE, a parcel in the tnshp. of Warrington, hund. of West Derby, co. Lancaster, 3 miles N.W. of Warrington.

SANQUHAR, a par. and royal borough, having separate jurisdiction, but locally situate in the district of Nithsdale, co. Dumfries, Scotland. It contains, besides the borough of its own name, the vils. of Crawickmill, Crawickbridge, Windyedge, and Wanlockhead. It extends in length about 18 miles from N.E. to S.W., with an extreme breadth of about 9 miles, and is bounded by the parishes of Kirkconnel, Durisdeer, and Penpont, and by the counties of Ayr and Lanark. The surface is of a hilly and rugged nature, especially that lofty tract which is known by the name of the Lowthers, or Lothiers, rising with gradual slope from the S. to the elevation of 3,130 feet, and at Blacklarg Hill to 2,890 feet. These hills, though bleak and barren in the exterior, are rich in mineral wealth, and are pastured by vast flocks of sheep. In a S.W. direction the Vale of Nith crosses the parish, dividing it almost into two equal portions, and is subject to inundations. In other parts the parish is watered by the Euchan, Crawick, and several other trout streams. The land in the river valleys is tolerably early and productive, but along the foot of the hills the soil is partly moss and partly clay, affording only a scanty crop. Sanquhar is the principal coal mart in this part of the country, and large quantities are supplied to Dumfries and other towns. The coal-field, which extends into the adjoining parish of Kirkconnel, is 7 miles in length by 2½ in breadth, and the veins are from 3 to 4 feet 6 inches in thickness. At the eastern extremity of the parish, about 9 miles from the town of Sanquhar, are the lead mines of Wanlockhead. The parish is traversed along the vale of the Nith by the road from Glasgow to Dumfries, as also by the Glasgow and South-Western railway.—The town of Sanquhar is about 13 miles N.W. of Thornhill, and 56 S.W. of Edinburgh, and is a station on the Glasgow and South-Western railway. It is situated on the river Nith, and was created into a burgh of barony in 1484, and assumed the dignity of a royal burgh by charter from James VI. in 1596. Its government is invested in a provost, three bailies, a dean of guild, treasurer, and eleven councillors, It is contributory to Dumfries in returning one member to parliament. The town consists principally of one long street, irregularly built. The townhall, which stands at the end of the street, has a tower and clock. It was erected at the expense of the last Duke of Queensberry, by whom a considerable sum has been expended on the improvement of the town. There are two banks, one a branch of the British Linen Company, and one of the Western Bank of Scotland; also a savings-bank and a mechanics' institute.—It has long been famous for its woollen manufactures, and from the looms in the town 20,000 yards of tartan cloth are produced annually. There are also many persons employed in cotton weaving and in embroidering muslins for the Glasgow manufacturers. In the town is an extensive spade and shovel manufactory; and at the village of Crawickmill, about half a mile N.W. of the town, is an extensive carpet manufactory employing many hands.—On a steep declivity overlooking the river Nith, and at a short distance from the town, are the ruins of Sanquhar Castle, once a quadrangular building of immense strength, with towers at the angles. It was formerly surrounded by a moat, over which was a drawbridge, and was occupied by the Rosses and Crichtons, who were heritable sheriffs of Niths-Dale, but was purchased by the Douglases of Drumlanrig in 1630, in which great family the castle and barony still remain, being the property of the Dukes of Queensberry. A moat-hill, with the ruins of a hospital, is to be seen near the castle. The hills, which are partly green, and partly covered with heath, are productive of grouse and other game.—The parish is in the presb. of Penpont and synod of Dumfries. The parish church, which has a square tower, was rebuilt on the site of an ancient structure at the end of the main street. At a remote period Sanquhar was a rectory, and in the 15th century was created a prebend in the cathedral church of Glasgow. There are two United Presbyterian churches, a Free church, Reformed Presbyterian church, and a chapel for the Baptists. At Wanlockhead is a Free church; also a chapel of the Established Church, recently erected, and endowed at the expense of the Duke of Buccleuch. There are a parochial and five other schools. About a mile from the castle is Elliock House, where the Admirable Crichton was born. Fairs are held on the first Mondays in October and November, old style.

SANTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Irton, ward of Allerdale-above-Derwent, co. Cumberland, 5 miles N.E. of Ravenglass. It is situated on the river Mite, and is said to derive its name from the drifting sands which have covered most of the adjoining lands. The nursery-grounds here are noted for rare and valuable plants. The village, which had once an Austin priory, founded by King Stephen, is built on the site of a Roman station, where coins, urns, furnaces, and a large brass cross have been found. The inhabitants are wholly engaged in agriculture. The tnshp. includes the hmlt. of Melthwaite.

SANTON-DOWNHAM, a par. in the hund. of Lackford, co. Suffolk. See DOWNHAM SANTON.

SANTON, HIGH and LOW, hmlts. in the par. of Wrawby, co. Lincoln, 4 miles N.W. of Glanford-Brigg.

SANTON HOUSE, a par. in the hund. of Grimshoe, co. Norfolk, 2 miles E. of Brandon, its post town, and 3½ N.W. of Thetford. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the Brandon railway and the river Brandon, or Lesser Ouse, which separates this parish from the county of Suffolk. The soil is of a sandy nature. A large portion of the land is in heath and plantations, well stocked with game. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £80. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £80. The church, dedicated to St. Helen, is an ancient stone structure, and has recently undergone thorough restoration.

SANTRY, or SANTREFF, a par. and post-office vil. in the bar. of Coolock, co. Dublin, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles N. of Dublin. The soil is mostly good, and the scenery attractive. The village was burned by the rebels in 1641, and contains numerous residences of the gentry. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Dublin, val. £297, in the patron. of the crown. The church was renovated in 1709, and has tombs of the Domvile and Barry families. There is a chartered school, and a police station has been established in the village. Santry House is the chief residence.

SAPCOTE, a par. in the hund. of Sparkenhoe, co. Leicester, 4 miles S.E. of Hinckley, its post town, and 2 W. of Broughton Astley railway station. The village, which is considerable, is situated near the river Soar and the ancient Fosse Way. The inhabitants are employed in agriculture and in frame-work knitting. The soil is various, but chiefly adapted for dairy farms, on which cheese of excellent quality is made. There is a sulphur spa, designated the Golden Well, over which baths were erected in 1806 at an expense of £600. The manor formerly belonged to the Basset family, whose mansion was built on the site of an ancient castle, once surrounded by a moat. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment, under an Act of Enclosure in 1778, and the glebe comprises 270 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £625. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient structure, with a square tower, surmounted by a spire and containing a clock and two bells. The interior of the church contains a font of great antiquity, also several monuments to the Frewen family. The charities comprise several bequests for distribution among the poor, and five almshouses for aged men, erected at the expense of Thomas Frewen, Esq., who is lord of the manor. In a field called Black Piece a curious tesselated pavement was discovered in 1770.

SAPEY, PRITCHARD, or LOWER, a par. in the upper div. of Doddingtree hund., co. Worcester, 10 miles W. of Worcester, its post town, and 5 W. of Martley. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Frome, and is wholly agricultural. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £220. The church is dedicated to St. Bartholomew.

SAPEY, UPPER, a par. in the hund. of Broxash, co. Hereford, 4 miles N.E. of Bromyard, its post town, and 8 E. of Tenbury. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on Sapey Brook, and on the Hereford and Stourport turnpike road. The land is partly in hop-grounds. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £287 10*s., and the glebe comprises 14 acres. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £258. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is an ancient stone structure, with a square tower containing two bells. The parochial charities produce about £20 per annum. There is a school with an annuity of £11. In the neighbourhood are traces of a Roman camp surrounded by a single trench.

SAPHOCK, a quoad sacra par. in the par. of Fyvie, co. Aberdeen, Scotland, near Turriff.

SAPISTON, a par. in the hund. of Blackbourn, co. Suffolk, 3½ miles N.W. of Ixworth, its post town, and 7 from Bury St. Edmund's. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the Thet, a branch of the river Brandon. It is wholly agricultural. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Ely, val. £100. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is an ancient stone structure, with a thatched roof and a square embattled tower. The interior of the church contains a monument to Farmer Austin, who resided here with Bloomfield. There is a parochial school, erected by the Duke of Grafton, who is lord of the manor.

SAPLEY, a lordship in the hund. of Hurstingstone, co. Huntingdon, 2 miles N.E. of Huntingdon.

SAPPERTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Church Broughton, hund. of Appletree, co. Derby, 10 miles W. of Derby, on a branch of the river Dove.

SAPPERTON, a par. in the hund. of Bisley, co. Gloucester, 5 miles N.W. of Cirencester, its post town, and 4 from Tetbury Road railway station. The village is situated on the Thames and Severn canal, and near the Great Western railway. The tunnel of the above canal, which passes underneath Hagley Wood, is 250 feet below the surface, and above 2 miles in length. The par. includes the tythg. of Frampton. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The soil is alluvial upon a subsoil of oolite. At Beacon Hill Camp, in this parish, two urns filled with Roman coins were found in 1759. The living is a rect.* with the cur. of Frampton annexed, in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £367. The church, dedicated to St. Kenelm, is an ancient cruciform structure with a tower. The interior of the church contains effigies of Sir Henry Poole and Sir Robert Atkyns; the latter was historian of the county and lord chief baron of the exchequer. The parochial charities produce about £64 per annum, besides Sir R. Atkyns's free school. Earl Bathurst is lord of the manor.

SAPPERTON, a par. in the soke of Grantham, parts of Kesteven, co. Lincoln, 5 miles N.W. of Falkingham, its post town, and 7 S.E. of Grantham railway station. The village, which is small, is chiefly agricultural. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Enclosure Act in 1780. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £190. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is an ancient structure with a spired tower containing one bell. Sir Glynne Earle Welby-Gregory, Bart., is lord of the manor.

SARCLET, a vil. in the par. of Wick, co. Caithness, Scotland, 4 miles S.W. of Wick. There is a convenient harbour for fishing boats. The inhabitants are principally engaged in the fisheries.

SAREDON, GREAT AND LITTLE, a tnshp. in the par. of Shareshill, E. div. of Cuttlestone hund., co. Stafford, 4 miles S.E. of Penkridge, and 7 N.E. of Wolverhampton.

SARISBURY, a chplry. in the par. of Titchfield, co. Hants, 5 miles W. of Fareham. Southampton is its post town. It is situated on the river Hamble, and includes Swanwick and Warsash. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £120, in the patron. of the Vicar of Titchfield.

SARK, SERK, SERQ, SERCQ, or CERQ, one of the Channel Islands, 6½ miles E. of Guernsey, within which bailiwick it is included. It lies in N. lat. 49° 25′ 3″, and W. long. 2° 22′ 45″, and consists of Great and Little Sark, united by a dangerous coupée, or neck, 8 yards long, and 5 feet broad, along which is a footpath 200 feet above the sea. It is supposed by some to be the Sarnia mentioned by Antonine, an hypothesis confirmed by the similarity of name and the discovery of Roman coins in 1719. There are traces of a monastery founded in the 6th century by St. Magliore, the site of which was given by Queen Elizabeth in 1565 to the Carteret family. Abrupt cliffs, from 200 to 300 feet in height, bound it on all sides, often hollowed out by the waves into caves, as at Gosselin-Havre, l'Eperquerie Bay, and Le Creux cove, where there is a funnel cave much visited by tourists. The island is separated from Guernsey by the Herm and the Great and Little Russell, channels through which the tides run strong. It extends about 3 miles in length, with a varying breadth of from 1½ mile to a few yards. The surface is elevated, but everywhere intersected by deep valleys. The underlying rocks are chiefly greenstone and granite, but the soil is fertile, producing grain, fruit, potatoes, parsnips, good grass, and apples, from which excellent cider is made. Seaweed supplies an abundance of manure; and several mines of lead and copper, the former mixed with silver, have been opened. The inhabitants mostly combine agriculture with fishing, the land being let out to forty copyhold tenants; but some few are engaged in the mines, and others in the manufacture of stockings, gloves, and Guernsey jackets, which are exported to Bristol. It is governed by the "Seigneur," under whom a seneschal carries out the laws and local regulations made by a majority of the tenants. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £80, in the patron. of the "Seigneur." The church is a Norman structure dedicated to St. Peter. Around the coast are numerous small islands and rocks, as Marchande, or Brecghou, on the E. separated by the Gulion strait, l'Etat de Sark on the S., and the Buron isles on the S.E.

SARK, a stream of the co. of Dumfries, Scotland. It rises in Canobie, and flows 12 miles to the Solway Frith near Gretna, on the English border.

SARKFOOT, a vil. in the par. of Gretna, or Graitney, co. Dumfries, Scotland, 1½ mile S. of Springfield, and 8½ miles E. of Annan. It is a small port situated at the confluence of the river Sark with the Solway Frith, and has a harbour for vessels of 120 tons.

SARN, signifying "a ridge," is prefixed to many Welsh and British names of sandbanks and roads, as Sarn-Gynfelyn, Sarn-Helen, Sarn-Hîr, Sarn-Swys, &c.

SARNESFIELD, a par. in the hund. of Wolphy, co. Hereford, 2 miles S.W. of Weobley, its post town, and 10 from Leominster. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the road from Hereford to Kington and Aberystwith, near Lady Lift. The inhabitants are wholly agricultural. The land is partly in hop grounds. The soil consists of a strong loam upon a subsoil of clay. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £203. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient stone structure, with a tower containing three bells. The interior of the church contains an effigy of Abel, the architect, who built Hereford market-house. J. Arkwright, Esq., is lord of the manor.

SARRATT, a par. in the hund. of Cashio, or lib. of St. Alban's, co. Herts, 3¾ miles N.W. of Rickmansworth, and 6 N.W. of Watford railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on an eminence near the small river Sarratt, or Chess. The surface is hilly, and the soil gravelly. The land is partly in common. A portion of the inhabitants are employed in the manufacture of paper. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £300, and the glebe comprises 50 acres. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £243. The church, dedicated to the Holy Cross, is an ancient cruciform structure with a low square tower. The interior of the church contains a piscina, stalls, &c. The parochial charities produce about £21 per annum, which goes to Day's almshouses. The Baptists have a place of worship.

SARRE, a vil. locally in the hund. of Ringslow, or Isle of Thanet, lathe of St. Augustine, co. Kent, 8 miles S.W. of Margate, its post town, 8½ N.E. of Canterbury, and 2 N.E. of Grove Ferry railway station. The village, which is small, derives its name from an ancient ford on the river Stour, which at low water was passable from the Isle of Thanet to the mainland. It is situated on the South-Eastern railway, and on the road from Canterbury to Ramsgate. It once carried on a considerable trade, and still belongs to Sandwich cinque port, but declined on the failure of the river Wantsune. It was formerly a parish designated in old documents St. Giles at Serre, but now forms part of St. Nicholas, Sandwich. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agricultural pursuits.

SARSDEN, a par. in the hund. of Chadlington, co. Oxford, 3 miles S.W. of Chipping Norton, its post town, and 10 from Burford. The village, which is inconsiderable, is wholly agricultural. In the vicinity is a camp of Saxon or Danish origin, supposed to have been formed by the army of Canute, who here defeated Edmund Ironside in 1016. The tithes were commuted for land and corn-rents under an Enclosure Act in 1787. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £262. The church is an ancient edifice. The parochial charities produce about £58 per annum, of which £53 goes to a school. Sarsden House is the principal residence. J. H. Langston, Esq., is lord of the manor.

SARSON, a tythg. in the par. of Amport, co. Hants, 4 miles W. of Andover.

SARUM, NEW. See SALISBURY, co. Wilts.

SARUM, OLD, an ext. par. place in the par. of Stratford-under-the-Castle, co Wilts. See SALISBURY.

SASCOTT, a tnshp. in the par. of Pontesbury, co. Salop, 4 miles W. of Salisbury.

SATCHELL, a tythg. in the par. of Hound, co. Hants, 3 miles S.E. of Southampton. It is in conjunction with Hound.

SATLEY, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Lanchester, W. div. of Chester ward, co. Durham, 5 miles N.E. of Wolsingham, and 11 N.W. of Durham. Darlington is its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the road from Durham to Wolsingham. The inhabitants are chiefly agricultural. The soil consists principally of clay. The tnshp. includes the hmlts. of Butsfield, Cornsay, Hedleyhope, and Satley. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Durham, val. £300, in the patron. of the bishop. The register dates from 1797. There is an endowed school for both sexes.

SATTERLEIGH, a par. in the hund. of South Molton, co. Devon, 4 miles S.W. of South Molton, its post town, and about the same distance N.W. of South Molton Road railway station. The village, which is small, is situated on the river Mole, and is wholly agricultural. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £67, and the glebe comprises 28 acres. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £113. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient edifice, restored in 1852. M. Byne, Esq., is lord of the manor.

SATTERTHWAITE, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Hawkshead, hund. of Lonsdale North of the Sands, co. Lancaster, 4 miles S.W. of Hawkshead. Milnthorpe is its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on a branch of the river Leaven, and is chiefly agricultural. A portion of the inhabitants are engaged in the bobbin mills at Cunsey. The tnshp. includes the hmlts. of Dale-Park, Force Forge, Grizedale, and Lower Graythwaite. There is a large extent of coppice wood, formerly used for the smelting of iron-ore. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £120. The church has a square tower containing one bell, and was enlarged and rebuilt in 1835.

There is a National school for both sexes at Grizedale. Satterthwaite Hall and High Graythwaite Hall are the principal residences.

SATTERTHWAITE, a chplry. in the par. of Ulverstone, hund. of Lonsdale North of the Sands, co. Lancaster, 7 miles N.W. of Ulverstone. There are quarries of roofing slate.

SAUCHENSIDE, a vil. in the par. of Cranston, co. Edinburgh, Scotland, 3 miles S.E. of Dalkeith. It is in conjunction with Chesterhill.

SAUCHER, a vil. in the par. of Collace, co. Perth, Scotland, 7 miles N.E. of Perth.

SAUCHIEBOG, a vil. in the par. of Cambuslang, co. Lanark, Scotland, 4 miles S. of Glasgow.

SAUCHIEBURN, a spot in the par. of St. Ninian, co. Stirling, Scotland, about 4 miles S. of Stirling. It is situated near Bannockburn Water, and is famous in history as the place where James III. of Scotland was defeated by his rebellious barons, and slain the same day at Milltown.

SAUCHIE, OLD and NEW, vils. in the pars. of Alloa and Clackmannan, co. Clackmannan, Scotland, 2 miles N. of Clackmannan, and 3 from Alloa. They are situated on the road to Alloa, and are chiefly inhabited by persons employed in the neighbouring collieries. A chapel-of ease was erected here in 1841. The colliery of South Sauchie comprises an area of 26 acres, and has a 9 feet seam of coal. In the early part of the present century this pit fired, and was accordingly designated the "burning waste," and to prevent it from spreading a wall was built round at an outlay of £16,000. In 1851 the fire was finally extinguished by means of a jet of steam, thus reclaiming property valued at near £200,000. The district also abounds in limestone and iron-ore, for the working of which latter extensive works were established in 1792 on the banks of the Devon.

SAUGHALL, GREAT and LITTLE, tnshps. in the par. of Shotwick, higher div. of Wirrall hund., co. Chester, 4 miles N.W. of Chester, and 2 W. of Mollington railway station. The villages are of small extent, and wholly agricultural. There is a National school for both sexes. The Independents, Baptists, and Primitive Methodists have each a place of worship.

SAUGHALL-MASSEY, or SAUGHAN-MASSIE, a tnshp. in the par. of Bidstone, lower div. of Wirrall hund., co. Chester, 4 miles W. of Birkenhead.

SAUGHTREE, a station on the Border Counties railway, co. Linlithgow, Scotland, 2½ miles from Riccarton.

SAUL, a par. in the bar. of Lecale, co. Down, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 3 miles N.E. of Downpatrick, its post town. The surface extends along part of Lough Strangford, and consists more than half of pasture lands. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Down, val. £299, in the patron. of the crown. The church was built about 1770. There are two schools, partly supported by subscriptions, and a Sunday-school. The church is built on the site of an abbey, said to have been founded by St. Patrick, and restored by Bishop O'Morgair. Walsh's Town Castle is the chief residence, and was erected by the De Courcys. Coins of various reigns, from that of Henry I., have been found in the churchyard.

SAUL, a par. in the upper div. of Whitstone hund., co. Gloucester, 5 miles N.W. of Stonehouse, its post town and railway station, and 2 E. of Whitminster. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Severn, where it is joined by the Frome. The Stroudwater canal, and the Severn and Thames ship canal, both pass through the parish. The soil consists of clay and sand, with a subsoil of gravel. An Enclosure Act was obtained in 1839. The great tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £115, and the incumbent's for £42, with 3 acres of glebe. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £125, in the patron. of the Vicar of Standish. The church, dedicated to St. James, is an ancient structure, with a tower containing one bell. There is also a district church at Framilode, the living of which is a perpet. cur.,* val. £48, in the patron. of the bishop. The parochial charities produce about £5 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. The Rev. G. P. Cambridge is lord of the manor. The earls of Leicester had an old moated seat in this parish.

SAULSEAT, or SOULSEAT, an ancient par. in the co. of Wigtown, Scotland, 3 miles S.E. of Stranraer. It is now in conjunction with Inch, and is situated near Saulseat Loch. It had a Premonstratensian abbey, founded by the lords of Galloway in the 12th century.

SAUNDBY, a par. in the North-Clay div. of Bassetlaw wap., co. Nottingham, 7½ miles N.E. of East Retford, and 3 S.W. of Gainsborough. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on elevated ground near the river Trent, and is wholly agricultural. Mr. Lumley's hounds meet in this parish. The soil is rich, and the land in good cultivation. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £325 15*s., and the glebe comprises 2 acres. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £101. The church, dedicated to St. Martin, is an ancient edifice with a tower, rebuilt in 1500, and containing four bells. It has tombs of ancient date. There is a Sunday-school. Viscount Middleton is lord of the manor.

SAUNDERSFOOT, a vil. and sub-port to Milford, in the par. of St. Issells, hund. of Narberth, co. Pembroke, 3 miles N.E. of Tenby. It has a good pier and harbour, with a lighthouse erected in 1832.

SAUNDERSVILLE, a hmlt. in the bar. of Upper Talbotstown, co. Wicklow, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles N.N.E. of Baltinglass.

SAUNDERTON, a par. in the hund. of Desborough, co. Bucks, 1½ mile S.W. of Princes-Risborough, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. The Wycombe union poorhouse is situated in this parish. The surface is varied with hills, and the soil a rich loam alternated with clay. The land is chiefly arable. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1806, and the glebe comprises 406 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £377, in the patron. of Magdalen College, Oxford. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. Previous to 1457 there were two parish churches, but after the union of the parishes the church of St. Nicholas was suffered to go to ruin.

SAUSTHORPE, a par. in the hund. of Hill, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 3 miles N.W. of Spilsby, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Steeping, and is wholly agricultural. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £216. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, has a crocketed and spired tower containing three bells. The interior of the church contains three carved screens. The whole edifice was rebuilt in 1844, at an outlay of £3,000. There is a National school, chiefly supported by the Rev. F. Swan. New Hall, built in 1822, is the principal residence.

SAUVEUR, ST. See SAVIOUR, ST., Channel Islands.

SAVERNAKE, NORTH and SOUTH, an ecclesiastical district in the hunds. of Kinwardstone and Selkley, co. Wilts, 2 miles S.E. of Marlborough, and 8 from Hungerford. It is a station on the Hungerford branch of the Great Western railway. It is situated in Savernake Forest, which is 16 miles in circumference, and formerly belonged to Queen Eleanor. It was granted to the Seymour family, through whom it came to the Marquis of Ailesbury, of Savernake Lodge and Tottenham Park. The two hamlets are extra parochial. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £150. The church, situated at Cadley, was erected at the sole expense of the Marquis of Ailesbury. There is a National school for both sexes, also built at the expense of the same nobleman.

SAVIOUR, ST., or ST. SAUVEUR, a par. in the isle of Guernsey, Channel Islands, 3 miles S.W. of St. Peter's Port. It is a small agricultural village. In this parish is the ancient chapel of Apoline, now used as a barn; the interior of the roof is circular, and formed of stone; also the ruins of the priory of Lihou or Lihoumel, said to have been built in 1114, and occupying a small rocky islet, separated from the main land at high water. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £150, in the patron. of the governor. The church is an ancient Norman structure, erected in 1154. There is a place of worship for Wesleyans.

SAVIOUR, ST., or ST. SAUVEUR, a par. in the isle of Jersey, Channel Islands, 1 mile N.E. of St. Helier. The par., which is large, contains the vils. of Georgetown and Longueville. The surface is varied with hill and dale, and the land in good cultivation. From the uplands a view is obtained of the surrounding country and coast, with the harbour of St. Helier lying immediately below. Stone for building is quarried, and there is a mineral spring much resorted to for its medicinal properties. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £300, in the patron. of the governor. The church of St. Sauveur is a cruciform structure of the 12th century, with a lofty tower rising from the centre. There are places of worship for Independents and Wesleyans. The free grammar school of St. Maulier or Magliore's was founded in 1498, under charter of Henry VII., by Dean Neel and Vincent Tehy, for boys of the island, and has an endowment of about £150 per annum, with right of presentation to three scholarships in Oxford University. The Rev. Philip Falle, the historian of the island, was a native of this place.

SAWBRIDGE, a hmlt. in the par. of Wolfhamcote, co. Warwick, 6 miles N.E. of Southam.

SAWBRIDGEWORTH, or SABSWORTH, a par. and post town in the hund. of Braughin, co. Herts, 4 miles S. of Bishop Stortford, and 11 N.E. of Hertford. It is a station on the Cambridge section of the Great Eastern railway. It is situated near the river Stort, and on the road to Newmarket. It was formerly a market town, and was held by Geoffrey Magnaville, the Says, Bourchiers, and other families of distinction. Malting is carried on to a great extent. There are extensive nursery grounds. The great tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £1,479 12*s., and the vicarial for £391, and the appropriate glebe comprises 128 acres. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £336, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, has a square tower containing six bells. The interior of the church contains 6 brasses, and effigies, one of J. Leventhorpe, bearing date 1433, also monuments of the Chaunceys, Hewits, and Jocelynes. There is a district church at High Wych, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £70. The parochial charities produce about £17 per annum. There are endowed and National schools for both sexes. The Independents and Wesleyans have each a place of worship.

SAWDDWY, a stream of the co. of Carmarthen, rises in the Black mountains, and joins the Teivi a little below Llangadock.

SAWDON, a tnshp. in the par. of Brompton, wap. of Pickering Lythe, North Riding co. York, 8 miles S.W. of Scarborough. There is a place of worship for Wesleyans.

SAWEL, a mountain on the borders of cos. Londonderry and Tyrone, Ireland, forming one of the Sperrin range. It attains an elevation of 2,240 feet above sea-level.

SAWLEY, a par. in the hund. of Morleston, co. Derby, 8½ miles S.E. of Derby, its post town, and 5½ N.W. of Kegworth. It is a station on the Midland railway. The par., which is situated on the rivers Trent and Derwent, includes the chplries. of Long Eaton and Breaston, and the hmlt. of Wilsthorpe. The village, which is neatly built, was formerly a market town, and has the old market-house still standing. Some of the inhabitants are employed in frame-work knitting and cotton-spinning. The Trent and Mersey navigation and the Erewash canal pass through this parish. The surface is generally level, and the soil a reddish clay, alternated with gravel. The tithes were commuted for land under Enclosure Acts in 1765 and 1787. The living is a vic.* with the cur. of Long Eaton annexed, in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £266, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to All Saints, has an embattled and spired tower containing three bells. The interior of the church contains 2 brasses of the Bothes, bearing date 1468. There are also the district churches of Breaston with Risley, and Wilne, the livings of which are both perpet. cures., val. £300 each, in the patron. of the bishop. The parochial charities produce about £34 per annum. There is a National school. The Wesleyans and Baptists have each a place of worship. The Earl of Harrington is lord of the manor. A fair, chiefly for horses, is held on 17th November.

SAWLEY, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. and lib. of Ripon, West Riding co. York, 5 miles S.W. of Ripon, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is chiefly agricultural. The tnshp. comprises the hmlts. of Cowbush, Hungate, North Pastures, and Rispleth. The surface is broken by hills, which in some places attain a considerable elevation. The soil on the uplands is light, but in the valleys a heavy loam. About one-third of the land is arable, the remainder hilly pasture. There are quarries of good building-stone, from which materials were obtained for the erection of Trinity church, at Ripon. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £63, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, has a belfry containing one bell. The parochial charities produce about £14 per annum. There is a school for both sexes, partially endowed. Sawley Hall is the principal residence. H. Wormald, Esq., is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

SAWLEY WITH TOSSIDE, an ext. par. place in the W. div. of Staincliffe wap., West Riding co. York, 4 miles N.E. of Clitheroe. It is situated on the river Ribble. Here are the ruins of a Cistercian abbey, founded by William de Percy in 1147, and the revenue of which at the Dissolution was estimated at £221 15*s.* 8*d.* The site and ruins are now the property of the Earl de Grey and Ripon. The gate-house has been converted into a cottage.

SAWSTON, a par. in the hund. of Whittlesford, co. Cambridge, 6 miles N.W. of Linton, and 1 mile from the Whittlesford station on the Cambridge section of the Great Eastern railway. The village, which is considerable, is situated on the river Granta and the London and Cambridge road. It was formerly a market town, and has still remains of the market cross. Some of the inhabitants are engaged in an extensive paper mill, and others in the manufacture of parchment. Queen Mary spent some time at the ancient manor house of the Huddleston family, which is situated in this parish. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Enclosure Act in 1802. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ely, val. £170. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The parochial charities produce about £169 per annum, of which £108 goes to Huntingdon's almshouses. There is a National school, also a place of worship for Independents.

SAWTRY ALL SAINTS, a par. in the hund. of Norman Cross, co. Huntingdon, 3 miles S. of Stilton. The village, which is considerable, is situated on the road to York. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. About half the land is arable, and the remainder rich meadow and fenny pasture. The soil is a strong clay. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Enclosure Act in 1804. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £189. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient structure, with a tower and a low spire. It contains three ancient stalls, and the brass of a knight bearing date 1404. There are National schools, built in 1840.

SAWTRY ST. ANDREW, or BEAUMES, a par. in the hund. of Norman Cross, co. Huntingdon, 3¼ miles S.E. of Stilton. The village, which is small and wholly agricultural, is situated on the road from Huntingdon to Peterborough. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Enclosure Act in 1804, and the glebe comprises 200 acres. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ely, val. £169. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is an ancient structure. The Wesleyans have a place of worship.

SAWTRY ST. JUDITH, an ext. par. place, in the hund. of Norman Cross, co. Huntingdon, 4 miles S.E. of Stilton. It was formerly a separate parish, but is now annexed to Sawtry All Saints. A Cistercian abbey was founded here in 1146 by Simeon de St. Liz, Earl of Northampton, which flourished till the Dissolution, when its revenue was returned at £141 3*s.* 8*d.*, and the site given to the Cromwells. It includes a large tract of woodland, chiefly oak, called Monks' Wood. The church has long been demolished. Roman urns and other antiquities were found here in 1772.

SAXAFORTH, a mountain in the island and par. of Uist, North Shetland Isles, coast of Scotland. It attains an elevation of 938 feet above sea-level, and has a remarkable cave 300 feet long.

SAXBY, a par. in the hund. of Framland, co. Leicester, 4½ miles N.E. of Melton-Mowbray, its post town, and near the Saxby station on the Midland railway. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on a branch of the river Eye. The Melton and Oakham canal passes through the parish, which is supposed to have been the scene of a great battle from the number of skeletons and relics of antiquity which have been discovered at a short distance below the surface. The land is chiefly in pasture. The surface is gently undulating and the soil fertile. The substratum is a fine gravel. The glebe comprises 38 acres. The living is a rect.* with the vic. of Stapleford annexed, in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £168. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, has a spired tower containing three bells. It was rebuilt in 1789, at the expense of the grandfather of the late Earl of Harborough.

SAXBY, a par. in the E. div. of Aslacoe wap., parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 10 miles N.E. of Lincoln, 4 S.E. of Spital, and 8 S.W. of Market-Rasen. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Ancholme, near the Roman way Ermine Street. The inhabitants are wholly agricultural. There are quarries of an inferior kind of building-stone. The glebe comprises 14 acres. The living is a vic.* with the rect. of Firsby annexed, in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £96. The church, dedicated to St. Helen, is a Grecian edifice, and contains the tombs of the Scarborough family.

SAXBY, a par. in the N. div. of Yarborough wap., parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 5 miles S.W. of Barton-upon-Humber, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. It is situated at a short distance from the Ancholme navigation. The surface is elevated, but not hilly. The soil is light upon a substratum of chalk. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £432 17*s., and the glebe comprises 8 acres. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £300. The church, dedicated to All Saints, has been recently rebuilt. Over the altar is a painting of the Saviour restoring sight to Bartimeus. There is a National school for both sexes. John Hope Barton, Esq., is lord of the manor.

SAXELBY, a par. in the hund. of East Goscote, co. Leicester, 4 miles N.W. of Melton-Mowbray, its post town, and 2 N.W. of Kirby railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is chiefly agricultural. It is situated amidst the Wold hills, and the low grounds are watered by a brook. The land is chiefly in pasture. The soil is clay alternating with sand and gravel. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £215. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient structure, with a square tower surmounted by a spire, and containing three bells. The interior of the church contains the brass of a female bearing date 1520. The parochial charities produce about £16 per annum. There is a National school. The Earl of Aylesford is lord of the manor.

SAXELBY, or SAXILBY, a par. in the wap. of Lawress, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 6½ miles N.W. of Lincoln, its post town. It is a junction station on the Great Northern and Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire railways. The village, which is chiefly agricultural, is situated on the road from Lincoln to Gainsborough, and on the river Till. The par. includes the hmlts. of North and South Ingleby. The Fossdyke, which is navigable for sloops and barges, intersects the parish. The glebe comprises 127 acres of land. The living is a vic.* with Ingleby, in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £167, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Botolph, has a tower containing four bells. The church has been thoroughly restored. The register dates from 1563. A National school was built in 1845. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a place of worship. In the vicinity is a Roman barrow.

SAXHAM, GREAT, a par. in the hund. of Thingoe, co. Suffolk, 5 miles S.W. of Bury St. Edmund's, its post town. It is a station on the Cambridge, Newmarket, and Bury branch of the Great Eastern railway. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on a branch of the river Lark, and is wholly agricultural. The manor once belonged to Bury Abbey, and came to the Eldreds, who erected Nutmeg Hall. The soil is of a mixed nature, with a clayey subsoil. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £369, and the glebe comprises 13 acres. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ely, val. £330. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is an ancient edifice, with a tower containing three bells. There are two memorial windows in the chancel, also a painted E. window over the communion table. The interior contains monuments to the Eldred family. The parochial charities produce about £36 per annum. There are day and Sunday schools. Saxham Hall, the residence of the Millses, is a square stone mansion situated in the centre of a well-wooded park. William Mills, Esq., is lord of the manor.

SAXHAM, LITTLE, a par. in the hund. of Thingoe, co. Suffolk, 3½ miles W. of Bury St. Edmund's, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. Little Saxham was the seat of the Lucas and Croft families, who entertained Charles II. in the old manor house erected in Henry VII.'s time, but pulled down in 1771. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £332. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is an ancient structure with a round tower of flint. The interior of the church contains effigies of the Crofts. There are several stained windows. The register dates from 1620. The parochial charities produce about £15 per annum. The Marquis of Bristol is lord of the manor.

SAXLINGHAM, a par. in the hund. of Holt, co. Norfolk, 3½ miles W. of Holt, its post town, and 6 N.E. of Walsingham. The village is of small extent, and chiefly agricultural. The land is for the most part arable, with a small proportion of pasture and woodland. From the higher grounds a view is obtained of the vale of the Glaven. The glebe contains 28 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £589. The church, dedicated to St. Margaret, is a cruciform structure, with a square embattled tower. The interior of the church contains a monument in the form of an Egyptian pyramid covered with hieroglyphics, and erected by Sir Christopher Heydon to his lady, bearing date 1593. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes. The Rev. Sir E. R. Jodrell, Bart., is lord of the manor.

SAXLINGHAM-NETHERGATE, a par. in the hund. of Henstead, co. Norfolk, 7 miles S. of Norwich, its post town, and 2½ E. of Flordon railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is chiefly agricultural. The living is a rect.* annexed to that of Saxlingham Thorpe, in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £699. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has a square tower containing six bells. The register dates from 1556. The windows are of stained glass. The parochial charities produce about £80 per annum, of which £73 is realised from church and town lands. There is a school under the inspection of government.

SAXLINGHAM-THORPE, a par. in the hund. of Henstead, co. Norfolk, 7½ miles S. of Norwich, its post town, 3 N.E. of Stratton St. Mary, and 2 E. of the Flordon railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Tas, and is wholly agricultural. The living is a rect. annexed to that of Saxlingham-Nethergate, in the dioc. of Norwich. The church, formerly dedicated to St. Mary, is in ruins. The register dates from 1560. The Baptists have a place of worship. The Rev. J. H. Steward is lord of the manor.

SAXMUNDHAM, a par., post and market town in the hund. of Plomesgate, co. Suffolk, 7 miles S.E. of Aldborough, and 19 N.E. of Ipswich. It is a station on the East Suffolk section of the Great Eastern railway. It is situated in a valley between two hills on the road to London, and near a small stream which falls into the Ore. The town, supposed to be of Saxon origin, is well built, comprising many modern houses. Its chief street, running N. and S., forms part of the turnpike road from London to Yarmouth. A brisk trade is done in corn and malt, considerable quantities of which are shipped from Snape and Iken wharfs for London. There are two banks and assembly rooms. It is a polling-place for the county elections. The inhabitants are plentifully supplied with water from springs. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £275, and the glebe comprises 29 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £275. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, has a tower containing five bells. It stands a little southward of the town, and contains tombs of the Long family. The register dates from 1558. The parochial charities produce about £52 per annum. There is a free school supported by the Long family. The house of industry was destroyed in a riot in 1766. Hurts Hall, the principal residence, is the seat of W. Long, Esq., who is lord of the manor. Market day is on Wednesday. Fairs are held on Whit-Tuesday and 23rd September.

SAXONDALE, a tnshp. in the par. of Shelford, S. div. of Bingham wap., co. Nottingham, 1½ mile W. of Bingham, and 8 miles E. of Bingham. It is situated on the Nottingham and Grantham road. There was formerly a church. The Earl of Chesterfield is lord of the manor.

SAXSTEAD, a par. in the hund. of Hoxne, co. Suffolk, 3 miles N.W. of Framlingham, its post town, and 13 N. of Woodbridge. The village, which is small and straggling, is situated on the river Alde, and is chiefly agricultural. The land is partly in common. The par. contains the hmlt. of Saxstead Green. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £340. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect.* of Framlingham, in the dioc. of Norwich. The church is dedicated to All Saints. The steeple fell down in 1806, and has not been rebuilt. The parochial charities consist of a house and some land bequeathed for the benefit of the poor.

SAXTHORPE, a par. in the hund. of South Erpingham, co. Norfolk, 5 miles N.W. of Aylsham, and the like distance N.E. of Reepham. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the N. bank of the river Bure, and on the road from Norwich to Holt. The surface is undulating, and the land chiefly arable. The impropriate tithes, belonging to the Master and Fellows of Pembroke Hall, Cambridge, have been commuted for a rent-charge of £288 10*s., and the vicarial for £89, besides a glebe of 43 acres. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £139, in the patron. of Pembroke Hall, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is an ancient structure, with a square embattled tower containing one bell. There is a day school. The Earl of Orford is lord of the manor. At Chapel Close are traces of a chapel founded by Aylmer de Valence in 1313.

SAXTON, a par. and tnshp. in the upper div. of Barkstone-Ash wap., West Riding co. York, 4 miles S.W. of Tadcaster, its post town, and 2 from Church Fenton railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is built on an acclivity, and is chiefly agricultural. The par. includes the vil. of Scarthingwell and the township of Towton, where in 1461 a sanguinary battle was fought between the houses of York and Lancaster. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of York, val. £76. The church, dedicated to All Saints, has a tower containing three bells. Lords Dacre and Westmoreland, with many who were slain in the battle, were interred in the churchyard. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum. There is a school in connection with the Church of England, maintained by Lady Ashtown and Mrs. Gascoigne. The Wesleyans have a place of worship.

SCACKLETON, a tnshp. in the par. of Hovingham, wap. of Bulmer, North Riding co. York, 4 miles S. of Hovingham, its post town, and 9 N.W. of New Malton. The village, which is of small extent, is chiefly agricultural. The soil is of various quality upon a subsoil of limestone, which is worked. W. Garforth, Esq., of Wiganthorpe Hall, is lord of the manor and sole landowner.

SCADBURY, an ancient seat, now a farm, near Chiselhurst, co. Kent. It was the birthplace of Sir Nicholas Bacon and of Sir Francis Walsingham.

SCAFELL, a hmlt. in the par. of Newtown, co. Montgomery, 2 miles from Newtown, and 9 S.W. of Montgomery. It is a station on the Cambrian and Welsh Coast railway.

SCAFFELL PIKES, a double peaked mountain of the co. of Cumberland, rises on the E. side of Wast Water, and attains an elevation of 3,160 feet above sea-level. From the summit a view is obtained of the lake district, with Windermere lying below, and a large extent of England, Scotland, the Isle of Man, and Snowdonia in the distance.

SCAFTWORTH, a tnshp. in the par. of Everton, North Clay div. of Bassetlaw wap., co. Nottingham, 1 mile S.E. of Bawtry. It is of small extent, and is situated on the river Idle. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Enclosure Act in 1772. Many Roman antiquities were found here at the enclosure of the common.

SCAGGLETHORPE, a tnshp. in the par. of Settrington, wap. of Buckrose, East Riding co. York, 3 miles N.E. of Malton, and about 1 mile from Settrington railway station on the Malton and Driffield line of railway. The village, which is small, is built on the slope of a hill. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. The tnshp. is bounded on the N. by the navigable river Derwent. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1769.

SCAGGLETHORPE, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Moor Monkton, co. York, 6 miles N.W. of York.

SCALBY, a tnshp. in the par. of Blacktoft, wap. of Howdenshire, East Riding co. York, 6 miles N.E. of Howden, near the Hull railway.

SCALBY, a par. in the wap. of Pickering Lythe, North Riding co. York, 3 miles N.W. of Scarborough, its post town. The village, which is considerable, is chiefly agricultural. The par. comprises the tnshps. of Burniston, Cloughton, Newby, Stainton Dale, and Throxenby. At Scalby Mill are tea gardens, much resorted to by visitors during the bathing season. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of York, val. £302, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Norwich. The church, dedicated to St. Laurence, is an ancient stone structure, with a square tower containing three bells. The parochial charities produce about £25 per annum, of which £13 goes to Keld's hospital or almshouses. There is a National school for both sexes. The Wesleyans have a place of worship.

SCALDWELL, a par. in the hund. of Orlingbury, co. Northampton, 8½ miles N.E. of Northampton, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is chiefly agricultural. The manufacture of parchment and wool combing afford employment to a small number of persons. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Enclosure Act in 1775, and the glebe comprises 150 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £357. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, has a tower containing four bells. The parochial charities produce about £68 per annum, of which £25 goes to Roe's school. The Independents have a place of worship. The Duke of Buccleuch and Sir C. E. Isham, Bart., are lords of the manor.

SCALEBY, a par. in the ward of Eskdale, co. Cumberland, 6 miles N.E. of Carlisle, its post town. It comprises the tnshps. of East and West Scaleby. The village, which is of small extent, is situated in the W. tnshp., and is wholly agricultural. Scaleby was given by Henry I. to Richard Tilliol, nicknamed Richard the Rider, who built the castle with materials brought from the Picts' wall. The castle was garrisoned for Charles I. by the Musgraves, but was twice taken by the parliamentary forces in the years 1645 and 1648. It eventually came to the Gilpins, and has been partially rebuilt. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £107, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to All Saints. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum. The Rev. W. Gilpin, author of "Forest Scenery" and "Lives of the Reformers," was born here in 1724. E. Standish, Esq., is lord of the manor.

SCALEBY, EAST, a tnshp. in the par. of Scaleby Eskdale ward, co. Cumberland, 6 miles N.E. of Carlisle.

SCALE-FORCE, a cascade on the S. side of Crummock Water, co. Cumberland, near Buttermere. It consists of two falls, one of 156 feet in one leap, and the other a little below of about 45 feet.

SCALE-FORCE, NORTH, a waterfall in Walney Island, co. Lancaster, 5 miles S.W. of Dalton.

SCALES, a hmlt. in the par. of Kirkham, hund. of Amounderness, co. Lancaster, 2 miles S.E. of Kirkham. It is in conjunction with Newton to form a tnshp.

SCALES, a hmlt. in the par. of Bromfield, co. Cumberland, 5 miles S.W. of Wigton.

SCALES LOW, a hmlt. in the par. of Orton, co. Westmoreland, 8 miles S.W. of Appleby, under Orton Scar beacon.

SCALES TARN, a small, gloomy lake under Saddleback and Skiddaw Fells, co. Cumberland, 5 miles N.E. of Keswick. It covers a little above 3 acres in extent, and is 20 feet deep.

SCALFORD, a par. in the hund. of Framland, co. Leicester, 3½ miles N.E. of Melton-Mowbray, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is chiefly agricultural. The surface is in some parts hilly. The soil is of a clayey nature, alternated with sand. Scalford was formerly a market town, and is supposed to have been a Roman settlement. There are quarries of building-stone. The impropriation belongs to the Duke of Rutland. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1765, and the glebe comprises about 200 acres. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £355. The church, dedicated to Egelwin-the-Martyr, has a square embattled tower. It was erected in the 13th century, but the chancel was rebuilt at the expense of the Duke of Rutland in 1845. The parochial charities produce about £25 per annum, of which £14 goes to a school. There is a National school for both sexes. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a place of worship. The Duke of Rutland is lord of the manor.

SCALING DAM, a hmlt. in the par. of Easington, North Riding co. York, 6 miles E. of Guisborough.

SCALLOWAY, a vil. in the par. of Tingwall, co. Orkney and Shetland, Scotland, 6 miles S.W. of Lerwick. It is situated at the head of a bay of the same name, in a valley on the W. coast of the mainland. It has a bar harbour with from 4 to 5 fathoms water, and Trantray, Burray, Papa, Oxna, and other islands outside. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the fisheries. The village consists of a few scattered houses in the neighbourhood of the old castle, which stands on the brink of an arm of the sea. There is a church in connection with the Establishment, erected in 1842. The Independents have a small chapel. This place was once the capital of Shetland, the seat of justice, and the occasional residence of the earls of Orkney and Zetland. The vale from hence to Tingwall is fertile, and in the pastures is much clover, both red and white. The substratum is primitive limestone of a pale blue colour.

SCALP, a hmlt. in the par. of Ardrahan, bar. of Loughrea, co. Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 5 miles N.N.E. of Gort, on the road from Loughrea. A chalybeate spring exists in the vicinity.

SCALP, two mountains of this name, one in co. Donegal, and the other in co. Galway, Ireland. They are respectively 1,590 and 1,074 feet above sea-level.

SCALPA, an island in the par. of Strath, district of Skye, co. Inverness, Scotland, 2 miles S. of Raasay, and 5 N.W. of Broadford. It extends in length about 4½ miles, with a breadth of 2¾ miles. The island is separated from Skye by Scalpa Sound, which abounds in excellent oyster beds, and is a noted rendezvous of the herring fleet. The surface is of an uneven character, and has much barren rock, also traces of an old chapel.

SCALPA, SCALPAY, or GLASS ISLAND, an island in the par. of Harris, Hebrides, Scotland. It extends in length nearly 3 miles, with an extreme breadth of about 1½ mile, and is situated at the entrance of East Loch Tarbet. The surface is uneven, low, and heathclad, and consists of several small peninsulas formed by the sea. On a promontory extreme E. stands a fixed light, put up in 1789, and visible at a distance of 16 miles. On the W. coast are two natural harbours.

SCALPA FLOW, a channel about 15 miles long, between the Mainland, or Pomona, and the islands of South Ronaldshay, Burray, and Hoy, South Orkney Isles, coast of Scotland. It has several good harbours, and abounds in fish.

SCALPSIE, a bay on the S.W. side of the co. of Bute, Scotland, 4 miles S.W. of Rothesay, near Ardscalpsie Point.

SCALTHWAITERING, a hmlt. in the par. and ward of Kendal, co. Westmoreland, 2 miles N.E. of Kendal. It is in conjunction with Hay and Hutton-in-the-Hay to form a township. A portion of the inhabitants are engaged in the woollen mills, and some in the card, snuff, and corn factories. There is a parochial school for both sexes. The Earl of Lonsdale is lord of the manor.

SCAMBLESBY, a par. in the N. div. of Gartree hund., parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 6¼ miles N.E. of Horncastle, its post town, and 7 S.W. of Louth. The village, which is extensive, is situated on the Wolds, and is chiefly agricultural. The soil consists of clay, chalk, and sand. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £300, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Martin. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum. There is a National school, erected in 1849. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a place of worship. William Martin, Esq., is lord of the manor.

SCAMMADALE, a small loch in the par. of Kilbride, district of Lorn, co. Argyle, Scotland, 6 miles S.E. of Oban, and 15 N.W. of Inverary. It is about 3 miles in length by 1 broad.

SCAMMONDEN, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Huddersfield, upper div. of Agbrigg wap., West Riding co. York, 7 miles W. of Huddersfield, its post town. The surface is mountainous and the district wild. The village, which is considerable, is situated on an acclivity in a dell watered by a rivulet. A portion of the inhabitants are employed in cotton spinning, and in the manufacture of fancy woollen goods. The township is bounded on the W. by the lofty ridge of Blackstone Edge. About half the land was enclosed in 1820, and has been brought into profitable cultivation, the remainder being principally mountain pasture or uncultivated, with only 10 acres of woodland. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £186, in the patron. of the Vicar of Huddersfield. There is a National school for both sexes. The Baptists have a place of worship.

SCAMPSTON, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Rillington, wap. of Buckrose, East Riding co. York, 6 miles N.E. of New Malton, its post town, and 1½ mile from Rillington railway station, on the York and Scarborough line of railway. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. The surface, which is level, is bounded on the N. by the navigable river Derwent. The soil consists of a sandy loam upon a subsoil of clay and gravel. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of York, val. £80, in the patron. of the Vicar of Rillington. The church is of recent erection. There is a National school for both sexes. Scampston Hall, the principal residence, is situated in an extensive park. William St. Quintin, Esq., is lord of the manor and sole landowner.

SCAMPTON, a par. in the hund. of Lawress, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 5¾ miles N.W. of Lincoln, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated near the Roman way Ermine Street, and is wholly agricultural. It is mentioned in Domesday Book as belonging to the Gaunts. Limestone is extensively quarried for building and for burning into lime. There is a chalybeate spring called St. Pancras's Well. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £300. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, has a square tower, and contains tombs of the Bolles. Some remains of a Roman villa and tesselated pavements upon which St. Pancras Church had been built were discovered in 1795.

SCANSBY, a tnshp. in the par. of Brodsworth, N. div. of Strafforth wap., West Riding co. York.

SCAR, a mountain in the northern part of co. Wicklow, Ireland, near Laragh. It attains an elevation of 2,105 feet above sea-level.

SCAR BAY, on the coast of co. Wexford, Ireland.

SCARA, or SCARRIFF, an islet in Ballinaskelligs Bay, co. Kerry, Ireland, 5 miles S.E. of Bolus Head.

SCARAWALSH, a bar. in the co. of Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. It contains the following pars.:—Ballycarney, Clone, Kilbride, Kilcomb, Kilrush, Moynart, St. Mary's Enniscorthy, St. Mary's Newtown-Barry, Temple-Shanbo, and parts of Carnew, Ferns, Moyacomb, Temple-Shannon, and Toome.

SCARAWALSH-BRIDGE, a hmlt. in the bar. of Scarawalsh, co. Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles N.E. of Enniscorthy, on the river Slaney, which is here crossed by a bridge.

SCARBA, an island in the par. of Jura and Colonsay, co. Argyle, Scotland, 3½ miles N.W. of Craignish Point. It extends in length about 3 miles, and nearly the same in extreme breadth. It is situated between Jura and Luing islands, near Corriewreckan Sound. The principal portion of the island consists of a single mountain, rising to an altitude of 1,500 feet above the sea. Its shores are lofty and precipitous, and the surface for the most part covered in heath. The E. side of the island abounds in verdure and natural woods.

SCARBOROUGH, a garrison, market, and seaport town, and a municipal and parliamentary borough in the wap. of Pickering Lythe, North Riding co. York, 217 miles N. of London by road, or 233½ by rail, and 42¾ N.E. of York. The name of the town is probably derived from the Saxon words scear, "a rock," and burgh, "a town." The earliest notice in history is in the charter of incorporation granted by Henry II. in 1181. The castle was, however, built earlier than this, being erected by William le Gros, Earl of Albemarle, in the reign of Stephen. A pier was added, in pursuance of a charter from Henry III. Piers Gaveston, the favourite of Edward II., was besieged here for some time in 1212, and at length surrendered to the Earl of Pembroke. The "Pilgrimage of Grace," in 1536, assaulted the castle, but without success, and in 1554 Lord Thomas Stafford, and other of Sir Thomas Wyatt's party, seized the castle, but it was retaken by the Earl of Westmoreland, and Stafford and four others were executed. During the parliamentary war it was held for the king by Sir Hugh Cholmeley. The town was taken by Sir John Meldrum, who was killed in the assault, and the castle was also taken in July, 1645, by his successor Sir Matthew Brynton. Three years afterwards both town and castle revolted and declared for the king, but were reduced in a few months. The castle was repaired in 1745, and there is now a small battery and military depôt there.—The town stands on both sides of the slope of the projecting cliff on which the castle is situated. The old town is close underneath the castle. Along the cliffs, on the N. and S. sides, are large modern houses and terraces, such as are seen at most watering-places. The portion of the cliff on which the spa or mineral spring for which Scarborough is celebrated is found is separated from the town by a narrow valley. This is bridged over by an iron bridge, which forms a promenade, and which leads to the buildings, consisting of a saloon, reading-room, &c., which surround the spa. The Literary and Philosophical Society's building is on the N. side of the bridge. The beach on both sides of the town is open and sandy. The harbour is protected by two piers and a lighthouse, and is considered very safe. The depth of water at the entrance is about 20 feet at high tide, but not more than 4 at low tide. The public buildings, besides churches, &c., are the townhall, post-office, and market. A large proportion of the inhabitants are engaged in fishing and in the manufacture of ropes, sails, and other naval necessaries. Ships are occasionally entirely built in the town. The chief imports are from America and the Baltic, and during the herring fishery many foreign vessels resort to this port. The importance of the town is, however, principally owing to the sea-bathing, which attracts a large number of visitors in the summer from the neighbouring counties.—Scarborough is divided under the new Act into two wards. The local government is carried on by a mayor, with 6 aldermen and 18 councillors, with the style of "bailiffs and burgesses of the town of Scarborough." The parliamentary borough includes the parish and Falsgrave, and two members have been returned for it to the House of Commons since the reign of Edward I. Quarter and petty sessions are held in the townhall, being presided over by 8 magistrates. The Poor-law Union includes the pars. of East and West Ayton, Brompton, Broxa, Burniston, Cayton, Cloughton, Falsgrave, Filey, Folkton, Ganton, Gristhorpe, Hackness, Harwood Dale, Hutton Bushell, Irton, Libberston, Muston, Newby, Osgodby, Sawdon, Scalby, Scarborough, Seamer, Sherburn, Silpho, Snainton, Stainton Dale, Suffield, Throxenby, Troutsdale, Willerby, and Wykeham. The new County Court district and the superior registry are the same, with the exclusion of Snainton. The population was, in 1851, 12,915, living in 2,838 houses, and in 1861, 18,377, living in 3,940 houses, showing an increase of 5,462 in the ten years.—The living is a vic. with the cur. of Christ Church, in the dioc. of York. val. £300. The church originally formed part of a Cistercian priory, of which remains appear in the churchyard. Two of the three towers were destroyed in the siege of 1644, and much additional injury has been suffered by the building; but recently it has been restored and repaired. Christ Church, to which the curacy above mentioned belongs, stands outside the town. It was built in 1828, at a cost of £8,000, partly contributed by the Commission for Building Churches, and partly by private subscription. The style is modern Gothic, with a pinnacled tower. St. Thomas's, in East Sandgate, is a perpet. cur., val. £150, in the patron. of the vicar. It was erected in 1846, and the greater number of the sittings are free. The Roman Catholics have a chapel built within the last few years, and there are also places of worship for the Independents, Baptists, Wesleyans, Primitive and Association Methodists, and Society of Friends. There are several schools, including a free grammar school, National schools for boys and girls, an industrial school, the Amicable Society's school, for 70 to 80 of both sexes, Denison's charity schools, and infant and Sunday schools belonging to the Roman Catholics and other sects. There are three charitable institutions for sailors, the Merchant Seamen's and the Trinity House hospitals, and Wilson's Marine Asylum, and another general hospital, called the sea-bathing infirmary. The Merchant Seamen's hospital was founded in 1752, and is supported partly by subscription of 6*d.* a month from sailors belonging to the port. Other charities are Taylor's, Farrar's, Worth's, St. Thomas's, Stubb's, Sedman's, and the Burgh almshouses. There is also a poorhouse.—The institutions for amusement or instruction are—the mechanics' institute, the theatre, the assembly rooms, two public libraries, the horticultural, the archæological, and the philosophical societies, of which the latter possesses a collection of objects illustrating the zoology and geology of the neighbourhood.—The two best known natives of the town have been Dr. Wittie, a physician in the 17th century, and Travis, a surgeon, in the following century. The history of Scarborough has been written by Hinderwell, himself a native of the town. Scarborough gives the title of earl to the Lumleys, of Sandbeck.—The Great Northern and the York and North Midland railways both have branches to Scarborough. The newspapers published in the town are the Scarborough Gazette and the Scarborough Record. The market days are Thursday and Saturday. Fairs are held on Holy Thursday and 22nd November, the latter for cattle. Races take place in September, and a regatta in August.

SCARCLIFF, a par. in the hund. of Scarsdale, co. Derby, 6 miles N.W. of Mansfield, its post town, and 8 S.E. of Chesterfield. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Poulter. The inhabitants are wholly agricultural. In the vicinity is a spring designated Owlsditch. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £68. The church, dedicated to St. Leonard, has a square tower containing four bells. The interior of the church contains a monument to the Fretcheville family of the 11th century. The parochial charities produce about £30 per annum. Earl Bathurst is lord of the manor.

SCARCROFT, a tnshp. in the par. of Thorner, lower div. of Skyrack wap., West Riding co. York, 7 miles N.E. of Leeds, its post town, and 6 S.W. of Wetherby. The village, which is situated on the new road to Wetherby, is of small extent, and wholly agricultural. The soil is of various qualities, with a subsoil of gravel. In the neighbourhood are many residences occupied by the gentry and merchants of Leeds. Sir E. Vavasour, Bart., is lord of the manor. The Romans are said to have had works here for the smelting of iron ore.

SCARGILL, a tnshp. in the par. of Barningham, wap. of West Gilling, North Riding co. York, 4 miles S. of Barnard Castle, 3 W. of Greta-Bridge, and 3 from Barningham church. The village, which is of small extent, is chiefly agricultural. There is a parochial school for both sexes, in which Divine service is performed every Sunday evening.

SCARISBRICK, a tnshp. in the par. of Ormskirk, hund. of West Derby, co. Lancaster, 3 miles N.W. of Ormskirk, its post town, and near the Burscough railway station. The village, which is large, is situated on the Leeds canal. The tnshp. includes a part of Martin-Mere, which was drained in 1799 by Mr. Eccleston. The soil is of a loamy and sandy nature, with a subsoil of sand. There are brick kilns. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic.* of Ormskirk, in the dioc. of Chester. The church is dedicated to St. Mark. The interior of the church contains a carved pulpit. The parochial charities produce about £18 per annum. There is a National school for boys, also British and Foreign schools. The Wesleyans and Roman Catholics have each a place of worship. Among the principal seats are Dummersdale, Gorsuch Hall, Biglake, Heskin Hall, Hurlston Hall, Fairlake, and Scarisbrick Hall—which last is an ancient mansion situated in a park; the hall contains some pictures by Martin and other masters, and is now the seat of C. Scarisbrick, Esq., who is lord of the manor and holds a court-leet annually.

SCARLE, NORTH, a par. in the lower div. of Boothby-Graffo wap., co. Lincoln, 3 miles W. of Swinderby railway station, and 10 S.W. of Lincoln. Newark is its post town. The village, which is considerable, is wholly agricultural. The parish is bounded by the navigable river Trent. The surface is flat, and the soil clayey. There are some brickfields. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £259 10*s.*, and the glebe comprises 32 acres. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £252, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to All Saints, has a square tower containing three bells. The interior of the church contains a font of great antiquity. The parochial charities produce about £33 per annum, also a school. The Wesleyans have two places of worship. William Houldsworth, Esq., is lord of the manor.

SCARLE, SOUTH, a par. in the N. div. of Newark wap., co. Nottingham, 7 miles N.E. of Newark-on-Trent, and 3 N. of Cottingham railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is chiefly agricultural. The par. contains the tnshps. of South Scarle and Besthorpe. The great tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £190 11*s.*, and the vicarial for £54 18*s.*, the impropriate glebe comprises 112 acres. The living is a vic. with the perpet. cur. of Girton and the cur. of Besthorpe annexed, in the dioc. of Lincoln, joint val. £168, in the patron. of the prebend thereof. The church, dedicated to St. Helen, is an ancient structure with a tower containing five bells. The parochial charities produce about £10 per annum. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. The Duke of Newcastle is lord of the manor of Morland, comprising the pars. of South Scarle and Girton, which lordships are held under the crown at an annual rent of £25.

SCARLET POINT, a headland on the S. coast of the Isle of Man, between Balvash and Castletown harbour.

SCARNESS, a mountain of the co. of Cumberland. It is situated near the eastern bank of Bassenthwaite Water, and commands a view of that lake.

SCARNING, a par. in the hund. of Launditch, co. Norfolk, 2 miles S.W. of East Dereham, its post town, and near the Wendling station on the East Anglian section of the Great Eastern railway. The village, which is considerable, is wholly agricultural. The parish is traversed by the road from East Dereham to Swaffham. The glebe contains about 10 acres. The living is a rect. and vic.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £496. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, has a large tower containing five bells. The parochial charities produce about £175 per annum, £160 of which goes to Secker's Free School, founded in 1604, but rebuilt in 1850, with a residence for the teachers, at an outlay of £900.

SCARP, an island in the par. of Harris, and one of the Hebrides, co. Inverness, Scotland. It extends in length about 3 miles, with a breadth of about 2 miles. It is situated at the entrance of Loch Reasort, and consists of one single mountain 1,000 feet above the sea.

SCARRIFF, a post-office vil. in the par. of Tomgraney, bar. of Upper Tulla, co. Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 22 miles E.N.E. of Ennis, 8 N.N.W. of Killaloe, and 94 from Dublin. It is situated on an acclivity sloping down to the river Scarriff, which is here spanned by a three-arched bridge, and taking its rise in Lough Teriog, and passing through Loughs Graney and O'Grady, empties itself into Lough Derg at Scarriff-bay. The village contains a chapel and poorhouse, and several oil and flour mills. Mynoe is the neighbouring seat of Sir J. Reid. On the small island of Iniscealtra in the bay there are the ecclesiastical remains known as the "Seven Churches." Scarriff gives name to a Poor-law Union consisting of ten electoral divisions. Petty sessions are held here, also fairs once a month.

SCARRIFF-BRIDGE, a hmlt. in the bar. of Lune, co. Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 5 miles S.W. of Trim, on the river Boyne, which is here crossed by a bridge.

SCARRINGTON, a par. in the N. div. of Bingham wap., co. Nottingham, 2 miles N.E. of Bingham, its post town, and about the same distance N.W. of Aslacton. The village is small and wholly agricultural. The tithes were commuted for land and money payments under an Enclosure Act in 1780. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic. of Orston, in the dioc. of Lincoln. The church is an ancient edifice with a spired tower. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum. There is a place of worship for the Wesleyans. Thomas Watson, Esq., is lord of the manor.

SCARR-WATER, a stream of the co. of Dumfries,

Scotland, rises in Black Hill, and joins the Nith near Keir.

SCARS, or EAST SCARS, a reef at the mouth of the Tees, North Riding co. York, about 1½ mile E. of Redcar, and near the eastern bank of the river.

SCARSCOCH, a mountain of the Grampian chain on the borders of cos. Aberdeen and Perth, Scotland. It is situated nearly in the centre of Scotland, and is 3,390 feet above sea-level.

SCARSDALE, a hund. in the co. of Derby, contains the pars. of Alfreton, Aulk-Hucknall, Barlborough, Beauchief Abbey, Beighton, Blackwell, Balsover, Brompton, Chesterfield, Clown, Dronfield, Eckington, Elmton, Heath, Killamarsh, Upper Langwith, Morton, South Normanton, Norton, Pinxton, Pleasley, Scarcliff, Shirland, Staveley, Sutton, Tibshelf, Whittington, Whitwell, Wingerford, North and South Wingfield, and parts of Ashover and Crich, comprising an area of 144,750 acres. It gives title of baron to the Curzons of Kedleston.

SCARTAGLIN, a vil. in the par. of Castleisland, bar. of Trughanacmy, co. Kerry, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 4 miles S.E. of Castleisland. It is situated on the banks of the Brown Flesk river, which is here crossed by a bridge. There is a Roman Catholic chapel and a school. Fairs are held on 17th January, 17th May, 18th August, 10th October, and 16th December.

SCARTHINGWELL, a hmlt. in the par. of Saxton, upper. div. of Barkstone-Ash wap., West Riding co. York, 4½ miles S.E. of Tadcaster. It is in conjunction with Saxon to form a tnshp. The chief object of interest in the village is the Hall. The Roman Catholics have a place of worship.

SCARTHO, a par. in the wap. of Bradley-Haverstoe, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 2 miles S. of Great Grimsby, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. The tithes were commuted for corn-rents under an Enclosure Act in 1795. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £231, in the patron. of Jesus' College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Giles, has a tower containing two bells. The interior has recently undergone restoration, and has a stained E. window. The register dates from 1565. The parishioners' children attend Humberstone grammar school. The Wesleyans have a place of worship.

SCARVA, a post-office vil. in the par. of Aghaderg, bar. of Upper Iveagh, co. Down, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 11 miles N. of Newry, and 8 from Portadown by the Dublin and Belfast junction railway, on which it has a station. It is situated on the road to Tanderagee and the Newry canal, and at a short distance from Lough Shark. This village was formerly a market town, and was the scene of repeated conflicts during the disturbances of 1641. It was last taken by General Monk, who erected a castle here, known as Glen Flesk Castle, of which there are some remains. Here are also the ruins of Dane's Castle and Lisnaguard Fort. Scarva House is the seat of the proprietor. Fairs are held on 21st March, 19th June, 5th September, and 14th November.

SCARVAY, an islet in Harris Sound, one of the Western Islands, coast of Scotland.

SCATAVAGH, a bay on the E. side of Harris, Western Islands, coast of Scotland.

SCATRICK, an islet on the E. side of Lough Strangford, co. Down, Ireland, 2 miles N.E. of Kellinchy.

SCATTERGATE, a tnshp. in the par. of Appleby-St. Lawrence, E. ward, co. Westmoreland. It adjoins the town of Appleby on the S. Within this tnshp. are the remains of Appleby Castle.

SCATTERY ISLAND, or INNISCATTERY, co. Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 2 miles S.W. of Kilrush. It lies in the mouth of the river Shannon, and is considered as part of the parish of St. Mary's, Limerick. A monastery and seven churches were founded by St. Senanus, who died in the middle of the 6th century. Remains of these monastic institutions are to be traced, with those of a round tower. The whole island is held in great veneration by the inhabitants of the vicinity, and pilgrimages were formerly made to the spot. On several occasions the Danes ravaged the island. Numerous ancient burial-grounds are found here.

SCAUGH, a hmlt. in the bar. of Lower Connello, co. Limerick, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles N.N.W. of Rathkeale.

SCAUSBY, a hmlt. in the par. of Brodsworth, N. div. of Strafforth wap., West Riding co. York, 2 miles N.W. of Doncaster.

SCAVAIG, a loch on the W. coast of co. Inverness, Scotland, on the S. side of the Isle of Skye, inside Soa Island.

SCAWBY-CUM-STURTON, a par. in the E. div. of Manley wap., parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 2 miles S.W. of Glanford-Brigg, its post town. It is a station on the Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire railway. The village, which is large, and of considerable antiquity, is situated on the Roman way Ermine Street, where a camp, coins, tesselated pavements, and other antiquities have been found. At a short distance from the village is a mineral spring, designated the "Red Well." The par. includes the hmlt. of Sturton. The surface is generally level, and some portions are moorland and plantations. The soil, when cultivated, is tolerably fertile. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Enclosure Act in 1770. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £330. The church, dedicated to St. Hybald, has a square embattled tower containing four bells. The church, exclusive of the tower, was rebuilt in 1842. The parochial charities consist of £6 to the free school, and some poor's land. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. Reading rooms were established in 1858.

SCAWEN, a tnshp. in the par. of Rhuddlan, co. Flint, 3 miles N.W. of St. Asaph, on the river Clwyd.

SCAWTHORPE, a hmlt. in the par. of Bentley, West Riding co. York, 2 miles N. of Doncaster.

SCAWTON, a par. in the wap. of Ryedale, North Riding co. York, 5 miles W. of Helmsley, its post town, and the same distance N.E. of Coxwell railway station. The village, which is of small extent, and wholly agricultural, is situated in the midst of open and moorland scenery. The soil is tolerably fertile, with a subsoil of limestone and sandstone. About two-thirds of the land are under tillage, and the remainder in pasture. Limestone is quarried for building, and for burning into lime. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £148, and the glebe comprises 32 acres. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of York, val. £145. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. There is a National school for both sexes, also a Sunday-school. Sir William Worsley, Bart., is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

SCHEMES, several islets in Roaring Water Bay, co. Cork, Ireland, 3 miles N.W. of Baltimore.

SCHIHALLION, an isolated mountain in the pars. of Fortingal and Dull, co. Perth, Scotland, about 4 miles S.E. of Kinloch-Rannoch, and 7 N.W. of Weem. It rises 3,564 feet above sea-level, and is traditionally asserted to be the resort of the fairy-queen. It is distinguished in history as the retreat of Robert Bruce, and was the summit from which the Astronomer Royal, Dr. Maskelyne, made his observations with the plumb line in 1772, from which Hutton calculated that the density of the earth was five times greater than that of water. It has been subsequently visited for scientific objects by Drs. Playfair and Macculloch.

SCHOLES, a ward in the par. and borough of Wigan, hund. of West Derby, co. Lancaster, adjoining Wigan, of which it is a suburb. It is situated on the eastern bank, and near the source of the river Douglas. Many of the inhabitants are engaged in the cotton mills, and some in the neighbouring collieries. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Chester, val. £150, in the patron. of the Rector of Wigan. The church was erected in 1840 at an expense of £3,225, partly defrayed by the parliamentary commissioners.

SCHOLES, a hmlt. in the par. of Kirk-Burton, West Riding co. York, 5 miles S. of Huddersfield.

SCHOLES, a hmlt. in the par. of Kimberworth, West Riding co. York, 2 miles W. of Rotherham.

SCHOLES, a hmlt. in the par. of Barwick-in-Elmet, wap. of Skyrack, West Riding co. York, 8 miles N.E. of Leeds. The substratum abounds with coal. The manufacture of cords for machinery is carried on. There is a district church, erected in 1841. The Wesleyans have a place of worship.

SCHOLES, a hmlt. in the chplry. of Clackheaton, par. of Birstall, West Riding co. York, 6 miles N.E. of Huddersfield, and the same S.E. of Bradford. It is situated near a branch of the river Aire.

SCHOLES-MOOR, a vil. in the chplry. of Horton and par. of Bradford, West Riding co. York, 2 miles S. of Bradford. Some of the inhabitants are engaged in the manufacture of woollens and worsteds.

SCHOOL-AYCLIFFE. See AYCLIFFE SCHOOL.

SCHOOL GREEN, a vil. in the chplry. of Thornton, West Riding co. York, 3 miles W. of Bradford.

SCILLY, a vil. in the par. of Rincurran, bar. of Kinsale, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, near Kinsale. It is situated on Kinsale Harbour, and has a considerable fishery.

SCILLY BANK, a ridge 500 feet high in the co. of Cumberland, 1 mile N.E. of Whitehaven.

SCILLY ISLANDS, co. Cornwall. These islands, of which there are about 40 in number, besides numerous rocks, form a cluster lying off the S.W. coast, and annexed to the western division of the county of Cornwall. They are situated about 40 miles due W. from the Lizard Point, and 30 S.W. from the Land's End. Sailing packets ply regularly twice a week between Hugh Town, in the island of St. Mary's, and Penzance. These islands are generally considered to have been first known to the Greeks and Phœnicians by the name Cassiterides, or tin islands; and both Diodorus Siculus and Strabo distinguish between the Cassiterides and Britain, though modern antiquarians are inclined to believe that the western extremity of Cornwall must have been included in the term Cassiterides, as there are no traces of workings in the islands sufficient to countenance the opinion that much tin was ever obtained from them. In the time of the Romans, who called them Sellinæ or Siluræ Insulæ, they were employed occasionally as a place of banishment for state criminals, but there are now no traces of their ancient importance. There are a few primeval monuments, but the early inhabitants appear to have been replaced by others of Saxon origin, as indicated by their names, language, and customs. In the early part of the 10th century the Danes, who had taken possession of them, were expelled by King Athelstan. They appear from this time to have been the property of the crown, but were subsequently in part granted to the abbey of Tavistock on its endowment. In the reign of Edward I. the remainder not so granted was held of the king at a yearly rent of 300 puffins, and at present they form part of the Duchy of Cornwall, although they are not so enumerated in the original grant of Edward III. to his eldest son. In the civil war of Charles I.'s reign they afforded a temporary asylum to Prince Charles and his followers, and in 1649, the king having been executed, Sir John Grenville, as governor, fortified and held them for King Charles II. At length in 1651 the parliament finding their trade much molested by Sir John's frigates, fitted out a formidable armament, under the command of Admiral Blake and Sir George Ascue, which effected the reduction of the islands in the following June. In 1707 Sir Cloudesley Shovel, on his return from Toulon, was lost on the Gilston rocks, which form the south-western portion of the group, and several of the officers lie buried in the churchyard of St. Mary's Isle. For several centuries these islands were held on lease from the crown by the lords Godolphin, and after them by the Duke of Leeds, but they are now in the possession of Augustus Smith, Esq., who is lord proprietor of the whole.—The total surface of the islands is between 3,500 and 4,000 acres, and the number of inhabitants 2,431. The principal islands with their acreage are St. Mary's 1,640 acres, Trescaw or Tresco 720, St. Agnes 550, St. Martin's 500, Bryher or Brehar, 320, Sampson 80, St. Helen's 40, Annette 40, Tean 35, Great Gannilly 35, Arthur 30, Great and Little Gannionick 10, North Withial 8, Giveal 8, and Little Gannilly 6. The whole of the underlying rocks are igneous, consisting chiefly of granite, intermixed with felspar, quartz, and mica slate, and occasionally schorl, chlorite, and hornblende, in isolated patches. The soil is commonly a black peat intermingled with granitic sand, but is tolerably fertile, producing potatoes, barley, wheat, and rye. The produce of the land might easily be increased with improved modes of agriculture, but at present is scarcely sufficient for the inhabitants. The natural growth is a short, thin grass, intermixed with wild camomile, fern, heath, dwarf furze, and moss. Seaweed is commonly employed as manure, and the cattle are partly fed on it, which occasions their meagre appearance. The sheep are of a peculiar breed, and small sized, as are also the horses. Rabbits are less numerous than formerly, and puffins, once very abundant, are now but rarely seen. There are no timber trees and no fruit trees, except in a few sheltered spots in St. Mary's Island, which is the largest of the group and the seat of government. Its capital is Hugh Town, situated upon a sandy isthmus about a mile distant from the Old-town. The island is protected on the W. side by Star Castle, built by Queen Elizabeth, and the Garrison, with its numerous batteries and barracks. There is a new pier, built in 1838, and a good harbour, called the Pool. In 1855 a lighthouse was erected off this pier, another lighthouse has also been erected on Bishop's Rock, in the S.W. part of the group, and a floating light has recently been stationed near Leven Stones by the Trinity House. The military commandant at St. Mary's, and a collector of customs, are appointed by the authorities in London, but the lessee usually appoints the council, who exercise civil jurisdiction. The council hold their sittings at Hugh Town monthly for the trial of minor offences, but persons charged with capital crimes are remitted to Penzance, to be tried before the justices of the county of Cornwall.—The islands are under the spiritual jurisdiction of the Bishop of Exeter, and form part of the archdeaconry of Cornwall. In former times the Abbot of Tavistock held the whole of the tithes on condition of finding two monks to reside there, and to provide for the spiritual wants of the inhabitants, but since the Reformation the tithes have been vested in the lord proprietor, who is patron of the don. cur., and pays the minister an optional salary. Until of late years the minister of St. Mary's Isle was the only clergyman, but another has been appointed by the Society for the Promotion of Christian Knowledge, who resides at Tresco. When these ministers cannot visit the churches on the other islands the service is performed by the clerks. The same society also supports schools on the principal islands. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. The Baptists have several preaching stations. In 1865 these islands were visited by the Prince and Princess of Wales.

SCISSETT, an ecclesiastical district in the tnshp. of Cumberworth, pars. of Emley, Kirkburton, and Silkstone, West Riding co. York, 4 miles N.W. of Penistone, and 8 S.E. of Huddersfield. It is a populous district, containing in 1861 about 3,131 inhabitants, and includes the hmlt. of Skelmanthorpe. There are several worsted and woollen mills for making fancy cloths, worsted damasks, and other fancy stuffs. The water, from its purity and softness, is considered peculiarly adapted for preparation of the raw materials. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £133. The church, dedicated to St. Augustine, has a square embattled tower, and was erected in 1839 at an expense of £2,000. There are National schools.

SCOFTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Worksop, wap. of Bassetlaw, co. Nottingham, 3 miles N.E. of Worksop, its post town, and 24 N. of Nottingham. It is situated near Scofton Wood, once a part of Sherwood Forest. The Chesterfield canal and the river Ryton pass through the township. The inhabitants are principally engaged in agriculture, and in the corn and malt trades. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £150. The church is modern.

SCOLE, or OSMONDISTON, a par. and post town in the hund. of Diss, co. Norfolk, 2 miles E. of Diss railway station, and 20 S.W. of Norwich. The village, which is small, is situated on the river Waveney, and is chiefly agricultural. It was formerly a great thoroughfare, being situated on the coach road from Ipswich to Norwich, and has an ancient timbered inn built by Peck, a merchant, in 1655, and remarkable for a singular carved sign, and a round bed which held upwards of 30 persons. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £250, and the glebe comprises 25 acres. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £255. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is an ancient structure with a square embattled tower. The parochial charities produce about £7 per annum, realised from church land. Scole House and the Shrubbery are the principal residences. Sir E. Kerrison, Bart., is lord of the manor. A fair is held on Easter Tuesday for horses and cattle.

SCONCE POINT, a headland in the Solent, co. Hants, opposite Yarmouth, in the Isle of Wight.

SCONE, or SCOON, a par. in the co. of Perth, Scotland. It contains the new town of Scone and the vils. of Old Scone and Stormontfield. It extends about 4 miles in length from S. to N., with an extreme breadth of about 3 miles. It is bounded by the pars. of St. Martin's, Kilspindie, Kinfauns, Kinnoul, Perth, and Redgorton. The surface is moderately even, and the land in an excellent state of cultivation. The prevailing rocks are of the Old Red sandstone formation, varied by trap dykes. Freestone for building is extensively quarried. A portion of the inhabitants are employed in the large bleach-field at Stormontfield. The parish is traversed by the roads from Perth to Blairgowrie, Cupar Angus, and Newtyle, and is within easy access of the quays and railway depôts of Perth. The town of New Scone is about 2 miles N. of Perth. It is situated on the road from Perth to Blairgowrie, and at a short distance from the river Tay. The houses are well built, and the streets have a clean appearance. The old village, which is now of small extent, grew out of an Austin abbey, founded here by Alexander I. in 1114, on the site of an earlier Culdee house. In the church of this abbey was preserved the coronation stone brought by Kenneth II. from Dunstaffnage in 834, and on it all the Scottish kings were crowned till the year 1296, when Edward I. removed it to Westminster Abbey, and with it, according to ancient prophecy, the empire of Scotland. The ancient palace and abbey were plundered and burnt in 1559 by an infuriated mob during the Reformation. From the remaining traces of the abbey wall, it is estimated to have enclosed an area of 12 acres. Charles II. was crowned in this church before he set out on the expedition that terminated in the fatal battle of Worcester. On the site of the royal palace now stands Scone House, the seat of the Earl of Mansfield, measuring 210 feet by 105, including a timbered gallery 160 feet in length, in place of the old coronation hall. It contains many historical portraits, and some antique furniture, including the hangings of a bed, said to have been wrought by Mary Queen of Scots when a prisoner in Loch Leven Castle. In the grounds are the ancient market cross, standing 13 feet in height, also the Mote Hill, or Mons Placiti de Scon, omnis terra, where the ancient kings sat to determine the pleas between their barons. In the vicinity are two Druidical circles, consisting of 9 stones, and traces of several camps. This par. is in the presb. of Perth and synod of Perth and Stirling, and in the patron. of the crown. The stipend of the minister is about £275. The parish church was erected in 1804, but was enlarged in 1834. The interior contains effigies and monuments to the Murrays. There are a Free church and an United Presbyterian church, also a parochial and 3 other schools. Douglas, the botanist, was born in this parish in 1798, and died here in 1834.

SCONSER, a hmlt. on the E. coast of Skye Island, co. Inverness, Scotland, 9 miles S.E. of Portree, and 23 from Kyle Rhea ferry. There is a ferry situated on the S. side of Loch Sligachan, near Sconser Inn, where tourists stop. The great road formed by the parliamentary commissioners from Kyle Rhea, the usual entrance into the Isle of Skye, to Dunvegan and Stein, passes through this place.

SCOONIE, a par. in the district of Kirkcaldy, co. Fife, Scotland. It extends in length about 4 miles from S. to N., with an extreme breadth of about 2¾ miles, and is bounded by the Frith of Forth and by the pars. of Markinch, Wemyss, Kennoway, Kettle, Cults, and Largo. The surface is moderately even, rising gradually towards the northern extremity, where its greatest altitude reaches 700 feet above sea-level. The coast is flat and sandy, extending along the W. side of Largo Bay for about 1¾ mile in extent. From some of the heights a prospect is obtained of the Frith of Forth and the Lothians. The land is chiefly arable, and well cultivated. Coal was formerly worked on the estate of Durie; and at Aithernie a bed of ochre is found 4 feet in thickness. The village of Scoonie is about 2 miles S.W. of Largo. It is situated on the Frith of Forth, at the mouth of the river Leven, which forms the only harbour for small vessels. The climate is cold, but not unhealthy. The par. also contains the hmlts. of South Burn and Leven, and is traversed by the great S. coast road to Fife. It is within easy access of the Leven and the East of Fife railways. Many of the inhabitants are engaged in flax spinning and in handloom weaving. There used to be a good salmon fishery. Near the western border of the parish a conflict is said to have taken place between the Scots and the Danes, where many stone coffins and other relics were discovered in 1821. This par. is in the presb. of Kirkcaldy and synod of Fife, and in the patron. of the crown. The stipend of the minister is about £270. The parish church was erected in 1776 and enlarged in 1822. There are a Free church, Presbyterian church, and an Independent chapel. The old church of Scoonie was granted by the Bishop of St. Andrew's to the priory of Loch Leven in the 11th century, and is now used as a burying vault of the Durie family. The principal seats are Kilmux, Monthrive, and Durie. J. Stone, a self-taught linguist, was born here in 1727. A fair is held monthly from May to October for linen.

SCOONIE-BURNS, a hmlt. in the par. of Scoonie, co. Fife, Scotland.

SCOPWICK, a par. in the second div. of Langoe wap., parts of Kesteven, co. Lincoln, 9 miles N. of Sleaford, its post town, and 10 S.W. of West-Kirtstead railway station. The village, which is of small extent and chiefly agricultural, is situated on the road from Lincoln to Sleaford. The Burton hounds meet in this parish. The soil is light and sandy, with a substratum of limestone, which is quarried for building purposes. A little to the W. of the village is a heath, sheltered on the E. by some oak woods. The tithes were commuted for corn rents under an Enclosure Act in 1797, and the glebe comprises 16 acres. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £185, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to the Holy Cross, is a comparatively modern edifice, having been rebuilt upwards of half a century back, with the exception of the tower. The register dates from 1609. There is a Church school. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. H. Chaplin, Esq., is lord of the manor.

SCORBOROUGH, a par. in the Bainton-Beacon div. of Harthill wap., East Riding co. York, 4½ miles N.W. of Beverley, its post town, and 1 mile from Arram railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated in the valley of the Aike-beck. The land is chiefly in pasture, and the soils of various quality. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £306. The living is a rect. with the perpet. cur.* of Leconfield annexed, in the dioc. of York, val. £370. The church, dedicated to St. Leonard, has a tower containing one bell. In the vicinity is an old seat with a heronry. Scorborough Hall and Gomery Hall are the principal residences. Lord Hotham is lord of the manor SCOREBY, a hmlt. in the par. of Catton, wap. of Ouse and Derwent, East Riding co. York, 7 miles N.E. of York. It is in conjunction with West Stamford-Bridge to form a township.

SCORTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Catterick, wap. of East Gilling, North Riding co. York, 3 miles N.E. of Catterick, and 5 E. of Richmond. It is a station on the Richmond and Darlington branch of the North-Eastern railway. The village is built round a spacious green near a branch of the river Swale. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The soil is of a clayey and gravelly nature. Petty sessions are held here on the first Friday in each month. On the road to Cowton stands a nunnery of the order of St. Clare, established in 1795 by nuns who arrived in this country from Normandy, and in 1823 a chapel was built and dedicated to St. Clare. There is a school for both sexes adjoining the chapel. The free grammar school, which stands on the N. side of the green, was built in 1760, and was endowed by Leonard Robinson, with an annuity of about £300. Within the township is St. Cuthbert's well, the water of which is considered efficacious in cutaneous and rheumatic disorders.

SCORTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Garstang, hund. of Amounderness, co. Lancaster, 2 miles N.E. of Garstang, and 9 S. of Lancaster. It is a station on the Preston and Carlisle railway. It is situated near the river Wyre.

SCO-RUSTON, a par. in the hund. of Tunstead, co. Norfolk. See RUSTON, SCO.

SCOSTHROP, or SCOSTHORPE, a tnshp. in the par. of Kirkby-in-Malham-Dale, W. div. of Staincliffe wap., West Riding co. York, 6 miles S.E. of Settle. The soil is fertile, and altogether in grass.

SCOTBY, a tnshp. in the par. of Wetheral, ward and co. of Cumberland, 3 miles S.E. of Carlisle, its post town. It is a station on the Newcastle and Carlisle section of the North-Eastern railway. The village, which is of small extent, is situated near the river Eden, and is chiefly agricultural. A portion of the inhabitants are engaged in tanning. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £67. The church has a square embattled tower containing one bell. There is a village school, with a small endowment. The Society of Friends have a meeting-house, with a burial ground attached.

SCOTCH-STREET, a tnshp. in the par. of St. Mary, city of Carlisle, co. Cumberland.

SCOTFORTH, a tnshp. in the par. of Lancaster, hund. of Lonsdale South of the Sands, co. Lancaster, 1½ mile S.E. of Lancaster, its post town. It is an extensive village, situated on the line of the Preston railway, and may be considered a suburb of Lancaster. There is a small endowed school for children of both sexes. Parkfield is the principal residence.

SCOTHERN, a par. in the wap. of Lawress, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 5 miles N.E. of Lincoln, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is chiefly agricultural. The Lancaster and Preston railway passes close to this place. The impropriate tithes are divided between the Earl of Scarborough and the Rector of Ludbrook. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £102. The church, dedicated to St. Germain, was thoroughly restored in 1796. The parochial charities produce about £16 per annum, bequeathed for the relief of ten poor beadsmen. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. Richard Ellison, Esq., is lord of the manor.

SCOTLAND, a hmlt. in the par. of Ingoldsby, co. Lincoln, 3 miles N of Corby.

SCOTLAND STREET, a station on the Edinburgh, Leith, and Granton section of the North British railway, being the first after leaving Princes-street, Edinburgh.

SCOTLANDWELL, a vil. in the par. of Portmoak, co. Kinross, Scotland, 1 mile S.E. of Kinnesswood, and 4 miles E. of Kinross. It is situated on Loch Leven. There are traces of a hospital founded by the bishops of St. Andrew's in the 13th century.

SCOTNEY, a manor in the par. of Lamberhurst, hund. of Loxfield-Pelham, rape of Pevensey, co. Sussex, 6 miles S.E. of Tunbridge Wells. This seat, situated on the borders of Kent, was originally built by Walter de Scoteni, from whom it is named Scotney Castle, and includes a machicolated tower and gateway of the time of Richard II. The body of the structure was restored by Inigo Jones for the Ashburnhams, from whom it passed to Archbishop Chicheley, and subsequently to the Darells, and is now the seat of Mrs. Hussey.

SCOT'S GAP, a station on the Wansbeck line of railway, 12 miles from Morpeth, co. Northumberland.

SCOTSHOUSE, a post-office vil. in the par. of Currin, bar. of Dartree, co. Monaghan, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 4 miles S. of Clones. Here stand the parish church, a Roman Catholic chapel, and a police station. Hill-town is the seat of Colonel Madden.

SCOTSTARVET, an old seat of the Scotts in the co. of Fife, Scotland, near Ceres. It has a tower 50 feet high, and a museum of local antiquities.

SCOTSTOWN, a post-office vil. in the par. of Clones, bar. of Monaghan, co. Monaghan, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 4 miles N.W. of Monaghan. There is a police station. Fairs are held once a month.

SCOTSWOOD, a vil. in the tnshp. of East Denton, co. Northumberland, 4 miles W. of Newcastle. It is a station on the Newcastle and Carlisle and Border Counties railways. Ramsay's paper mill is in this village.

SCOTTER, a par. in the wap. of Corringham, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 4 miles N.W. of Kirton-in-Lindsey, its post town, 9 N.E. of Gainsborough and 3½ from Northorpe railway station. The parish, which is extensive, is situated on the river Eau, here joined by the Trent, which forms its north-western boundary. A charter for a market on Thursday was granted by Richard I., but has long been discontinued. The par. includes the hmlts. of Cotehouses, Scotterthorpe, and Susworth. The surface is generally level, with some alternation of hilly ground. The soil is various, consisting of clay, loam, sand, and gravel, according to the locality. Some years ago a canoe and other relics were found imbedded in the gravel. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1808, when 57 acres were allotted for the repair of the church. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £814, in the patron. of the Bishop of Peterborough. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient structure with a tower containing a clock and four bells. The interior of the church contains a brass of Marmaduke Tyrwitt, Esq. The parochial charities produce about £11 per annum, realised from church lands. There is a National school for both sexes. The Wesleyan, Primitive, and New Connexion Methodists have each a place of worship. A horse fair is held on 6th July, and a pleasure fair on 10th July.

SCOTTLETHORPE, a hmlt. in the par. of Edenham, wap. of Beltisloe, parts of Kesteven, co. Lincoln, 3 miles N.W. of Bourn.

SCOTTON, a par. in the wap. of Corringham, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 3 miles N.W. of Kirton, its nearest railway station and post town, and 9 N.E. of Gainsborough. The village is situated on the river Eau, and is chiefly agricultural. The par. includes the tnshp. of East Ferry, and is bounded on the W. by the river Trent. A considerable portion of the surface is moorland and peat, but the soil of the cultivated lands is a rich loam. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £650, and the glebe comprises 71 acres. The living is a rect.* with the cur. of East Ferry, in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £636. The church is dedicated to St. Genevieve, or Genewy. There is also a chapel-of-ease at East Ferry. The Primitive and Wesleyan Methodists have each a place of worship. Sir Richard Frederick, Bart., of Burwood, is lord of the manor.

SCOTTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Catterick, wap. of East-Hang, North Riding co. York, 2 miles from Hipswell, and 3½ S.E. of Richmond. Lord Wenlock is lord of the manor.

SCOTTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Farnham, lower div. of Claro wap., West Riding co. York, 3 miles N.W. of Knaresborough, and 1½ mile S.W. of Farnham. The village, which is of small extent, is situated in a vale of the same name watered by the river Nidd. There is a bleach ground, and stone for building is quarried. The Wesleyans have a place of worship, and there is a burial-ground belonging to the Society of Friends. The ancient mansions of the Percy and Pulleyn families have been converted into farmhouses. About half the land is arable, and the rest pasture. The soil is rich. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Enclosure Act in 1828.

SCOTTOW, a par. in the hund. of South Erpingham, co. Norfolk, 9 miles N.E. of Norwich, its post town, and 2¼ W. of Worstead. The village, which is straggling, is partly situated on the high road from North Walsham to Norwich. Close to this village is the inn known as the "Scottow Horse-shoe." The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The soil is rich and fertile, with a subsoil of brick earth, The Odd Fellows' Manchester Unity Club have here a meeting place. The appropriate tithes, belonging to the Bishop of Norwich, have been commuted for a rent-charge of £492 10s. and the vicarial for £228, with a glebe of 18 acres. The living is a vic.* annexed to the rect.* of Belaugh, in the dioc. of Norwich. The church, dedicated to All Saints, has a lofty square embattled tower. It was entirely restored and beautified in 1833. The register dates from 1561. The parochial charities consist of an allotment of 21 acres. Sir H. J. Durrant, Bart., of Scottow Hall, is lord of the manor. A cattle fair is held on Easter Tuesday.

SCOTT-WILLOUGHBY. See WILLOUGHBY, SCOTT, co. Lincoln.

SCOUGAL, a chplry. in the par. of Whitekirk, co. Haddington, Scotland, 4 miles S.E. of Berwick. It is situated at the mouth of the river Peffer. In the vicinity are the ruins of Scougal House, and of a chapel near Scougal Rocks.

SCOULTON, a par. in the hund. of Wayland, co. Norfolk, 4 miles E. of Watton, its post town, 6 N.W. of Attleborough, and 3½ S.W. of Hingham. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the road from Norwich to Watton, and is wholly agricultural. In the neighbourhood is an extensive sheet of water, formed by the river Wissey, and much frequented by gulls from the beginning of March till August. About three parts of the land are arable, and the remainder meadow, pasture, and woodland. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £450, and the glebe contains 53 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £482. The church, dedicated to All Saints, or the Holy Trinity, is an ancient structure with a low tower containing three bells. There is a school-house, with residence for the master.

SCOURIE, or SCOWRIE, a seaport and vil. in the par. of Eddrachillis, co. Sutherland, Scotland, 9½ miles N.E. of Rustore, and 53 N.W. of Dornoch. It is situated on Scourie Bay, near Handa Island. The estate formerly belonged to the Mackays, of whom was Lieutenant-General Hugh Mackay, of William III.'s reign. The village contains a savings-bank, reading club, and school-house.

SCRABBY, or BALLYMACKELLENNY, a par. and small post town in the bar. of Tullyhunco, co. Cavan, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 12 miles S.W. of Cavan, and 89 from Dublin. It is situated on the road from Arvagh to Granard. The surface consists of a medium soil, and comprises the lake of Gowna. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ardagh, val. with Granard £411. There is a small church. Fairs are held on 10th February, 12th May, 1st August, and 12th December.

SCRABSTER ROADS, an anchorage on the W. side of Thurso Bay, co. Caithness, Scotland.

SCRAFIELD, or SCRAY FIELD, a par. in the hund. of Hill, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 3½ miles S.E. of Horncastle, its post town. The parish, which is inconsiderable, contains only two or three farmhouses. A skirmish took place here during the civil contest in the reign of Charles I. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £135, and the glebe comprises 36 acres. The living is a rect. annexed to that of Hameringham, in the dioc. of Lincoln. No traces of the church, once dedicated to St. Michael, remain, but the churchyard is still devoted to burial purposes. Scrafield House is the principal residence.

SCRAFTON, EAST, or LITTLE, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Caldbridge, par. of Coverham, North Riding co. York, 3 miles S.W. of Middleham, and adjoining West Scrafton.

SCRAFTON, WEST, a tnshp. in the par. of Coverham, wap. of Hang-West, North Riding co. York, 4 miles S.W. of Middleham, on a branch of the river Ure.

SCRAPE, a mountain of the co. of Peebles, Scotland. It attains an elevation of 2,800 feet above sea-level, and gives rise to a stream called Scrape Burn, which falls into the Tweed.

SCRAPTOFT, a par. in the hund. of Gartree, co. Leicester, 4 miles N.E. of Leicester, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £161. The church, dedicated to All Saints, has a tower containing three bells. It has an ancient cross on three steps. Upper Hall and Nether Hall are the principal residences. E. B. Hartopp, Esq., is lord of the manor.

SCRATBY, a par. in the hund. of East Flegg, co. Norfolk, 5 miles N. of Yarmouth, its post town, and 2½ N.W. of Caistor. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the coast, and is wholly agricultural. It is included in the corporation of West Flegg. The living is a vic. annexed to that of Ormesby St. Margaret, in the dioc. of Norwich. The church is dedicated to All Saints.

SCRATCHBURY, an ancient British camp in the co. of Wilts, 1½ mile N.W. of Heytesbury. It covers an extent of near 40 acres, and is surrounded by a single trench, within which many antiquities have been found.

SCRATCHELL'S BAY, a cove in the Isle of Wight, co. Hants. It is situated a little to the S.E. of the Needles, and is a quarter of a mile wide surrounded by lofty chalk cliffs.

SCRATTAGE, a vil. in the par. of Heston, co. Middlesex, 2 miles W. of Brentford.

SCRAYFIELD. See SCRAFIELD, co. Lincoln.

SCRAYINGHAM, a par. in the wap. of Buckrose, East Riding co. York, 11 miles N.E. of York, its post town, and 5 from the Kirkham station on the York and Scarborough line of railway. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Derwent, and is wholly agricultural. The par. includes the tnshps. of Howsham, Leppington, and Scrayingham. The soil consists of clay, but has been much improved by cultivation. About two-thirds of the land are arable, and the remainder pasture and woodland. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1825. The living is a rect.* with the perpet. cur. of Leppington annexed, in the dioc. of York, val. £661, in the patron. of the crown. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is a modern structure with a turret containing two bells. The interior of the church contains a Caen stone font. There is a chapel-of-ease at Leppington. In the village is a National school for both sexes. Howsham Hall and Aldby Park are the principal residences.

SCRAY LATHE, a div. of the co. of Kent, containing the hunds. of East Barnfield, Berkeley, Blackbourne, Boughton-under-Blean, Calehill, Chart, Cranbrooke, Faversham, Felborough, Marden, Milton, Rolvenden, Isle of Sheppey, Tenterden, Teynham, and Wye, comprising together an area of 260,510 acres.

SCREDINGTON, or SCRADINGTON, a par. in the wap. of Aswardhurn, parts of Kesteven, co. Lincoln, 5 miles N.E. of Falkingham, its post town, and 4 S.E. of Sleaford. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. There are some brick-kilns. The par. contains the hmlt. of Northbeck. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1796, and the glebe comprises 150 acres. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £200, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church is dedicated to St. Andrew. The parochial charities produce about £23 per annum. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. Lord Willoughby de Broke is lord of the manor.

SCREEB, a hmlt. in the bar. of Moycullen, co. Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 11 miles S.W. of Oughterard. It is situated on Kilkerran Bay.

SCREES FELLS, a mountainous ridge in the S. part of co. Cumberland, situated on the E. side of Wast Water.

SCREMBY, a par. in the Wold div. of Candleshoe wap., parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 4 miles N.E. of Spilsby, its post town, and 2½ N.W. of Burgh railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. The par. includes the hmlt. of Gretby. The substratum is chalk, which is extensively quarried. The tithes were commuted for corn-rents under an Enclosure Act in 1801, and the glebe comprises 36 acres. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £250. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, is a recent erection with a tower. The interior of the church contains several mural monuments to the Moody and Dymoke families, also a memorial E. window to Mrs. Brackenbury, presented by the present rector. The parochial charities produce about £6 per annum. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. The Rev. Henry Brackenbury, M.A., is lord of the manor and solo landowner. Scremby Hall, the principal residence, is situated on an eminence.

SCREMERSTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Ancroft, hund. of Islandshire, co. Northumberland, formerly in Durham, 4½ miles S.E. of Berwick-on-Tweed. It is a station on the North-Eastern railway. It is situated in a vale near the coast of the German Ocean, opposite Holy Island. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Durham, val. £160, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church is an ancient structure, and once belonged to Holy Island.

SCRENWOOD, a tnshp. in the par. of Alnham, N. div. of Coquetdale ward, co. Northumberland, 7 miles N.W. of Rothbury, on a branch of the river Coquet.

SCRESORT, a sea loch on the E. side of Rum Island, co. Argyle, Scotland.

SCREVETON, a par. in the N. div. of Bingham wap., co. Nottingham, 4 miles N.E. of Bingham, its post town, about the same distance from Aslacton railway station, and 8 S.W. of Newark. The village, which is of small extent, is situated near the Fosse Way, on a branch of the river Devon, called the Car Dyke. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The surface is generally level, but rises in some parts to a considerable elevation. The soil is clay alternated with sand. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1776. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £252. The church, dedicated to St. Winifred, has a tower containing three bells. The interior of the church contains an old font and an effigy of General Whalley, the supposed executioner of Charles I., surrounded by his three wives and twenty-two children. There are places of worship for the Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists. Earl Manvers and T. B. T. Hildyard, Esq., M.P., are lords of the manor.

SCRIVELSBY, a par. in the S. div. of Gartree wap., parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 2½ miles S. of Horncastle, its post town, and 7 N. of Tattershall. The village, which is of small extent, is chiefly agricultural. In the reign of Edward III. the manor passed from the Marmions and Ludlows to the Dymokes, hereditary champions of England, who hold their estates by "the service of grand serjeantry." The surface is generally level, and the soil a rich sandy loam alternated with clay. The living is a rect. annexed to that of Dalderby, in the dioc. of Lincoln, joint val. £700. The church, dedicated to St. Benedict, has a spired tower of recent erection. The church has a memorial window of the Rev. John Dymoke and his wife; there is also a brass of Sir Robert Dymoke, and several monuments of the same family. Scrivelsby Court, the seat of Sir Henry Dymoke, is situated in a well-wooded park abounding with deer, and contains the ruins of the old hall, which Leland described.

SCRIVEN-WITH-TENTERGATE, a tnshp. in the par. of Knaresborough, lower div. of Claro wap., West Riding co. York, 1 mile N.W. of Knaresborough. The tnshp. is situated on the river Nidd, and contains the hmlts. of Scriven and Tentergate. Its manor passed from a family of the same name to the Slingsbys in the reign of Henry III. Scriven Hall, the family residence of Sir Charles Slingsby, Bart., is an ancient mansion situated in an extensive park. Near the Hall are Conyngarth and Gateshill camps, the former supposed to be of Saxon, and the latter of Danish origin.

SCROBY, a sand-bank on the E. side of the Yarmouth Roads, co. Norfolk, 4 miles N.E. of Yarmouth.

SCROGIE HILL, a vil. in the par. of Methven, co. Perth, Scotland, 4 miles N.W. of Perth.

SCROOBY, a par. in the Hatfield div. of Bassetlaw wap., and within the lib. of Southwell and Scrooby, co. Nottingham, 1½ mile S. of Bawtry, its post town, and 8 miles N.W. of Retford. It is a station on the Great Northern railway. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Idle, and is chiefly agricultural. The commons were enclosed in 1775, and the soil is of a sandy description. At a farm in the neighbourhood are the ruins of the palace of the Archbishops of York, who had free warren of the lands in the reign of Edward II., and in the garden is a mulberry tree said to have been planted in the reign of Henry VIII. by Cardinal Wolsey. The living is a vic. united to that of Sutton-on-Lound, in the dioc. of Lincoln. The church, dedicated to St. Wilfrid, is an old embattled edifice with a square pinnacled and spired tower containing a clock and three bells. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. The Archbishop of York is lord of the manor.

SCROPTON, a par. in the hund. of Appletree, co. Derby, 11½ miles S.W. of Derby, its post town, and 5 N.W. of Burton-on-Trent. It is a station of the North Staffordshire railway. The village is situated on the river Dove, and is wholly agricultural. The par. includes the tnshp. of Foston. That portion of the par. which extends into Needwood Forest has been joined to Staffordshire. The glebe comprises 15 acres. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £80. The church, dedicated to St. Paul, is an ancient structure with a tower containing three bells. The parochial charities produce about £6 per annum. There is a free school. J. Broadhurst, Esq., is lord of the manor. A feast is held on the nearest Sunday to St. Paul's Day.

SCROUTHEA, a vil. in the bar. of Upperthird, co. Waterford, prov. of Munster, Ireland, adjoining Clonmel.

SCRUTON, a par. in the wap. of East Hang, North Riding co. York, 3½ miles N.E. of Bedale, its post town, and 5 S.W. of Northallerton. It is a station on the Northallerton and Leyburn branch of the North-Eastern railway. The village, which is of small extent, is chiefly agricultural. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £422 6s., and the glebe comprises 81 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £550. The church, dedicated to St. Radegund, is an ancient stone structure with an ivy-mantled tower containing a clock and three bells. There is a National school for both sexes. Scruton Hall is the principal residence.

SCRWGAN, a tnshp. in the par. of Llangedwin, co. Denbigh, 10 miles S.W. of Chirk.

SCUGDALE, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Whorlton, lib. of West Langbaurgh, North Riding co. York, 5 miles S. of Stokesley, on the coast near Scugdale Head.

SCULCOATES, or SCOWCOTTS, a par. in the Hunsley Beacon div. of Harthill wap., East Riding co. York, 1 mile N. of Hull, of which it is an extensive suburb. Less than a century ago this parish contained scarcely 100 inhabitants, but since the construction of the docks on the western bank of the river Hull it has been extensively built upon, and in 1861 contained a population of 27,167. At the time of the Domesday Survey Sculcoates formed one of the lordships granted to Ralph de Mortimer by William the Conqueror. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of York, val. £295, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. See HULL.

SCULLABOGUE, a spot 5 miles N.N.W. of Taghmon, co. Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. It is situated at the foot of Carrickburn Hill, and was the scene of the massacre of upwards of 100 persons by the rebels in 1798.

SCULLOGESTOWN, a par. in the bar. of Ikeathy, co. Kildare, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles S.W. of Kilcock, its post town. It is situated in the Bog of Allen. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Kildare, val. with Kilcock £320, in the patron. of the crown. Hortland House is the seat of Sir J. W. Hort, Bart.

SCULTHORPE, a par. in the hund. of Gallow, co. Norfolk, 2 miles N.W. of Fakenham, its post town, and railway station. The village, which is small and wholly agricultural, is situated on the road from Fakenham to Norwich. About two-thirds of the land are arable, and the remainder meadow, pasture, and woodland. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £550, and the glebe comprises 71 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £550. The church, dedicated to All Saints, has a square embattled tower. It contains several brasses, of which one bears date 1470. The church was built by Sir Robert Knollys, the soldier who rose to rank and fortune in the reign of Edward III. The register dates from 1561. The parochial charities produce about £18 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes. The Baptists have a place of worship. Cramer Hall, the principal residence, is situated in an extensive park.

SCUNTHORPE, a tnshp. in the par. of Frodingham, E. div. of Manley wap., parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 7½ miles N.W. of Glanford-Brigg, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is chiefly agricultural. On the banks of the river Trent at Gunhouse are extensive iron works of recent formation. C. Winn, Esq., is lord of the manor.

SCURLOCKSTOWN, a par. in the bar. of Lower Deece, co. Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles E.S.E. of Trim, its post town. It lies along the river Boyne, and consists mostly of arable land. It is traversed by the road from Trim to Dublin. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Meath, val. with Trim £559, in the patron. of the bishop. The old church is in ruins. There are remains of a castle built here by William de Scurlog in the latter part of the 12th century. The church belonged to St. Thomas of Dublin, by grant of De Lacy.

SCURLOCKSTOWN, a hmlt. in the par. of Burry, bar. of Upper Kells, co. Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles S.W. of Kells, on the road to Clonmellon.

SCYBOR-Y-COED, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanfihangel Geneur Glynn, co. Cardigan, 4 miles N. of Aberystwith. It is situated at the confluence of the rivers Einon and Dovey, and includes Eglwys-Fach.

SEABEACH, a hmlt. in the pars. of Eartham and Boxgrove, hund. of Box, rape of Chichester, co. Sussex, 4 miles N.E. of Chichester.

SEABOROUGH, a par. in the hund. of Crewkerne, co. Somerset, 3 miles S.W. of Crewkerne, its post town. The parish, which is of small extent and wholly agricultural, is situated on the river Axe. The land is divided between arable and pasture, with about 15 acres of garden and orchard grounds. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £130, and the glebe comprises 28 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £150. The church, erected in 1729, has a tower containing two bells. The register dates from 1562. The parochial charities produce about £4 per annum. There are day and Sunday schools adjoining the church.

SEABRIDGE, a tnshp. partly in the par. of Stoke-upon-Trent, and partly in that of Swinnerton, N. div. of Pirehill hund., co. Stafford, 1½ mile S.W. of Newcastle-under-Lyme.

SEABROOK WITH HORTON, a hmlt. in the pars. of Cheddington and Ivinghoe, co. Bucks, 1 mile N.W. of Ivinghoe, on the North-Western railway and Grand Junction canal.

SEACOMBE, a tnshp. in the par. of Wallasey, lower div. of the hund. of Wirrall, co. Chester. It is situated on the western bank of the river Mersey, which is here crossed by a steam ferry to Liverpool. There is a prospect of the river and of the towns of Liverpool and Birkenhead. Adjoining this township is the New Wallasey or Birkenhead dock. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Chester. The church is a modern structure.

SEACOURT, an ext. par. place in the hund. of Hormer, co. Berks, 3 miles N.W. of Oxford.

SEACROFT, a tnshp. in the par. of Whitkirk, lower div. of Skyrack wap., West Riding co. York, 3½ miles N.E. of Leeds, its post town, and 10 from Tadcaster. It is situated on the road from Leeds to York, and includes the hmlts. of Coldcoates, Crossgates, Foundry, Killingbeck, and Whitbridge. This place was the scene of two battles, one in the Saxon times, and the other in the reign of Charles I., when Lord Goring defeated the parliamentarians under Fairfax. The substratum abounds in coal, of which several mines are in operation. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £131, in the patron. of the Vicar of Whitkirk. The church is modern. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. There is a National school.

SEAFIELD, a hmlt. in the bar. of Ibrickan, co. Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5 miles S.W. of Milltown Malbay. There are a pier and a coastguard station. Mutton Island stands in the offing.

SEAFIELD, a seaport and vil. in the par. of Kinghorn, co. Fife, Scotland, 1½ mile N. of Kinghorn. It is situated on the Frith of Forth, and near Seafield Castle ruins. The harbour can accommodate vessels of any size at all periods of the tide. In the vicinity are Seafield tower and several seats.

SEAFORD, a par., cinque port, and retired bathing-place, having separate jurisdiction, but locally in the hund. of Flexborough, rape of Pevensey, co Sussex, 9 miles S.E. of Lewes, 12 E. of Brighton, and 3½ from Newhaven. It is a station on the Newhaven and Seaford branch of the Brighton and South Coast railway. This place, which is supposed to have been the Civitas Anderida of the Romans, is situated on the road from Newhaven to Eastbourne, about half a mile from the sea. The river Ouse, the estuary of which formerly constituted its harbour, was diverted from its ancient channel some centuries ago, and now falls into the sea at Newhaven, about 3 miles to the westward. The bay is very deep, and being well sheltered by cliffs, affords safe anchorage for fleets of shipping during the easterly gales: but little trade is now carried on, the only vessels belonging to the port being engaged in the fisheries. Mackerel are frequently taken in large quantities in the bay. The town, which is now only a considerable village, was once a market town and representative borough, containing seven churches. It first returned two members to parliament in the reign of Edward I., and numbered Pitt and Canning amongst its representatives, but was disfranchised at the passing of the Reform Bill in 1832. It was attacked, but without success, by the French in 1545, and was partially burnt on another occasion, but the greatest damage has been occasioned by the frequent encroachments of the sea. In 1824 the sea broke through the barrier of shingle, and did much injury to the town and neighbourhood, to prevent the recurrence of which catastrophe a sort of breakwater was formed in 1850 by throwing down a mass of 300,000 tons of chalk cliff, from 50 to 100 feet high; an operation effected by the explosion of 36,000 lbs. of powder fired by the voltaic battery, but the result is a failure, the chalk having altogether disappeared. On 3rd January, 1866, the town was inundated to an extent almost as bad as in 1824. At some points along the coast the cliffs attain an elevation of 300 feet, and on the summit of Seaford Heights are traces of a large circular camp, supposed to be of Roman formation. There are warm and cold sea baths on the beach, and in the town is an ancient townhall with gaol underneath. Some of the resident population are fishermen, but during the summer season it is much resorted to by visitors for sea bathing and the bracing qualities of its atmosphere. It is governed under the charter of Henry VIII., which separated it from the cinque port of Hastings, by a municipal corporation, consisting of a bailiff, who is also coroner for the liberty ex officio, and 12 jurats, who are the local magistrates, and are elected annually on the 29th September by the freemen; these latter enjoy peculiar privileges under their charters, and were formerly styled barons. Courts of general quarter sessions for the borough are held regularly, and petty sessions occasionally. The custom of Borough English prevails in the manor. The parish is bounded on the E. by the Cuck-mere river, and on the beach is a fort, now dismantled, and martello tower, being No. 74, or the last from Folkestone. Seaford gives title of baron to the family of Ellis, whose seat is Seaford House. The Earl of Chichester has also large landed property here, and J. Purcell Fitzgerald, Esq., has extensive possessions in the town. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £240. The living is a vic. annexed to that of Sutton, in the dioc. of Chichester, and in the patron. of the crown. The church, dedicated to St. Leonard, is part of an ancient Norman structure, but was greatly altered and enlarged in 1862, at a cost of £2,300. It has a large square embattled tower, containing a peal of eight bells. The register dates from 1558. There are National schools, a Sunday-school, and an infant school. Fairs are held on 15th March and 25th July.

SEAFORD, a post-office vil. in the par. of Loughin Island, bar. of Kinelarty, co. Down, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 1 mile N. of Clough, and 7 miles S.S.E. of Ballynahinch. It is situated on the road from Dundrum to Ballynahinch, and consists of a well-built street, containing the parish church, Presbyterian meeting-house, and almshouses. The seat of the Fordes is entered from the village by a gateway. The village was formerly called Neaghen. Petty sessions are held once a fortnight, and fairs on 7th March, 9th June, 4th and 5th September, and 5th December.

SEAFORTH, a vil. and chplry. in the tnshp. of Litherland, par. of Sephton, co. Lancaster, 4½ miles N.W. of Liverpool. It is a station on the W. section of the Lancashire and Yorkshire railway. It is situated near the Leeds canal, and is resorted to for sea bathing. The living is a perpet cur.* in the dioc. of Chester, val. £87. The church, dedicated to St. Thomas, was erected in 1815.

SEAFORTH, a sea loch on the S.E. side of Lewis, Western Islands, coast of Scotland. It is 12 miles long by 2 broad, and contains the islet of the same name, from which the Mackenzies took the title of earl.

SEAGOE, a par. in the bar. of East O'Neilland, co. Armagh, prov. of Ulster, Ireland. It contains part of Portadown, its post town. The surface extends along the banks of the river Bann, not far from Lough Neagh. The soil is chiefly arable. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Dromore, val. £900, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was built by means of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits. The parish is united to Moyntagh in the Roman Catholic arrangement. Seagoe House is the seat of Archdeacon Saurin, and Carrick that of Colonel Blacker. The trade of the district is principally in butter and linen. There are traces of an earthwork near the demesne of Carrick, and tradition points out this spot as the scene of the defeat of the O'Nials by Blacar the Dane. Numerous warlike implements have been found here. Stone suitable for lithographic purposes is obtained.

SEAGRAVE, a par. in the hund. of East Goscote, co. Leicester, 6 miles S.E. of Loughborough, its post town, and 2 N.E. of the Sileby station on the Midland railway. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on a branch of the river Soar, near the Fosse Way. The soil consists of a strong, fertile clay, upon a substratum of limestone. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture, and a few in framework knitting. The living was once held by Burton, author of the "Anatomy of Melancholy," who died here in 1639. The tithes were commuted in 1760 for 380 acres of land. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £404, in the patron. of Queen's College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient structure, with a square tower containing three bells. The parochial charities produce about £21 per annum, of which £5 goes towards the support of the National school. E. Marriot, Esq., is lord of the manor.

SEAGRY, a par. in the hund. of Malmesbury, co. Wilts, 6 miles N.E. of Chippenham, its post town, and 5 S.E. of Malmesbury. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the Avon. The par. contains the tythgs. of Upper and Lower Seagry. The great tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £163, and the vicarial for £159 16s. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £173. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has been recently rebuilt. It has one bell, and contains an ancient font.

SEAHAM, a par. and seaport town in the N. div. of Easington ward, co. Durham, 5 miles S.E. of Sunderland, its post town. It is a station on the Sunderland and Seaham line of railway. The village is situated on the road from Sunderland to Stockton, and has a good haven, originally formed in 1823 by the late Marquis of Londonderry, who purchased the estates of Sir R. Milbanke Noel. It is a coastguard station and a sub-port to Sunderland. The par. includes the tnshp. of Seaton, and formerly belonged to the bishops of Durham. The new pier harbour is about 16 miles in extent, with a lighthouse constructed in 1843, and situated near Red Acre Point lights. In connection with the harbour are various jetties and quays for facilitating the shipping of coal and other produce. It appears to have been selected for the superior facility of its entrance, which is much safer than that of Sunderland. The soil is of a clayey nature, with a subsoil of clay and limestone. At New Seaton are extensive collieries, giving employment to a large number of the inhabitants. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Durham, val. £666. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has a tower containing two bells. The register dates from 1646. The parochial charities produce about £10 per annum. There is also a district church at New Seaham, the living of which is a perpet. cur.,* val. £385. There is a National school for both sexes at New Seaham, erected at the expense of the Marchioness of Londonderry, by whom it is entirely supported; also a school established by the Hetton Coal Company. Seaham Hall is the principal residence. The Marchioness of Londonderry is lady of the manor.

SEA-HEADS, a sandbank in Yarmouth Roads, co. Norfolk. It lies outside Scroby Sand, and is nearly 4 miles long.

SEAL, an ext. par. place in the hund. of Steyning, rape of Bramber, co. Sussex, 2 miles from Steyning, and 21 N.E. of Chichester. It is situated at the bridge over the river Adur, and has some remains of a priory founded by William de Braose in 1075 as a cell to Saumur Abbey in Normandy.

SEAL, a par. in the hund. of Codsheath, lathe of Sutton-at-Hone, co. Kent, 2 miles N.E. of Sevenoaks, its railway station and post town, and 25 S.E. of London. The village, which is large, is situated on the Godstone and Maidstone high road. The manor was formerly held by William de Bryene, the Bethunes, Marshalls, Bigods, and other families of distinction. The land is partly in hop grounds. The surface is varied with hill and dale. The soil is of a sandy and loamy nature, with clay in places. There are quarries of ragstone, and a fine sand for glass-making is found in juxtaposition with veins of ironstone. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £152, and the vicarial for one of £458. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic. of Kemsing, in the dioc. of Canterbury. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, has a tower containing five bells. The interior of the church contains monuments of the Bickerstaffes and Theobalds, also a full-length brass of De Bryene, bearing date 1395. The register dates from 1655. The parochial charities produce about £4 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes, built in 1861, besides a school at Godden Green, also a library and reading-room. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. This neighbourhood is studded with residences, among which are Wilderness Park, the seat of Marquess Camden, and Chart Lodge. A fair is held on the Wednesday in Whitsun week.

SEAL, a par. in the hund. of Farnham, co. Surrey, 3 miles N.E. of Farnham, and 2 S. of the Ash railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the Hog's Back range of hills, and is chiefly agricultural. The par. comprises the hmlt. of Tongham. About a fourth of the surface is unenclosed waste, and half the remainder arable, with about 50 acres of hop grounds. The soil upon the hills is chalk, and in other parts sand and clay. There are some extensive chalk pits. The appropriate tithes, belonging to the Archdeacon of Surrey, have been commuted for a rent-charge of £377. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £44, in the patron. of the Archdeacon of Surrey. The church has a low tower containing three bells. With the exception of the chancel, it was rebuilt in 1861, and has several stained windows, also monuments of the Long and Woodroffe families. There is also a church at Tongham, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £100, in the patron. of the Archdeacon of Surrey.

SEAL, a par. in the hund. of West Goscote, co. Leicester, 5 miles S.W. of Ashby-de-la-Zouch, its post town, and 8 S. of Burton-on-Trent. The village is situated near the canal on the river Mease. The par. includes the tnshps. of Nether and Over Seal. The soil consists of clay, gravel, and sand. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £950. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, has a tower containing five bells. The interior of the church contains a tomb of the 15th century to Roger Doughton, once rector of this parish. The parochial charities produce about £118 per annum, £104 of which goes to Johnson's almshouse. There is a parochial school for both sexes. The General Baptists have a place of worship. Seal Hall, The Pastures, and Grange Wood House are the principal residences.

SEAL, an island in Trawbeaga Bay, co. Donegal, Ireland.

SEALAND, a tnshp. in the par. of Hawarden, hund. of Mold, co. Flint, 2 miles from Hawarden, its post town, and 6 from Mold. It was formerly part of Saltmarsh Marsh, but is now reclaimed.

SEAL-HOUSES, a hmlt. in the par. of Arkengarth Dale, North Riding co. York, 3 miles N.W. of Reeth.

SEAMER, a par. in the W. div. of Langbaurgh lib., North Riding co. York, 6 miles S.E. of Yarm, its post town, and 2 N.W. of Stokesley. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on an eminence near the road from Yarm to Stokesley, and from the churchyard is obtained a distant view of the German Ocean. Two-thirds of the land are arable, and the remainder pasture and meadow. The soil consists of a rich sandy loam in the vicinity of the village, but in other parts of an inferior quality. In the parish is a tumulus, and on the acclivity of a hill are vestiges of an ancient entrenchment, near which many skeletons and military weapons have been found, leading to the supposition that this was the site of the great battle of Baden Hill, in which Prince Arthur defeated the Saxons in 492. The great tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £367 13*s.*, and the incumbent's for £16 10*s.* The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of York, val. £56. The church, dedicated to St. Martin, has a low, square tower containing two bells. The interior of the church contains a marble font, the gift of Sir Cuthbert Herring in 1822. The register dates from 1538. There is a parochial school for both sexes, also a Sunday-school; the latter is supported by Lady Leconfield. Lord Leconfield is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

SEAMER, a par. in the wap. of Pickering Lythe, North Riding co. York, 4 miles S.W. of Scarborough, its post town, and 1 mile E. of the Seamer station on the North-Eastern railway. The village, which is of large extent, is situated on the old road from Driffield to Scarborough. The par. includes the tnshps. of East Agton and Irton, and formerly belonged to the Percys. In 1549 an insurrection took place here, led by Duld, the parish clerk, having for its object the restoration of the Roman Catholic religion and the abolition of monarchy. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1809. The living is a vic.* with the cur. of Cayton annexed, in the dioc. of York, val. £250. The church, dedicated to St. Martin, is an ancient stone structure, with a square embattled tower containing three bells. The parochial charities produce about £15 per annum, of which £8 goes to Coulson's school. There is a National school for both sexes, supported by Lord Londesborough, and in which a Sunday-school is also held. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. Lord Londesborough is lord of the manor. A cattle market is held on the first Monday in every month, and a cattle fair on 15th July, lasting seven days.

SEAPATRICK, a par. in the bar. of Lower and Upper Iveagh, co. Down, prov. of Ulster, Ireland. It contains the post town of Banbridge (which see). This parish lies along the banks of the river Bann, and is intersected by the road from Newry to Belfast. The soil is of first-rate quality, and well cultivated. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Dromore, val. £300, in the patron. of the crown and bishop. The church was built in 1698 in place of an ancient one destroyed in 1641. Another church has been built near Banbridge. The parish is joined to Tullylish in the Roman Catholic arrangement. There are places of worship for Presbyterians and Methodists, also parochial and other schools. Seapatrick House is the chief seat.

SEARBY WITH OWMBY, a par. in the S. div. of Yarborough wap., parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 5 miles S.E. of Glanford-Brigg, its post town, and 1½ mile from the Howsham station on the Hull, Market Rasen, and Lincoln railway. The village, which is small and secluded, is stationed on the Wolds, and is chiefly agricultural. The par. includes the hmlt. of Owmby. The impropriation belongs to the Dean and Chapter of Lincoln. The tithes were commuted for land and corn-rents under Enclosure Acts in 1764 and 1795, and the glebe comprises 227 acres. The living is a vic. with that of Owmby annexed, in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £172, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, has a tower containing three bells. It was erected in 1833. There is a National school, also built in 1833. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a place of worship. T. J. Dixon, Esq., is lord of the manor.

SEA REACH, a bend of the river Thames, near its mouth between the Hope and Nore.

SEASALTER LIBERTY, a par. in the hund. of Whitstable, lathe of St. Augustine, co. Kent, 5 miles N.W. of Canterbury, its post town. It is a coastguard station and considerable fishing village. The land is chiefly in meadow, with a small proportion of arable and garden. It is mentioned in Domesday Book, and comprises the hmlts. of Harwick and Seasalter. On the shore is an extensive oyster bed, called the Pollard, belonging to the Dean and Chapter of Canterbury, who let it to the Whitstable company of free dredgers. The appropriate tithes, belonging to the Dean and Chapter of Canterbury, have been commuted for a rent-charge of £225, and the vicarial for one of £160, besides an impropriate glebe of 39 acres. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £130, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church is dedicated to St. Alphage. The Independents have a place of worship. There is a school endowed by Mrs. F. Fagg in 1794. The fairs formerly held here have been discontinued.

SEASCALE, a station on the Whitehaven and Furness junction railway, co. Cumberland, 5 miles N.W. of Ravenglass, on the coast.

SEASEND, a hmlt. in the par. of Moulton, co. Lincoln, 3 miles N.W. of Holbeach.

SEASONCOTE, or SEZINCOTE, a par. in the upper div. of Kiftsgate hund., co. Gloucester, 2 miles S.W. of Moreton-in-the-Marsh, its post town, and nearest station on the Oxford, Worcester, and Wolverhampton line of railway, and 4 N.W. of Stow-on-the-Wold. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. There is no village; only a few farmhouses. The living is a rect. annexed to the vic.* of Longborough, in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol. The church, formerly dedicated to St. Bartholomew, has long since been demolished. Seasoncote House is the principal residence. Sir C. Rushout, Bart., is lord of the manor.

SEATHWAITE, a hmlt. and chplry. in the par. of Kirkby-Ireleth, hund. of Lonsdale North of the Sands, co. Lancaster, 7 miles S.W. of Hawkshead, and 17 N.W. of Ulverstone. It is situated in the vale of Dudden under the Old Man and other fells. The chplry. includes Seathwaite Tarn. The land is chiefly pasture, with some arable and meadow. The living is a perpet cur.* in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £108.

SEATHWAITE, a hmlt. in Borrowdale, co. Cumberland, 7 miles S.W. of Keswick. It is situated on the Derwent, and is celebrated for its black-lead mines.

SEATON, a tnshp in the par. of Cammerton, ward of Allerdale-below-Derwent, co. Cumberland, 1 mile N.E. of Workington. It is situated on the river Derwent, which is here crossed by a bridge of three arches, connecting the hmlt. of Barepots with Workington. In the vicinity are the works of the Derwent Tin Plate Company, and the Seaton Hematite Ironworks, also several collieries.

SEATON, a par. and seaport town in the hund. of Colyton, co. Devon, 7 miles S.W. of Axminster, its post town, 2½ S. of Colyton, and 10 from Honiton. It is supposed to be the Moridunum of Antonine, and was a landing-place of the Danes. It is mentioned by Leland as a notable haven, and is now a sub-port to Exeter. The par. includes the hmlt. of Beer. At Honey Ditches there is a camp of 3 acres. The town has been improved of late years, and is now a watering-place much frequented during the summer season. The soil is of a sandy or chalky nature, with a gravelly subsoil. The great tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £300, and the vicarial for £260, with a glebe of 12 acres. The living is a vic.* with the cur. of Beer annexed, in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £206. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, or St. Gregory, was erected in the reign of Henry III., and has a tower containing four bells. It has been lately restored. There is a chapel-of-ease at Beer. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes. The Independents and Wesleyans have each a place of worship. Sir W. C. Trevelyan, Bart., is lord of the manor. A fair is held on the Tuesday in Whitsun week.

SEATON, a tnshp. in the par. of Seaham, N. div. of Easington ward, co. Durham, 1 mile N.E. of Workington, and the same distance from the Seaham Harbour station on the Sunderland and Seaham railway. The soil consists of clay.

SEATON, a par. in the hund. of Wrangdike, co. Rutland, 2½ miles S.E. of Uppingham, its post town. It is a station on the Rugby and Stamford railway. The village, which is of small extent, is situated near the river Welland, on the banks of which is an extensive corn mill erected 1853 by G. Monckton, Esq. It is mentioned in Domesday Book as Segentone, and was then held by Robert de Todeni, and afterwards came to the Beaufoes. The Cottesmore hounds meet in this parish, which includes the hmlt. of Thorpe-by-Water. The soil, which is very fertile, is chiefly a red mould alternating with blue clay. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £649. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient structure with a square spired tower containing five bells. The interior of the church contains an ancient monument with armorial bearings. The parochial charities produce about £12 per annum.

SEATON, or SETON, an ancient par. in the co. of Haddington, Scotland, 2 miles E. of Prestonpans. It is situated near Portseaton, and is in conjunction with Tranent parish, to which it was annexed after the Reformation. Seaton derives its name from Seiher de Say, a Norman who settled here in the reign of David I., and was ancestor of the Setons of Pitmedden. Seaton House is a modern castellated mansion erected on the site of the seat of the Seatons, Earls of Wintoun, who entertained James VI. and Charles II. here. The church is now in ruins. It gives title of baron to the Earl of Eglinton.

SEATON, a stream of the co. of Cornwall, rises near Liskeard, and falls into the English Channel.

SEATON AND WASSAND, a tnshp. in the par. of Sigglesthorne, N. div. of Holderness wap., East Riding co. York, 2 miles S.W. of Hornsea, and 10 N.E. of Beverley. Northallerton is its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is chiefly agricultural. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a place of worship. The charities consist of about 8s. per annum. There is an infant school supported by Lady Strickland and Mrs. Bentick, also a Sunday-school in connection with the Wesleyan congregation.

SEATON-BURN, a vil. in the tnshp. of Westslade, par. of Long Benton, co. Northumberland, 5 miles N. of Newcastle.

SEATON CAREW, a tnshp. in the par. of Stranton, N.E. div. of Stockton ward, co. Durham, 10 miles N.E. of Stockton, its post town, and 3 S. of Hartlepool. It is a station on the West Hartlepool railway. It is situated on the Clarence stream near Seaton Snook. It has excellent accommodation as a bathing place. The beach is smooth, and the sands firm and level to an extent of several miles. Salmon fishing is carried on to some extent. In 1839 two lighthouses were put up, one 89 and the other 34 feet above sea-level. A portion of the inhabitants are engaged in agriculture, and others in fishing. The Stockton and Hartlepool line of railway is constructed on an embankment of puddled clay, which is frequently washed over by the sea. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Durham, val. £150. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, was erected in 1831 at an outlay of £1,700 in place of an old chapel dedicated to St. Thomas-à-Becket. There are National schools. The Wesleyans have a place of worship.

SEATON-DELAVAL, a tnshp. in the par. of Earsdon, E. div. of Castle ward, co. Northumberland, 2½ miles from Earsdon, and 3 S. of Blyth. It is a station on the Blyth and Tyne railway. The village, which is of large extent, is situated near the coast, with a harbour at Seaton Sluice. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the collieries and chemical works. The manor formerly belonged to Tynemouth Priory, and came to the Delavals in 1121, by whom a castle was built, of which little remains except the chapel of Norman architecture. In the chapel, still used for Divine service, are the effigies of a Knight Templar and his lady, also numerous escutcheons, banners, and pieces of ancient armour. The mansion, erected in 1707 from designs by Sir John Vanbrugh, was destroyed by fire in 1822. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Durham, val. £60. There are a Presbyterian day school for both sexes, and a colliery school. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a place of worship.

SEATON-HOUSE, a hmlt. in the par. of Long Houghton, S. div. of Bambrough ward, co. Northumberland, 6 miles E. of Alnwick, and 1 mile S.E. of Long Houghton. It is situated on the coast. The hamlet consists of a farmhouse, and several cottages inhabited by fishermen. It is joined with Boulmer to form a township.

SEATON, NORTH, a tnshp. in the par. of Woodhorn, E. div. of Morpeth ward, co. Northumberland, 7½ miles N.E. of Morpeth, its post town. The village, which is small, is situated at the mouth of the river Wansbeck. Coal exists in this township. North Seaton Hall is the principal residence.

SEATON-ROSS, a par. in the Holme-Beacon div. of Harthill wap., East Riding co. York, 5 miles S.W. of Pocklington, its post town, and 2½ from Holme railway station. The village, which is much scattered, is situated near the canal, and is chiefly agricultural. There are some brick kilns, also two cornmills. The soil is of a sandy nature, with a subsoil of clay and sand. The land is divided in nearly equal proportions between arable and pasture, with some woodland and common. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of York, val. £93. The church, dedicated to St. Edmund, has a tower containing one bell. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum. There is a school for both sexes, in which a Sunday-school is also held. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a place of worship. A court-leet is held yearly by W. C. Maxwell, Esq., who is lord of the manor.

SEATON-SLUICE, or HARTLEY-PANS, a small seaport town in the tnshp. of Hartley, par. of Earsdon, co. Northumberland, 5 miles S.E. of Blyth, and 6 N. of North Shields. A blockhouse and battery were erected at the commencement of the present century for the defence of the port, which is subordinate to that of Newcastle. A portion of the inhabitants are employed in the coal and malt trades, and others in the glass bottle and chemical works. The Presbyterians have a place of worship. The harbour, which is partly cut out of the solid rock, was constructed at great expense by Sir Ralph Delaval, who formed an immense sluice at the mouth of the Seaton-burn rivulet, in order to cleanse the bed of the harbour, but these works have proved ineffectual to keep open the navigation.

SEATOWN OF DELNIES, a vil. in the par. and co. of Nairn, Scotland, 3 miles W. of Nairn.

SEAVINGTON ST. MARY, a par. in the hund. of South Petherton, co. Somerset, 3 miles E. of Ilminster, its post town, and 2½ S.W. of South Petherton. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the London and Exeter road, and is wholly agricultural. The soil chiefly consists of a sandy loam. The par. includes the tythg. of Seavington Abbott. The tithes, belonging to Earl Poulett, have been commuted for a rent-charge of £350, and those annexed to the Prebend of Elton for one of £40. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £50. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient stone structure, with a square tower containing three bells. There is a parochial school for both sexes. The Bible Christians have a place of worship. C. N. Welman, Esq., is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

SEAVINGTON ST. MICHAEL, a par. in the hund. of South Petherton, co. Somerset, 3 miles N.E. of Ilminster, its post town, and 2 S.W. of South Petherton. The village, which is of small extent, is chiefly agricultural. The soil is in general a light sandy loam. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £132, and the glebe comprises 26 acres. The living is a rect.* with the cur. of Dinnington annexed, in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £290. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is an ancient stone structure, with a turret containing three bells. There is a National school for both sexes, also a Sunday-school. The manor belongs to Winchester College.

SEBERGHAM, a par. in the ward. and co. of Cumberland, 10 miles S. of Carlisle, its post town, 7 S.E. of Wigton, and 6 from the Dalston station on the Carlisle and Maryport line of railway. The village, which is chiefly agricultural, is situated at the bridge over the river Caldew, which is also crossed about a mile lower down by another bridge of one arch built in 1772. The southern branch of the stream becomes subterraneous at Haltcliffe Bridge, and re-issues at Hives Hill mill, about 3 miles distant. The par. comprises the tnshps. of High and Low Sebergham, and was granted by King John to W. Wastell, a hermit, who gave it to Carlisle priory. The soil is of various quality, but in some parts productive. Limestone and coal are extensively quarried. There is a powerful mineral spring. The tithes were commuted for corn rents under an Enclosure Act in 1771. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £160, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, dedicated to St. Mary the Virgin, is an ancient structure, with a modern tower containing one bell. The church was rebuilt on the site of the hermitage, and thoroughly repaired in 1785. Relph, a poet, was born here in 1712, and died in 1744. There is a parochial school at Church Town, and another at Stony Cross, near Wetton; at the last-mentioned place the Wesleyans have a chapel. The Duke of Devonshire is lord of the manor.

SECKINGTON, a par. in the Tamworth div. of Hemlingford hund., co. Warwick, 4 miles N.E. of Tamworth, its post town, and 3 N. of Polesworth railway station. The Derby junction railway passes through the parish. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. Seckington was the Saxon Seccandun, where Cuthred defeated Ethelwald. In the vicinity is a camp 300 feet in circumference, also a barrow 42 feet in height. There was a cell to Great Malvern at Avecote, founded by William Burdett in the reign of Henry II. The land is nearly evenly divided between arable and pasture, and is well wooded. The soil is chiefly clay, producing good crops of wheat and barley. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £274. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient edifice, with a square tower crowned with a lofty spire. In the interior of the church is a monument to the Burdett family, bearing date 1600. There is a school supported by subscription.

SEDBERGH, a par. and small market town in the W. div. of Staincliff wap., West Riding co. York, 10 miles E. of Kendal, its post town, 77 W. of York, and 1 mile from the Sedbergh station on the Lancaster and Carlisle railway. It is situated in a vale of a mountainous district, and is traversed by the old coach road between Lancaster and Newcastle. The par. extends between the rivers Rowther and Lune, and includes the tnshps. of Cowgill, Dent, Garsdale, Howgill, Cautley, Dowbiggin, and five hmlts. It comprises about 50,000 acres, half of which are unenclosed and mountainous moorland, but the land near the river is fertile. The town is well built, and has a population of 2,346, but the parish contained in 1861 4,391 inhabitants. It contains a savings-bank, market-house, and other institutions. Petty sessions are held every alternate Wednesday. The board of guardians also meet every alternate Wednesday. There are a cotton and two woollen mills, but the staple trade of the district is in agricultural produce. About four miles to the N. of the town is a cascade called Cautley Spout, with a fall of 60 feet. The impropriate tithes belong to the Master and Fellows of Trinity College, Cambridge. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £300, in the patron. of Trinity College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is an ancient stone structure, with a tower containing three bells. The register dates from 1590. The interior of the church contains a monumental bust of Dr. Dawson, the mathematician. In addition to the parish church, are the following district churches, viz. Cautley and Dowgbiggin, Dent, Garsdale, Howgill, and Kirkthwaite, the livings of which are perpet. curs., varying in val. from £250 to £31. The parochial charities produce about £60 per annum, besides almshouses for six poor widows, built and endowed by the late T. Palmer, Esq. There are British and National schools in connection with the several ecclesiastical districts, also a free grammar school, founded by Dr. Lupton in 1552, who endowed the school with lands now producing a rental of £600, with exhibitions to three fellowships and ten scholarships at St. John's College, Cambridge. The Independents, Wesleyans, and Society of Friends have places of worship. Ingmire Hall stands in an extensive park within a mile of the town. C. W. Strickland, Esq., is lord of the manor. Market day is Wednesday, but is not well attended. Cattle fairs occur on the 26th February, 20th March, 28th April, and 29th October.

SEDBURY, a hmlt. in the par. of Tidenham, hund. of Westbury, co. Gloucester, 1 mile E. of Chepstow, between the rivers Severn and Wye.

SEDBURY, a hmlt. in the par. of Gilling, North Riding co. York, 3 miles N.E. of Richmond.

SEDBUSK, a hmlt. in the chplry. of Hardrow, North Riding co. York, near Hawes.

SEDGEBERROW, a par. in the middle div. of Oswaldslow hund., co. Worcester, 3½ miles S. of Evesham, its post town, and 12½ N.W. of Cheltenham. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the turnpike road to Leamington and Cheltenham. It is chiefly agricultural, and is watered by the small river Isperne. The soil is a strong reddish clay, producing good crops of wheat and beans. The tithes were commuted for land and money payments under an Act of Enclosure in 1810, and the glebe comprises about 200 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £228, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church is an ancient stone edifice with an octagonal tower, surmounted by a spire and three bells. The interior of the church was restored in 1845. There is a place of worship for the Baptists. The Dean and Chapter of Worcester are lords of the manor.

SEDGEBROOK, a par. in the wap. of Winnibriggs, parts of Kesteven, co. Lincoln, 4 miles N.W. of Grantham, its post town. It is a station on the Ambergate line of railway. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the Bingham road, near the Nottingham canal, and is chiefly agricultural. A short distance from the village is a mineral spring. The living is a rect.* with the cur. of East Allington annexed, in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £730, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Lawrence, is an ancient structure with a pinnacled tower, containing three bells. The interior of the church contains an oak screen, also a monument of Judge Markham, who was designated the "upright judge." The charities consist of land, now producing about £400 per annum, bequeathed by Lady Margaret Thorold for the foundation of schools at various places, of which £30 is paid to this parish. The manor-house, formerly the seat of the Markhams, is now a farmhouse. Sir J. C. Thorold, Bart., is lord of the manor and chief landowner.

SEDGEFIELD, a par., post and market town in the N.E. div. of Stockton ward, co. Durham, 11 miles S.E. of Durham, and 10 from Stockton. It is a station on the West Hartlepool railway. It is situated on an eminence, and is a polling-place for the county. The par. comprises the tnshps. of Bradbury, Butterwick, Embleton, Fishburn, Foxton, and Mordon. It has been held by the Bishops of Durham since 900, and was made a market town by Bishop Killaw in 1312. It is remarkable for the peculiar salubrity of its atmosphere and the longevity of its inhabitants, attributed in a great measure to the openness of its situation and the gravelly soil on which it is built. In 1792 it was visited by an ice storm, which did considerable damage, some of the hailstones being several inches in diameter. The town is well built, lighted with gas, and supplied with water from springs. In the centre of the town, which rather presents the appearance of a large village, is a square used as the market-place. It contains a large brewery and malt-house. A portion of the inhabitants are engaged in agriculture, which is the staple trade of the town. A halmote court is held once in eighteen months, at which the bishop's steward presides. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £1,481 7*s.* with a glebe of 385 acres, besides the glebe of Bradbury, comprising 63 acres, and that of Embleton, 2 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Durham, val. £1,802, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Edmund, has a pinnacled and embattled tower containing a clock and five bells. The interior of the church contains an ancient font, carved screen, stalls, and two brasses. The church was thoroughly restored in 1852. At Embleton is a chapel-of-ease. The parochial charities produce about £452 per annum, including the endowment of an almshouse for ten poor people, and Lady Frevill's bequest for clothing and apprenticing poor children. There is a free grammar school founded and partially endowed by Richard Wright in 1790. The school-house was rebuilt some few years ago; also a mechanics' institute and reading room. The county lunatic asylum is situated about 1½ mile N. of the town. The Wesleyans and Roman Catholics have each a place of worship. Hardwick Hall, the principal residence, stands in a well-wooded park ornamented with a sheet of water. Viscount Boyne is lord of the manor and principal landowner. Market day is on Friday. Fairs are held on the first Friday in each month for hogs, and on the first Fridays in April and October for cattle.

SEDGEFORD, a par. in the hund. of Smithdon, co. Norfolk, 13 miles N.E. of Lynn, its post town, and 8 N.E. of Castle-Rising. The village, which is chiefly agricultural, is situated on a small rivulet betwixt Heacham and Docking. The surface is undulating, and the views from the high grounds extensive. The soil is of a chalky character, with a subsoil of chalk. There are a chalk quarry, sand pit, and corn mill. The land is principally arable, with a small proportion of pasture and plantation, and 5 acres of osier beds. The appropriate tithes, belonging to the Dean and Chapter of Norwich, have been commuted for a rent-charge of £385, and the vicarial for £330. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £232, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure with a circular tower surmounted by an octagonal turret and containing three bells. The church has an E. window, and was thoroughly restored in 1842. The chancel is separated from the nave by a carved screen presented by Mrs. L'Estrange. The register dates from 1560. The parochial charities produce about £11 per annum, arising from 30 acres of land allotted to the poor on the enclosure of the parish. There is a National school for both sexes. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. There is a circulating library supported by Mrs. C. N. Rolfe, by whom it was founded. Near the church was formerly a Roman camp, but all traces are now obliterated.

SEDGEFORD LANE, a ward in the par. of St. Margaret, and borough of King's Lynn, co. Norfolk.

SEDGEHILL. See SEGHILL, co. Northumberland.

SEDGHILL, a par. in the hund. of Dunworth, co. Wilts, 4 miles S.W. of Hindon, and 3 N. of Shaftesbury, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is chiefly agricultural. The surface is undulating, and the soil clay alternating with sandy loam. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £250. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect. of Berwick St. Leonard, in the dioc. of Sarum. The church, dedicated to St. Catherine, has a tower containing three bells. The register dates from 1760. There is a parochial school for both sexes, entirely supported by the rector.

SEDGLEY, a par. and post town in the N. div. of Seisdon hund., co. Stafford, 3 miles N. of Dudley, and the same distance S. of Wolverhampton. This populous parish is situated in a mineral district near the line of the North-Western railway, and on the Staffordshire and Worcestershire canal, which intersects the parish in various directions. The par. contains Upper and Lower Gornall, Bierly, and three other vils. It is a polling-place for the county elections, and is under the government of 2 constables and 4 deputies chosen annually at the court-leet. The surface is hilly, and the substratum productive of excellent coal, iron, and limestone, which are extensively quarried. A large number of the inhabitants are employed in the manufacture of pig-iron, part of which is made malleable in mills and wrought into nails, rivets, hoops, hurdles, and iron implements. The lower grounds are intersected by numerous rivulets and canals leading to the different mines. The soil is a strong rich loam, producing good crops of wheat. The village occupies a high site, and the streams which rise on either side of the ridge flow in opposite directions to the Trent and Severn respectively. A portion of the rectorial tithes belong to the Earl of Dudley. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £503. The church, dedicated to All Saints, was completed in 1829, at the expense of the then Earl of Dudley. It has a tower containing eight bells. There are several stained windows. The register dates from 1560. In addition to the parish church are the following district churches, viz. Coseley, Ettingshall, Gornal Lower, and Gornal Upper, the livings of which are perpet. curs., varying in val. from £250 to £145. The parochial charities produce about £58 per annum. The Independents, Wesleyans, Primitive Methodists, Particular Baptists, and Roman Catholics, have each a place of worship. A school for children of Dissenters was built in 1753, and endowed with £31 per annum. There are also National and Sunday schools. Numerous fossils belonging to the encrinite and trilobite species are found in the chalk.

SEDGMOOR, an extensive marshy tract in the hund. of Whitley, co. Somerset, 5 miles S.E. of Bridgwater: The Duke of Monmouth was defeated here in 1685. It is celebrated in the scientific world as the spot where a base line of the Trigonometrical Survey was measured.

SEDGWICK, a tnshp. in the par. of Heversham, ward of Kendal, co. Westmoreland, 4½ miles S. of Kendal, and 2 S. of Oxenholme, its railway station. It is situated on the river Kent, near the Lancaster canal. A gunpowder mill was established here in 1770. The Independents have a place of worship.

SEDLESCOMB, or SEDLESCOMBE, a par. in the hund. of Staple, rape of Hastings, co. Sussex, 3 miles N.E. of Battle. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on a branch of the river Rother, and on the high road from Hastings to Hawkhurst in Kent. Near the village are traces of ancient furnaces for smelting the iron ore, which is found in considerable abundance. The Knights Templars formerly had a preceptory here, founded by Geoffrey Say in King John's time. There are mineral springs, the water of which is similar in its properties to that of Tunbridge Wells. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £267, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, was enlarged in 1838 by the erection of a S. aisle. The register dates from 1558. The parochial charities produce about £24 per annum, arising from a bequest of the Rev. George Barnsley in 1723 for educational purposes. There is a school-house built in 1837, at the cost of the Misses Pratt.

SEDRUP, a hmlt. in the pars. of Hartwell and Stone, co. Bucks, 2 miles S.W. of Aylesbury.

SEDSALL WITH EATON, a hmlt. in the par. of Doveridge, co. Derby, 3 miles N.E. of Uttoxeter, on the river Dove.

SEECHY, a hmlt. in the par. of All Saints, co. Norfolk, 3 miles S. of Lynn, on the river Nar or Setch.

SEEFIN, a mountain of the co. of Limerick, Ireland, near Kilmallock. It attains an elevation of 1,736 feet above sea-level.

SEEFINGAN, a mountain of the co. of Wicklow, Ireland, near Blessington. It attains an elevation of 2,364 feet above sea-level.

SEEND, a chplry. in the par. and hund of Melksham, co. Wilts, 4 miles W. of Devizes, and 3½ S.E. of Melksham, its post town. It is a station on the Devizes branch of the Great Western railway. The village is situated on the Kennet and Avon canal. It was formerly held by the Despencers and Bohuns, who erected the castle. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic.* of Melksham, in the dioc. of Sarum. The church, dedicated to the Holy Cross, has a square embattled and pinnacled tower. There is a school for both sexes, built in 1832, at the expense of S. Bruges, Esq. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. Near the church is a strong chalybeate spring.

SEER GREEN, a hmlt. and chplry. in the par. of Farnham-Royal, hund. of Burnham, co. Bucks, 2 miles N.E. of Beaconsfield, its post town, and 2 from Chalfont St. Giles. It is of small extent. The inhabitants are engaged in hurdle making, and in agriculture. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £100, in the patron. of Eton College.

SEETHING, a par. in the hund. of Loddon, co. Norfolk, 9 miles S. of Norwich, it post town, and 2 E. of Brooke. The village, which is of small extent, is situated near a branch of the inner Yare. It is wholly agricultural. The impropriate tithes, belonging to the Great Hospital at Norwich, have been commuted for a rent-charge of £458. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £142, in the patron. of the trustees of Norwich Hospital. The church, dedicated to St. Margaret, is an ancient structure with a circular tower. It contains a sculptured font. The register dates from 1556. The parochial charities produce about £13 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes, also a Sunday-school. Seething Hall is now a ruin.

SEFTON. See SEPHTON, co. Lancaster.

SEGHILL, SIGHILL, or SEDGEHILL, a tnshp. in the par. of Earsdon, E. div. of Castle ward, co. Northumberland, 2½ miles from Earsdon, and 6 N.E. of Newcastle. It is a station on the Blyth and Tyne railway. The village is considerable. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the collieries. Seghill was formed into an ecclesiastical district in 1846, and includes the tnshp. of Seghill and part of the tnshps. of Seaton Delaval and Cramlington. The manor was formerly held by Tynemouth priory, and came from the Mitfords, Allgoods, &c., to the Blakes of Twizel. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Durham, val. £150, in the patron. of the crown and bishop alternately. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, has a turret containing one bell. It was built in 1848. The chancel has a stained window. There is a church school for both sexes. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a place of worship.

SEGRWYD, or SEGROIT, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanrhaidr-in-Kinmerch, co. Denbigh, 1 mile S.W. of Denbigh.

SEIGHFORD, a par. in the S. div. of Pirehill hund., co. Stafford, 3 miles N.W. of Stafford, its post town. The village, which is considerable, is situated on the Grand Junction railway. It is chiefly agricultural. The par. contains the vils. of Bridgeford, Aston, and Doxey. The North Staffordshire hounds meet in the parish. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £189. The church is dedicated to St. Chad. There is also the modern district church of St. Matthew's, at Derrington, the living of which is a cur., val. £30. The parochial charities produce about £11 per annum. There is a free school with a small endowment. Seighford Hall, the principal residence, is an ancient mansion situated in a well-timbered park. F. Eld, Esq., is lord of the manor.

SEIL, an island in the par. of Kilbrandon, and one of the Hebrides, co. Argyle, Scotland. It is situated between Kerrara and Luing Islands, and is connected with the mainland by a bridge. It extends in length about 4½ miles from N. to S., with an extreme breadth of 2½ miles. The surface is in general flat, with three parallel ridges of hills, the most northern ridge rising above 800 feet, and commanding an extensive prospect. There are quarries of roofing slate.

SEIRKIERAN, a par. in the bar. of Ballybrit, King's County, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles E.S.E. of Birr. Parsonstown is its post town. The surface lies near the Slieve Bloom mountains, and is traversed by the Little Brosna stream. There is a considerable proportion of bog and waste. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ossory, val. £131, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is an ancient structure occupying the site of a monastery founded by St. Kieran. It was once the seat of a bishopric, afterwards incorporated with Kilkenny. There are two Roman Catholic chapels, and two private schools. The Danes made repeated descents upon this place, and sacked the monastery. There are ruins of a round tower and a deserted village, likewise of Ballybrit Fort. Oakley Park is the principal seat.

SEISDON, a tnshp. and lib. in the par. of Trysull, S. div. of Seisdon hund., co. Stafford, 5¼ miles S.W. of Wolverhampton. It is situated on the river Smestow, near Apeswood Castle camp, and gives name to the hundred and Poor-law Union. Near Seisdon Common is a large triangular stone, called the War Stone, supposed to mark the site of some ancient battle.

SEISDON, NORTH, a hund. in the co. of Stafford, contains the towns of Dudley and Bilston, and the pars. of Himley, Kingswinford, Penn, Rowley-Regis, Sedgley, with parts of Bushbury, Tettenhall, and Wolverhampton, comprising an area of 42,050 acres, exclusive of Dudley.

SEISDON, SOUTH, a hund. in the co. of Stafford, contains the pars. of Upper Arley, Broom, Clent, Codsall, Enville, Kinfare, Patshull, Trysull, Wombourne, and parts of Bobbington, Pattingham, Old Swinford, and Tettenhall, comprising an area of 39,330 acres.

SELABY PARK, a seat of the Duke of Cleveland, co. Durham, 5 miles E. of Barnard Castle, on the river Tees.

SELATTYN, a par. in the upper div. of Oswestry hund., co. Salop, 3 miles N.W. of Oswestry, its post town. The village, which is considerable, is situated near Offa's Dyke, which bounds the parish on the W. The inhabitants are chiefly agricultural. The par. includes the tnshps. of Upper and Lower Porkington, also the chplry. of Hengoed. The surface is undulating and well timbered. The soil is of various qualities, and the substratum abounds with limestone, which is burnt for manure. There are quarries of good building-stone. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £800, and the glebe comprises 83 acres. The living was once held by Dr. Henry Sacheverell, and during the Protectorate by James Wylding, one of the Assembly of Divines at Westminster. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of St. Asaph, £771. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, or St. Mary, has a square tower containing three bells. It has recently been enlarged. There is also a district church at Hengoed, built in 1825, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £61. The parochial charities produce about £72 per annum. There are National schools, also a free school for both sexes, which have a small endowment. Among the many residences in this neighbourhood is Porkington Hall, situated in a well-wooded park, from which there is an extensive prospect. Mrs. Lloyd, of Aston Hall, is lady of the manor. There are some traces of the ancient Castle Brogyntyn.

SELBORNE, a hund. in two divs., upper and lower, in the Alton div. of co. Hants, contains the pars. of Farringdon, Newton-Valence, Selborne, Empshott, Hawkley, and East Tisted, comprising an area of 15,970 acres.

SELBORNE, a par. in the above hund., co. Hants, 4½ miles S.E. of Alton, its post town, and 52 S.W. of London. The village is situated on a stream which flows from Nore Hill to the river Wey, and is chiefly agricultural. Prior to the Norman conquest the manor belonged to Queen Editha, and was held in royal demesne. In 1232 an Austin priory was founded here by Peter de Rupibus, Bishop of Winchester, but was subsequently suppressed, and the site given by William of Waynflete to Magdalen College, Oxford. It was formerly a market town, and a place of considerable importance. The par. contains the hmlts. of Norton, Oakhanger, and Temple, at which latter place resided the freebooter Sir Adam Gordon in the reign of Henry III., and who was taken by Edward I. when prince, in 1266. There is a large military encampment, which has been formed out of a portion of Woolmer Forest in this parish. A portion of the land is in hop grounds, and the remainder arable and sheep walks. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Winchester, and in the patron. of Magdalen College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure. The interior contains an altar piece by Albert Durer, representing the offerings of the Magi, and presented by B. White in 1793, also a tablet to the Rev. G. White, author of "The Natural History of Selborne," and similar works, who was born here in 1720. The parochial charities produce about £8 per annum. There is a National school, also a place of worship for the Independents. At Frinsham Pond, in this parish, the very rare long-legged plover was shot in 1779. The president and fellows of Magdalen College, Oxford, are lords of the manor.

SELBRITTENDEN, a hund. in the lathe of Scray, co. Kent, contains the pars. of Newenden lib. and Sandhurst, comprising an area of 5,720 acres.

SELBY, a par., post and market town, in the lower div. of Barkstone-Ash wap., West Riding, and within the lib. of St. Peter's, East Riding, co. York, 15 miles S.E. of York, and 178 N.W. of London. It is a junction station on the Hull, Selby, and Milford section of the North-Eastern railway, where the Selby and Market Weighton branch turns off. It is situated on the river Ouse and a branch of the Aire and Calder canal, and has daily communication, by steamboat, with Hull, London, and other ports. The town is built close to the Great North road from London to Edinburgh, and is a petty sessions town and sub-port to Goole. It is supposed to have been a Roman station, and was formerly designated Salebeia In the early part of the great civil war it was captured by the royalists, but recovered in 1644 by Sir T. Fairfax, when many of the king's party were taken prisoners, with several pieces of ordnance and a large quantity of ammunition. The town, which is well built, paved, and lighted with gas, contains a townhall, erected in 1824, two commercial banks, savings-banks, and other institutions. It has been much improved of late years, and a new street has been formed, called the Crescent. The magistrates hold their meetings for the wap. of Barkstone-Ash at the court-house on every alternate Thursday, and the county court sits on a fixed Thursday in each month. Courts leet and baron are held twice a year. Boat and barge building is extensively carried on in a yard where many steampackets and sailing vessels have been built, also rope making, sail making, tanning, ironfounding, and brewing are carried on to some extent. The preparation of flax, once the staple industry, had greatly declined, but is now fast reviving. The land is chiefly in meadow, but considerable tracts are cultivated in wood for dying, and as flax grounds. The fertility of the surrounding district has been greatly increased by a process of irrigation, by which the water of the rivers Ouse and Aire is detained upon the land until a sediment has been deposited, forming excellent manure. The Ouse is here crossed by a timber bridge built in 1795, which, though weighing 70 tons, can be opened and closed with the greatest facility for the passage of ships; also by a swivel bridge on the line of the Hull and Selby railway, which opens to admit vessels to the quay at this place. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of York, val. £97. The church, dedicated to St. German, is an ancient cruciform structure with a tower containing six bells. The church, formerly conventual, and belonging to the abbey, was made parochial by letters patent of James I. in 1618. It is an interesting and venerable pile, 300 feet long, having been originally founded by William the Conqueror in 1069, who built the abbey of which it formed part. The S. transept was destroyed by the falling of the tower in 1690. The present tower was rebuilt in 1702, but in a style not corresponding with the original. The parochial charities produce about £283 per annum, of which £168 goes to the feoffee's estate for repair of the church, and relief of the poor. There are National schools for both sexes and infants, also a blue-coat and several subscription schools. The Independents, Wesleyans, Primitive Methodists, Unitarians, Friends, and Roman Catholics have each a place of worship. On the Doncaster road is a cemetery, and an armoury for the Volunteer corps. The union poorhouse was finished in 1841, at an outlay of upwards of £5,000. The Selby Poor-law Union comprises 8 parishes in the East Riding and 7 in the West Riding. It is also the seat of a new County Court and superintendent registry district. Lord Londesborough is lord of the manor. Market day is on Monday. Fairs for sale of cattle, &c., are held on Easter Tuesday, on the Monday following 22nd June, and on 8th October.

SELBY'S FOREST, a tnshp. in the par. of Kirk-Newton, W. div. of Glendale ward, co. Northumberland, 7 miles S.W. of Wooller. It is situated under the Cheviot, and is chiefly bare moorland On the summit of the Cheviot, from which the celebrated range of hills, so called, derives its name, is a large lake, occasionally frozen in the summer.

SELHAM, or SULHAM, a par. in the hund. of Easebourne, rape of Chichester, co. Sussex, 3¼ miles E. of Midhurst, and 3 S.W. of Petworth, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Rother, or Arundel navigation, and is wholly agricultural. Part of this parish is included within the boundary of the new borough of Midhurst. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £150, in the patron. of Brasenose College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. James, has lately undergone extensive alterations. It has several stained windows. The register dates from 1656.

SELKER, a hmlt. in the par. of Muncaster, co. Cumberland, 5 miles S. of Ravenglass, and 46 S.W. of Carlisle, on the coast of the Irish Sea, near the mouth of the Esk.

SELKIRK, a par., market town, royal burgh, and the county town of Selkirkshire, Scotland. The parish, which is 7½ miles in extreme length from N.W. to S.E., and nearly 7 broad, lies chiefly in Selkirkshire, but has two detached portions in the Hawick district of Roxburghshire. It contains the post town of Selkirk, where the Selkirk branch of the North British railway has its terminus, and part of the village of Yarrowford. The main section is bounded by the parishes of Ashkirk, Bowden, Galashiels, Lilliesleaf Stow, and Yarrow. The Tweed traverses its northern border, the Yarrow runs on the south-western, and the Ettrick nearly intersects it. The surface has a general elevation of about 520 feet above sea-level, consisting of round-topped hills covered with verdure, except in the mountainous district between the Ettrick and the Tweed, where the Three Brethren cairn and Peatlaw rise respectively 1,978 and 1,964 feet above sea-level, or 1,600 feet above the bed of the Ettrick. A considerable part of the parish is in hilly sheep walks, and about 1,000 acres in wood and plantation, the remainder being in tillage or barren waste covered with heath. The soil is light and dry, upon a substratum of greywacke and clay-slate rock. The principal landowners are the Duke of Buccleuch, Lord Polwarth, Pringle of Broadmeadows, and Pringle of Whytbank. The town of Selkirk stands on the road from Carlisle to Edinburgh, and on the right bank of the Ettrick, and is said to derive its name from Scheleckgreck, or Selechyrche, an ancient kirk or chapel built for the accommodation of the kings of Scotland when hunting in the primeval forest which once covered the greater part of the county. It had also a Tyronensian monastery, founded in 1173 by David I., which subsequently became a cell to Kelso Abbey. In the middle ages the town was a place of importance, and sent 100 men-at-arms, commanded by Brydone, the town-clerk, to the battle of Flodden, for which service James V. presented it with a new charter and the grant of 1,000 acres of forest. After the defeat of the Scotch army the English pillaged and burnt the town, where is still preserved one of the standards taken at Flodden. During the civil war of Charles I. Montrose made it his headquarters, while the rest of his army encamped at Philiphaugh, about a mile W. of the town, where it was surprised and routed by the Covenanters under David Leslie in 1645.—The town has much improved of late years, and has a population of about 3,400. It consists chiefly of a triangular market-place, from which diverge several streets. In the centre of the area is the old well, embellished with the town arms, and a monument by Ritchie 28 feet high to Sir Walter Scott, in his sheriff's robes, erected by the county in 1839. On one side of the market-place stands the townhall, a modern building with a spire 110 feet in height; on another side is the principal inn, with a spacious room for balls and public meetings. The ancient tolbooth and market cross have been taken down. The new prison for the burgh and county stands in one of the new streets leading down to the river Ettrick, here crossed by a bridge. There are also a savings-bank, branch of the British Linen Company's bank, an office of the Union bank, 20 insurance agencies, a parochial library, two subscription libraries, besides friendly, temperance, Bible, missionary, and cattle improvement societies. On the banks of the river are woollen tweed mills, extensive flour mills, and a machine factory. The town was formerly famous for its single-soled shoemakers, or "sutors," the name still given to the burgesses, who qualify by licking the birse, or brush of hogs' bristles. The present staple manufacture of Selkirk is woollen cloth, comprising tweeds, tartans, shawls, and other goods of similar character to those of Galashiels. There are also an ink factory, fulling mill, small tanyard, and some stocking-looms.—The town is governed by a provost, four bailies, dean of guild, treasurer, and twelve common councillors. The municipal constituency in 1861 was 89. The corporation revenue in 1860 was £1,363, and the burgh property about £30,000. The annual value of real property in 1861 was £8,324. The borough boundaries were unaffected by the Reform Act; but as regards the elective franchise the town forms part of the county, which returns one member to parliament. Police courts are held as occasion requires, and sheriff courts on Wednesday and Friday during session.—The par. is the seat of a presb. in the synod of Merse and Teviotdale. The minister's stipend is £301 3*s.* 6*d.*, besides glebe worth £20. The parish church, situated in the town, was built in 1749, and repaired in 1829. There are also a Free church, two United Presbyterian, an Evangelical Union, and a Scottish Episcopalian chapel. The principal educational establishments are a parochial school, burgh school, two endowed charity schools, and several private day schools. Selkirk gives title of earl to the Douglases of St. Mary's Isle. The principal seats and ruins will be mentioned under Selkirkshire. Market day is Wednesday. Fairs are held on 5th April, 15th July, and 31st October, for hiring servants.

SELKIRKSHIRE, a small inland co. in the S. of Scotland, lying between 55° 22′ and 55° 42′ N. lat., and 2° 47′ 4″ and 3° 18′ 46″ W. long., exclusive of a small detached part just beyond the eastern boundary, entirely surrounded by Roxburghshire. It is irregular in form, especially on the S.E. and N.W., and is about 128 miles in circuit. Its greatest length from N.E. to S.W., or from the confluence of the Gala and Tweed to Micklewhinfell, overhanging the source of Ettrickwater, is nearly 28 miles, and its greatest breadth at right angles to its length, about 17 miles, but the average does not exceed 10 miles. It is bounded on the E. and S.E. by Roxburghshire, on the S. and S.W. by Dumfries, on the W. and N.W. by Peeblesshire, and on the N. by Edinburghshire. It contains an area of 266 square miles, or about 170,313 acres, of which 960 are lake and only about one-tenth arable. In ancient times it was designated the "sheriffdom of Ettrick Forest," from its being watered by that river and its tributary streams, and in many of the royal charters, shortly, "the Forest," from its being then covered with wood, though at the present time it is bare, there being only 3,418 acres of wood and coppice of all kinds. The ancient history of this county is so intimately associated with that of Roxburghshire as scarcely to require separate notice. In the earliest times of which we have any record it was occupied by the Gadeni, a British tribe, whose territory was conquered by the Romans and included in their province of Valentia. On the retreat of the Romans it was overrun by the Anglo-Saxons of Northumbria, against whose incursions in the 5th century the Romanized inhabitants constructed that stupendous work called the "Catrail," once a vast fosse, having a rampart on either side, and extending through Roxburghshire. After the cession of the southern part of Scotland by the Anglo-Saxon princes, the Scottish kings had a residence at Selkirk, to which they frequently repaired for the enjoyment of the chase, the woods being then stocked with large herds of deer. Before regular sheriffs were appointed it was placed under the jurisdiction of a keeper, who generally held the office of constable of the king's castle, but was made shire ground by Alexander III., from which time it has formed an independent county. In 1503 the hereditary sheriffdom was granted to Murray of Falahill, whose descendants held it till the abolition of hereditary jurisdictions.—During the desolating wars of the succession the land was denuded of its natural woods, and the arable land, once very productive, became comparatively sterile. Agricultural vigour, accompanied by any considerable amelioration in the condition of the population, did not revive till near the middle of the 18th century, and even modern plantations and improvements have failed to produce the like change on the solitudes and general aspects of Selkirkshire as in other parts of Scotland. Yet everywhere the signs of progress are observable, chiefly through the extension of the plantations and drainage of the soil. Scotch firs were formerly the favourite trees, but where the land is drained or naturally dry, oak, ash, elm, beech, and plane flourish, interspersed with larch, birch, spruce firs, and alder. The indigenous wood is chiefly oak, ash, birch, hazel, mountain ash, and hawthorn. The oak is valuable on account of its bark, which forms a staple article of export.—Though situated in the centre of the southern highlands, the elevation of the land varies from 280 to 800 feet above sea-level, averaging probably 500 feet, or only about one-half of the altitude of the vale of Badenoch-on-the-Spey. The surface is hilly, and in many parts mountainous, the summits rising upwards of 2,000 feet above sea-level: the highest peaks are Windlestrawlaw, near the northern border; Blackhouse-Hill, Minchmoor, on the borders of Peeblesshire; Ettrick-pen on the south-western border; and Lawkness, Hangingshaw-law, Wardlaw, Peat-law, Three-Brethren-Cairn, Black-Andrew-Hill, Old-Ettrick-Hill, with many others, varying from 1,000 to 2,000 feet.—The principal rivers are the Tweed, which enters the county from Peeblesshire, and crossing the northern extremity from W. to E., during a course of 9 miles, passes on to Roxburghshire. The Ettrick, which formerly gave name to the county, rises near the S.W. border, and after a course of 30 miles joins the Tweed on its right bank; the Yarrow rises at a place called Yarrow Cleugh, near the source of the Moffat Water in Dumfriesshire, and entering the county from the W., after a course of 20 miles, joins the Ettrick a little above Selkirk. The Gala cannot be esteemed a river of this county, having the greater part of its course in Edinburgh and Roxburgh shires, but enters the county on the N., and flowing for a few miles in a south-easterly direction, joins the Tweed on its left bank. A thousand rills and burns run to the Ettrick and Yarrow, all abounding in salmon, trout, barbel, and other fish. The county has numerous small lochs stored with pike, perch, and trout, but the only two of any considerable size are St. Mary's Loch and the Loch of the Lowes, both formed by the Yarrow water.—The surface rises towards the W. and S.W., which gives to all the principal streams a north-easterly direction. The only strip of level ground extends along the eastern border; all the rest of the county is a congeries of hills, round topped and green to the summits, but rising one above another in endless series, only intersected by gulleys, glens, and narrow vales. The greater portion of the uplands is covered with a short sweet herbage, affording good pasturage, but some portions are clothed in heath, and a considerable tract in the S.E., extending between Borthwick and Ettrick Waters, is an unprofitable moss, consisting of bog, moorland, and mountain tarn. The proportion of tillage is small, being entirely confined to the lowlands along the river banks, and the narrow but fertile glens where wheat, barley, oats, turnips, potatoes, and clover, are easily raised and yield well by a proper rotation of crops. The climate is humid, but the soil light and dry, and the harvest comparatively early. According to the statistics presented to the Board of Trade in 1855 by the Highland and Agricultural Society, the distribution of the land with reference to crops was as follows: 2,964 acres under oats, 677 under barley, 116½ under wheat, 196 under potatoes, 1,940 under turnips, 32 under pease, 49 under vetches, 103 in bare fallow, and 5,048 under grass and hay in the course of the rotation of the farm. The number of live stock comprised 468 farm horses of all ages, 122 other horses, 1,012 bovine cattle, besides 697 milch cows, and 444 calves, 79,135 sheep for breeding, 3,577 for feeding, 52,396 lambs, and 322 swine. The total number of proprietors on the new valuation rolls is 498, and the number qualified to be commissioners of supply is 87. The old valued rent was £6,692, but the new valuation for 1861, including the burgh of Selkirk, was £65,069. As seen by the above quoted returns Selkirk is pre-eminently a pastoral county, and considerable attention has been paid to breeding. The cattle are chiefly of the Teeswater short-horned breed, but many Highland cattle are grazed on the hills. The most prized varieties of sheep are the Cheviot and Leicester, but the black-faced sheep are found to thrive best on the upland pasturages. The houses of the tenants and other farm buildings have within the last half century been mostly rebuilt in better situations and more comfortable style. The roads have also been improved, and a branch line of railway constructed from Selkirk to Galashiels in connection with the North British line.—Of minerals, none of the more useful, as coal, lime, and sandstone have yet been found in sufficient quantities to repay working. The prevailing rocks form one large high bed of greywacke and clayslate, with porphyry and granite in parts, and abundance of shell marl, which last was formerly extensively employed for agricultural purposes. There are quarries of whinstone and granite. The only manufactures are carried on at Selkirk and Galashiels, and comprise woollen tweeds, blankets, and flannels, hosiery and shoes, together with the tanning of leather and the dressing of sheep and lamb skins; a few persons are also employed as weavers and dyers. The population in 1851 was 9,809, inhabiting 1,331 houses, and in 1861 10,449, with 1,466 inhabited houses.—Selkirkshire returns one member to parliament for the county, including the county town of Selkirk. The parliamentary constituency in 1860 was 394. It is governed by a lord-lieutenant, vice-lieutenant, sheriff, and sheriff's substitute, assisted by twelve deputy lieutenants and other officers. The county contains three entire parishes and parts of seven others, constituting a presbytery in the synod of Merse and Teviotdale. The only towns are Selkirk and Galashiels, the former a royal burgh, and the latter a burgh of barony, also about fifteen vils. and hmlts.—The principal seats are Thirlestane Castle, of Lord Napier, with its old tower, in which the "Flower of Yarrow" was born; Bowhill, of the Duke of Buccleuch; Elibank, of Lord Elibank; Ashiesteel, celebrated as the place where Sir Walter Scott wrote the "Lady of the Lake" and "Marmion;" Newhall, of Sir J. Pringle, Bart.; Holylee, of the Ballantynes; Philiphaugh, of the Murrays, close to the spot where General Leslie defeated Montrose in 1645; Gala House, of the Scotts; Hangingshaw, of the Johnstones; Todrig, of the Potts; and Ettrick Hall of the Pattersons. There are besides many ruined castles, including Tushielaw Tower, once the stronghold of Adam Scott, "king of the border;" Oakwood Tower, where the famous reputed wizard, Sir Michael Scott, resided; Newark Castle, where Sir Walter Scott makes his "Last Minstrel" tell his "Lay" to Anne Duchess of Monmouth, who was born in it; Oldwark, once a hunting seat of the kings of Scotland; Foulshiels, now a farm, where Mungo Park, the African traveller, was born; and the village of Ettrick, famed as the birthplace of Hogg, the Ettrick Shepherd. There are also a few British and Roman remains, including the Africa camp at Roberton, the Catrail mentioned above, two camps in the parish of Galashiels, traces of a Roman road, and several hill forts near the S.E. border.

SELKLEY, a hund. in the co. of Wilts, contains the town of Marlborough, and the pars. of Aldbourn, Avebury, Broad Hinton, East Kennet, Mildenhall, Ogbourne, Preshute, North Savernake, Winterbourne-Bassett, Winterbourne-Monkton, and parts of Hillmarton and Overton, comprising an area of 47,100 acres, exclusive of Marlborough.

SELLACK, a par. in the upper div. of Wormelow hund., co. Hereford, 3½ miles N.W. of Ross, its post town, and 2 S.W. of Fawley railway station. The village, which is irregularly built, is situated in a deep valley on the navigable river Wye, and is chiefly agricultural. The soil consists of good earth upon a substratum of red sandstone. The appropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £320, and the vicarial for £140. The glebe comprises 95 acres. The living is a vic.* with the cur. of King's Caple annexed, in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £420, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, dedicated to St. Teseliachus, or Tesiliah, has a tower surmounted by a spire and containing five bells. The interior of the church contains monuments of the Pengethley family, also a stained E. window. The parochial charities produce about £23 per annum. There is a parochial school for both sexes. Pengethley House is the principal residence. Sir Hungerford Hoskyns, Bart., of Harewood House, is lord of the manor.

SELLAFIELD, a station on the Whitehaven and Furness Junction railway, for Calderbridge, co. Cumberland.

SELLAY, GREAT and LITTLE, islets in the district of Harris, Outer Hebrides, coast of Scotland, 1½ mile N. of Pabba. Great Sellay is situated on the S.W. side of Little Sellay islet.

SELLEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanvair Waterdine, co. Salop, 3 miles N.W. of Knighton, on Offa's Dyke.

SELLING, or SELLYNG, a par. in the hund. of Boughton-under-Blean, upper div. of Scray lathe, co. Kent, 4 miles S. of Faversham, its post town, and 6½ W. of Canterbury. It is a station on the London, Chatham, and Dover railway. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on an eminence. On Shottington Hill in this parish, is an ancient fortification, supposed to be a Roman camp, covering an area of about 2 acres, and near it is a tumulus. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The land is partly in hop grounds, garden, and orchard, but the greater part is arable. The surface is wooded, and the soil fertile. The great tithes, belonging to Lord Sondes, have been commuted for a rent-charge of £810, and the vicarial for one of £357. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £357. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure. It contains several monuments, also a stained E. window. Luton House, Selling Court, and Woodlands are the principal residences.

SELLINGE, or SELLINDGE, a par. in the hund. of Street, lathe of Shepway, co. Kent, 6 miles S.E. of Ashford, 5 N.W. of Hythe, and 2 E. of Sneeth station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Stour, in Romney Marsh. The line of the South-Eastern railway passes through the parish. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The land is nearly evenly divided between arable and pasture, with some woodland and marsh. The appropriate tithes, belonging to the Archbishop of Canterbury, have been commuted for a rent-charge of £400, and the vicarial for £191, and the glebe comprises 19 acres. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £176. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient stone structure, with a low square tower containing five bells. The interior of the church contains several monuments and memorial windows. The register dates from 1559. The parochial charities produce about £73 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes.

SELLY, a district in the par. of Northfield, co. Worcester, 3 miles S.W. of Birmingham.

SELMESTON, a par. in the hund. of Danehill-Horstead, rape of Pevensey, co. Sussex, 7 miles S.E. of Lewes, its post town, and 1 mile W. of the Berwick railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the Brighton and South Coast railway, and near the river Cuckmere. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. This parish was annexed to that of Alciston in 1840. The appropriate tithes, attached to the prebendary of Heathfield, in the cathedral of Chichester, have been commuted for a rent-charge of £290, with 22 acres of glebe, and the vicarial for one of £140, with a glebe of 3 acres. The living is a vic.* annexed to that of Alciston, in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £330, in the patron. of the bishop and the dean and chapter alternately. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has a shingled and spired tower. The register dates from 1667. There is a National school. Viscount Gage is lord of the manor and chief landowner.

SELSEY, a par. in the hund. of Manhood, rape of Chichester, co. Sussex, 6 miles S. of Chichester, its post town. The village, which is extensive, is situated within half a mile of the sea, which still encroaches on the land, and in the great storm of 23rd November, 1824, placed nearly half the parish under water. The village consists of two streets, one of which is chiefly inhabited by fishermen. It is a coastguard station on the English Channel, near Selsey Bill, and is connected with the mainland on the N.W. by an isthmus extending several furlongs. It was formerly inaccessible at flood-tides, except by a ferry, but by means of a raised causeway can now be approached at all times. The peninsula is bounded on the N. by Pagham Harbour, and on the W. by parts of the parishes of Sidlesham, and Earnby. It appears to have been one of the earliest settlements of the Saxons in this part of the island, and is said by Bede to have derived its name from the Saxon Seals-ey, or "the island of seals," for the resort of which it was anciently noted. The parish was given by King Ædilwach to St. Wilfrid, who, having converted the South Saxons to Christianity, founded a monastery here about 680. In 711 Eadbercht, the abbot, was consecrated first bishop of the South Saxons, and fixed his episcopal residence at this place, but which was removed to Chichester by Stigand in 1072. Selsey gave title of baron to the Peacheys of Cannon House, who held the manor. The surface in the western division is low and subject to inundation by the sea. The soil is chiefly a hazel mould, well adapted for wheat. The sands, which occupy a third of the parish, are dry, affording a drive for about ten miles along the shore. There is an extensive fishery for prawns, lobsters, and crabs, and on the coast are extensive cyster beds. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £896 13*s., and the glebe comprises 52 acres. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £759, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient edifice, with a wooden tower containing one bell. The church contains several stone coffins, also a mural monument of Caen stone with carved effigies of John and Agatha Lews. Near the church is a camp, or intrenched mound, supposed to be of Roman origin. There is a place of worship for Bible Christians; also a National school.

SELSIDE WITH WHITWELL, a chplry. and tnshp. in the par. and ward of Kendal, co. Westmoreland, 4 miles N.E. of Kendal, its post town. It is situated on a branch of the river Mint. The land is chiefly in pasture. The impropriate tithes belong to the Masters and Fellows of Trinity College, Cambridge. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £94, in the patron. of landowners. The church, dedicated to Christ, has a turret containing one bell. It was reconstructed in 1838. There is a small free school, endowed with £50 per annum by John Kitching in 1730. At a farm in the neighbourhood are traces of the seat of the Thornburgh family, who first settled here in 1283. The Hon. Mrs. Fulke Greville Howard is lady of the manor.

SELSKER, the site of an abbey in the co. of Wexford, Ireland, 1 mile from Wexford. It was founded in the 9th century, and was enlarged and endowed by Sir A. Roche. In 1169 the first treaty with the English was signed here.

SELSON, a hmlt. in the par. and hund. of Eastry, lathe of St. Augustine, co. Kent, half a mile N.W. of Eastry.

SELSTON, a par. in the N. div. of Broxtow wap.,

co. Nottingham, 4 miles S.E. of Alfreton, its post town, and 9 S.W. of Mansfield. The village, which is extensive but irregularly built, is situated on the Pinxton and Mansfield railway and on the Erewash navigation, which latter divides it from the county of Derby. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture and the collieries, and some few in lace-making and frame-work knitting. The par. contains the hmlts. of Bagthorpe and Underwood. The substratum abounds in coal and ironstone. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £150. The church, dedicated to St. Helen, has a tower containing three bells. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum. There are places of worship for the Primitive Methodists, Baptists, and Calvinistic Methodists. The Earl of Mexborough is lord of the manor.

SELWOOD, an extensive forest on the borders of cos. Wilts and Somerset, between Westbury and Frome. It was called by the Britons Coed-mawr, or "the great wood," and by the Saxons Seal-wuda, and is celebrated in history as being the retreat of Alfred the Great before the battle of Ethandune.

SELWORTHY, a par. in the hund. of Carhampton, co. Somerset, 3½ W. of Minehead, its post town, and 11 W. of the New Williton railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the high road from Minehead to Porlock, and near the Bristol Channel. The par. contains the hmlts of Allerford, Blackford, Lynch, and five others. Bury Castle, a Roman camp of elliptical form, is to be seen in the vicinity. The surface is crossed by two ridges of hills nearly at right angles. The soil is of a loamy character upon a subsoil of gravel and limestone, being fertile in the valleys, but light and stony in the higher grounds. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £270, and the glebe comprises 54 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £291. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient stone structure, with a plain embattled tower containing a clock and six bells. The church has a carved roof, and in the church-yard is a stone cross of considerable antiquity. The register dates from 1673. There is a National school for both sexes, also a Sunday-school at Holnicote. Holnicote is the principal residence. Sir T. D. Acland, Bart., is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

SELWRN, a tnshp. in the par. of Llandderfel, co. Merioneth, 3 miles N.E. of Bala.

SEMER, a par. in the hund. of Cosford, co. Suffolk, 2 miles N.W. of Hadleigh, its post town, and 2 S.E. of Bildestone. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Brett, and is chiefly agricultural. Cosford union poorhouse is situated in this parish. The land is chiefly arable. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £350, and the glebe comprises 65 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £385. The church is dedicated to All Saints. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum. There is a school for both sexes. The Rev. J. Y. Cooke, M.A. and J.P., is lord of the manor.

SEMINGTON, a chplry. in the par. of Steeple Ashton, hund. of Whorwelsdown, co. Wilts, 2 miles S. of Melksham railway station, and 3 N.E. of Trowbridge. Chippenham is its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the Kennet and Avon canal, and a branch of the river Avon. It is chiefly agricultural. The Melksham union poorhouse is in this chapelry. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic. of Steeple Ashton, in the dioc. of Sarum. The church is dedicated to St. George. There is a National school. The Wesleyans have a place of worship.

SEMLEY, a par. in the hund. of Chalk, co. Wilts, 3 miles N. of Shaftesbury, its post town, and 4 S.W. of Hindon. It is a station on the Salisbury and Yeovil line of railway. The village, which is considerable, is situated in a valley, and is wholly agricultural. In the southern part of the parish rises Semley Hill, in which the small river Sem has its source. There is a quarry of soft green stone used for building purposes. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £492 10*s., and the glebe comprises 101 acres. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £600, in the patron. of Christ Church, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Leonard, is an ancient cruciform structure, with a square embattled tower containing four bells. The church was restored in 1846, when a Tisbury stone font was presented by Miss Bennet, of Pyt House. The register dates from 1657. The parochial charities produce about £4 per annum. There is a place of worship for Baptists, also a National school for both sexes. Lord Arundel of Wardour is lord of the manor.

SEMPERINGHAM, a par. in the wap. of Ave and, parts of Kesteven, co. Lincoln, 3 miles S.E. of Falkingham, its post town, and 11 N.E. of Corby railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is chiefly agricultural. The par. includes the hmlts. of Birthorpe and Pointon, and formerly had a Gilbertine priory, founded by Sir Gilbert de Semperingham in 1148. It was the superior establishment of that order, where their general chapters were held, and had a revenue at the Dissolution of £360. The living is a vic. with the cur. of Pointon annexed, in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £131. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is an ancient edifice, with a pinnacled tower containing three bells. It was once cruciform, but is now partly ruined, and stands near the site of the old priory. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum. The Wesleyans have a place of worship.

SENCE, a stream of the co. of Leicester, rises under Bardon Hill, and joins the river Anker at Atherstone.

SEND, a par. in the second div. of Woking hund., co. Surrey, 3 miles N.E. of Guildford, and 1 mile from Ripley, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Wey, and is chiefly agricultural. The par. includes the chplry. of Ripley and the hmlt. of Send. At Alderbury, in this parish, stood Newark Priory, founded by Ruald and Beatrix de Calva in Richard I.'s time. A portion of the church alone remains. Its revenue at the Dissolution was valued at £294 18*s.* 4*d.* The living is a vic.* with the cur. of Ripley annexed, in the dioc. of Winchester, joint val. £260. The church, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, has an embattled tower. There is also a chapel-of-ease at Ripley, built by the monks of Newark Abbey. The parochial charities produce about £56 per annum. There is a National school. Send Grove is the principal residence.

SENNEN, a par. in the W. div. of Penwith hund., co. Cornwall, 1 mile from the Land's End, and 9 miles S.W. of Penzance, its post town. It is situated at the extreme western point of England, and includes the Land's End, a desolate and stormy spot. King John landed here on his return from the conquest of Ireland, and Perkin Warbeck in the reign of Henry VII. It is now a coastguard station opposite Longships lighthouse, and has two small harbours, Whitsand Bay and Sennen Cove. The surface is varied with valleys and hills, but none of the latter rising to any considerable height. The soil consists of killas, with a subsoil of granite rock. At the village of Mayon is a large flat stone called Table Maen, on which seven Saxon kings are said to have dined together in the 6th century. Many of the inhabitants are engaged in the fisheries. Great quantities of ling and pilchards are taken on this coast. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £230. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Exeter, in the patron. of the crown. The church, dedicated to St. Senan, is an ancient stone structure, with a tower containing three bells. The interior of the church contains monuments of the Ellises of Trevear. There is a National school for both sexes. The Wesleyans, Baptists, Primitive Methodists, and Bible Christians have each a place of worship. There is an inn near the village, bearing the sign on one side, "The first inn in England," and on the other side, "The last inn in England." A Church feast occurs on the nearest Sunday to St. Andrew's Day. In 1807 about 400 Roman coins were discovered here under a projecting rock.

SENNICOTTS, a hmlt. in the par. of Funtington, hund. of Bosham, rape of Chichester, co. Sussex, 2 miles N.W. of Chichester. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £50. The seat of C. Teesdale, Esq., is situated here.

SENNINGTON. See SEVENHAMPTON, co. Gloucester.

SENNY, a hmlt. in the par. and hund. of Devynnock, co. Brecon, 8 miles S.W. of Brecknock, on river Senny.

SENWICK, a par. in the co. of Kirkcudbright, Scotland, 4 miles S.W. of Kirkcudbright. It is situated on the bay, and is in conjunction with Borgue. It was once robbed by a French pirate, who was drowned at Frenchman's Rock.

SEPHTON, or SEFTON, a par. in the hund. of West Derby, co. Lancaster, 6½ miles N. of Liverpool, its post town. The parish, which is situated on the river Alt and the Leeds and Liverpool canal, is bounded on the W. by the Bay of Liverpool. The par. contains Great Crosby, a much frequented bathing place, and the tnshps. of Crosby, Seaforth, Waterloo, Aintree, Ince-Blundell, Litherland, Lunt, Netherton, Orrell, Sephton, and Thornton. The manor was given at the Conquest to William de Moline, or Molyneux, ancestor of the earls of Sefton, of which family was Sir William, who fought under the Black Prince at Navarre, as did Sir Richard at the battle of Agincourt, and another Sir William distinguished himself at the battle of Flodden Field. A portion of the land is in meadow. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Chester, val. £1,378. The church, dedicated to St. Helen, is an ancient structure, with a tower surmounted by a lofty spire and containing six bells. The interior of the church, which was rebuilt in the reign of Henry VII., contains several carved stalls, a screen, effigies and brasses to the Molyneux family. In addition to the parish church are the following district churches, viz. Great Crosby, Seaforth, St. Peter's, Aintree; St. John's and Christ Church, Waterloo; the livings of which are all perpet. curs. varying in val. from £119 to £87. The parochial charities produce about £116 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes. Croxteth Hall is the seat of the Earl of Sefton, who is lord of the manor, and takes his title from this place.

SEPSTON, a vil. in the par. of Harmondsworth, co. Middlesex, 7 miles W. of Brentford.

SERF, ST., an islet in Loch Leven, co. Kinross, Scotland. On it are remains of St. Serf's Priory, where Archbishop Graham, son of Robert III. of Scotland, was buried.

SERK. See SARK, Channel Isles.

SERLBY, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Harworth, co. Nottingham, 1 mile N.E. of Blyth, and 2½ miles S.W. of Bawtry. It is situated on the river Idle, or Ryton, and includes the hmlts. of Hesle, Limpole, and Plumtree. The manor formerly belonged to Alured the Saxon, and subsequently to Roger de Busli. The church is in ruins.

SERPENT, a stream of the co. of Inverness, Scotland, rises near Kilmallie, and falls into Loch Leven.

SESKINAN, a par. in the bar. of Decies-without-Drum, co. Waterford, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5½ miles N. of Dungarvan. Clonmel is its post town. The surface is mostly mountainous and boggy. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lismore, val. £83, in the patron. of the bishop. There are two Roman Catholic chapels, and five private day schools.

SESKINOPE, a hmlt. in the bar. of Omagh, co. Tyrone, Ireland, 3 miles N.E. of Fentona.

SESSAY, a par. in the wap. of Allertonshire, North Riding co. York, 5 miles S.E. of Thirsk, and 6½ N.W. of Easingwold. It is a station on the Great Northern railway. The par. comprises the tnshps. of Sessay and Hutton Sessay. The village, which is small, is chiefly agricultural. The surface is undulating, and the soil a mixture of clay and sand. The living is a rect. in the dioc.* of York, val. £575. The church is dedicated to St. Cuthbert. The parochial charities produce about £21 per annum. Sessay Hall is the seat of Viscount Downe.

SESSIAGH, a small lough in the co. of Donegal, Ireland, 1 mile S.E. of Dunfanaghy.

SESSWICK, a tnshp. in the par. of Bangor, hund. of Bromfield, co. Denbigh, 5 miles S.E. of Wrexham.

SETCHEY, or SETCH, a par. in the hund. of Freebridge-Lynn, co. Norfolk, 4½ miles S. of Lynn, its post town, and 1¼ mile S.W. of North Runcton. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the navigable river Nar, or Setch, which separates it from the parish of Wormegay. It was formerly a market town. The land is principally pasture, and the remainder arable and common. The living is a rect. annexed to that of North Runcton, in the dioc. of Norwich. The church was erected at the expense of Daniel Gurney, Esq., J.P., in 1844. There is a school-house, also built by D. Gurney.

SETMURTHY, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Brigham, ward of Allerdale-above-Derwent, co. Cumberland, 4 miles N.E. of Cockermouth. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. About two-thirds of the land are in pasture, and the remainder arable and woodland. The waste lands were enclosed under an Act of Parliament in 1812. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £48. The church was built in 1794. There is a school, for the endowment of which 60 acres of land were allotted at the enclosure of the parish.

SET-THORN ENCLOSURE COTTAGE, an ext. par. place in the upper div. of Christchurch hund., co. Hants.

SETTLE, a tnshp., post and market town in the par. of Giggleswick, wap. of Staincliff West, West Riding co. York, 4 miles from Preston, and 60 N.W. of York. It is a station on the north-western branch of the Midland railway. It is situated on the eastern bank of the river Ribble in a fertile vale surrounded by the moors. It is supposed to have derived its name from the Saxon word setl, "a seat," descriptive of its situation at the base of Castleberg limestone cliff, which rises perpendicularly to an altitude of 300 feet. From the summit there is a prospect of Ingleborough on the N.W., Pennigant on the N., and Pendle Hill on the S. The tnshp. comprises the hmlts. of Meerbeck, Anley, and Lodge Settle. The village of Settle is a polling-place for the county elections, and a petty session town, consisting of two principal streets of well-built houses, and of some smaller avenues. In the market place is a townhall, erected in 1832 at an expense of £5,500. It also contains two commercial banks, a savings-bank, music hall, and literary institution. A portion of the inhabitants are engaged in the cotton and paper mills. There are also a tannery and several roperies. The surface is almost all grazing land, extending along the eastern acclivities of the vale, which is enclosed on each side by a continuous range of rugged limestone rocks. The pastures are rich, and those near the town let at from £6 to £10 per acre. It gives name to a Poor-law Union, comprising 31 parishes or townships, but the union workhouse is situated at Giggleswick. A constable is appointed annually at the court-leet of the lord of the manor, who also holds a court-baron. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £150, in the patron. of the Master of Giggleswick grammar school and four other trustees. The church, dedicated to the Holy Ascension, was erected in 1839, at an expense of £3,000.. There are National and infant schools. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum. The Independents, Wesleyans, Primitive Methodists, and Society of Friends have each a place of worship. Market day is on Tuesday. Fairs for sheep and cattle are held on 26th April, 18-20th August, Tuesday after 27th October; also great markets for fat cattle every alternate Monday, and for milch cows and lean stock every alternate Friday from a fortnight preceding Easter till Whitsuntide; a pleasure fair also occurs on Whit-Tuesday.

SETTRINGTON, a par. in the wap. of Buckrose, East Riding co. York, 4 miles S.E. of Malton, its post town. It is a station on the Malton and Driffield railway. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on a branch of the river Derwent at the foot of the wolds.

The par. includes the tnshp. of Scagglethorpe. The village is mostly modern, having been rebuilt by the late Lady Sykes, and is a polling-place for the county elections. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. Sir T. Syke's hounds meet at Settrington Beacon. The Duke of Richmond takes the title of baron from this place. The tithes were commuted for land and money payments under an Enclosure Act in 1797. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of York, val. £1,045. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient edifice with a square embattled tower. It contains an E. window of stained glass. The parochial charities produce about £15 per annum. There are a National and a Sunday school for both sexes. The hall, which is the principal residence, is situated in a well-timbered park. Lord Middleton is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

SEVEN CHURCHES, King's Co. See CLONMACNOISE.

SEVEN CHURCHES, co. Wicklow. See GLENDALOUGH.

SEVENHAMPTON, or SENNINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Bradley, co. Gloucester, 7 miles N.W. of Northleach, its post town, and 4½ S. of Winchcomb. The village, which is of small extent, is chiefly agricultural. The river Colne flows through the parish, and one of the head streams of the Thames issues from seven different springs. The surface is hilly and the scenery varied. The land is almost wholly arable, with a little meadow and pasture. The soil is light, resting on a substratum of stone, which is quarried for building purposes. The tithes were commuted for land and money payments under an Enclosure Act in 1814. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £49. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is a venerable cruciform structure with a square embattled tower containing three bells. The interior of the church contains several mural tablets. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum. The Baptists have a place of worship at Brockhampton Quarries.

SEVENHAMPTON, a tythg. and chplry. in the par. and hund. of Highworth, co. Wilts, 1½ mile S.E. of Highworth, its post town, and 4 miles N.W. of Shrivenham railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic.* of Highworth, in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, has a square tower containing five bells. Lady W. Warneford is lady of the manor.

SEVEN-HEADS, a cape on the coast of Cork, Ireland, between Courtmacsherry and Clonakilty Bays.

SEVENOAKS, a par., post and market town in the hund. of Codsheath, lathe of Sutton-at-Home, co. Kent, 17 miles W. from Maidstone, and 24 S.E. from London. The London, Chatham, and Dover railway opened a branch line to Sevenoaks in 1862, the station of which is about a mile from the town. The town of Sevenoaks is situated on an eminence. Knole Park, in the neighbourhood, is upwards of 1,000 acres in extent, and 6 miles in circumference. The mansion, which is in the old English style of architecture, covers 3 acres of ground, and has a collection of pictures and other works of art. It was close to Sevenoaks that Jack Cade defeated Sir Humphrey Stafford in 1450. Originally Sevenoaks formed part of the property belonging to the Archbishops of Canterbury, but it came into the possession of the Crown in the reign of Henry VIII., who received it in exchange for other land from Archbishop Cranmer. It afterwards came to the Sackvilles of Knole. The town is well built, and is surrounded by seats; it is lighted with gas. The population in 1861 was 3,261, with 978 inhabited houses. The inhabitants are partly engaged in the hop grounds, which are numerous. The London and County Bank has a branch here. There is also a savings-bank. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £1,117. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, has a large square tower containing a peal of eight bells. It contains monuments to the Lambards, Amherst, Fermoy, Bosville, and Sackville families. The parochial register dates from 1559. There are two places of worship for the Baptists, and one for the Wesleyans. The free grammar school was founded in 1432 by Sir William Sennocke or Sevenoake, a foundling who, having been apprenticed to a grocer by some charitable person, subsequently rose to be Lord Mayor of London and a member of parliament; the school has four scholarships at Oxford and Cambridge. The almshouses attached were founded by Sir William at the same time. Lady Boswell, wife of Sir William Boswell, Charles I.'s Ambassador at the Hague, likewise founded a school here, in which 200 children are at present taught on the National system; its income is nearly £450 per annum. The Sevenoaks Vine, an open space a short way out of the town, to the northwards, is noted for the cricket matches which are played there. In Whitby Scrubs boars were hunted as late as Elizabeth's reign. Sevenoaks Poor-law Union contains 16 parishes and townships, and comprises an area of 59,572 acres. Market day is on Saturday. Fairs are held on 12th and 13th July, and 12th and 13th October.

SEVENOAKS, a tnshp. in the par. of Great Budworth, hund. of Bucklow, co. Chester, 5 miles N.W. of Northwich, and the same distance S. of Warrington. The village, which is of small extent, is situated in the vale of the Dune, and is wholly agricultural. The soil is of a clayey nature, with a subsoil of clay and sand. There is a meeting-house for the Society of Friends.

SEVEN-STONES, a reef off the Land's End, co. Cornwall. It lies out at sea about 7 miles from the shore, and is marked by a floating light.

SEVENTON. See SEVINGTON, co. Wilts.

SEVEN-WELLS, the source of one of the head streams of the river Thames, co. Gloucester, 3 miles S. of Cheltenham.

SEVERN-STOKE, a par. in the lower div. of Pershore hund., co. Worcester, 7 miles S. of Worcester, its post town, and 3 N.E. of Upton. The village is situated on the Severn, and has a prospect of the Malvern hills, &c. A market and fair were granted by Edward II., but have been long since disused. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The living is a rect.* in the dioc of Worcester, val. £746. The church, dedicated to St. Denis, or All Saints, has a tower containing five bells. The interior of the church contains tombs of the Somers family. The parochial charities produce about £13 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes. Severn Bank is the principal residence. The Earl of Coventry is lord of the manor.

SEVERN, THE, the largest and most important river in England, after the Thames, formed by the union of two small streams, the Hafren and Clywedog, which rise under Plinlimmon, in the south-western part of Montgomeryshire, near the head of the Wye, and unite at Llanidloes, forming the main stream of the Severn. It was called by the Romans Sabrina, and by the Welsh Hafren, or "queen of rivers," which the Saxons converted into Sæferne, and the moderns into Severn. Its course through Montgomeryshire is in a north-easterly direction, past the towns of Newtown and Welshpool, from which latter place it becomes navigable, and entering Shropshire, pursues an easterly course to Shrewsbury, which it nearly encircles. A little below Shrewsbury it receives the Tern on the left bank, whence taking a circuitous course, it flows through Coalbrookdale, past the towns of Ironbridge and Bridgnorth to the N.W. borders of Worcestershire, entering which county it passes Bewdley and Stourport, whence to Gloucester it is 150 feet wide and more than 6 feet deep for trows and barges. After passing Worcester it receives the Teme on the right bank, and continues its course in a southerly direction past Upton to Tewkesbury on the Gloucestershire-border, where it is joined by the Upper Avon on the left bank, and turning to the S.W. passes Gloucester. It then makes several windings, and becomes a tidal river a little above Newnham, where it widens out into an estuary, and passing Chepstow receives the waters of the Wye on the right, and those of the lower Avon on the left, about 8 miles below

Bristol. It drains upwards of 4,500 square miles, and is subject to great floods near its mouth, the banks below Gloucester being so low that destructive inundations are not unfrequent. These have been partly caused by one of the most remarkable features of the river, its bore, or eagre, which brings in the tidal wave with a loud noise, and a head of 4 to 5 feet. The river begins to be navigable at Welshpool, about 150 miles above Gloucester, and 225 feet above sea-level; but vessels of 30 tons cannot ascend higher than Coalbrookdale, whence the fall to Gloucester is 103 feet. Vessels of 60 tons can come up to Bewdley-Bridge, of 80 tons to Worcester, and of 110 tons to Gloucester, below which point the navigation was much obstructed by shoals and windings, but has recently been improved, and a ship canal constructed from Gloucester to Berkely-pill, 80 feet wide, and from 15 to 18 feet deep, so that vessels of 350 tons can now come up to Gloucester. The other canals in connection with the Severn are the Thames and Severn, with a Stroud water branch, bringing these two great rivers into direct communication; the Gloucester and Ledbury, the Worcester and Birmingham, the Staffordshire and Worcestershire, opening into the Birmingham and Liverpool junction; the Shropshire and the Shrewsbury. The Severn formerly abounded in salmon, lampreys, and a great many other fish, but the fisheries are now not of much importance, salmon having become scarce. The tides rise from 50 to 60 feet at Chepstow, and from 45 to 50 feet at the mouth of the Avon.

SEVERN, THE, a tributary of the river Rye, rises under Ralph's Cross, in the moors, North Riding co. York, and joins the Rye after a course of 19 miles near its junction with the Derwent.

SEVINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Chart, lathe of Shepway, co. Kent, 2 miles S. of Ashford, its post town and railway station. The parish, which is small, is wholly agricultural. About two-thirds of the land are in pasture, and the remainder arable. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £230, and the glebe comprises 12 acres. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £250. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The register dates from 1654. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum. There is a free school.

SEVINGTON, or SEVENTON, a chplry. in the par. of Leigh-de-la-Mere, hund. of Chippenham, co. Wilts, 5 miles N.W. of Chippenham.

SEWARDSTONE, a hmlt. in the par. of Waltham-Abbey, or Holy Cross, hund. of Waltham, co. Essex, 2 miles S. of Waltham-Abbey. It is situated within the limits of the forest on the river Lea. The road to Chingford passes through this place, which was once a distinct parish. There is a lunatic asylum. The Wesleyans have a place of worship.

SEWERBY-WITH-MARTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Bridlington, wap. of Dickering, East Riding co. York, 1½ mile N.E. of Bridlington, its post town. It is a station on the Scarborough, Bridlington, and Hull railway. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the coast, and is chiefly agricultural. The soil is of various qualities. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to that of Grindall, in the dioc. of York, val. £100 and £81 respectively. The church, dedicated to St. John the Evangelist, has a spired tower containing one bell. It was erected in 1847 at the expense of the late Yarburgh Yarburgh, Esq., who died in 1856, and to whom the transept contains a marble tablet. There is a school for both sexes, erected and endowed by the same gentleman. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. Sewerby House is the principal residence. George Lloyd, Esq., is lord of the manor.

SEWSTERN, a chplry. in the par. of Buckminster, hund. of Framland, co. Leicester, 1 mile S. of Buckminster, and 9 miles N.E. of Melton-Mowbray. The village, which is of small extent, is chiefly agricultural. The soil is a strong clay. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic.* of Buckminster, in the dioc. of Peterborough. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, was erected in 1842. The children of this village attend the school at Buckminster. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. The Earl of Dysart is lord of the manor and principal landowner. A Church feast is held on the Sunday following 10th October.

SEXHOW, a tnshp. in the par. of Rudby-in-Cleveland, W. div. of Langbaurgh lib., North Riding co. York, 4½ miles S.W. of Stokesley. It is a station on the North Yorkshire and Cleveland branch of the North Eastern railway.

SEZINCOTE. See SEASONCOTE, co. Gloucester.

SHABBINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Ashendon, co. Bucks, 3 miles N.W. of Thame. Wheatley is its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Thame, which separates it from Oxfordshire. The greater part of the rectorial tithes belong to the landowners. The vicarial tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £380, and the glebe comprises 90 acres. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £265. The church, dedicated to St. Mary Magdalene, has a low square tower containing five bells. In the interior of the church is a piscina. A village festival is kept in honour of the patron saint. E. Blunt, Esq., is lord of the manor.

SHACKERSTONE, a par. in the hund. of Sparkenhoe, co. Leicester, 7½ miles N. of Atherstone, its post town, and 4 N.W. of Market-Bosworth. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the Ashby-de-la-Zouch canal, and on the Sence, a branch of the river Anker. The inhabitants are wholly agricultural. The par. contains the hmlt. of Odestone. The surface is undulating, and the soil clay intermixed with marl. The tithes were commuted for land, under an Enclosure Act in 1769. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £150. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient edifice, with a tower containing three bells. The parochial charities produce about £25 per annum, of which £17 goes to Jennen's school. There is a Sunday-school for both sexes. Earl Howe is lord of the manor.

SHACKLEFORD, a tythg. in the par. of Godalming, first div. of Godalming hund., co. Surrey, 2 miles N.W. of Godalming.

SHACKLEFORD, a tythg. in the par. of Woking, first div. of the hund. of Woking, co. Surrey, 5 miles N.E. of Guildford.

SHACKLEWELL, a hmlt. in the par. of Hackney, Tower div. of Ossulstone hund., co. Middlesex, 3 miles N.E. of St. Paul's, London. It is situated on Hackney brook, and was formerly the seat of Mrs. Heron, daughter of Sir T. More. Spottiswoode's Bible printing office is situated in this district, which is now studded with villas.

SHADFORTH, a tnshp. in the par. of Pittington, S. div. of Easington ward, co. Durham, 5 miles S.E. of Durham, its post town, and 2 S. of Sherburn railway-station. The village, which is chiefly agricultural, is situated in the valley of the Shadforth Beck, a tributary of the river Wear. A portion of the inhabitants are employed in the collieries. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Durham. val. £420, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, dedicated to St. Cuthbert, is situated on the N. side of South Beck, and was built in 1839. There is a parochial school for both sexes. The Primitive Methodists have a place of worship.

SHADINGFIELD, a par. in the hund. of Wangford, co. Suffolk, 4 miles N.W. of Wangford, its post town, 4 S. of Beccles, and 6 N.E. of Halesworth. The village is small and wholly agricultural. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £6 14*s., and the rectorial for one of £303, and the glebe comprises 7 acres. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £264. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is an ancient structure with a tower containing one bell. The register dates from 1539. Shadingfield Hall is situated in well-wooded grounds. John Garden, Esq., is lord of the manor.

SHADOXHURST, a par. in the hund. of Blackbourne, lower div. of Scray lathe, co. Kent, 4½ miles S.W. of Ashford, its post town. It is a small secluded village, and is wholly agricultural. The parish is watered by a feeder of the Beult, and is traversed by the line of the South-Eastern railway. The land is low and flat, abounding in coppice woods. The remainder is divided between arable and pasture, with about 20 acres of hop-grounds. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £109. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, has a tower containing one bell. The parochial charities produce about £3 per annum. There is a parochial school. The Wesleyans have a place of worship.

SHADWELL, a tnshp. in the par. of Thorner, lower div. of Skyrack wap., West Riding co. York, 5 miles N.E. of Leeds, its post town, and 4 from Harewood. The village, which is of small extent, is chiefly agricultural. There are brick and tile kilns in the vicinity. The tnshp. includes a portion of Winn Moor, which was enclosed in 1805, and has been greatly improved. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Enclosure Act in 1803. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £92, in the patron. of the Vicar of Thorner. The church, dedicated to St. Paul, was built in 1842, and has some stained windows and a carved stone font. There is a National school for both sexes, and a Church Sunday-school. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. The trustees of Lady Hastings and William Nicholson Nicholson, Esq., are lords of the manor.

SHADWELL, a hmlt. in the par. of Rushford, co. Norfolk, 3 miles E. of Thetford, on the river Brandon.

SHADWELL, a tnshp. in the par. of Clun, co. Salop, 4 miles S.W. of Bishop's Castle.

SHADWELL, ST. PAUL'S, a par. and populous metropolitan district in the borough of the Tower Hamlets, and Tower div. of Ossulstone hund., co. Middlesex, 2 miles S.E. of St. Paul's, London. It is a station on the Blackwall railway. This place, formerly called Chadwelle, took its name from a mineral spring in the "Sun Tavern" fields, dedicated to St. Chad. Previous to 1669 it was a hamlet in the parish of Stepney, and belonged to the Nealds, but was made a distinct parish by Act of Parliament. It extends along the northern bank of the Thames, including the lower basin of the London Docks, and comprises about 70 acres, mostly built over. The population in 1861 was 8,499. That portion of the parish called Lower Shadwell abuts on the river, and is chiefly inhabited by shipchandlers, provision merchants, sailmakers, coopers, anchor smiths, and other trades connected with the shipping interest. It contains the K police station, a market, and the Lascar barracks. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of London, val. £452, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Paul, is a modern structure, with a tower surmounted by a spire. It was rebuilt on the site of the original edifice in 1821, at a cost of £14,000. There are places of worship for Independents, Wesleyans, and Primitive Methodists. There are National schools, rebuilt in 1837, and endowed with an income of £220; also Protestant Dissenters' schools, situated in Shakspeare's Walk, and endowed with £70 per annum, bequeathed in 1712. Captain Cooke's almshouses for 31 seamen's widows were rebuilt and further endowed by John Car. In 1615 Sir Robert Cotton discovered a Roman grave here. Matthew Mead, the celebrated Nonconformist minister, was appointed to this living by Cromwell in 1658, but displaced in 1662.

SHADYCOMBE, a hmlt. in the par. of Marlborough, co. Devon, 3 miles S.W. of Kingsbridge.

SHADY ROW, a hmlt. in the chplry. of Honley, par. of Almondbury, West Riding co. York, 3 miles S.W. of Huddersfield. It is situated near the river Colne. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the neighbouring woollen mills, and in the mines.

SHAFTESBURY, or SHASTON, a market town, municipal and parliamentary borough, having separate jurisdiction, but locally in the hund. of Monckton-up-Wimborne, co. Dorset, 8 miles N.W. of Sturminster, 22 S.W. of Salisbury, and 101 S.W. of London. It has a station at the neighbouring village of Semley, on the Yeovil and Exeter section of the London and South-Western railway. It is supposed to occupy the site of an early British town called Caer Palladwr, or Caer Septon, and was probably a Roman station, as numerous ancient coins have been found in it, but its name is undoubtedly of Saxon origin, Sceaftesbyrig signifying "the town on the summit of a hill." It rose into importance on the ruins of Alcester, and having been burnt by the Danes was entirely rebuilt by Alfred the Great in 880. Eight years afterwards the same monarch founded an abbey for nuns of the Benedictine order on the ruins of a pagan temple, and endowed it with lands under a charter still extant in Saxon and Latin. To this abbey the remains of Edward the Martyr were removed in 978, after his murder in Corfe Castle by his mother-in-law, Elfrida, and the dedication of the abbey changed from Mary the Virgin to that of St. Edward. Amongst the pilgrims to the shrine of St. Edward was Canute, who died here in 1036, and was buried at Winchester. The abbey soon became rich, as is evidenced by its revenues, which at the Dissolution were valued at £1,329 1*s.* 3*d.*, and its abbess was one of the four that held an entire barony of the crown, in consequence of which she was liable to be summoned to parliament, but was excused on account of her sex. The importance of the monastery increased that of the town, which at an early period is said to have contained twelve parish churches, though now only three. In Domesday Survey, where it is spelled Sceptesberie, the town is described as a borough, and in the reign of Edward the Confessor contained 104 houses and three mints. Its first charter was granted by Henry III. and it returned two members to parliament in the reign of Edward I., but does not appear to have been a corporate town prior to the reign of James I. Even in Leland's time the conventual buildings and abbey church were fast falling to decay, and few remains are now extant. In the civil war of Charles I. 2,000 gentlemen and yeomen, styled "clubmen," leagued together to protect the county and town from the depredations of both belligerent parties; but their scheme was soon frustrated by Fleetwood, who advanced upon the town with a force of 1,000 men, and arrested the ringleaders.—Its charter was confirmed by Charles II., and continued to be that under which it was governed till the passing of the Municipal Reform Act in 1835. Under the new Act the borough is included in schedule B, amongst those not to have a commission of the peace, unless upon petition and grant, and in section 2 of that schedule, amongst those the municipal boundaries of which were to be taken till altered by parliament. The ancient boundaries include only portions of the three parishes mentioned subsequently, and do not include the whole town. The population of the municipal borough in 1861 was 2,497, and of the parliamentary, which extends into the adjoining county of Wilts, 8,983. The borough is governed by a mayor, 4 aldermen, and 18 town councillors, with the style of "the mayor and burgesses of the borough of Shafton, otherwise Shaftesbury, in the county of Dorset." Its revenue is about £250, expended chiefly for lighting and cleansing, and for payment of police and other salaries. By the passing of the Reform Act in 1832 it was deprived of one of its representatives, so that it now returns only one member to parliament, and about a third of its constituents are scot and lot voters. It is also a polling-place for the county elections.—From the elevated site on which the town is built it commands views of the counties of Dorset, Somerset, and Wilts, but from the same circumstance is approached only by a great ascent. The streets are irregularly laid out, but clean and well paved. It is lighted with gas, and inadequately supplied with water from a large underground reservoir, from which the water is raised by steam power into an upper cistern, and thence distributed through the town. The principal public buildings are the townhall and cornmarket, the latter presented to the town by the liberality of the Marquis of Westminster; a literary institution, established in 1852, with public reading room attached; a savings-bank; union workhouse, erected in the neighbourhood in 1840; and a clerical library for the use of the clergy, kept in the vestry room of the Holy Trinity church. On Castle Hill, near the town, is a small mount surrounded by a shallow ditch, supposed to be the site of a castle, but of which no tradition exists, and by some antiquaries, therefore, supposed to be a Roman entrenchment.—The trade of the place is limited to the supply of the town and neighbourhood, and some business in agricultural produce, chiefly butter and cheese. The manufacture of shirt-buttons used to employ a considerable number of women and children, but no manufacture of any kind is now carried on, and but for the opening of the Yeovil line of railway in 1859 the town would have experienced a complete stagnation of business. The quarter sessions have been transferred to Dorchester, but petty sessions and a new County Court are held regularly held in the townhall monthly. A court-leet is also held by the lord of the manor, and formerly a court of record was granted to the town by charter, but this last has now become obsolete. The Poor-law Union comprises 19 parishes or places.—Shaftesbury gives the title of earl to the family of Cooper, and gives name to a deanery in the archdeac. of Dorset and dioc. of Salisbury. The town is divided into the three parishes of St. Peter, the Holy Trinity, and St. James, exclusive of the liberty of Alcester. The tithes of the first two have been commuted for a rent-charge of £170, and those of St. James for a rent-charge of £399, with a glebe of 4 acres. The living of Holy Trinity, which is united with the rect.* of St. Peter, and also comprises the extinct parishes of St. Martin's and St. Lawrence, is valued at £130. The church of St. Peter, which is the principal, is situated near the centre of the town, and is a building of considerable antiquity with a square embattled tower, but has been much defaced by modern alterations. Holy Trinity church was rebuilt in 1841, and contains a painted E. window, presented by the Marquis of Westminster, who has been a great benefactor to the town. It stands in a churchyard planted with rows of lime-trees, and bounded by the old wall of the abbey. The living of St. James's is a rect., val. £400. It is situated within the liberty of Alcester, and the ancient fabric with an embattled tower has been taken down, and is being rebuilt. St. Rombald's, or Rowald's, though without the municipal borough is within the parliamentary. It is a modern edifice with a low square tower. The Independents, Wesleyans, Roman Catholics, and Society of Friends have each a place of worship. The Independent chapel was originally built in 1670, but has been recently replaced by a commodious structure supported by four columns. There were anciently several charities, and a hospital dedicated to St. John the Baptist, but these have long since been abrogated. The benefactions now consist of a free school for 20 boys, endowed by William Lush, some ancient almshouses for men and women, and a few minor charities. There are two National, two infant, a British and Foreign, and several Sunday schools.—Market day is Saturday. Fairs are held on the Saturday preceding Palm Sunday, 24th June, last Saturday in August, and 23rd November, chiefly for sheep, cattle, cheese, and agricultural produce.

SHAFTHILL, a station on the Alston and Haltwhistle branch of the North-Eastern railway, 4 miles from Haltwhistle.

SHAFTHOLME, a hmlt. in the par. of Bentley, West Riding co. York, 2 miles N.W. of Doncaster.

SHAFTOE, EAST and WEST, tnshps. in the par. of Hartburn, co. Northumberland, 9½ miles S.W. of Morpeth, and 4 S.E. of Cambo. The land belongs to Lord Decies, who is lord of the manor. There is no village, only two or three farmhouses. The chapel-of-ease has long been in ruins. Behind the ancient hall rises Shaftoe Crag, a lofty verdant hill, and near it is a cave formed in the solid rock.

SHAFTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Felkirk, wap. of Staincross, West Riding co. York, 6 miles W. of Wakefield, its post town, 5 N.E. of Barnsley, and 2 from Cudworth railway station. The village is situated on rising ground near the North Midland railway and Barnsley canal. The tnshp. comprises about 800 acres of fertile land, part of which is in market gardens yielding a large amount of fruit. The substratum contains coal of good quality at the depth of 100 yards, and a mine has been some years in operation. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. S. Foljambe, Esq., is lord of the manor. Ferry Moor is a tract of common land about 50 acres in extent.

SHAGGIE WATER, a stream of the co. of Perth, Scotland, rises near Monzie, and joins the Turret near Crieff.

SHAKERLEY, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Tyldesley-cum-Shakerley, par. of Leigh, West Derby hund., co. Lancaster, 10 miles N.W. of Manchester, its post town, and 2½ N.E. of Leigh. It is situated on the high road from Leigh to Manchester. The town comprises two or three good streets. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in cotton-spinning and weaving, and others in the collieries. The soil is of a clayey nature. Above half the land is in pasture, and the remainder arable, meadow, and woodland. In 1827 the township was separated from Leigh, and erected into a distinct parish, as regards ecclesiastical affairs. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £135. The church, dedicated to St. George, has a spired tower containing a clock and six bells. It was erected by the Church Building Commissioners in 1825, and was designed by Smirke. There is a National School for both sexes, in which a Sunday-school is held. The Wesleyans and Countess of Huntingdon's Connexion have each a place of worship. G. Ormerod, Esq., is lord of Tyldesley manor.

SHAKESPEARE'S CLIFF, a headland on the coast of Kent, 1½ mile S.W. of Dover. It rises about 350 feet above sea-level, and the London and South-Eastern railway passes under the cliff, through a tunnel 4,179 feet long.

SHALBOURN, a par. chiefly in the hund. of Kinwardstone, co. Wilts, and partly in the hund. of Kintbury-Eagle, co. Berks, 4 miles S.W. of Hungerford, its post town, and 10 S.E. of Marlborough. The par. comprises the tythgs. of Bagshot, Newtown, and Westcourt. The village is situated in a valley near Wansdyke, and is chiefly agricultural. It is watered by a stream which turns several mills in its course. The substratum abounds in green, white, and red sandstone, and is supposed to contain coal. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £428, in the patron. of the Dean and Canons of Windsor. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is an ancient structure with a square tower. The parochial charities produce about £13 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes, built entirely at the expense of T. Kingston, Esq. On the edge of the down, a continuance of Salisbury Plain, is a tumulus.

SHALDEN, a par. in the upper div. of Alton hund., co. Hants, 2¾ miles N.W. of Alton, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £330, and the glebe comprises 23 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £331, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, is an ancient structure with a tower containing one bell. John Wood, Esq., of Thaddon Grange, is lord of the manor.

SHALDESTONE. See SHALSTONE, co. Bucks.

SHALDON, a hmlt. in the par. of St. Nicholas, hund. of Wanford, co. Devon, 5 miles E. of Newton-Abbot. It is situated on the S. bank of the river Teign, across which a bridge has been constructed, and nearly opposite Teignmouth, to which there is a ferry. It is much resorted to for sea bathing. In the 17th century a church was erected by the Carews of Haccombe, and there are places of worship for Independents, Wesleyans, and Baptists. The land is protected from the encroachment of the sea by an embankment.

SHALEY-BROOK, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Knowl

End, par. of Audley, co. Stafford, 4 miles N.W. of Newcastle-under-Lyme.

SHALFLEET, a par. in the lib. of West Medina, Isle of Wight, co. Hants, 3½ miles S.E. of Yarmouth, its post town, and 5 W. of Newport. The parish, which is of large extent, occupies the northern portion of the island, extending from Yarmouth to Newton Bay. The village, which is chiefly agricultural, is situated on a creek of the Solent, formed by the navigable river Newton, and in the bay is a quay accessible to ships of considerable burden. This place is mentioned in Domesday Survey as having belonged to Gosselin Fitz Azor. The par. includes the hmlt. of Mingwood. A stream abounding with trout flows through the parish. There are quarries of good building-stone at Dodpits. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £210, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church is an ancient Norman edifice with a massive embattled tower surmounted by a spire of more recent erection. The interior contains a series of columns of Purbeck marble, and several windows decorated with the arms of Montacute, Earl of Salisbury, and Isabelle de Fortibus. There are National and infant schools for both sexes. The Primitive Methodists and Baptists have each a place of worship. Shalfleet, Mingwood, and Wellow are the three manors into which the parish is divided.

SHALFORD, a par. in the first div. of Blackheath hund., co. Surrey, 1 mile S.E. of Guildford, its post town. It is a station on the Reading and Reigate branch of the South-Eastern railway. The village is situated on the Wey and Arun Junction canal. On Catherine Hill are the remains of a chapel founded in Henry III.'s time. There are three tanneries and two breweries. The land is partly in hop grounds. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £330, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, was rebuilt in 1846, and has some painted windows, also a mural monument to Robert Austin, by Bacon. The parochial charities produce about £12 per annum. There are National schools for both sexes. Gosden House and Shalford House are the principal residences. The latter was rebuilt in 1600, and improved and modernised in 1760. The interior contains a collection of paintings. A fair is held on 2nd October.

SHALFORD, a par. in the hund. of Hinckford, co. Essex, 5 miles N.W. of Braintree, and 7 S.W. of Halstead. The village, which is considerable, but chiefly agricultural, is situated on the Pant, a branch of the Blackwater, which bounds the parish on the E. The soil is loamy, on a substratum of clay. The land is chiefly arable, and the remainder pasture and hop grounds. The rectorial tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £390, and the vicarial for £203. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £200, in the patron. of the Prebendary of Shalford in Wells Cathedral. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is an ancient structure with a square embattled tower containing five bells. The parochial charities produce £3 per annum. The principal residence is Abbot's Hall.

SHALLON, a vil. in the par. of Kilsharvan, bar. of Lower Duleek, co. Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles S. of Drogheda, on the road from Duleek to Nynch.

SHALLOWS, a hmlt. in the par. of St. Peter, hund. of Thanet, lathe of St. Augustine, co. Kent, near Margate.

SHALMSFORD-STREET, a hmlt. in the par. of Chartham, hund. of Felborough, lathe of Scray, co. Kent, 3 miles S.W. of Canterbury.

SHALSTONE, or SHALDESTONE, a par. in the hund. of Buckingham, co. Bucks, 4 miles N.W. of Buckingham, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. It is situated near the river Ouse, and contains The Den. The land is nearly evenly divided between arable and pasture, with about 100 acres of woodland. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment in 1767. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £199. The church is dedicated to St. Edward. There is a National school. Shalstone House is the principal residence.

SHAMBLEHURST, a tythg. in the par. of South Stoneham, hund. of Mainsbridge, co. Hants, 4 miles N.E. of Southampton, and 4 S.W. of Bishop's-Waltham. This tything contains the union poorhouse of Stoneham.

SHAMBLES, a shoal off the coast of Dorset, 3 miles E. of Portland. It extends about two miles from E. to W., and caused the wreck of the Abergavenny in 1805.

SHAMWELL, a hund. in the lathe of Aylesford, co. Kent, contains the pars. of Chalk, Cliff-at-Hoo, Cobham, Cooling, Cuxton, Denton, Frindsbury, Halling, Higham, Shorne, and part of Strood, comprising an area of 26,020 acres.

SHANAGARRY, co. Cork. See SHANGAN.

SHANAGOLDEN, a par. and post town in the bar. of Lower Conello, co. Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 21 miles S.W. of Limerick. The surface consists for the greater part of excellent soil, and lies within the vale of the river Shannon. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Limerick, val. £95, in the patron. of the Precentor of Limerick. The church is an ancient building, and was formerly partly in ruins. There is a Roman Catholic chapel, and several schools. Shanagolden House is the principal seat. The town is situated on the road from Rathkeale to Listowel. It consists of one irregularly-built street, and has a police station. Petty sessions are held once a fortnight. Black and grey marble and limestone are obtained in large quantities. On Shanid Hill are the ruins of Shanid Castle, formerly a seat of the Desmonds. Knockpatrick Hill in this parish is said to be the highest point in the county. On its summit are the remains of an old church and a well dedicated to St. Patrick. Fairs are held on the first Wednesday after Trinity Sunday, and on 4th September.

SHANBALLY, a hmlt. in the bar. of Kerrycurrihy, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 2 miles S. of Monkstown. Shanbally House is the principal residence.

SHANBALLY, a hmlt. in the bar. of West Iffa and Offa, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 2 miles N.W. of Clogheen. It is situated amidst the Galtee and Knockmelydown mountains. The Castle is the seat of the Earl of Lismore. Near here are the caves of Mitchellstown.

SHANBALLYMORE, a post-office vil. in the par. of Templeroan, bar. of Fermoy, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5 miles E. of Doneraile, on the road from Rockmills to Doneraile. There is a Roman Catholic chapel. Shanbally House is the neighbouring seat. A castle formerly stood here.

SHANBOGH, a par. in the bar. of Ida, co. Kilkenny, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 2 miles S.W. of New Ross, its post town. It is situated on the river Barrow. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ossory, val. with Rossbercon £328. The church is in ruins. It is joined to Rossbercon in the Roman Catholic division. Annagh is the chief seat.

SHANCOUGH, a par. in the bar. of Tiraghrill, co. Sligo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 6 miles S.E. of Collooney, its post town. The surface comprises a large proportion of mountain and bog, and is crossed by the road from Sligo to Ballyfarnon. Lough Arrow is in this parish. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Elphin, val. with Kilmactreney, £79, in the patron. of the bishop. It is joined with Kilmactreney in the Roman Catholic arrangement. Limestone and iron ore exist.

SHANDANGAN, a hmlt. in the bar. of East Muskerry, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 4 miles S.E. of Macroom. Petty sessions are held here.

SHANDRUM, a par. in the bar. of Orrery, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 4 miles W.S.W. of Charleville, its post town. The surface consists mostly of pasture lands, and part of the red bog is included in this parish. The road from Charleville to Newmarket traverses the interior. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Cloyne, val. £615, in the patron. of the bishop. Service is performed in the parish schoolroom, the church being in ruins. There is a Roman Catholic chapel, united to that of Ballyhea, also several private schools. Shandrum House is the chief seat. There are traces of a castle. A fair is held on 25th May.

SHANDWICK, a vil. in the par. of Nigg, co. Ross, Scotland, 7 miles S.E. of Tain. In the vicinity are some Danish pillars with traces of Runic inscriptions.

SHANE'S CASTLE, a seat of Viscount O'Neill, in the co. of Antrim, Ireland, 2 miles N.W. of Antrim. It is situated on Maine Water and Lough Neagh, and was accidently burnt in 1816.

SHANGAN, or SHANAGARRY, a post-office vil. in the bar. of Imokilly, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 4 miles S.E. of Cloyne.

SHANGANAGH CASTLE, the seat of Sir G. Cockburn, co. Dublin, Ireland, near Bray. It contains a collection of ancient works of art, and has in its grounds a cromlech supported on four upright stones, the head stone being 9 feet long by 6½ broad.

SHANGTON, or SHANKTON, a par. in the hund. of Gartree, co. Leicester, 6 miles N.W. of Market-Harborough, its post town. The village, which consists of a few farmhouses, is situated on the river Welland, near the Gartree road, or Via Devana. It is wholly agricultural. Shangton Holt is famed as a cover for foxes. The hundred court was formerly held at a spot called Gartree Bush, about half a mile from the church. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £347. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is an ancient edifice, with a turret containing two bells. Sir Charles Edmund Isham, Bart., is lord of the manor.

SHANID, a bar. in the co. of Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland. It contains the pars. of Dunmoylan, Kilcolman, Kilfergus, Kilmoylan, Loghill, Rathronan, Robertstown, Shanagolden, and parts of Ardagh, Kilbradan, Nantenan, and Newcastle, with the town of Glin.

SHANKEND, a station on the North British railway, 7 miles from Hawick.

SHANKILL, a par. in the bar. of Lower Iveagh, co. Down, and O'Neilland East, co. Armagh, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 3 miles N.W. of Moira. It contains the post town of Lurgan, and the loughs Lurgan and Neagh. The surface consists of a fertile and well-tilled soil. The road from Belfast to Enniskillen passes through the interior. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Dromore, val. £648, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, situated at Lurgan, was erected in 1712, and subsequently enlarged and repaired, partly by the aid of the late Board of First Fruits. The Roman Catholic chapel is also situated in Lurgan. There are likewise Presbyterian and Methodist meeting-houses, besides five public and several private schools. Lurgan House is the residence of the Right Honourable Charles Brownlow.

SHANKILL, or ST. KILL, a par. in the bar. of Gowran, co. Kilkenny, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles N.W. of Goresbridge. Bagnalstown is its post town. It is situated on the road to Kilkenny, near the river Barrow, and comprises the vil. of Paulston. There is a police station. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Leighlin, val. £325, in the patron. of the crown and bishop. There is a Roman Catholic chapel united to that of Grange Silvæ, also a National school at Bornafea. Shankill Castle and Kellymount are the principal residences.

SHANKILL, a hmlt. in the par. of Old Connaught, co. Dublin, Ireland, 2½ miles from Bray. It is a station on the Dublin, Wicklow, and Wexford railway. The hill of Shankill rises about 900 feet above sea-level, near the borders of Wicklow.

SHANKILL, a par. in the bar. of Roscommon, co. Roscommon, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 1 mile W. of Elphin, its post town. The surface is mostly in pasture and bog. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Elphin, val. with Ardclare, £162, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is in ruins. There are a Roman Catholic chapel and a school. Mantua is the chief seat.

SHANKILL, a par. in the bars. of Upper and Lower Belfast, co. Antrim, prov. of Ulster, Ireland. It contains part of the town of Belfast (which see).

SHANKLIN, a par. and post town in the lib. of East Medina, Isle of Wight, co. Hants, 8½ miles S.E. of Newport, and 4 N. of Ventnor. It is a station on the Isle of Wight railway. The village is situated on Sandown Bay, sheltered by lofty downs, which nearly enclose it on two sides. It is mentioned in Domesday Survey as held by Gosselin Fitz-Azor. It is a coastguard station and bathing-place greatly resorted to during the summer season. In the vicinity is Shanklin Chine, a gigantic chasm in the lofty cliffs, extending down to the shore 90 feet in depth, partially overgrown with trees, shrubs, and brushwood, and refreshed by a mineral spring which falls through it. The neighbourhood abounds with attractive scenery, especially on the way to Boniface Down. This parish originally formed part of that of Brading, but was separated in the reign of Stephen, when the church was founded by Geoffrey de L'Isle. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Winchester. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is a cruciform structure of the 12th century, with the exception of the two transepts, which were erected in 1859 at the expense of the vicar. The interior contains an oak chest, curiously carved with a Latin inscription, dated 1512, also a piscina and several monuments to the Hill and Popham families. There is a National school for both sexes. The Independents and Bible Christians have each a place of worship.

SHANLISS, or SHENLESH, a par. in the bar. of Ardee, co. Louth, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles S.W. of Ardee, its post town. The surface consists of a good soil, and is all under cultivation. The road from Kells to Navan passes through the parish. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Armagh, val. with Ardee, £898, in the patron. of the primate. The parish is united with Ardee in the Roman Catholic arrangement. Shanlis House is the principal seat.

SHANNON, the largest river in Ireland, and also in the British Isles, has a course of 224 miles from its source in Cavan till it empties itself into the Atlantic below Limerick. It is available for purposes of navigation for 143 miles, thus opening up a communication to the sea from most of the inland counties, but by adding a branch to Boyle of 9 miles, and one of 6 miles to Strokestown, a total of 158 miles is gained, of which 129 miles, reaching from Killaloe to Leitrim, and including the two branches, are suitable for large steamers. Its basin comprises an area of 7,000 square miles, and embraces portions of the counties of Kerry, Cork, Limerick, Tipperary, Queen's, King's, Westmeath, Longford, Cavan, Sligo, Roscommon, Galway, and Clare. Its name is said to be an abbreviation of Sheahabhin or Shanavon, signifying "the old river." Its source is in a little pond among the Cuilcagh Mountains in Cavan county, whence a small stream flows along a mountain valley, and into Loch Allen, a small lake about 8 miles long and 4 miles broad in the coal district of Leitrim, before entering which it is joined by the Owenmore and the Dorbally, is 5 to 10 feet deep, and expands to a width of about 50 yards. Issuing from Lough Allen, the river, though containing a considerable body of water, is obstructed by shallows and unfit for navigation; a canal has, therefore, been made on the Leitrim side from Drumshanbo to Battlebridge. The banks here are partly formed of low alluvial gravel, often flooded, and beds of gravel abound. Patches of bogs, with occasional fertile hills, are also met with. About 6 miles below Battlebridge the Shannon is joined by the Boyle, a considerable river coming from Loughs Gara and Kay in county Roscommon, which, by the removal of shoals and the construction of a weir and lock near the latter lough, is navigable almost to the town of Boyle. The banks of the Shannon here are low and much overgrown with long rushes. A quay and harbour have been formed at Camphill on Shannon, immediately below which the river is smooth, and overhung with high gravel cliffs. A small expansion called Corry Lough occurs 2 miles lower down. At Jamestown, 2 miles below this point, there is a shallow bend, to avoid which it was considered advisable to cut a short canal, in which a lock occurs 110 feet long and 30 feet broad. After passing Drumsna the river flows in a strong deep current, but soon widens into some small fluviatile lakes, and, passing Roosky through a diversified, and in some places well-wooded, country, it again becomes sluggish, and is in many parts much impeded by bulrushes and reeds. About 4 miles below Roosky commences the expansion below Lough Forbes, which has an average depth of 8 feet. A small shoal near the centre of the lake, where it is only 350 yards wide, has been cleared away, and the navigation is now unimpeded. At Termonbarry some other shoals were removed, and a wharf was formed, and a little lower down, at Richmond Harbour, near the village of Cloondara, is the terminus of the Royal Canal Company. The river, with an average breadth of 250 yards, passes Lanesborough about 7 miles farther down, where it has been deepened, and enters Lough Rea by an improved channel. Lough Rea is about 10 miles long, receives the waters also of the Inny, and extends to within 2 miles of Athlone. The Shannon on leaving the lough sweeps through the centre of the town, and is here a comparatively clear stream, having deposited all silt in the lough. Passing on, it assumes very much the character of a great canal, creeping slowly along, and falling only 4 feet in a distance of 15 miles. About 13 miles below Athlone it is joined by the Suck, a large river which rises in Roscommon, and after a course of 60 miles, in which it receives the waters of several tributary streams, it is so large, and its current so calm and deep, as almost to rival the Shannon, of which it is the most important tributary. A considerable improvement has lately been made by which the waters of the Shannon are here confined within its banks, and about 19,000 acres secured from the danger of its flooding. At Shannon Harbour the Brosna enters from King's County, and the Grand Canal enters at the same point. A branch canal has been made to Ballinasloe, and a wooden towing bridge is used for communicating with the Connaught side. Fourteen miles lower down the river enters Lough Derg, the largest expansion in its entire course, being 20 miles in length, and from 1 to 3, and in some parts even 7 miles broad. Between Loughs Rea and Derg the soil affords good pasturage for cattle almost to the river side, but the surface close to the water is generally soft and boggy. The scenery of Lough Derg is diversified, and in many parts adorned with small tracts of wood. The lake is 2,140 statute acres in extent, and contains, among other islets, Inishgoosh, Saint's Island, and Station Island, or St. Patrick's Purgatory, on which are the remnants of a priory. The soil on both sides of the lough is of slate formation, which is worked to advantage, but to the N. are rounded limestone hills, principally used as pasture lands. About a mile lower down is Killaloe, now the headquarters of the Inland Steam Navigation Company, from whence large steamers ply daily up the river as far as Termonbarry, a distance of 85 miles. Below Killaloe there is a fall of 97 feet before Limerick is reached, and this difficulty is overcome by a canal about 2 miles long on the Clare side, and by two regulating weirs. Close to Limerick the river divides, the smaller and more rapid branch being called Abbey river, and forms King's Island, upon which the old town, or Englishtown, stands. The river at Limerick is crossed by five bridges, one of which, the Wellesley bridge, recently erected, cost £20,000. A statue of the son of the Earl of Clare, who fell during the Crimean war, is placed on it. The harbour of Limerick extends about 1,600 yards in length, and 150 in breadth, and is supplied with a patent slip for vessels of 500 tons, and three building slips. A short canal about a mile long completes the communication with Limerick harbour. The remaining part of the river below Limerick is generally known as the Lower Shannon, and partakes much of the character of an estuary. It is easy of access for vessels, and affords good anchorage above Querrin Creek, which is about 12 miles from Loop Head. The entrance between Kerry and Loop Head is 7 miles wide, and is marked by a lighthouse on Loop Head, with a bright fixed light at an elevation of 270 feet above high water, and Kilkadran Point, about 10 miles farther up, is marked by a fixed red light. At Foynes, on the S. shore, is a natural harbour, so admirably adapted for purposes of commerce that it was proposed as the terminus on this side of a line of ocean steamers to sail between Ireland and America. On the Clare side the river Nagus here empties itself into the Shannon, and is navigable for a distance of 9 miles up the country. The Maigne, rising in the S. of Limerick, adds its waters about 9 miles below the city, having on its banks, near the confluence, Adare Abbey, the seat of the Earl of Dunraven. From this point to Limerick the Shannon is so shallow that at low water vessels take the ground, but shoals and rocks have been carefully removed, and the channel marked with beacons. Near the mouth of the Shannon, and about a mile from Kilrush, lies the island of Scattery, upon which a military fort has been erected. The fragments of several small churches are also to be found, as well as an old round tower 120 feet high, which seems to be of great antiquity.

SHANNON-BRIDGE, a post-office vil. in the par. of Clonmacnoise, bar. of Garrycastle, King's County, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 9 miles W. of Ferbane. It is situated on the river Shannon, at the bridge which connects the cos. of Roscommon and King's County. The bridge has sixteen arches, with a battery and tower at the Roscommon end. There are a Roman Catholic chapel, school, and a police station.

SHANNONGROVE, a hmlt. in the bar. of Kenry, co. Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland, not far from Pallaskenry. Shannongrove House is the principal seat.

SHANNONHARBOUR, a post-office vil. in the par. of Gallen, bar. of Garrycastle, King's County, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles N.N.E. of Banagher, at the confluence of the Grand Canal with the Shannon, and near the embouchure of the river Upper Brosna. There are a police station and a station of the Inland Steam Navigation Company.

SHANRAHAN, a par. in the bar. of West Iffa and Offa, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, containing the post town of Clogheen and the village of Burncourt. It lies in a valley between the Galtee and Waterford mountains, and is crossed by the road from Clonmel to Cork. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lismore, val. £202, in the patron. of the crown. The church was recently built by means of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits. There is a Roman Catholic chapel. At Burncourt are the ruins of a mansion of the barons of Ikerron, besieged by Cromwell. Quin, the actor, is believed to have been a native of this parish.

SHAP, a par. and market town in West ward, co. Westmoreland, 6 miles N.W. of Orton, 10 S.E. of Penrith, and 16 N. of Kendal. It has a station on the Lancaster and Carlisle section of the London and North-Western railway, situated at Brackenber, a little to the S. of the town. The par., including the tnshps. of Hardendale, Keld, Mardale, Rosgill, Shap, Swindale, and Wet Sleddale, is divided for parochial purposes into four districts or constabularies. It is for the most part uncultivated moorland, but near the village and in the valleys there are some fertile tracts. The subsoil is chiefly clay or gravel, and contains abundance of limestone, blue slate, and red granite capable of taking a fine polish. At Thornship is a blue slate quarry, from which slate pencils are manufactured. About the commencement of the present century much of the waste or common lands were enclosed by Act of parliament, and agriculture has recently made considerable progress. The lake Haweswater bounds the parish on the W., and the rivers Lowther and Leeth flow through it, the latter taking its rise near the town. Besides the market town of Shap, which is a large straggling village of detached houses, extending about a mile along the road from Penrith to Kendal, there are the ancient village of Keld, situated in the valley of the river Lowther, and the hamlets of Hardendale, Hegdale, Rayside, and Thornship. Shap is a polling-place for the county elections, and a petty sessions town, but is bleak, owing to its elevated position. About three miles from the town, in the parish of Crosby-Ravensworth, is a mineral spring famed for the cure of scorbutic complaints, and the waters of which resemble those of Harrogate, being strongly impregnated with sulphur. A large hotel has been erected by the Earl of Lonsdale, who is lord of the manor, near the spring, with bath-house, stables, and other accommodation for visitors. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £95. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is an ancient stone structure, with a low square embattled tower containing five bells. There are also the district chapels of Mardale and Swindale, the livings of which are perpet. curs., val. £132 and £64 respectively. The Vicar of Shap is patron of both livings. The chapel-of-ease at Mardale has a low square tower. The Wesleyans have a chapel at Shap. There is a free school for boys and girls, with an endowment of £38 per annum, also a girls' school, held in the old market hall, endowed with £14 per annum, and a Sunday-school held in the boys' school. The parochial charities produce about £22 per annum, distributed to the poor. About a mile W. of the village, in the secluded vale of the Lowther, stands the venerable ruins of Shap Abbey, founded in the 12th century for Præmonstratensian canons, and having a revenue at the Dissolution of £166 10*s.* 10*d.* The tower of the church is nearly all that remains, and this is cleft with numerous fissures. Until recently there was a perfect Druidical temple a little to the S. of the village, consisting of blocks of water-worn granite, arranged in two rows nearly parallel, but differing materially in the size of the stones, and terminating in a rudely-formed circle of smaller stones. Monday is market day, and a fair amount of business is done. Fairs are held on 4th May and 28th September, chiefly for cattle, sheep, and pedlery.

SHAPCOMBE, a tythg in the par. of Luppitt, co. Devon, 4 miles N. of Honiton.

SHAPINSAY, an island and par. in the district of the North Isles of Orkney, co. Orkney and Shetland, Scotland. It extends in length nearly 6 miles from E. to W., with an extreme breadth of about 4½ from N. to S. The surface is of an irregular character, and rises gradually towards the centre. The coast is moderately flat, along which are Viantro and Elwick bays, the latter, opening to the S.W. towards Kirkwall, has from 4 to 6 fathoms water, with a sandy bottom, and forms a natural harbour. On the W. side of it is a beach. Near the coast are numerous antiquities, including Shapinsay Standing Stone, 12 feet by 4, and 1½ in thickness; the black stone of Odin, with other Pictish remains; and several round and oval "Picts' houses" of stone without cement, nearly kiln-shape. Much of the southern part of the parish has been brought under cultivation through the energies of the late Colonel Balfour and his son, to whom the village owes its foundation and prosperity. The soil is generally thin and shallow, and very fertile. There are several hilly sheep-walks and limestone quarries at How. Lead mines were formerly worked here, but have been discontinued, and there are numerous lime kilns. The village of Shapinsay is about 5 miles N.E. of Kirkwall. It is situated between Stronsay Frith and the String near Kirkwall Bay. Its houses are well built, encircling the bay of Elswick. Many of the inhabitants are employed in the cod and herring fisheries. This parish formerly made part of the temporalty of the bishopric of Orkney, the estates of which are now forfeited to the crown and leased to Lord Dundas. This par. is in the presb. of North Isles and synod of Orkney. The stipend of the minister is about £158. There are a United Presbyterian church, Evangelical Union chapel, and a school under the Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge. The principal mansion is Cliffdale, the mansion of How being now in ruins. On the W. shore, nearly opposite the rock of Vasa, is Grucula, or Agricola, where tradition says one of Agricola's ships, in his voyage round the island of Britain, was stranded, and near this spot Roman coins have been found.

SHAPWICK, a par. in the hund. of Badbury, co. Dorset, 5 miles S.E. of Blandford-Forum, its post town, and the same distance N.W. of Wimborne. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Stour, which bounds the parish on the S. It had formerly a market and a small Carthusian priory, founded in 1414 as a cell to the priory of Sheen, in Surrey. Edward the Elder once encamped here, and in the vicinity are traces of an ancient cross. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £379. The church dedicated to St. Bartholomew, is an ancient structure with a low tower. The interior of the church contains several brasses. There is a National school. George Banks, Esq., is lord of the manor.

SHAPWICK, a tythg. in the par. of Axminster, co. Devon, near Axminster.

SHAPWICK, a par. in the hund. of Whitley, co. Somerset, 4½ miles from Street, its post town, and 6½ S.W. of Glastonbury. It has a station on the Somerset and Dorset railway. The village, which is of small extent, and chiefly agricultural, is situated on the road from Bath to Exeter. The soil is of a clayey nature upon a subsoil of blue lias stone, which is quarried for building purposes. A canal from the Bristol Channel at Highbridge passes through the parish. There is a mineral spring called the Holy Well, the waters of which resemble in their properties those of Harrogate. The living is a vic. with the perpet. cur. of Ashcroft annexed, in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £215. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure, with a tower containing five bells. The interior of the church contains tablets of the Strangeway family. The church has recently undergone thorough restoration. The parochial charities produce about £8 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes. Shapwick House is the principal residence.

SHARDLOW, a tnshp. in the par. of Ashton-upon-Trent, hund. of Morleston, co. Derby, 7 miles S.E. of Derby, its post town, and 4 S.W. of Sawley railway station. The township is situated on the Trent and Mersey canal, near its confluence with the river Trent, and includes the hmlt. of Great Wilne. On the banks of the river are coal and timber wharves. About a quarter of a mile from the village the Trent is crossed by Cavendish Bridge, constructed in 1771. Shardlow gives name to a Poor-law Union comprising 46 parishes or places in the counties of Derby, Leicester, and Nottingham, and contains the union poorhouse. There are salt works in the vicinity. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £300. The church has a tower containing six bells. E. A. Holden, Esq., is lord of the manor.

SHARESHILL, a par. in the E. div. of the hund. of Cuttlestone, co. Stafford, 6 miles N.E. of Wolverhampton, its post town, 5 S.E. of Brewood, and 2½ from the Four Ashes station on the London and North Western railway. The village is situated near the Stafford and Worcester canal and Sharedon Brook. The par. includes the hmlts. of Hilton and Great and Little Saredon. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The soil is of a light nature. Near Watling Street are two small camps, apparently Roman. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £114. The church, dedicated to the Assumption of the Virgin Mary, has a stone tower containing four bells. The interior contains effigies of the Swintons. The parochial charities produce about £6 per annum. There is a parochial school. The principal residence is Hilton Hall, near to which is a tower situated on a slight eminence.

SHARK, a lough on the borders of the cos. of Armagh and Down, Ireland, 2 miles N.E. of Pointzpass, close to the Newry canal.

SHARLESTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Warminfield, lower div. of Agbrigg wap., West Riding co. York, 4 miles S.E. of Wakefield, its post town, and 2 E. of Oakenshaw railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is chiefly agricultural. The soil consists of clay and marl. Sharleston Hall, erected in 1591, was the residence of Nicholas de Fleming, who held the mayoralty of York for six years. Coal was formerly worked, but the mines are now nearly exhausted. The charities produce £20, the bequest of the Countess of Westmoreland in 1729, for the relief of widows.

SHARNBROOK, a par. in the hund. of Willey, co. Bedford, 8 miles N.W. of Bedford, its post town, 4 N.E. of Harrold, and 10 from Wellingborough. It is a station on the Midland railway. The village, which is extensive, is situated on the river Ouse. The inhabitants are chiefly agricultural. Sharnbrook is a polling place for the county. The tithes were commuted for land and money payments under an Act of Enclosure. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £144. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, contains a brass to W. Cobbe, 1522. There is a National school for both sexes. The Baptists have two places of worship. Colworth House, Sharnbrook Hall, and Waterside House are the principal residences. Admiral C. Gambier is lord of the manor.

SHARNFORD, a par. in the hund. of Sparkenhoe, co. Leicester, 4½ miles S.E. of Hinckley, its post town, and 3 N.W. of Ullesford railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Soar, near the Fosse Way. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture, some in framework knitting. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1764, and the glebe comprises 234 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £405, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Helen, is an ancient structure, with a tower containing three bells. It was restored in 1846. The parochial charities produce about £11 per annum. There is a free school for both sexes. The Wesleyans have a place of worship.

SHAROW, a tnshp. and ecclesiastical district in the par. and lib. of Ripon, West Riding co. York, 1½ mile N.E. of Ripon, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on an eminence near the river Ure, and within easy access of the Ripon railway station. The tnshp. includes the hmlts. of Cowbush, Hungate, North Pastures, and Risplith. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The soil is of a sandy nature, upon a subsoil of red clay and rock. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £63, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, dedicated to St. John, has a square tower containing six bells. There is a Church of England school for both sexes, in which a Sunday-school is also held. The Archbishop of York is lord of the manor.

SHARPENHOE, a hmlt. in the par. of Streatley, hund. of Flitt, co. Bedford, 6 miles N.W. of Luton, near Sharpenhoe Knowl. It was the birth-place of Norton, the dramatic writer, who died in 1600.

SHARPERTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Alwinton, or Allenton, W. div. of Coquetdale ward, co. Northumberland, 7 miles N.W. of Rothbury, its post town. It is situated on the river Coquet, and is chiefly agricultural.

SHARPLES, a tnshp. in the par. of Bolton-le-Moors, hund. of Salford, co. Lancaster, 2 miles N. of Bolton. This populous tnshp. comprises the vils. of Astley Bridge, Bank Top, and several others. In the vicinity are the Birton waterworks for supplying the town of Bolton. Many of the inhabitants are employed in the cotton mills and bleaching establishments. The substratum abounds in coal.

SHARRINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Holt, co. Norfolk, 3 miles S.W. of Holt, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. The land is chiefly arable. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £299 16*s.*, and the glebe comprises about an acre. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Norwich, annexed to that of Saxlingham. The church, dedicated to All Saints, has a square tower. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum. Sir R. P. Jodrell is lord of the manor.

SHARROW HEAD, SHARROW MOOR, and SHARROW VALE, hmlts. in the tnshp. of Ecclesall Burlow, par. and borough of Sheffield, West Riding co. York, 3 miles S.W. of Sheffield.

SHASTON. See ALCESTER and SHAFTESBURY, co. Dorset.

SHASTON, EAST and WEST, divs. of the co. of Dorset. They contain the borough of Shaftesbury, and the hunds. of Badbury, Cogdean, Knowlton, Loosebarrow, Monckton-up-Wimborne, Wimborne St. Giles, Cranborne, and Sixpenny Handley, and the libs. of Alcester and Gillingham, comprising an area of 158,440 acres.

SHATTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Hope, hund. of High Peak, co. Derby, 3 miles E. of Castleton, and 6 N.E. of Tideswell. It is situated on the river Roe.

SHAUGH PRIOR, a par. in the hund. of Plympton, co. Devon, 6 miles N.E. of Earl's Plympton, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Plym. There are tin and iron mines, and granite is quarried. At Morley are earthenware works. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to that of Sampford Spiney, in the dioc. of Exeter. The parochial charities produce about £12 per annum. At Lee Moor are traces of an ancient British town.

SHAVINGTON-CUM-GRESTY, a tnshp. in the par. of Wybunbury, hund. of Nantwich, co. Chester, 4 miles E. of Nantwich. The village, which is of small extent, is situated near the line of the Grand Junction railway. The inhabitants are wholly agricultural. Shavington Hall, where John Woodenothe the antiquary was born, is now a farmhouse. Sir H. D. Broughton is lord of the manor.

SHAW, a vil. in the tnshp. of Crompton, and par. of Prestwich, co. Lancaster, 3 miles S.E. of Rochdale, near the river Irk. It is a station on the Oldham and Rochdale branch of the Lancashire and Yorkshire railway. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Chester, val. £220, in the patron. of the Rector of Prestwick.

SHAW, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of High Abbotside and par. of Aysgarth, North Riding co. York, 1 mile S. of Hawes, on the river Ure, near Hardrow Fall.

SHAW, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Heaton, and par. of Bradford, West Riding co. York, 2 miles N.W. of Bradford.

SHAWBURY, a par. in the hunds. of North Bradford and Pimkill, co. Salop, 7 miles N.E. of Shrewsbury, its post town, and 6 S.E. of Wem. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Roden, and is chiefly agricultural. The par. contains the tnshps. of Acton Reynold, Besford, Edgbolton, Muckleton, Preston, Brockhurst, and Wytheford. The freestone quarries in this and the neighbouring parishes have supplied the materials for most of the public buildings in the town of Shrewsbury. The great tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £436 8*s.*, and the vicarial for £394 12*s., the glebe comprises 37 acres. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £45[illegible] The church, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, is an ancient edifice, with a tower containing six bells. The parochial charities produce about £63 per annum, of which £5 goes to a school. There is a school for both sexes maintained by Mrs. Charlton, of Apley Castle.

SHAWCOTE, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Low Abbotside, par. of Aysgarth, North Riding co. York, 5 miles W. of Hawes, on the river Ure near Whitefield fall.

SHAWCROSS, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Soothill, par. of Soothill, West Riding co. York, 2 miles from Dewsbury.

SHAW-CUM-DONNINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Faircross, co. Berks, 1 mile N.E. of Newbury, its post town. The village, which is considerable, is situated on the northern bank of the Lambourn, a branch of the river Kennet, and is wholly agricultural. It was the headquarters of Charles I. when attacked by the Earl of Manchester in 1644. The surface is generally level and the land arable. The soil is clay alternated with gravel and sand. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £474. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, was rebuilt in 1840. The parochial charities produce about £445 per annum, of which £401 goes to Donnington Hospital, founded in 1618. A parochial school was erected in 1843. The manor-house, called Shaw Hall, was built in the reign of Elizabeth, by Doleman, a clothier, and was usually the resting-place of Charles I. when on his route to the W. of England. In the oak wainscot is a perforated place caused by a bullet fired at the king in 1644 while dressing at the window. Here are preserved Cromwell's cloak, and a bed on which Queen Anne is said to have slept. Donnington Castle was formerly the seat of the poet Chaucer. Richard Eyre, Esq., is lord of the manor.

SHAWDON, a tnshp. in the par. of Whittingham, N. div. of Coquetdale ward, co. Northumberland, 7½ miles N.W. of Alnwick. It is situated on the river Alne. Shawdon Hall was built by the Hargraves in 1788 on the site of a border tower, and is noted for its avenues of elms and hollies, 9 feet in girth and 50 in height, also for the hangman's oak, on which criminals were executed. In the vicinity are traces of two camps of Roman origin, where urns and coins have been dug up.

SHAWELL, a par. in the hund. of Guthlaxton, co. Leicester, 3 miles S. of Lutterworth, its post town, and 1¼ mile N. of Lilbourne railway station. It is a neatly-built village, situated in a valley near Watling Street, and is chiefly agricultural. The surface is level, and the soil fertile, being a mixture of clay and loam. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £345, and the glebe comprises 74 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £400, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient structure, with a low square tower containing five bells. The parochial charities produce about £83 per annum, of which £49 goes to Elkington's school and almshouses. The school is open to children of the parish of Newton, in Warwickshire. The Rev. J. P. Marriott, Rector of Cottesbach, is lord of the manor.

SHAWHEAD, a vil. in the par. of Kirkpatrick, Irongray, co. Kirkcudbright, Scotland, 6 miles W. of Dumfries.

SHAWHILL, a vil. in the par. of Melksham, co. Wilts, 1 mile N.W. of Melksham. It is situated in the vale of the Avon, near the borders of Chippenham Forest. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Salisbury, val. with Whitley, £100, in the patron. of the Vicar of Melksham.

SHAW HILL, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Skircoat, and par. of Halifax, West Riding co. York, 1 mile S. of Halifax, near the Leeds canal and the river Calder.

SHAW MERE, a quarter in the chplry. of Saddleworth, par. of Rochdale, West Riding co. York, 12 miles S.W. of Huddersfield and 7 N.W. of Ashton-under-Lyne, in the valley of the Tame near the Huddersfield canal.

SHAW MILL, a hmlt. in the chplry. of Bishop Thornton, par. and lib. of Ripon, West Riding co. York, 3 miles N.W. of Ripley.

SHAWS HILL, a mountain near Ettrick Water, co. Selkirk, Scotland. It rises 1,212 feet above sea-level.

SHAWS LOUGH, a sheet of water in the co. of Armagh, Ireland, 2 miles S.W. of Mountmorris. On its banks are several spinning mills.

SHEAF, a stream, co. of Derby, rises near the Yorkshire border, and joins the river Don at Sheffield.

SHEANNAMORE, a vil. in the par. of Rathdrum, bar. of Ballinacor, co. Wicklow, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles N.N.W. of Aughrim. It is situated on the road from Rathdrum to Tinahely, and contains a chartered school.

SHEARSBY, a chplry. in the par. of Knaptoft, hund. of Guthlaxton, co. Leicester, 6½ miles N.E. of Lutterworth, its post town. It is situated on a branch of the river Soar, and is chiefly agricultural. A portion of the inhabitants are employed in framework knitting. In the vicinity is a sulphur spring. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect. of Knaptoft, in the dioc. of Peterborough. The church, dedicated to St. Mary Magdalene, has a tower containing four bells. The Duke of Rutland is lord of the manor.

SHEARSTON, a hmlt. in the par. of North Petherton, co. Somerset, 2 miles S. of Bridgwater.

SHEBBEAR, a hund. in the co. of Devon, contains the pars. of Abbotsham, Alvington, Beaford, Bideford, Buckland, Brewer and Filleigh, Bulkworthy, Frithersstock, Huish, Iddesleigh, Landcross, Langtree, Littleham, Peters Marland, Meeth, Merton, Monkleigh, Newton St. Petrock, Northam, Parkham, Petrockstow, East Putford, Shebbear, Sheepwash, Little Torrington, and Wear Gifford; comprising an area of 79,200 acres.

SHEBBEAR, a par. in the above hund., co. Devon, 8 miles N.E. of Holdsworthy, its post town, and 7¼ W. of Hatherleigh. The village is situated near the river Torridge, which bounds the parish on the W. A portion of the female inhabitants are employed in glove making. The surface is hilly and enriched with woods. The living is a vic.* with the perpet. cur. of Sheepwash annexed, in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £243, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Lawrence, has a tower containing six bells. The parochial charities produce about £26 per annum, realised from parish lands. There is a National school for both sexes. The Wesleyans, Baptists, and Bible Christians have places of worship. P. A. Kingdon, Esq., is lord of the manor.

SHEBBERTSWOULD. See SIBBERTSWOLD, co. Kent.

SHEBDON, a hmlt. in the par. of High Offley, hund. of Pirehill, co. Stafford, 3 miles S.W. of Eccleshall, on the Liverpool canal.

SHEE, a stream, co. Perth, Scotland, rises near Spittal of Glenshee, and flows through Glen Shee to the river Ericht, 3 miles above its junction with the Airdle.

SHEE, a small lough near Ballinrobe, co. Mayo.

SHEEFRY, a hmlt. in the co. of Mayo, Ireland, 10 miles S.W. of Westport. There are extensive lead mines.

SHEELING, a lough in the cos. of Cavan and Meath, Ireland, at the source of the river Inny. It is about 4½ miles long by 2 broad.

SHEEN, a par. in the S. div. of the hund. of Totmonslow, co. Stafford, 4½ miles N. of Alstonfield, its post town, and 3½ S.E. of Longnor. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Dove. The inhabitants are chiefly agricultural. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £63. The church, dedicated to St. Luke, has a tower containing six bells, and several stained windows. It was nearly rebuilt in 1829, at a cost of £1,100. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum. There is a free school, with an endowment of £13 per annum.

SHEEN, EAST and UPPER, hmlts. in the par. of Mortlake, western div. of the hund. of Brixton, co. Surrey, 2 miles E. of Richmond, and 7 S.W. from London. It is situated near the banks of the Thames, and on the Richmond branch of the South-Western railway. In the early part of the 15th century a monastery of Carthusian friars was founded here, in which Perkin Warbeck endeavoured to obtain an asylum. James IV. of Scotland was buried here. Upper Sheen has recently been formed into a separate ecclesiastical district. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of London. The church, called Christ Church, is a modern structure. The Independents have a chapel in Sheen-lane.

SHEEN, WEST. See RICHMOND, co. Surrey.

SHEEPBRIDGE, a hmlt. in the lordship of Newry, co. Down, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles N.E. of Newry. It is situated on the Newry river, which is here crossed by a bridge. Sheepbridge House is the principal seat. Fairs are held on the first Friday in February, May, August, and November.

SHEEPHALL. See SHEPHALL, co. Herts.

SHEEPHAVEN, a bay on the N. coast of the co. of Donegal, Ireland, lying between Horn Head and Straughan Point.

SHEEP ISLAND, an islet opposite Ballingtoy, co. Antrim, Ireland, 4 miles N.W. of Ballycastle.

SHEEP ISLAND, an islet in Milford Haven, co. Pembroke, 5 miles S.W. of Milford.

SHEEPLAND, a small harbour on the coast of co. Down, Ireland, 2 miles N.E. of Ardglass.

SHEEPSCAR, an ecclesiastical district in the par. and borough of Leeds, West Riding co. York. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Ripon, and in the patron. of the Vicar of Leeds.

SHEEPSHED, or SHEPESHED, a par. in the hund. of West Goscote, co. Leicester, 4 miles W. of Loughborough, its post town, and 119 from London. The village, which is extensive, is situated near Charnwood Forest canal. It formerly belonged to the Gordons, and has an ancient cross. The manufacture of hosiery was introduced in the last century, and a large portion of the inhabitants are engaged in frame-work knitting, and in glove and needle making. The forest of Charnwood was about 10 miles in length, by about 6 in breadth, but a considerable portion has recently been enclosed. The surface is very hilly, including Beacon Hill, Bardon Hill, Ives Head, and Cliff Hill, which are among the principal summits. The substratum contains granite, which is quarried for building purposes. A chapel was erected in the forest in 1815. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £364. The church, dedicated to St. Botolph, is an ancient structure, with a square spired tower. The church has tombs of the family of Phillips, of Garendon Park. There is a National school for both sexes. The Particular Baptists, General Baptists, Wesleyans, and Roman Catholics have each a place of worship.

SHEEP'S ISLE, an islet adjoining Inish Capel, co. Argyle, Scotland, 1 mile W. of Seil Island.

SHEEPSTOR, a par. in the hund. of Roborough, co. Devon, 7 miles S.E. of Tavistock. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Mew, near Sheepstor rock, a granite heap upon Dartmoor. At Ailsborough heights, in this parish, are extensive tin mines. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic. of Bickleigh, in the dioc. of Exeter. (See BICKLEIGH.)

SHEEPWASH, a par. in the hund. of Shebbear, co. Devon, 5 miles N.W. of Hatherleigh. Exeter is its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the Torridge, which sometimes inundates the lower ground. It was formerly an extensive market town, but suffered great damage from a fire in 1743. Many of the female inhabitants are employed in glove-making. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £110, and the vicarial for £99. The living is a perpet cur. annexed to the vic. of Shebbear, in the dioc. of Exeter. The church, dedicated to St. Lawrence, is an ancient structure, with a tower containing a clock and one bell. The Baptist and Bible Christians have each a place of worship. Lord Clinton is lord of the manor and principal landowner. Annual fairs are held on the Thursday prior to the third Saturday in March, and on the Thursday prior to the 10th October.

SHEEPWASH, a tnshp. in the par. of Bothal, ward of Morpeth, co. Northumberland, 5 miles E. of Morpeth. It is situated near the bridge over the river Wansbeck. This place was formerly a separate parish, but was joined to Bothal by Act of Parliament in the 17th century. It now with Ashington forms a tnshp. The living is a rect. annexed to that of Bothal, in the dioc. of Durham. There is no church.

SHEEPWAY, or SHEPPY, a tythg. in the par. of Portbury, co Somerset, 5 miles N.W. of Bristol.

SHEEPY MAGNA, a par. in the hund. of Sparkenhoe, co. Leicester, 3 miles N.E. of Atherstone, its post town, and 5½ S.W. of Market Bosworth. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the Sence rivulet, a branch of the river Anker. The inhabitants are chiefly agricultural. The par. includes the hmlt. of Ratcliffe-Culey, and the ruins of an ancient chapel at Myth Lodge, which formerly belonged to the monks of Merevale. There is a mineral spring in the neighbourhood. The surface is undulating, and the soil a reddish marl alternated with light loam and gravel. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Enclosure Act in 1810, and the glebe comprises about 550 acres. The living is a rect. with that of Sheepy Parva, and the cur. of Ratcliffe-Culey annexed, in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £1,040. The church, dedicated to All Saints, has an ancient square tower, and five bells. The interior of the church contains monuments of the Fell family, and tombs of several Knights Templars, which were much mutilated during the rebuilding of the church at the end of the last century. There is a chapel-of-ease at Ratcliffe-Culey. The parochial charities produce about £25 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes. The Independents have a place of worship.

SHEEPY PARVA, a par. in the hund. of Sparkenhoe, co. Leicester, 3½ miles N.E. of Atherstone, its post town, and 5 S.W. of Market Bosworth. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the Bosworth-field brook, and is wholly agricultural. There is a large corn-mill in the parish. The living is a rect. annexed to that of Sheepy Magna. Sir T. W. Blomfield, Bart., is lord of the manor.

SHEERING, a par. in the hund. of Harlow, co. Essex, 3½ miles N.E. of Harlow, its post town, and 2 S.E. of Sawbridgeworth railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on an eminence near the Cambridge section of the Great Eastern railway, and is wholly agricultural. The parish is bounded on the W. by the river Stort. The land, which is chiefly arable, is under excellent cultivation. The soil is fertile. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £507, and the glebe comprises 18 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £433, in the patron. of Christ Church College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, is an ancient structure with a square tower containing four bells. The parochial charities produce about £4 per annum, which goes to the support of Tutte's school. At Chapel-Field are traces of an ancient chapel, formerly endowed by Christiana de Valoines. There is a National school.

SHEERNESS, a parochial chplry., market town, seaport, and naval arsenal of the second rank, having separate jurisdiction, but locally in the par. of Minster and lib. of the Isle of Sheppey, upper div. of the lathe of Scray, co. Kent, 17 miles N.E. of Maidstone, and 46 S.E. of London, or 51½ by the Sheerness branch of the London, Chatham, and Dover railway. It has also steamboat communication with London, Chatham, and other places, by means of the Medway Company's steamers. It is situated on the N.W. point of the Isle of Sheppey, at the conflux of the Medway, or West Swale, with the Thames, and nearly opposite the Nore light. It is a rapidly-rising town, comprising the four districts of Bluetown, Mile-town, Banks-town, and Marine-town, and of late years has been much enlarged. In 1797, the mutiny of the Nore broke out at this port. There are hot and cold baths on the beach, and adjoining is the Royal Hotel, situated in Bankstown, facing the sea. The town is a place of modern growth, having been a swamp prior to the reign of Charles II., who, in 1667, directed the construction of a strong fort, but before it was completed the Dutch Admiral De Ruyter entered the Thames, and made his attack on the shipping in the Medway, having in his passage destroyed that portion of the works which was then completed. In consequence of this attack, a regular fortification, with a line of heavy artillery and smaller forts, higher up on both sides of the Medway, was formed, to which other works have since been added, and which now extend for a mile and a half, and mount above 100 guns, many of which are of the largest calibre. A garrison is kept up, under the command of a governor, or port-admiral, captain superintendent, fort-major, and inferior officers, who have residences within the government lines, and adjoining the barracks, which, with new ones recently built, will accommodate 2,000 men. The dockyards alone, within the last quarter of a century, have cost, in their extension and improvement, upwards of £3,000,000, and give constant employment to about 3,000 artisans, mechanics, and shipwrights. The wharf fronts the Medway, and the harbour is now rendered safe and commodious. The dockyard, which covers an area of about 60 acres, is formed upon mud-land reclaimed from the sea with great labour and ingenuity. It is nearly triangular in form, and is surrounded by a massive wall which cost £40,000, and is 24 feet high, except at the side which abuts on the water. It contains three basins, one of which, the largest, has 26 feet depth of water. This basin is 520 feet long and 300 feet broad, with an entrance of 60 feet wide. The middle basin is 250 feet by 200, and the northern basin 282 feet by 200. There are also three dry docks and a frigate dock, or more correctly speaking, a fitting dock, near which is the storehouse, six stories high, and capable of holding 30,000 tons of naval stores. There are besides victualling storehouses, mast house, sail-loft, rigging-house, navy pay-office, military guard-house, police station, workshops, and numerous sheds. Much of the space now covered by the government works was occupied by houses previous to 1815, so that Blue-town was formerly much larger than it now is. Mile-town is the next most ancient portion of the town, and consists chiefly of one long, irregularly-built street. The other divisions, called Banks-town and Marine-town, are regularly built, and contain some of the best houses in Sheerness. The streets are paved and lighted with gas, and the drainage and water supply have recently been much improved under the supervision of the local board of health. The inhabitants suffered much from want of water in the last century, previously to the sinking of the wells, of which one is situated in Ordnance Marsh; another, 360 feet deep, in Blue-town; a third in the dockyard; and others in Mile-town. The principal public institutions unconnected with the government works are the new County Court house, at which sessions are held monthly, a mechanics' institute, with library and reading-rooms, where lectures are delivered during the winter months, a savings-bank, branch office of the London and County Bank, union poorhouse, railway terminus, police and coastguard stations, and a cemetery company. Besides the dockyard business, a considerable trade is done in corn and seeds, and in supplying shipping.—One weekly newspaper is published in the town. The population of the town in 1861 was 12,015, but of the ecclesiastical district 13,186. A pier and causeway extend from the town to low-water mark, a distance of about a quarter of a mile, and forms a promenade. The view from the cliffs leading to Minster, embracing the North Sea on the E.; the rivers Thames and Medway, bearing innumerable vessels of all sizes, on the W.; the Nore and the harbour of Sheerness on the N.; and the fertile valleys of Kent, with the Medway winding through them, on the S.—The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £200, in the patron. of the Incumbent of Minster. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, was erected in 1835, and situated between Banks-town and Mile-town. There is also a government chapel situated at the upper end of Blue-town, abutting on the north-eastern point of the dockyard, but without the walls. There are also places of worship belonging to the Roman Catholics, Wesleyans, Independents, Baptists, Primitive Methodists, Bible Christians, and a Jews' synagogue. The places of education include two National schools for boys and girls, a British and Foreign school, five Sunday-schools, one infant school, besides several private educational establishments. Market day is on Saturday, but there is no regular market place.

SHEET, a tythg. in the par. of Petersfield, lower half div. of Finch Dean hund., co. Hants, 1 mile N.E. of Petersfield.

SHEET, a tnshp. in the par. of Ludford, co. Salop, 1 mile E. of Ludlow.

SHEFFIELD, a par., market town, municipal and parliamentary borough, and chief seat of the hardware manufacture, in the upper div. of Strafforth wap., and the capital of the ancient lib. of Hallamshire, West Riding co. York, 50 miles S.S.W. of York, and 162 N.W. of London by road, or 162½ by the Great Northern, and 175½ by the North-Western and Midland railways. Although not situated on the direct route of the great N. and S. railway lines, Sheffield is a considerable railway centre, communicating by a chain of small railways with the whole railway system of the kingdom. The Victoria station, belonging to the Great Northern and Manchester, Sheffield and Lincolnshire railways, is built with massive stone arches and piers, and covered with a roof of iron and glass. There is another large station in the Wicker, belonging to the Midland and London and North-Western railways, which also serves for the South Yorkshire line opened in 1855. The Sheffield, Rotherham, and Barnsley railway, with branch lines to the Silkstone collieries and Dodworth, has a station in the town. A branch canal, 4 miles long, was cut in 1819, communicating with the Don, or Dun, at Tinsley, thus affording direct water communication with the river system of the Trent and Humber, and so with the seaports of Goole, Hull, and Great Grimsby. The prosperity of the town, which now ranks second for wealth and population in Yorkshire, is in a great measure dependent on its geographical position, being seated in the midst of a district abounding in iron-ore, stone, and coal, and supplied with water power by several mountain streams which here join the Don. On all sides, with the exception of towards Doncaster, Sheffield is encompassed by an amphitheatre of hills, forming part of that extensive range of summits which stretches across the centre of the island, from Staffordshire to Westmoreland. From the eastern foot of these hills to the borders of Derbyshire stretches the par. of Sheffield, including the six tnshps. of Nether Hallam, Upper Hallam, Ecclesall Bierlow, Sheffield, Brightside Bierlow, and Attercliffe-cum-Darnal, with the curs. of Dyer's Hill, Eldon, Fulwood, Heeley, Holliscroft, Moorfields, Pitsmoor, and Wicker, and about 50 other vils. and hmlts. The physical configuration of this district differs in various parts, but that portion on which the town of Sheffield stands is a sheltered valley overhung by the wooded heights of Wincobank, and watered by the streams of the Sheaf, from which the town takes its name, the Porter, and two other rivers, which all unite their waters at this point with the Don, on which much labour and expense has been bestowed to render it navigable. Although the present town is comparatively of recent growth, it probably originated from the Roman station at Templebro' about 3 miles distant on the bank of the Don, supposed to be the Ad Fines of the Iter of Richard of Cirencester, and traces of a Roman road, still called the Roman Rig, lead from the camp at Wincobank. Some antiquaries have suggested that the iron mines in this neighbourhood were worked by the Romans, and afterwards by the Saxons, but no such workings have as yet been identified, though many beds of ancient scoria are scattered over the surface. At the time of the Domesday Survey, the manor was held by Roger de Busli, under the Countess Judith, niece of William the Conqueror, and widow of Waltheof, Earl of Northumberland. It subsequently passed, through the marriage of the Countess Judith, to the family of St. Liz, Earls of Northampton, and afterwards to the Lovetots and Furnivals, who built the castle, and a bridge over the Don, and founded a hospital on the site still known as Spital Hill. In 1296 Edward I. granted to Thomas, Lord Furnival, a charter to hold a weekly market and an annual fair, and in the following year the town was made a free borough, with exemption from toll throughout Hallamshire. From the Furnivals, the castle and lordship passed by marriage to the Nevills, and from them to the Talbots, Earls of Shrewsbury, one of whom, George, the fourth earl, in the reign of Henry VIII., built the manor house in the park, where Cardinal Wolsey was imprisoned in 1530, before his death at Leicester. In 1554, Francis, fifth Earl of Shrewsbury, obtained from Queen Mary a charter creating the "church burgesses" a body corporate, with a common seal, and power to provide for the repair of the church and relief of the poor. In the reign of Elizabeth, Sheffield Castle was the place of imprisonment of Mary Queen of Scots from 1570 to 1584, and about the same period the town greatly increased in prosperity from the influx of skilled artisans from the Netherlands, who, having fled from the persecutions of the Duke of Alva, were settled by the Earl of Shrewsbury, then the queen's chamberlain, on his own estate of Sheffield, in order to develop the manufacture of cutlery, which had been introduced previous to the reign of Edward III., as we learn from Chaucer, who speaks of the "Sheffield whittles." In the reign of James I. the Sheffield estates passed by the marriage of the Lady Alethea Talbot, granddaughter of the abovementioned earl, to Thomas Howard, Earl of Arundel, whose descendants, the dukes of Norfolk, still retain possession of the lordship. In the same reign an Act of incorporation was obtained by the cutlers of Sheffield, entitled, "An Act for the good order and government of the makers of knives, sickles, shears, scissors, and other cutlery wares in Hallamshire and parts near adjoining." At the commencement of the Civil War the house of Howard garrisoned the castle for the king, but it was speedily obliged to surrender to Sir John Gell, who held it for the parliament till the advance of the Duke of Newcastle, at the head of the royal army, compelled the parliamentarians to retire to Derbyshire. The town and castle were then committed to the charge of Sir William Saville, who caused cannon to be cast in the neighbouring iron factories for the defence of his entrenchments; and the royalists continued to hold it till after the battle of Marston Moor on 2nd July, 1644, when Major-General Crawford forced it to capitulate on 10th August, 1644. In 1648 it was dismantled by order of parliament, and no vestiges of this once famous stronghold now exist, except in the names of Castle-hill, Castle-green, and Castle-fold. The manor house continued to be the occasional residence of its noble owner till 1706, when Thomas Duke of Norfolk ordered it to be dismantled, and the park broken up into farms. In the beginning of the 18th century the trade of the district had made so much progress that the number of persons engaged in it was estimated at 6,000, and the yearly value of the goods above £100,000. It was, however, about fifty years later, when Sheffield became the mart of Hancock's plated goods, that the great development of trade took place. At this period mail coaches were started for London, and merchants for the first time opened direct communication with the Continent. The refining of the precious metals and the manufacture of silver plate were next introduced, and an assay office opened in the town, at which as much as 6,000 lbs. weight of silver are said to have been hall-marked in one year. The greatest discovery of all was, however, the composition called "Britannia metal," which speedily superseded pewter, and gave to the town a new staple manufacture. The lead works on the Porter were likewise established, and silk and cotton mills set up, but these last did not flourish. During the present century the employment of steam in the grinding of cutlery, the invention of a new hard white metal, called "German silver," and the application of the process of electroplating, have raised Sheffield to the first rank amongst manufacturing towns. At the great international Exhibition of 1851, the manufacturers of this town carried off 60 council or prize medals, and in the subsequent Exhibitions of Paris, in 1856, and of London, in 1862, they fully maintained their pre-eminence. In addition to the staple trades before mentioned, various other branches of manufacture are successfully carried on, especially in iron and steel, as edge tools of every description, agricultural implements, files, hafts and scales, razors, saws, scissors, anvils, awl blades, chains, clasps, portable forges, stoves, grates, fenders, fire-irons, steam boilers, engines, railway carriage tires, axles, wheels, buffers, springs, powder flasks, saw handles, magnets, nails, needles, steel pens, rivets, articles in glass, brass, ivory, bone, horn, and pearl; Sheffield also contains numerous chasers, die sinkers, engravers, type founders, gold and silver smiths, jewellers, opticians, turners, moulders, and coal miners and quarries. Some of the longest-established and most eminent firms are the Atlas steel and ironworks, Saunderson's and Greaves's steel works, Rodgers's cutlery, Mariott's file factory, the River Don works, the Sheaf and Spring works, the Cyclops works, Park works, Regent works, Wilkinson's plate warehouses; besides a great variety of foundries, warehouses, mills, and other works. There are also many mercantile houses, some of which confine their commercial operations to the home markets, while others export largely to the United States, Australia, the Cape of Good Hope, Brazil, South America, and the several continental cities, in most of which the manufactures of Sheffield are to be found. The ordinary wages of the artisans in Sheffield are liberal, ranging from £1 to £2 a week, and in consequence their social condition is superior, most families living in separate tenements.—In March, 1864, a catastrophe occurred by the bursting of the Bradfield dam, or embankment, which pent up the waters between the hills of Stannington and Loxley, about 6 miles N.W. of Sheffield, thus forming a reservoir, or rather artificial lake, 1¼ mile in length, by a quarter of a mile broad, with a depth varying from 60 to 70 feet in its centre, and about 40 feet throughout. This mass of waters having thrown down the embankment, swept down the valley towards the lower part of Sheffield, carrying everything before it, mills, factories, trees, and entire streets of houses, and drowning between 200 and 300 people. The places which suffered most were Hillsborough, Malin-bridge, and along the Owlerton road.—Although a prosperous town, Sheffield does not present to the stranger an opulent appearance, from the absence of spacious squares and streets, most of the merchants and manufacturers having their private residences in the suburbs, which are extensive. The older part of the town is situated within the angle formed by the rivers Don and Sheaf, which are spanned by several bridges, and consists of numerous small streets, which, with the exception of one or two principal thoroughfares, are narrow and inconvenient. The houses are chiefly of brick. The streets are all well paved and lighted with gas. The public buildings are numerous; the townhall, in Castle-street, was built in 1808, and enlarged in 1833, at the expense of the town trust; the council hall, in Norfolk-street, where the corporation hold their meetings, is a modern structure; the cutlers' hall, in Church-street, is a Grecian structure, with massive Corinthian columns, erected in 1833 for the accommodation, and at the expense, of the Cutlers' Company, originally established by Act of Parliament in 1624, and exercising the exclusive right of granting trade marks; the county-court hall, in Bank-street, built in 1855; the corn exchange, erected in 1830 at the cost of the Duke of Norfolk; the new market hall, or Norfolk market, built on the site of the Tontine Inn, is a commodious pile of buildings in the Tuscan style, also erected by the Duke of Norfolk in 1851, at a cost of near £40,000. It is of brick, with stone basement, and measures 296 feet by 115, with a roof of iron and glass, and a fountain in the centre. The exchange and newsrooms occupy a building facing the old market. The façade consists of a centre and two receding wings; the former with Doric pilasters and entablature proper. The lower part is occupied by the fish and fruit markets and the old-established wine-vaults of Young and Co., and the first floor by the exchange and newsrooms, established in 1856. Over the market entrances are two niches with carved figures, of Mercury and Vulcan, the former typical of the Telegraph Company's offices, which occupy the King-street end of the building, and the latter of the staple trade of Sheffield. The savings-bank in Norfolk-street is in the Italian style, erected in 1860; the Temperance Company's Hall, in Townhead-street. The barracks, completed in 1854, for cavalry and infantry, are in the Tudor style, and occupy a site of 25 acres, with entrances from the Langsett and Peniston roads. The assay office, the vestry hall, built in 1857, and situated in the cemetery road, the music-hall, in Surrey-street, erected in 1823; the fire office in George-street, erected in 1810. There are besides the mechanics' institute, the Athenæum, in George-street, the law library, the Sheffield club, the inland revenue and tax office, the public baths in the Glossop-road, with two large swimming baths, two tepid plunge baths, and a concert-room, the royal theatre, built in 1773 and enlarged and redecorated in 1855; the Adelphi theatre, built in 1837; the free public library, in Surrey-street, established by the town council in 1855, and supported by a rate of a halfpenny in the pound; the Sheffield library, with 30,000 volumes; the literary and philosophical society, with a valuable museum, also at the music-hall; the gasworks, which were originally constructed by three several companies, amalgamated by Act of Parliament are situate at Sheaf Bridge, Shude Hill, Effingham-street, and Neepsend. The water works are situated on Crookesmoor, and the reservoirs at Redmires, 6 miles W. of the town. There are three extramural cemeteries, the general cemetery, comprising about 14 acres, situated in the vale of the Porter, was formed in 1836, and is approached by the Ecclesall and cemetery roads; the Brightside Bierlow cemetery, situated on the N. side of the town, comprises about 26 acres, and was opened in 1860; and St. Philips' cemetery, comprising about 6 acres on a sloping bank near the base of Old Park Wood. The botanical gardens, comprising about 18 acres, were laid out in 1836 by Robert Marnock, the landscape gardener, who afterwards designed the Royal botanical gardens in Regent's Park. There are three newspapers published in the town, viz. the Daily Telegraph, the Sheffield and Rotherham Independent, and the Sheffield Times—the two first are daily papers, and the last is published weekly on Saturday.—There is a statue to Ebenezer Elliott, who long resided in the town. James Montgomery died here in 1854. Chantrey, the sculptor, was born in the neighbouring village of Norton, and in the parish of Sheffield is the first bust executed by him. At Loxley Wood, in the vicinity, Robin Hood is said to have been born. From this point a view of the town is obtained, as also from Sky Edge, the Crookes, Derbyshire Lane, Wharncliffe Crags, and Cholera Mount, which last place took its name from having been the burial place of 339 persons who died from cholera in 1832. The cutlers keep two or three subscription packs of harriers.—The limits of the municipal and parliamentary boroughs, comprise the town, with the whole parish of Sheffield, and in 1851 contained 27,099 houses, inhabited by a population of 135,310, which in 1861 had increased to 38,052 houses, with a population of 185,172. It has returned two members to parliament since the passing of the Reform Act, by which it was enfranchised, and is a polling-place for the county elections of the West Riding. Its first charter of incorporation as a municipal borough was granted in August, 1843, under which it is divided into nine wards or districts, and is governed by a mayor, 13 aldermen, and 42 town councillors, with the style of "mayor, aldermen, and burgesses of the borough of Sheffield." The corporation revenue is about £7,000. The corporation hold their meeting at the Council-hall in Norfolk-street. The October quarter sessions are held at the townhall; and petty sessions for the borough, before the mayor and bench of magistrates, daily at twelve o'clock, also petty sessions for the West Riding district, beyond the boundaries of the borough, twice a week. It is the seat of a new County Court, insolvent debtors' court, court of bankruptcy in the northern circuit, also of an excise district, and of a superintendent registry district. It is divided into two Poor-law Unions, the Sheffield union comprising the four townships of Attercliffe-cum-Darnall, Brightside, Bierlow, Handsworth and Sheffield; and that of Ecclesall Bierlow comprising the remaining townships of Ecclesall, Nether Hallam, and Upper Hallam, besides four others situated in Derbyshire. The parish is divided into 25 ecclesiastical districts, some of which are new parishes under a late Act of Parliament. Nearly the whole of the land on which the town is built was the property of the Dukes of Norfolk, till 1802, when an Act of Parliament was passed enabling them to alienate certain portions of their Sheffield estates. Under this Act considerable portions of the town have subsequently passed into the hands of freeholders. Most of the cutlers are men of small capital, and many building societies have been formed to enable the more provident artizans to become possessors of their own tenements.—The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of York, val. £500, besides an endowment for three assistant ministers. The parish church, situated near the centre of the town, is a cruciform structure, with Norman traces, founded in the reign of Henry I., but nearly rebuilt in the reign of Henry VIII. It is 240 feet long by 130 feet broad, and has a lofty spired tower arising from the centre and containing a peal of ten bells, a set of chimes, and an illuminated clock. In the interior are several monuments of the Talbots, Earls of Shrewsbury, of Elizabeth, Countess of Lennox, sister-in-law to Mary Queen of Scots, and of Walker, the supposed executioner of Charles I.; also several pieces of sculpture by Chantrey and others. The parochial register dates from 1560. In addition to the parish church are the following district churches, viz. St. Paul, St. James, St. George, St. Philip, St. Mary, St. John the Evangelist, St. Thomas Crookes, Holy Trinity Wicker, St. Stephen's, Attercliffe, Brightside, St. Matthew's, Darnall, Dyer's Hill, Ecclesall Bierlow, St. Jude, Eldon-street, Fulwood Heely, Hollis Croft, St. Jude's, Moorfields, and Pitsmoor; the livings of which are all perpet. curs., varying in val. from £400 to £100. Of these twelve are situated within the town, and the others in the rural districts. St. George's, built by the Parliamentary Commissioners in 1825, at a cost of above £14,800, has a western tower 139 feet high, and is situated in St. George's-square. It has an altar-piece by Paris, representing Christ blessing little children. St. Philip's (in the Peniston-road) was erected in 1833 at a cost of £11,874. St. Stephen's, in Bramall-lane, was built and endowed at the sole expense of a munificent townsman, Henry Wilson, Esq., of Westbrook. This church, situated at the junction of Belfield and Fawcett streets, was erected in 1857 at a cost of about £4,500. The district church at the village of Attercliffe, called Christ Church, was erected in 1822, at a cost of over £14,000. The Roman Catholics have two churches: St. Mary's, in Norfolk-row, was completed in 1850 at a cost of £8,000, and has a tower surmounted by a spire, and containing a peal of eight cast-steel bells; and St. Vincent's, at White Croft, was erected in 1856, at a cost of £3,800. The Catholic Apostolic church in Victoria-street was finished in 1851. The Presbyterian church is in Hanover-street. The other places of worship belonging to the various Dissenting communions are more than 30 in number, comprising many spacious structures; the Independents and Wesleyans have each six chapels, the Baptists and New Connexion Methodists three each, the Association Methodists two, the Primitive Methodists and Wesleyan Reformers several, and the Unitarians, Society of Friends, and Plymouth Brethren, each one; the Jews also have two synagogues, and the Mormonites several meeting-rooms. There are two public bodies intrusted with endowments applicable to the benefit and general improvement of the town, viz. the Town Trustees and the Church-Burgesses; the former hold their property under a charter granted in 1297 by Thomas, third Lord Furnival, and the latter by a charter of Queen Mary in 1554, by which their body was incorporated. The funds of the latter body having greatly augmented, their application was regulated by an order in Chancery obtained in 1854. The local charities besides are numerous, including the general infirmary, on 31 acres, erected in 1794, at a cost of £20,000, and enlarged in 1841, mainly supported by public subscription; the public hospital and dispensary in West-street, erected in 1835, and enlarged in 1858, containing 51 beds; the Deakin institution, for the advancement of single women of good character, originated in 1849; the Hanbey and Hadfield charities; the blind-school in West-street, founded in 1860 for the instruction of the blind in mat and basket making and other useful occupations; the Shrewsbury or Norfolk hospital founded in 1616 with an income from endowment of £2,000; Hollis's hospital for cutlers' widows, with an income of £680; the licensed victuallers' asylum, erected in 1848, at Grimesthorpe, the union poorhouse, a large stone structure in the Elizabethan style situate at Cherrytree Hill, and workhouses at Brightside, Ecclesall, and Nether Hallam, besides various provident and benevolent institutions. In Surrey-street is a medical school in connection with the University of London, the students studying at the hospital and infirmary. The free grammar-school, founded by Thomas Smith in 1603, has an income from endowment of £200, and now occupies a building in Charlotte-street, erected in 1842 by subscription. It is under the care of a head and three other masters, and has about 80 scholars, of whom half are on the foundation. Wesley College is a proprietary grammar-school now affiliated to the London University, and empowered to issue certificates to candidates for degrees. It occupies a site of six acres in the Glossop-road, and was built by subscription in 1839 at a cost of £15,000. It is under the direction of a governor, who is also chaplain, a head and second master, and thirteen other teachers, and has accommodation for 250 boarders. The Collegiate Proprietary school was founded in 1835 by a body of proprietors, and is under the direction of a principal and eight other masters. It has an annual scholarship of £25 per annum, tenable for three years at Oxford or Cambridge, and is attended by 100 scholars. The school of design, founded in 1841, now occupies a building erected in 1857 at a cost of above £7,000. It is partly supported by a government grant, and has been found beneficial in the development of art-manufactures, being attended by above 200 pupils. The people's college in Orchard-street is an educational institution chiefly for the working classes. There are besides several National, British and Foreign, Infant, Industrial, Denominational, Lancastrian, Ragged, and Sunday schools in connection with the several district churches and other places of worship.—Sheffield gives title of earl and baron to the Holroyds of Sheffield park, near Lewes, in Sussex, but who take their title from this place. Market days are Tuesday and Saturday. Fairs are held on the Tuesday and Wednesday in Whitsun week, and on the 28th of November for the sale of cattle, horses, cheese, &c.

SHEFFIELD, a division of the par. of Aston Cantlow, co. Warwick, 2 miles S.W. of Henley-in-Arden.

SHEFFIELD, LITTLE, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Ecclesall Bierlow, West Riding co. York, 4 miles S.W. of Sheffield.

SHEFFIELD PARK, a seat of the Earl of Sheffield, co. Sussex, 5 miles N. of Lewes. It is situated on the river Ouse, and was rebuilt by the Holroyds on the site of the castle of Earl Godwin. It contains a collection of portraits.

SHEFFIN, a par. in the bars. of Galmoy and Crannagh, co. Kilkenny, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles N.N.W. of Freshford. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ossory, val. with Aghouse, £704, in the patron. of the bishop. Lodgepark is the principal seat in the vicinity.

SHEFFORD, a chplry. and market town in the par. of Campton, hund. of Clifton, co. Bedford, 9 miles S.E. of Bedford, and 7 N.W. of Hitchin. Biggleswade is its post town. It is a station on the Midland railway. The town is situated on the river Ivel, which has been rendered navigable to Biggleswade. It consists of several clean and wide streets, which are well paved and lighted with gas. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the straw plait manufacture. Some specimens of Roman glass have been discovered at Stanford Bury, and other antiquities in this parish, which are preserved in the Fitzwilliam museum at Cambridge. The tithes were commuted in 1797 for land and corn rents under an Enclosure Act. The living is a cur.* annexed to the rect. of Campton, in the dioc. of Ely. The church is dedicated to St. Michael. There is a parochial school for both sexes, also an infant school. The Wesleyans, Baptists, and Roman Catholics have each a place of worship. Robert Blomfield, the poet, resided here, and was buried at Campton in 1823. The Queen is lady of the manor. Market day is on Fridays. Fairs are held on 23rd January, 6th April, 10th May, and 11th October.

SHEFFORD, EAST, or LITTLE, a par. in the hund. of Kintbury-Eagle, co. Berks, 5 miles N.E. of Hungerford, its post town. There is no village, only a few farmhouses. A curious hall, built in the reign of Henry VIII., is now used as a barn. The river Lambourne flows through the parish, the soil is fertile, and the land is almost wholly arable. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £400. The church contains some monuments. This place is a meet for the Craven hounds.

SHEFFORD-HARDWICKS, an ext. par. place in the hund. of Clifton, co. Bedford, joined to Shefford.

SHEFFORD, WEST, or GREAT, a par. in the hund. of Kintbury-Eagle, co. Berks, 5½ miles N.E. of Hungerford, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the south-western bank of the river Lambourne, and is wholly agricultural. Charles I. took up his quarters here on the 19th November, 1644. The land is chiefly arable, with a small proportion of woodland and pasture. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £333 18s., and the glebe comprises 110 acres. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £856, in the patron. of Brasenose College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient Norman edifice, with a circular tower at the W. end, and near the N. doorway is a niche for the Virgin. The interior of the church contains an ancient font, also some stained windows. The Primitive Methodists have a place of worship. The Marquis of Downshire is lord of the manor and chief landowner. In the churchyard is the shaft of an ancient cross.

SHEHY, a ridge of mountains in the western div. of co. Cork, Ireland. They are situated near the river Lee, and attain an elevation of near 1,800 feet above sea-level.

SHEINTON, a par. in the Chelmarsh div. of the hund. of Stottesden, co. Salop, 3 miles N.W. of Much Wenlock, its post town, and 10 from Shrewsbury. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Severn, and is wholly agricultural. The soil is chiefly sandy and loamy, but in the more elevated parts it is a strong clay. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £296. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, has a wooden tower containing three bells. A stone effigy, supposed to be that of the foundress of the church, was discovered during the restoration of the building. The parochial charities produce about £5 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes. William L. Childe, Esq., is lord of the manor.

SHELBRED, an ext. par. place in the hund. of Easebourne, rape of Chichester, co. Sussex, 5 miles N. of Midhurst. It is now joined to the parish of Linchmere, and has remains of a priory founded in 1240 by Sir R. D. Ardern for Black Canons. Its revenue at the Dissolution was valued at £73.

SHELBURNE, a bar. in the co. of Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. It gives title of earl to the Marquis of Lansdowne, and contains the following pars., Ballybrazill, Clonmines, Fethard, Hook, Killesk, Kilmokea, Owenduff, Rathroe, St. James and Dunbrody, Tellarought, Templetown, Tintern, and part of Whitechurch.

SHELDERTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Clungerford, co. Salop, 7 miles N.W. of Ludlow.

SHELDON, a chplry. in the par. of Bakewell, hund. of High Peak, co. Derby, 3 miles W. of Bakewell, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated near the river Wye, and is chiefly agricultural. A portion of the inhabitants are engaged in the lead mines. The impropriate tithes belong to the Dean and Chapter of Lichfield, and to the Duke of Devonshire. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £90, in the patron. of the Vicar of Bakewell. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, or to All Saints, is an ancient structure standing in the centre of the village. The parochial charities produce about £13 per annum. The Primitive Methodists have a place of worship. The Duke of Devonshire is lord of the manor and chief landowner.

SHELDON, a par. in the hund. of Hayridge, co. Devon, 6 miles N.E. of Collumpton, its post town, and the same distance N.E. of Honiton. The village, which is of small extent and wholly agricultural, is situated on Black Down Hill. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £250. The church, dedicated to St. James, is an ancient edifice, with a tower containing three bells.

SHELDON, a par. in the Birmingham div. of the hund. of Hemlingford, co. Warwick, 6 miles from Birmingham, its post town, and 1 mile from Marston Green railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on a branch of the river Sow. The North-Western railway and the Birmingham and Warwick canal pass in the vicinity. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £450, and the glebe comprises 38 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £389. The church, dedicated to St. Giles, has a tower containing four bells. The parochial charities produce about £72 per annum, of which £36 goes to the school. There is a good library free to the parishioners. To the N. of the village is a small spring called Bennett's Well. Sheldon Hall is now a farmhouse. The Rev. J. W. Digby, Vicar of Coleshill, is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

SHELDWICK, a par. in the hund. of Faversham, lathe of Scray, co. Kent, 3 miles S.W. of Faversham, its post town and nearest railway station, and 50 from London. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the road from Ashford and Charing to Faversham. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The great tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £530, with 2 acres of glebe, and the vicarial for one of £209, with 1 acre of land. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £109, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, dedicated to St. James, is an ancient structure with a private chapel, and a tower containing six bells. The interior of the church contains a brass of Joan Mareys in a shroud, bearing date 1431, also several monuments. The parochial charities produce £5 per annum. There are National schools. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. Lees Court is the principal residence.

SHELF, a tnshp. in the par. of Halifax, wap. of Morley, West Riding co. York, 3½ miles N.E. of Halifax, its post town, and 4 from Bradford. The village, which is large, is situated on the New Bradford road. A large portion of the inhabitants are employed in the manufacture of worsted and damask, and others in agriculture. The district is productive of good coal, ironstone, and freestone, all of which are extensively worked. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £200, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Michael. There are places of worship for Independents, Wesleyans, and Primitive Methodists, also National and Lancastrian schools.

SHELFANGER, a par. in the hund. of Diss, co. Norfolk, 3 miles N.W. of Diss, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on an eminence near the Great Eastern railway. The inhabitants are wholly agricultural. About two-thirds of the land are arable, and the remainder meadow and pasture. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £543. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient structure with a square embattled tower. The parochial charities produce about £32 per annum. The Baptists and Wesleyans have each a place of worship. The Duke of Norfolk is lord of the manor.

SHELFIELD, a hmlt. in the par. of Walsall, S. div. of Offlow hund. co. Stafford, 2 miles from Walsall, and 19 S.E. of Stafford.

SHELFORD, a par. in the S. div. of Bingham wap., co. Notts, 4 miles N.W. of Bingham, its post town, 8 N.E. of Nottingham, and 2 N.E. of Radcliff railway station. The village, which is considerable, but chiefly agricultural, is situated on the Fosse Way, and near the river Trent, which bounds the parish on the W. and N. The par. comprises the tnshp. of Saxondale and the hmlt. of Newton. A portion of the inhabitants are engaged in frame-work knitting. An Austin priory was founded here by Ralph de Hanselyn in Henry II.'s reign, which at the Dissolution had a revenue valued at £151 14*s.* 1*d.* The site was given to the Stanhope family, ancestors of the Earl of Chesterfield, whose ancient seat was burnt in 1648 by Colonel Hutchinson, after a gallant resistance by Colonel Stanhope, who was killed with most of his men; it is now a farmhouse. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £60. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, has a square tower containing five bells. The interior of the church contains monuments of the Stanhope family. The charities consist of almshouses for six male inhabitants, founded by Sir William Stanhope, Bart., in 1694. There is also a free school, chiefly supported by the Earl of Chesterfield. The Primitive Methodists have a place of worship. The Earl of Chesterfield is lord of the manor, and takes from this place the title of baron.

SHELFORD, GREAT, a par. in the hund. of Triplow, co. Cambridge, 4 miles S.E. of Cambridge, its post town. It is a station on the Cambridge section of the Great Eastern line of railway. The village, which is considerable, is situated on the Granta, a branch of the river Cam, near Gogmagog Hill, and is chiefly agricultural. In the vicinity are extensive flour and oil-cake mills, also a brewery. There are nine wells in this parish, from which the town of Cambridge is chiefly supplied with water. The impropriate tithes belong to the Master and Fellows of Jesus College, Cambridge. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £112, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient stone structure with a tower and steeple, which last has been twice rebuilt, having been blown down in 1703, and again in 1798. The interior of the church contains a canopied brass, bearing date 1411. The parochial charities produce about £47 per annum. There are a National and a British school for both sexes. The Baptists have a place of worship. The Master and Fellows of Gonville and Caius College are lords of the manor. On a farm called Grannams, the property of St. John's College, are remains of a Roman intrenchment.

SHELFORD, LITTLE, a par. in the hund. of Triplow, co. Cambridge, 5 miles S.E. of Cambridge, its post town, and half a mile from the Shelford railway station. The village, which is small and wholly agricultural, is situated on the road from London to Cambridge. The parish is separated from Great Shelford by the river Granta. The soil is light, being gravel upon a substratum of chalk. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under Enclosure Acts in 1798 and 1813. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ely, val. £370. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient stone structure with a tower containing five bells. The interior of the church contains effigies of Sir John de Freville, a Knight Templar of Edward II.'s time, also a brass of a priest bearing date 1470. The register dates from 1670. The parochial charities produce about £3 per annum. The Independents have a place of worship. J. E. Law, Esq., is lord of the manor.

SHELL, an ext. par. place in the middle div. of Oswaldslow hund., co. Worcester, 3 miles S.E. of Droitwich.

SHELLAND, a par. in the hund. of Stow, co. Suffolk, 3½ miles N.W. of Stowmarket, its post town and railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated near the river Gipping, and is wholly agricultural. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £125. The living is a don. cur. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £40. The church was rebuilt in 1767. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum.

SHELLEE, a vil. in the bars. of Owney and Arra, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 7 miles S.W. of Nenagh. Shellee House is the principal residence.

SHELLEY, a par. in the hund. of Sampford, co. Suffolk, 3 miles S.E. of Hadleigh, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Bret, and is wholly agricultural. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £62. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £72. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient edifice with a tower containing five bells. Mrs. Cripps is lady of the manor.

SHELLEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Kirk-Burton, upper div. of Agbrigg wap., West Riding co. York, 6 miles S.E. of Huddersfield, and 6 N.W. of Penistone. The village, which is large, is situated on an eminence near the source of the river Dearne, and is within easy access of the Shepley station on the Sheffield and Huddersfield railway. A portion of the inhabitants are engaged in the woollen mills. There is an endowed National school. The Independents, Baptists, and New Connexion Methodists have each a place of worship. The tnshp. includes the hmlts. of Roydhouse, Thunderbridge, and Woodhouse.

SHELLEY, or SHELLY, a par. in the hund. of Ongar, co. Essex, 1½ mile N. of Chipping Ongar, its post town, and 6 miles N.E. of Epping. The village, which is small and of ancient date, is situated at the bridge over the river Roding, and on the road to Fyfield. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The meadows on the banks of the Roding are luxuriant. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £180, and the glebe comprises 35 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £241. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, has a wooden turret, rebuilt in 1811, containing one bell. There is a monument to John Green, 1626. The parochial charities produce about £13 per annum. Shelly Hall, the principal residence, is an ancient building of timber and plaster in excellent preservation, and inscribed with the date 1587 over the doorway. It was for some time the retreat of Bishop Newton, author of "A Dissertation on the Prophecies," and latterly of H. Soames, historian of the Reformation.

SHELLINGFORD, or SHILLINGFORD, a par. in the hund. of Ganfield, co. Berks, 3 miles S.E. of Great Faringdon, its post town, and 7 from Highworth. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on a branch of the river Ock, and is wholly agricultural. About two-thirds of the land are in pasture, and the remainder arable and woodland. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £497. The church, dedicated to St. Luke, is an ancient structure containing several ancient tombs, among which is one to John de Blewberry, a former rector, bearing date 1372, and one to the late Lord Ashbrook. There are day and Sunday schools. T. M. Goodlake, Esq., is lord of the manor.

SHELLNESS, a promontory at the E. end of the Isle of Sheppey, co. Kent. It lies opposite Whitstable Harbour, and takes its name from the Shelly beach.

SHELLOW-BOWELLS, a par. in the hund. of Dunmow, co. Essex, 6 miles W. of Chelmsford, and 6 N.E. of Ongar, its post town. The parish, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. The land is principally arable, with some pasture and woodland. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £120, and the glebe comprises 13 acres. The living is a rect. annexed to that of Willingale-Doe, in the dioc. of Rochester. The church is dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul. The register dates from 1555. The Hall is the principal residence. W. T. Bramston, Esq., is lord of the manor.

SHELMALIERE, EAST, a bar., co. Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. It contains the pars. of Ardcavan, Ardcolm, Artramon, Kilpatrick, Tikillin, and parts of Ballynaslaney, St. Margaret's, and Skreen.

SHELMALIERE, WEST, a bar., co. Wexford, contains the pars. of Ardcandrisk, Ballingly, Balleylannan, Ballymithy, Carrick, Clongeen, Coolstuff, Horetown, Inch, Kilbredeglynn, Kilgarvan, Killurin, and parts of Ballyhoge, Clonmore, Newbawn, Taghmon, and Whitechurchglynn.

SHELSLEY-BEAUCHAMP, or GREAT SHELSLEY, a par. in the upper and lower divs. of the hund. of Doddingtree, co. Worcester, 10 miles N.W. of Worcester, its post town, 8 S.W. of Stourport, and 3 N.W. of Martley. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Teme, and is chiefly agricultural. The land is partly in hop grounds. The par. contains the hmlt. of King's Shelsley. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £376. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is a modern structure, with an old tower containing six bells. The parochial charities produce about £127 per annum, of which £61 goes to the free school, founded and endowed by the Rev. Owen Plwys in 1681.

SHELSLEY, KING'S, a hmlt. in the par. of Shelsley-Beauchamp, upper div. of Doddington hund., co. Worcester, 4 miles N.W. of Martley.

SHELSLEY WALSH, or LITTLE SHELSLEY, a par. in the upper div. of Doddingtree hund., co. Worcester, half a mile W. of Shelsley-Beauchamp, and 9 miles S.W. of Stourport. It was formerly a seat of the Walshes of Abberley. The land is partly in hop grounds. There is no village, only two or three farmhouses. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £90. The church is dedicated to St. Andrew.

SHELSWELL, a par. in the hund. of Ploughley, co. Oxford, 6 miles N.E. of Bicester, its post town. The parish, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. Mr. Drake's hounds meet in this parish. There is no village, only a few farmhouses. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect. of Newton-Purcell, in the dioc. of Oxford. The church is in ruins.

SHELTON, a par. in the hund. of Stodden. co. Bedford, 5 miles W. of Kimbolton, its post town, and 13 N. of Bedford. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. The Oakley hounds meet in this parish. The surface is level, and the soil clayey. The tithes were commuted for corn-rents under an Enclosure Act, in 1794. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £190. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient edifice with a square tower. The chancel contains a tablet to Mrs. Crofts. T. Harris, Esq., is lord of the manor.

SHELTON, a par. in the hund. of Depwade, co. Norfolk, 13 miles S. of Norwich, 5 S.E. of Forncett, and 2½ S.E. of Long Stratton, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. The land is chiefly arable, with some pasture and common. The ancient moated hall, built by Sir Ralph Shelton, is now a farmhouse. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £640, and the glebe comprises 42 acres. The living is a rect. annexed to that of Hardwick, in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £512. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has a square tower. It has some stained windows, also several monuments. The register dates from 1560. The roof has been swarmed with bees for many years. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum. There is a National school. E. Howes, Esq., is lord of the manor.

SHELTON, a tnshp. in the parliamentary borough of Stoke-upon-Trent, N. div. of Pirehill hund., co. Stafford, half a mile N. of Stoke-upon-Trent, and 2 miles N.E. of Newcastle-under-Lyme. This place, which includes the hmlt. of Etruria and part of Corbridge, has arisen from the potteries carried on in the vicinity. Its population in 1861 amounted to 18,331. Several manufactories for porcelain and earthenware are situated on the banks of the Trent and Mersey and Caldon canals, which pass through the township, and near which are extensive gas-works. The coal and ironstone mines in this and part of the adjoining township of Hanley, belong to the crown, and are worked by Earl Granville, the lessee. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £620, in private patronage. The church, dedicated to St. Mark, is a modern structure with a square embattled tower, crowned with pinnacles. It was erected by the Parliamentary Commissioners in 1834, at a cost of £9,311, towards which George IV. gave £250. It was repaired and a chancel added by the rector in 1866, at a cost of £2,000. It is supposed to be the largest church in North Staffordshire. There are also district churches at Etruria and at Hope, the livings of which are perpet. curs., val. £200 and £150 respectively. There are places of worship for Baptists, Independents, Wesleyans, New Connexion Methodists, Unitarians, and Roman Catholics. In this township is the North Staffordshire Infirmary, capable of accommodating above 120 in-patients, a savings-bank, market-place, public library, gas-works, also a mechanics' institute for the potteries at large, founded in 1826, under the patronage of the Marquis of Stafford. There are National, British, and Foreign, Sunday, and denominational schools. There is a race-course. The chief seats are Stone Park, (Earl Granville), Cliff Ville, and Wedgwood's mansion, in the hamlet of Etruria, the last remarkable for its situation and for the many Etruscan vases with which it is ornamented. (See ETRURIA, HANLEY, and STOKE-UPON-TRENT.)

SHELTON, a par. in the S. div. of the wap. of Newark, co. Nottingham, 7 miles S.W. of Newark, its post town, and 5 N. of Elton railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated at the confluence of the rivers Smite and Devon, and is wholly agricultural. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £322. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has a turret containing two bells. The parochial charities produce about £9 per annum. R. Hall, Esq., is lord of the manor.

SHELTON, a tnshp. in the par. of St. Chad, co. Salop, 2 miles W. of Shrewsbury. It is joined with Oxon to form a township. Near the village is an oak, said to have been ascended by Owain Glyndwr before the battle fought here in 1403.

SHELTON, a tnshp. in the par. of St. Julian, co. Salop, 1½ mile N.W. of Shrewsbury, within which borough it is situated.

SHELTON ABBEY, a seat of the Earl of Wicklow, co. Wicklow, Ireland, 2 miles N.W. of Arklow, in the vale of Avoca.

SHELVE, a par. in the lower div. of Chirbury hund., co. Salop, 16 miles from Shrewsbury, and 7 N.E. of Bishop's Castle. The village, which is of small extent, is situated near Stiper Stones, on a site nearly 500 feet above the level of the sea. The inhabitants are chiefly agricultural. Here are situated the White grit and Bog lead mines, which are said to have been worked by the Romans in the time of Hadrian, but the latter are not now used. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £42, and the glebe comprises 18 acres. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £80. The church, dedicated to All Saints, was rebuilt in 1839. There is a National school for both sexes. The Rev. T. F. More is lord of the manor and principal landowner. A pig of lead, bearing a Roman inscription, was discovered here some years ago.

SHELVES, a hmlt. in the par. of St. Decuman, co. Somerset, near Watchett.

SHELVOCK, a tnshp. in the par. of Ruyton-of-the-Eleven-Towns, co. Salop, 9 miles N.W. of Shrewsbury.

SHELWICK, a tnshp. in the par. of Holmer, co. Hereford, 2 miles N.E. of Hereford.

SHENDLEY, a district in the par. of Northfield, co. Worcester, 5 miles S.W. of Birmingham.

SHENFIELD, a par. in the hund. of Barstaple, co. Essex, 1 mile N.E. of Brentwood. The village, which is considerable and of great antiquity, is situated on the road to Colchester, and near the line of the Great Eastern railway. It is chiefly agricultural, but contains several well-built houses. Many relics of Roman origin have been discovered in the neighbourhood. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £575, and the glebe comprises 77 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £513. The church, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, is an ancient structure, crowned with a shingled spire. The parochial charities produce about £5 per annum. There is a free school, entirely supported by the rector.

SHENGEY. See SHINGAY, co. Cambridge.

SHENINGTON, a par in the upper div. of Tewkesbury hund., co. Oxford, formerly in Gloucestershire, 6 miles N.W. of Banbury, its post town, and 29 N.W. of Oxford. The village, which is situated on the borders of Warwickshire and Gloucestershire, is wholly agricultural. The surface is hilly, and the land chiefly arable. The soil produces good crops of wheat, barley, and turnips. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £321. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, was partially rebuilt in the last century. The parochial charities produce about £6 per annum. The Dissenters have a place of worship. There is a free school.

SHENIX, an islet on the N.E. coast of co. Dublin, Ireland, 1 mile S.E. of Skerries. It is situated in the Irish Channel, and has a martello tower on it.

SHENLEY, a par. in the hunds. of Cottesloe and Newport, co. Bucks, 3 miles N.W. of Fenny-Stratford. The village, which is of small extent, is chiefly agricultural. The tithes were commuted under an Enclosure Act, in 1762, for land, and subsequently for a rent-charge of £267 15*s., and the glebe comprises 67 acres. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £424. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a Norman structure, containing a monument to Sir Thomas Stafford, temp. James I. There are almshouses for four widowers and two widows, with an income from endowment of £40.

SHENLEY, a par. in the hund. of Dacorum, co. Herts, 5 miles N. of Barnet, its post town, and the same distance S.E. of St. Alban's. The village, which is situated on an eminence, is small and chiefly agricultural, but the surrounding country has several seats and villas. Petty sessions are held here at intervals. The soil consists of clay, gravel, and sand, upon a substratum of chalk, which is much used for dressing the land. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £1,189, and the glebe comprises 30 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £1,100. The church, dedicated to St. Botolph, is an ancient edifice, with a wooden tower containing three bells. It has tombs of two former rectors; Falle, the historian of Jersey, and Newcombe, author of the history of the abbey of St. Alban's. The parish church being inconveniently situated, the late rector built a chapel-of-ease in the village in 1840. The charities produce about £55 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes, also an infant school. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. T. B. Myers, Esq., is lord of the manor.

SHENSTONE, a par. in the hund. of South Offlow, co. Stafford, 3½ miles S.W. of Lichfield, and 12 from Birmingham. It is situated on the borders of Stafford and Warwick shires, adjoining Cannock Chase on the W. The parish, which is large, is divided into two districts, the eastern, or Shenstone, and the western, or Stonnall, divisions; the former containing the hmlts. of Chesterfield, Footherley, Shenstone Little Hay, Shenstone Woodend, and part of Wall Hilton; and the latter those of Little Aston, Catshill, Lynn, Sandhills, Shire Oak, and Upper and Lower Stormall. The surface is undulating, and the lower lands are watered by several trout streams falling into a branch of the river Tame. In the eastern division are extensive pastures skirting the banks of the rivulets, much of the uplands produce excellent crops of wheat, barley, and turnips, but in some parts the soil is poor and peaty. The village is large, and stands upon an eminence. Many of the houses are detached, and in the vicinity are numerous mansions, as Shenstone Hall, Shenstone Moss, Shenstone House, Shenstone Lodge, Aston Hall, and Footherley Hall. Petty and special sessions are held fortnightly for the northern division of the hund. of South Offlow. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £500, and the vicarial for £435; the glebe comprises 3 acres. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £488. The old church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, has been taken down, with the exception of the tower, and a structure erected in 1853 at a little distance, on an eminence commanding a view of the surrounding country. There is also a district church at Upper Stonnall the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £180. The church is an ancient edifice. The Wesleyans have a chapel at Little Hay. The parochial charities produce about £125 per annum. There is a National school recently built. At Upper Stonnall was formerly a castle or fortification, the site of which is still called Castle Field, and near the hamlet of Chesterfield was the site of the Roman station Etocetum. A fair is held on the last Monday in February, chiefly for cattle, and the wakes on the Sunday before St. Peter's Day.

SHENTON, a chplry. in the par. of Market-Bosworth, hund. of Sparkenhoe, co. Leicester, 5 miles N.W. of Nuneaton, its post town, and 2¼ S.W. of Market-Bosworth. The village, which is of small extent, is situate on the river Sence, near the Ashby-de-la-Zouch canal. The inhabitants are wholly agricultural. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect. of Market-Bosworth, in the dioc. of Peterborough. The church is of great antiquity, and contains numerous brasses. The charities produce about £5 per annum. Shenton Hall is an ancient mansion. Major H. Wollaston is lord of the manor.

SHEPHALL, or SHEEPHALL, a par. in the hund. of Cashio, or lib. of St. Alban's, co. Herts, 2½ miles miles S.E. of Stevenage, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. Nearly two-thirds of the land are arable, and the remainder pasture and woodland. The impropriation belongs to the crown. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £306, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient edifice with a turret containing two bells. The parochial charities produce about £26 per annum, distributed among the poor. The Bury is the principal residence.

SHEPHERD'S BUSH, a vil. in the par. of Kensington, Kensington div. of Ossulstone hund., co. Middlesex, 1 mile N.W. of Kensington, and 5 miles W. of St. Paul's. It has a station on the Metropolitan railway. This place, which has much increased within the last few years, contains many villas and detached houses surrounded by gardens. In 1850 the church, dedicated to St. Stephen, was erected here by the Messrs. Bird. It has a spire 150 feet high, and contains several painted windows.

SHEPHERDSWELL. See SIBBERTSWOLD, co. Kent.

SHEPLEY, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Kirburton, upper div. of Agbrigg wap., West Riding co. York, 7 miles S.E. of Huddersfield, its post town, and 6 N.W. of Peniston. It is a station on the Sheffield and Huddersfield railway. The village is situated in a valley near the mouth of the river Dearne. A portion of the inhabitants are engaged in the woollen mills. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Ripon, in the patron. of the Vicar of Kirkburton. The church is dedicated to St. Paul, and was erected in 1848. There is a British and Foreign school, in which a Sunday school is also held. The Methodist New Connexion have a place of worship. Sir J. Radcliffe is lord of the manor.

SHEPPERTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Abbotsham, co. Devon, 2 miles W. of Bideford.

SHEPPERTON, a par. in the hund. of Spelthorne, co. Middlesex, 2 miles S.E. of Chertsey, its post town, and 4 S.E. of Staines. It is the terminus of the Thames valley branch of the London and South Western railway. The village, which is considerable, is situated on the banks of the Thames, and is chiefly agricultural. In Domesday Survey Shepperton is spelled Scepertone, and was at that time held by Westminster Abbey, but afterwards came to the Beauchamps. It is a resort for anglers. The par. comprises the hmlt. of Lower Halliford. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of London, val. £499. The church is dedicated to St. Nicholas. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes. There are ruins of a seat at Wall Closes. An oaken canoe 12 feet in length was discovered near the river bank in 1812, about seven feet from the surface.

SHEPPEY, ISLE OF, a lib. having separate jurisdiction in the lathe of Scray, co. Kent. It lies opposite the Nore, on the N. coast of Kent, from which it is separated by the river Swale on the S., and is bounded on the W. by the Thames and Medway, and on the N. and E. by the North Sea. Although considered as one island, it is formed by the three islands of Sheppey, Elmley, and the Isle-of-Hasty, comprising the pars. of Queenborough, Minster-in-Sheppey, Eastchurch, Leysdown, Warden, Isle of Elmley, and St. Thomas' Harty Isle, and the rapidly rising town of Sheerness, in the par. of Minster. It was called by the Saxons Sceapige, or "The Isle of Sheep," and still retains its fame for the excellence of its mutton. It was frequently ravaged by the Danes, in the 9th century, whose tumuli and "coterels" remain to this day scattered along the coasts, which are in general low and marshy, especially towards the S., where they are defended with strong sea walls and dykes, but towards the N. the cliffs attain an elevation of 90 feet, and extend for about six miles in length. The island is rather more than 10 miles long from E. to W., and 4 miles in breadth, with an area of about 20,000 acres. The surface is marshy, consisting chiefly of low rich pasture, with some arable clay lands, except in the southern part, where it is traversed by a ridge of low hills. The corn crops are abundant, but of wood and trees there is a dearth. The chief crops are wheat, beans, oats, clover, and seeds. The island breed of sheep is much prized, as is also the breed of small horses. Productive oyster beds extend along the coast from Sheerness to Milton, and form a staple article of export for the London market. The population of the district in 1861 was 18,494, of which number 12,015 reside in Sheerness. The mineral productions consist chiefly of septaria or argillaceous limestone, from which Parker's Roman cement is made, and iron pyrites or copperas stones, which latter are collected in heaps upon the beach, from the falling cliffs, and are carried away in vessels to the copperas works near Sheerness and Queenborough, originally established by Matthias Falconer, a native of Brabant, as early as 1579. The fossil remains are numerous, throwing much light on the geologic formation of the London basin; they comprise upwards of 700 different species, chiefly crustacea and reptiles, including the crocodilus Spenceri, and numerous specimens of fossil fruits. The Cant sand lying to the N. of the island, stretches to the Nore light. The means of communication was formerly by three primitive ferries, two for foot passengers, and one called the King's ferry free for travellers and horses, but not for carriages; a great alteration has, however, been recently effected in the mode of transit by the construction of a railway viaduct across the bed of the Swale, and the establishment of steamboat communication with London, Gravesend, Southend, and other places. Sheppey gives name to a Poor-law Union, comprising the parishes above named; also to a superintendent registry district.

SHEPPY. See SHEEPWAY, co. Somerset.

SHEPRETH, a par. in the hund. of Wetherley, co. Cambridge, 5 miles N. of Royston, its post town. It is a station on the Great Northern railway. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on a branch of the river Cam, and is chiefly agricultural. Shepreth was formerly held by Chatteriz nunnery. The soil is of a clayey and gravelly nature, upon a subsoil of chalk. The great tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £306, and the vicarial for £91. The impropriate glebe comprises 185 acres, and the vicarial 12 acres. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ely, val. £97. The church, dedicated to All Saints, contains monuments of the Layer family. The parochial charities produce about £14 per annum, exclusive of allotments. There is a free school for both sexes. The Independents have a place of worship. This parish consists of four manors.

SHEPSCOMB, a tythg. and chplry. in the par. of Painswick, hund. of Bisley, co. Gloucester, 2 miles E. of Painswick, its post town, and 4 N. of Stroud. The village, which is considerable, is situated in a secluded vale near the road from Stroud. Many of the inhabitants are engaged in the manufacture of woollen cloth, especially Saxony broad cloths, for which this place has been celebrated for some years. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £97, in the patron. of the Vicar of Painswick. The church was built in 1819. There is a National school for both sexes. The principal seats are Ebworth Park and Shepscomb House.

SHEPTON BEAUCHAMP, a par. in the hund. of South Petherton, co. Somerset, 4 miles N.E. of Ilminster, its post town, and about the same distance W. of Marlock station on the Yeovil branch of the Bristol and Exeter railway. The village, which is of small extent, is chiefly agricultural. The soil consists of a sandy loam upon a subsoil of limestone. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £373. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, has a tower containing a clock and six bells. The parochial charities produce about £40 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes, in which a Sunday-school is also held. The Wesleyans have a place of worship.

SHEPTON-MALLET, a par., post and market town in the hund. of Whitstone, co. Somerset, 5 miles E. of Wells, and 20 S.E. of Bristol. It is a station on the East Somerset railway. It is mentioned in the Domesday Survey as subordinate to the manor of Pilton, which had been granted by Ini, king of the West Saxons, to the Abbots of Glastonbury, by whom it was retained for above 400 years. After the Norman conquest the estate passed from Roger de Curcelle, a Norman noble, to the Malet or Mallet family, who resided in a strong castle at Curry Mallet, but taking part with the barons in the reign of John, their estates were forfeited to the crown. The property subsequently passed by purchase to Sir Thomas Gournay, and, after various transitions, reverted to the crown in 1536. It was ultimately annexed to the dukedom of Cornwall, and at the present time is held by the Prince of Wales, who is lord of the manor. The town, which is comparatively of modern growth, received its first charter for a market in the reign of Edward II. It stands on the southern slope of a valley sheltered by the Mendip hills, and consists of thirteen streets and lanes, the principal of which, traversing the valley from N. to S., is spacious and well built, but the others are mostly narrow and irregular. At the bottom of the valley is a stream turning several mills in its course. The streets are lighted with gas, and the houses supplied with water from the springs at Windsor Hill mill. There is a market cross, erected by Walter and Agnes Buckland in 1500, and restored in 1841, when an additional arch was added to the original structure, which consisted of five arches, with two rows of steps and an hexagonal pillar, supporting a flat roof, surmounted by a pyramidal spire. It was from this spot in 1685 that the Duke of Monmouth proclaimed his intention of marching on Bristol, and thirteen persons of the town having been convicted before Judge Jeffreys, were executed in the market-place for their participation in that enterprise. The other public buildings are the county bridewell and house of correction, situated in Cornhill; the divisional courthouse and police station, erected in 1857 from designs by Messrs. Wainwright and Heard; and the union workhouse, situate at West Shepton. There are besides a mechanics' institute, with reading-rooms attached, a literary institution and assembly rooms, a large reservoir at Lower Downside, a new bridge, gas-works, savings-bank, Stuckey's commercial bank, being a branch of the Somersetshire company, also a branch house of the Wilts and Dorset Banking Company, a penny bank, post-office savings-bank, swimming-bath, and several extensive breweries, which have rendered the town celebrated for its ale and porter. The manufacture of woollen goods, particularly fine West of England cloth, was formerly extensively carried on, but declined shortly after the commencement of the present century, and of late years has been partially superseded by the important manufactures of silk, for which about eight factories have been established, chiefly for silk velvet, crape, handkerchiefs, and other superior fabrics. Many other trades are carried on, as wholesale boot and shoe making, stocking knitting, sail-cloth, hair seating, lace, rope-making, bacon-curing, and brick and tile making. Adjoining the town, and situated within the parish, are the hamlets or suburbs of Bowlish, Cannards, Grave, Charlton, Darshill, Draycot, Kilver-street, Oak-hill, and West Shepton, together containing a population of 5,347, but the town proper in 1861 contained only 4,868 persons. The management of local affairs is vested in a high-constable and subordinate officers, chosen annually at a court-leet held in October. Petty sessions are held fortnightly on Friday, and the meetings of the poor-law guardians also fortnightly on Tuesday. One weekly newspaper, the Shepton Mallet Journal and East Somerset Herald is issued on Friday. The East Somerset Horticultural Society, established in 1860, hold their flower shows here in August, and the Agricultural Club hold their ploughing match and exhibition, annually within two miles of the town.—The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £788 10s., and the glebe contains 8 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £533. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, is a venerable cruciform structure, with a square tower at the W. end containing a clock and peal of eight bells. It was partially rebuilt and enlarged in 1837, at a cost of £3,100, and in 1851 the chancel and vestry were entirely renovated. The roof, which is of solid carved oak, is divided into 350 panels, and adorned with figures of angels bearing shields. It contains a sculptured stone pulpit of the 15th century, two stained windows, monuments of the Strode and Barnard families, two stone effigies of Knights Templars, and several ancient brasses. The register commences in 1635. There is also a church at Oakhill, dedicated to All Saints, erected in 1861, and endowed by the bequest of £5,000 by Mrs. Trelawney Wickham, widow of the late rector, who has also given £1,000 for building National schools, and £800 for almshouses. The cemetery, which was opened in 1856, in accordance with the extramural interment Act, comprises 5 acres, and contains two mortuary chapels. There are places of worship for Baptists, Independents, Wesleyans, and Unitarians, the last, built in 1692, is well endowed, with burial ground attached, and contains a carved oak pulpit with canopy, and several ancient brasses, one, dated 1732, to the memory of the Rev. Simon Brown, a Non-conformist divine, who once was minister. The Roman Catholic chapel, dedicated to St. Michael, is situated at West Shepton. The nuns of the order of the Visitation had formerly a convent at Draycot, in this parish, and the Society of Friends a meeting-house at Kilver-street, but both these have been removed. The charities, which are numerous, produce above £600 per annum, and include a bequest by John Curtis for the education and apprenticing of four boys, a similar bequest by Mary Gapper for sixteen girls, and a bequest by Edward Strode, made in 1699, and now producing about £400, part of which goes towards the support of the almshouses for eight poor old men situated on the S. side of the churchyard, and the remainder is distributed to the poor in bread. The Poor-law Union of Shepton-Mallet comprises 25 parishes or places. There are several benefit associations, belonging to the friendly, foresters, free-masons, Rechabites, and other clubs. The free grammar school, situated a little to the N. of the church, was established by Sir George Strode and others in 1639, who endowed it with the rectory and parsonage of Meare and other land, now worth £80 per annum. There are also National schools for boys, girls, and infants, recently erected in the Waterloo-road, besides private and denominational schools. The Roman Fosse Way to Ilchester passed a little to the eastward of the town, and some Roman urns were found in 1840 in a tumulus on Lapwing farm. Market day is Friday, chiefly for corn and agricultural produce, and on the third Friday in each month for cattle. Fairs are held on the 18th June and 8th August, chiefly for horses, cattle, and live stock, and a pleasure fair on Easter Monday.

SHEPTON-MONTAGUE, a par. in the hund. of Norton-Ferris, co. Somerset, 2 miles N.W. of Wincanton, 5½ from Evercreech, its post town, and 2 S. of the Burton railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the Burton and Sherborne road. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The surface is undulating, and the land nearly evenly divided between arable and dairy farms. The soil is light and stony upon a subsoil of oolite. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £223. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £62. The church, dedicated to St. Thomas-à-Becket, or to St. Peter, is an ancient stone structure with a tower containing three bells. The register dates from 1560. The church was restored about 1855. The parochial charities produce about £60 per annum, of which £37 goes towards the support of the schools. There is a National school for both sexes, in which a Sunday-school is also held. W. Philips, Esq., is lord of the manor.

SHEPWAY LATHE, a div. in the south-eastern part of co. Kent, comprises the hunds. of Alvesbridge, Bircholt, Folkestone, Ham, Hayne, Hythe, Langport, Loningborough, St. Martin Ivy Church, Newchurch, Oxney, Romney cinque port, Stonting, Street, Worth, and the lib. of Romney Marsh, together containing about 125,000 acres.

SHERATON and HULAM, tnshps. in the par. of Monk-Hesleton, S. div. of Easington ward, co. Durham, 2 miles from Castle-Eden, and 11 N. of Stockton. It is wholly agricultural.

SHERBORNE, a div. in the co. of Dorset, contains the hunds. of Sherborne and Yetminster, and the libs. of Halstock and Ryme Intrinseca, comprising an area of 34,220 acres.

SHERBORNE, a hund. in the above div., co. Dorset, contains the pars. of Beer-Hackett, Bradford-Abbas, Castleton, Caundle Bishop, Caundle (Marsh and Purse), Nether and Over Compton, Folke, Haydon, Holnest, Leweston, Lellington, Longburton, Lydlinch, North Wootton, Oborne, Sherborne, Thornford, and Up-Cerne, comprising an area of 21,090 acres, exclusive of Sherborne.

SHERBORNE, a par., market town, and once a cathedral city, in the hund. and div. of its name, co. Dorset, 6 miles E. of Yeovil, 18 N.W. of Dorchester, and 117 S.W. of London by road. It is a station on the Salisbury and Yeovil branch of the London and South-Western railway. The town, which is of great antiquity, is situated on a hill side in the vale of Blackmore, and on a branch of the river Yeo. In 670 a convent of secular canons was founded here by Cenwalh, King of the West Saxons. Alfred the Great's tutor, Asser, and King Ethelbald were interred in the cathedral church. In 705, upon the division of the diocese of Winchester, then the sole bishopric of Wessex, Ina made Sherborne the seat of an episcopal see, which originally included the counties of Dorset, Somerset, Wilts, Devon, and Cornwall, but was diminished by the erection of new bishoprics. About 998 the secular canons were displaced, and a society of Benedictines established by Bishop Wulsin, who rebuilt the monastery and attached to it a vineyard. It subsequently became an abbey, and continued to flourish till the Dissolution, when its revenue was estimated at £682 14*s.* 7*d.* The town is said to have been burnt by Sweyn the Dane in 1003, and the removal of the see in 1075 to Old Sarum, contributed much to depress the prosperity of Sherborne, and for a long period afterwards it continued in comparative obscurity. At the Norman conquest the manor was given by William the Conqueror to Osmond, a Norman knight, afterwards Bishop of Sarum. The castle (built by Roger, Bishop of Sarum) and manor were granted by Queen Elizabeth to Sir Walter Raleigh, who built the mansion in the form of the letter H, which stands in the castle grounds, and is now called Sherborne Lodge. After the attainder of Sir Walter Raleigh the demesne was given by James I. to his favourite, Carr, and subsequently passed to the Digbys. There are two silk-throwing mills, employing about 600 hands. The making of silk twist and buttons is also largely carried on, and some of the female inhabitants are employed in sewing gloves for the manufacturers in Yeovil. The population of the town in 1851 was 5,242, and in 1861 5,523, but the parish contained 5,793. It consists of several good streets, irregularly laid out, and is divided by a small stream into two parts, of which one is called Castle Town. The principal public buildings are the townhall and market house, situated near the church; a handsome new building called the Yeatman's Hospital; the grammar school of Edward VI.; the venerable almshouse of SS. John Baptist and Evangelist; a savings-bank, two commercial branch banks, and the union workhouse. Two newspapers, the Sherborne and Taunton Journal and the Sherborne and Yeovil Mercury, are published in the town. Quarter sessions for the county are regularly held, and petty sessions for the town are held in the townhall once a month. It is a polling-place for the county elections, and the head of a Poor-law Union, comprising 30 parishes, of which 23 are in Dorsetshire, and 7 in Somersetshire. The town and adjacent district are under the management of a local board of health. The principal seats in the neighbourhood are Sherborne Lodge, Ven House, Milborne Port, Compton House, Holnest House, and Leweston House. The subsoil is oolitic rock, and the cultivated land very fertile.—The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Salisbury, val. £269, in the patron. of the crown. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, was partly rebuilt by Abbot Bradford in the reign of Henry VI. It measures 207 feet in length, by 102 feet wide, and has a tower rising from the centre 114 feet high, and containing a peal of eight large bells, one of which weighs 52 cwt. 23 lbs., and was a present from Cardinal Wolsey. In the interior are several painted windows and monuments, one of which bears an epitaph by Pope, also a monument in the S. transept to the memory of John Earl of Bristol, by Nost, erected in 1698 at a cost of £1,500. This fabric has recently been restored under the direction of Messrs. Carpenter and Slater, at a cost of about £35,000, mainly by the liberality of the late Earl of Digby, and of his heir G. D. Wingfield Digby, Esq. The Wesleyans, Primitive Methodists, and Independents have each a place of worship. The charities produce altogether about £2,000 per annum, of which £1,000 is the endowment of the free grammar school founded by Edward VI. in 1550. The school-house has been formed out of the old abbey, which has recently been entirely restored, having been presented to the town for this purpose by the late Earl of Digby. It is under a head master and ten assistant-masters, and has four exhibitions of £40 a year, tenable for four years, at either of the Universities of Oxford or Cambridge. There are also Foster's bluecoat school, with an income from endowment of £80; the Earl of Digby's school for girls, endowed with £50 per annum; Woodman's school, besides National, British and Foreign, and infant schools. The parochial authorities have the privilege of presenting three boys to Christ's Hospital in London. On the S. side of the churchyard is the hospital or almshouses of St. John the Baptist, refounded by Henry VI. for 24 poor men, with an income of £1,000, and a chapel in which Divine service is performed daily. An extra mural cemetery has lately been formed at Horsecastle. The market days are Thursday and Saturday, and every alternate Thursday for cattle. Fairs are held on the 8th May, 18th and 26th July, chiefly for cattle, and a large fair on the Monday following 10th October.

SHERBORNE, a par. in the lower div. of Slaughter hund., co. Gloucester, 3½ miles E. of Northleach, its post town, and 6 N.W. of Burford. The village is situated on a branch of the river Windrush, and is chiefly agricultural. Sherborne formerly belonged to Winchcomb Abbey, and now to the Dutton family, who take from it the title of baron. The soils consist of clay and gravel, upon a subsoil of oolite rock. The Cheltenham and Oxford turnpike road passes through the parish. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Enclosure Act in 1777. The living is a vic.* with that of Windrush united, in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £194. The church, dedicated to St. Mary Magdalene, has a tower, containing a clock and six bells. The church was rebuilt at the expense of Lord Sherborne, of whose family it contains monuments. There are two schools for both sexes, supported by Lord Sherborne, who is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

SHERBORNE, a par. in the Snitterfield div. of Barlichway hund., co. Warwick, 2½ miles S.W. of Warwick, its post town, and 102 from London. The parish, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Avon, and is wholly agricultural. The road from Warwick to Stratford-upon-Avon passes through the village. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £110. The church, dedicated to All Saints, contains several monumental inscriptions. There are day and Sunday schools, supported by Mrs. and Miss Ryland.

SHERBORNE, MONK, or WEST, a par. in the hund. of Basingstoke, co. Hants, 3½ miles N.W. of Basingstoke, its post town, and 5 S.E. of Kingsclere. The village is of small extent. The inhabitants are wholly agricultural. The par. includes the tythg. of Pamber. The surface is undulating and well wooded, about two-thirds being arable, and the remainder woodland and meadow. The soil is clayey, upon a substratum of chalk. The impropriate tithes belong to Queen's College, Oxford. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £50, in the patron. of Queen's College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient structure, with a square wooden tower containing four bells. There is a free school for both sexes, erected in 1850 at the expense of the late Duke of Wellington. There are some remains of a Benedictine priory, founded by Sir John de Port as a cell to the abbey of Cerasy, in Normandy. At the suppression it was given by Henry VI. to Eton College, but subsequently transferred to Queen's College, Oxford, as masters of St. Julian's hospital at Southampton. The chapel, which is still used for the performance of Divine service, contains the recumbent figure of a Knight Templar, carved in solid oak.

SHERBORNE ST. JOHN, or EAST, a par. in the hund. of Basingstoke, co. Hants, 3 miles N.W. of Basingstoke, its post town, and 4 S.W. of Mortimer. The village is chiefly agricultural. The rectorial tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £407, besides a glebe of 62 acres, and the vicarial for one of £193. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £491. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, has a square tower surmounted by a coppered spire, and containing five bells. The church has been lately restored, and a new aisle added, at the expense of W. L. W. Chute, Esq. The parochial charities produce about £20 per annum. There are Church of England schools for both sexes. The Vynes, the family seat of the Chutes, was erected in the reign of Henry VIII. by the first Lord Sandys. Attached to it is a private chapel containing the effigies of Chaloner Chute, Esq., Speaker of the House of Commons in the parliament of Richard Cromwell. Its name is said to be derived from an ancient vineyard which formerly stood here. W. L. W. Chute, Esq., is lord of the manor.

SHERBURN, a par. in the wap. of Buckrose, East Riding co. York, 9 miles S.W. of Scarborough, its post town, and 1 mile from its station on the Scarborough and Malton line of railway. The village, which is of large extent, is situated near the river Derwent, and is chiefly agricultural. The land is principally arable, with a small proportion of pasture and woodland. An extensive trade is done in brewing and malting. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of York, val. £120. The church, dedicated to St. Hilda, is an ancient stone structure, with part of a former tower, containing one bell. The interior of the church contains a stone font of great antiquity, also a marble monument to M. Rivis, Esq., of this parish. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes. The Wesleyans have a place of worship, in which a Sunday-school is held. Viscount Downe is lord of the manor. A statute fair for the hiring of servants is held in the second week of November.

SHERBURN, a par., post, and small market town, partly in the upper div. of Barkstone Ash wap., and partly in the lib. of St. Peter's, West Riding co. York, 2 miles N. of Milford Junction, its post town, and 9 W. of Selby. It has stations on the Great Northern and North-Eastern railways, and is traversed by the Leeds and Selby line, which has stations at Micklefield and South Milford, in this parish. The Roman way to Aberford passed through this place. King Athelstan had a palace here, which belonged subsequently to the see of York. The royalists, under Lord Digby, were routed here by Colonel Copley. The parish comprises the tnshps. of Barkstone, Huddlestone, Lotherton, Micklefield, South Milford and Newthorpe, and Sherburn. The town is situated on the direct road from Tadcaster to Ferrybridge. Petty sessions are held on alternate Thursdays. The population of the township in 1861 was 1,465, but of the parish 3,944. The surface is varied, and the land fertile. The low grounds are watered by a stream called Bishop's Dyke. The neighbourhood abounds with orchards and gardens. There are flax and teazle grounds, both of which are largely cultivated for the Leeds market. The substratum abounds with excellent freestone, of which great quantities were raised for the repair of York Minster and Westminster Abbey. The living is a vic. with the cur. of Micklefield annexed, in the dioc. of York, val. £135, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient edifice, with a tower containing five bells. The register dates from 1639. There are chapels-of-ease at Lotherton and Micklefield, also a district church at South Milford, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £104. The parochial charities produce about £315 per annum. There is an endowed grammar school, also a free school for girls. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. Market day is on Friday. A fair is held on 25th September for pedlary and merchandise, and a statute fair on the Friday before Martinmas.

SHERBURN, a tnshp. in the par. of Pittington, S. div. of Easington ward, co. Durham, 3 miles S.E. of Durham. It has stations on the Sunderland and North-Eastern railways. A portion of the inhabitants are engaged in the collieries. There are National schools for both sexes, also a reading-room, which is held at the post-office. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a place of worship. A hospital for lepers, founded by Bishop Pudsey in 1180, and destroyed by the Scots, was restored by Thomas de Hessewell, in 1330. The society consisted of a master, several priests, and sixty-five lepers, and its revenue in the reign of Henry VIII. was returned at £142 0*s.* 4*d.* It is yet in existence, having been incorporated in 1585 by Queen Elizabeth for a master and 30 brethren, and is still subject to the regulations then adopted. The house, which is of a quadrangular form, is situated in a valley on the eastern side of Sherburn water. It has been rebuilt since 1759, and was improved and added to in 1819. The chapel includes the old Roman tower.

SHERCOCK, or KILLAN, a par., post, and market vil. in the bar. of Clonkee, co. Cavan, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 20 miles E. of Cavan, and 54 from Dublin. The soil is fertile and generally under cultivation. The surface is traversed by the road from Kingscourt to Cootehill. Lough Swillan is in the parish. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Kilmore, val. £551, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was built about half a century ago. The parish retains its ancient name, Killan, in the Roman Catholic returns. There are a parochial, several day, and two Sunday schools, also a police station in the village, where petty sessions are held once a fortnight. The linen trade was formerly considerable, but has declined. Shinan House is the principal seat. The Sheridans once lived here, and Richard and T. Sheridan were natives. Traces of coal and iron have been found in this parish SHERE, a par. in the second div. of Blackheath hund., co. Surrey, 6 miles S.E. of Guildford, its post town, and 1 mile from the Gumshall railway station. The village, which is large and chiefly agricultural, is situated on the road from Guildford to Dorking, and on the Tillingburn, a branch of the river Wey. The parish includes Shere Eboracum, which belonged to the house of York, and was held by the Butlers and Touchets, and given by Henry VII. to Sir R. Bray. Several houses have recently been built on the heath, which occupies above a third of the parish. The remainder of the land, which is enclosed and under cultivation, is fertile. Courts leet and manor are occasionally held by the lord of the manor. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. in the king's book, £26 1*s.* 5½*d.* The church, dedicated to St. James, has a tower and shingle spire rising from the centre, and containing six bells. The church has several painted windows, and three brasses bearing date from 1421, also tombs of Lord Audley, the Duncombes, and the Sheres, of Shere House. The parochial charities produce about £36 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes. E. Bray, Esq., is lord of the manor. William Bray, the antiquary and county historian, was born and lies buried here.

SHEREFORD, or SHERINGFORD, a par. in the hund. of Gallow, co. Norfolk, 3 miles W. of Fakenham, its nearest railway station and post town. It is situated on the river Wensum, and is wholly agricultural. The parish, which is inconsiderable, has no village, only a few farmhouses. The land is chiefly arable. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £192, and the glebe comprises 58 acres. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £227. The church is dedicated to St. Nicholas. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum.

SHERENDEN, a hmlt. in the par. of Horsemondon, hund. of Brenchley, and lathe of Aylesford, co. Kent, 8 miles S.E. of Tunbridge.

SHERFIELD-ENGLISH, a par. in the hund. of Thorngate, Romsey div. of co. Hants, 4½ miles N.W. of Romsey, its post town, and 2 S. of Dunbridge railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated in a valley, and is wholly agricultural. The surface is undulating, commanding extensive views of New Forest and the Isle of Wight. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £284 16*s., and the glebe comprises 39 acres. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £350. The church is dedicated to St. Leonard. The register dates from 1745. There is a free school. Melchett Park is the principal residence.

SHERFIELD-UPON-LODDON, a par. in the lower half div. of the hund. of Basingstoke, co. Hants, 4 miles N. of Basingstoke, its post town, and 5 S. of Mortimer railway station. The village is situated at the mouth of the river Loddon, and is chiefly agricultural. The Bramshill hounds meet in this parish. The land is partly in common. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £674 10*s., and the glebe comprises 36 acres. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £544. The church, dedicated to St. Leonard, is an ancient structure with a wooden tower. The parochial charities produce about £70 per annum, of which £25 go to Christmas's school. The Independents and Primitive Methodists have each a place of worship. P. P. S. Conant, Esq., is lord of the manor.

SHERFORD, a par. in the hund. of Coleridge, co. Devon, 3 miles E. of Kingsbridge, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. The par. contains the hmlts. of Frogmore and Kennedon. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic. of Stokenham, in the dioc. of Exeter. The church, dedicated to St. Martin, is a stone structure, with a square tower containing five bells. The interior contains a carved screen. The parochial charities produce about £4 per annum for seamen's widows.

SHERIFF-HALES, a par. partly in the hund. of South Bradford, co. Salop, but chiefly in the W. div. of the hund. of Cuttlestone, co. Stafford, 3 miles N.E. of Shiffnal railway station, and 5 S.E. of Newport. The par., which is of large extent, includes the chplry. of Woodcote. The substratum abounds in ironstone. A vitriolic spring occurs amongst the iron mines. The impropriate tithes belong to the Duke of Sutherland, who is lord of the manor, and has a seat at Trentham, partly within this parish and partly in the adjoining parish of Lilleshall. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £614. The church, dedicated to St. Mary the Virgin, is a stone edifice, with a square tower partially overgrown with ivy. There is besides a chapel-of-ease at Woodcote; and a place of worship for Wesleyans at Crackley Bank. There are National schools for boys and girls, supported by the Duke of Sutherland.

SHERIFF-HUTTON. See HUTTON, SHERIFF.

SHERIFFS-LENCH, a hmlt. in the par. of Church Lench, lower div. of Blakenhurst hund., co. Worcester, 1½ mile S.W. of Church-Lench.

SHERINGFORD. See SHEREFORD, co. Norfolk.

SHERINGHAM, a par. in the hund. of North Erpingham, co. Norfolk, 5 miles W. of Cromer, its post town, and the same distance N.E. of Holt. It is situated opposite Sheringham Shoal, and is a coastguard station. There was anciently a monastery of Black canons, a cell to Nutley Abbey, in Buckinghamshire, founded in the reign of Henry II. The inhabitants are engaged in agriculture and the fisheries. The surface is of a diversified and undulating character. The par. includes the vils. of Upper and Lower Sheringham, which are about 1½ mile distant from each other. The former contains the parish church, and the latter is situated on the cliffs, which are here parted by a narrow ravine, through which a rivulet flows into the sea, turning in its course a small paper-mill. On the beach are several curing-houses for herrings, and many small boats are engaged in taking cod, skait, whitings, crabs, and lobsters, of which great quantities are sent to London. There is a considerable extent of heath. The impropriate tithes belong to the Bishop of Ely, and have been commuted for a rent-charge of £361. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £83, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to All Saints, has a lofty square tower containing six bells. The interior of the church contains a brass of J. Hook, and monuments of the Upcher family. At Lower Sheringham was formerly a chapel dedicated to St. Nicholas. The register dates from 1670. The parochial charities produce about £21 per annum. There is a school for both sexes. The Hall, the seat of the Upcher family, is a white brick mansion situated in a well-wooded park. H. R. Upcher, Esq., is lord of the manor.

SHERLOCKSTOWN, a par. in the bar. of North Naas, co. Kildare, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles S.E. of Clane. Kildare is its post town. It lies on the Grand canal and the road from Clane to Celbridge. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Kildare, val. with Bodenstown, £63, in the patron. of the bishop. Sherlockstown House is the chief seat.

SHERMANBURY, a par. in the hund. of Windham, rape of Bramber, co. Sussex, 6 miles N.E. of Steyning, and 2½ E. of Partridge Green railway station. The village, which is small, is situated on the river Adur, which bounds the parish on the S., and is navigable to Shoreham. The inhabitants are wholly agricultural. The surface is undulating, and the pastures rich. The soil is clay and loam. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £381 15*s., and the glebe comprises 14 acres. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £299. The church, dedicated to St. Giles, is an ancient structure, situated in Shermanbury Park, and has a tower containing two bells. The windows are embellished with stained glass. The register dates from 1653. There is a girls' school. At Ewerst farm is the gateway of an old moated mansion, anciently the seat of the lords De la Warr. Mrs. H. Hunt is lady of the manor.

SHERMANS-GROUNDS, or LEICESTER FRITH, an ext. par. place in West Goscote hund., co. Leicester.

SHERNBORNE, a par. in the hund. of Smithdon, co. Norfolk, 2 miles S.E. of Snettisham, and 11½ miles N.E. of Lynn, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is chiefly agricultural. The soil is of a light character with a subsoil of chalk. The land is chiefly arable, with a small proportion of meadow and woodland. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1767, and the glebe comprises 65 acres. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £120, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, is an ancient structure in a ruinous condition. It is said to be the second church founded in this part of England by St. Felix, Bishop of the East Angles. The font is of great antiquity. The parochial charities consist of an allotment of 14 acres. There is a school for both sexes; a Sunday-school is held at the church. The Hall, the seat of the Shernborne family for upwards of seven centuries, is now a farm-house. The Masters and Fellows of Emmanuel College are lords of the manor.

SHERRIDGE, a hmlt. in the par. of Leigh, co. Worcester, 5 miles S.W. of Worcester.

SHERRIFFHALL ENGINE, a hmlt. in the par. of Newton, co. Edinburgh, Scotland, 5 miles S.E. of Edinburgh. It is situated near the river North Esk, and is chiefly inhabited by colliers.

SHERRIFFMUIR, a barren spot in the par. of Dunblane, co. Perth, Scotland, 5 miles N.E. of Stirling, famous as the scene of a battle fought in 1715 between the Earl of Marr and the Duke of Argyll, and is the subject of one of Burns's songs. Fairs are held on the first Tuesday in May, and on the Saturday before Falkirk Tryst.

SHERRINGHAM. See SHERINGHAM, co. Norfolk.

SHERRINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Newport, co. Bucks, 1½ mile N.E. of Newport-Pagnell. The village, which is considerable, is situated near the river Ouse. The Oakley hounds meet in this parish. The tithes were commuted for land and corn rents under an Enclosure Act in 1796. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £631, in the patron. of the Bishop of Lincoln. The church, an ancient structure, dedicated to St. Laud, contains several stone stalls and an antique font.

SHERRINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Branch and Dole, co. Wilts, 4 miles S.E. of Heytesbury, its post town, 3 N.W. of Wiley, and 7 S.E. of Warminster. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Wiley, and is wholly agricultural. The South Wilts hounds meet at Sherrington Pond. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £259, and the glebe comprises 21 acres. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £238. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is a small structure containing a bell turret. The parochial charities produce about £3 per annum. On the downs are several barrows. The Rev. P. A. Fane is lord of the manor.

SHERSTON MAGNA, a par. in a detached portion of the hund. of Chippenham, co. Wilts, 5½ miles S.W. of Malmesbury, its post town, and about the same distance from Tetbury. The village, which is extensive, is situated on an eminence near the river Avon, formed by the junction of two small streams. The inhabitants are chiefly agricultural. It was anciently a Roman station on the Consular Way, and was called by the Saxons Scearstan. A battle was fought here in 1016, in which Edmund Ironside defeated Canute the Great. In the vicinity are a camp and fragments of three boundary crosses. Roman coins have been discovered, and at the rear of the village is a deep well, supposed to be of Roman origin. The surface is generally level, and the soil of various qualities. There is a considerable extent of waste land. The great tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £250, besides a glebe of 288 acres, and the vicarial tithes for a rent-charge of £100. The living is a vic.* with the rect. of Sherston Parva and the cur. of Alderton united, in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £160, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Gloucester. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, is a cruciform structure, with a square tower rising from the centre and containing five bells. The parochial charities produce about £13 per annum. There are National, British, and infant schools. The Independents, Primitive Methodists, and Baptists have each places of worship. W. H. Cresswell, Esq., is lord of the manor.

SHERSTON PARVA, or SHERSTON-PINKEY, a par. in a detached portion of the hund. of Chippenham, co. Wilts, 4½ miles W. of Malmesbury, its post town, and 9 N.W. of Chippenham. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. W. H. Cresswell, Esq., is lord of the manor. The living is a discharged rect. united with the vic. of Sherston Magna.

SHERWILL, a hund. in the co. of Devon, contains the pars. of Arlington, Brendon, Challacombe, Charles, Highbray, Linton, Loxhore, Martinhoe, Parracombe, Sherwill, and Stoke Rivers, comprising an area of 45,790 acres.

SHERWILL, a par. in the above hund., co. Devon, 4 miles N.E. of Barnstaple, its post town. The village is situated on a branch of the river Taw, and is chiefly agricultural. The soil is of a loamy nature upon a subsoil of rock. Stone is quarried for building purposes. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £545, and the glebe comprises 91 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £387. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient stone structure, with a square tower containing six bells. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum. Youlston Park is the principal residence. Sir A. Chichester is lord of the manor.

SHERWOOD, a hmlt. in the par. of Basford, co. Nottingham, 2 miles N. of Nottingham.

SHERWOOD FOREST, an extensive hilly district in the W. part of Nottinghamshire, about 25 miles in length by 8 in breadth, formerly covered with wood, but now mostly disafforested and brought under cultivation. It is celebrated as the haunt of Robin Hood. The Sherwood harriers hunt here.

SHETLAND or ZETLAND ISLES, Scotland, a group of islands situated in the North Sea, between 59° 48′ 30″ and 60° 52′ N. lat., and between 0° 52′ and 1° 57′ W. long., from Greenwich, exclusive of the two detached islands of Foula and Fair Isle, the former being about 20 miles farther W. from the mainland of Shetland, and the latter 25 miles S. from the nearest headland. They form a joint county with the Orkneys, from which they are separated by a channel about 15 leagues broad, and are only 44 leagues W. of Bergen in Norway, the nearest point of continental Europe. There are three principal islands in the group, namely, Mainland, Yell on the N., and Unst on the N.E., besides Fetlar, which is the largest of the inferior islands and about 90 islets, holms, and skerries, of which only 32 are inhabited. Weekly communication is maintained by the Queen steamboat, which starts from Lerwick in Mainland every Monday evening for Aberdeen and Edinburgh, viâ Kirkwall and Wick. The history of Shetland is so closely involved in that of Orkney, as to render an extended notice superfluous. These islands are said to have been first inhabited by the Norwegians, who called them Hialtlandia, or Hetland, signifying "the highland," from whence arose their subsequent appellations Yeatland, or Zetland. In 875 Harold Harfagr claimed the sovereignty of these islands as vested in the Norwegian crown, and having subjugated them, committed the government to Count Sigurd, who was the first earl of Orkney, and from whom sprang the earls of Orkney and Shetland. About 1380 the line of the Norwegian earls ceased to retain their authority, and a Scottish nobleman, Henry Sinclair, obtained the earldom of Orkney, which included Shetland in the grant, though not in the title, from the king of Denmark and Norway. In his family they continued till 1468, when a marriage being concerted between the Scottish monarch, James III., and the Princess Margaret of Denmark, they were pledged as security for her dowry, which never having been paid, the islands continued part of Scotland, and at the Union passed to the crown of Great Britain. The crown lands were subsequently granted to the earls of Morton, who sold the estate to Sir Lawrence Dundas in 1766, on which family they confer the title of earls of Zetland. The Norwegian laws and usages continued in force until a comparatively recent period, and may still be traced in the "udal" possession of lands. By the old tenure the udallers, or proprietors, held by mere possession, without any grant or evidence, and when the land was sold care was taken to give the udal-born or kindred the first offer. The islands now pay their proportion of land-tax, and in every respect have become subject to British laws. The new valuation rental is £26,042. The assessment in Shetland in 1860 was, for rogue money 7½*d.* per merkland, and for prisons and valuation expenses 3*d.* per pound. The population in 1851 was 31,078, and in 1861, 31,678. The Shetland Isles unite with the Orkneys, to which sheriffdom they belong, in the return of one member to the imperial parliament. The parliamentary constituency in 1860 was, Shetland 182, Orkney 429, together 611. The county town is Kirkwall, the only royal burgh in the shire situated in Pomona, one of the Orkneys; but the chief town of Shetland is Lerwick, in Mainland, with a population of about 3,000; besides it there are only two considerable villages, Scalloway and Hillswick, both situated on the W. coast of the Mainland, which so far exceeds the other islands, that at least three-fourths of the whole area of the group, estimated at 880 square miles, belong to it.—Though rugged and wild, the islands are not remarkable for any great elevation, Roeness, or Mons Ronaldi, the highest hill in Mainland, being scarcely 1,500 feet in altitude, and Foula, celebrated for its five conical peaks, 1,400 feet above sea-level. The cultivated tracts of fertile land generally lie close upon the seaboard, and stretch away thence toward the moors. Each enclosure contains from 5 to 80 merks, and is almost always subdivided among several tenants, who combine the operations of agriculture with the more profitable pursuit of fishing, the latter being the chief industry of the inhabitants, who also make good sailors for the whalers and Hudson's Bay ships. Though the interior lands are comparatively level, the coastline is rugged and bold, the cliffs often losing themselves in the clouds, and occasionally appearing above them. Along the western coast, which is highest and most rugged, are innumerable bays or voes, the shores of which are sometimes covered with vegetation, and other points overhung by precipices, having 30 to 150 fathoms water at their base. Some of these caverns are of great beauty. The most remarkable are at Papa Stour, Lyra Skerry, Doreholm, Magnussetter Voe, Burrafirth, and the Holse of Scraada, in the peninsula of Northmaven; these last are divided into several chambers, but communicate with the sea by tunnels. Other noteworthy points along the coast are Sumburgh Head, with its lighthouse, of which is Fair Isle, about 22 miles to the S.W.; Fitful Head, and Skeldaness, between which lies Scalloway Bay, with its groups of islets and the ancient castle of Scalloway; Papa Sound, near Sandness; Eshaness, leading round to St. Magnus Bay; Ronas Voe, situated beneath the summit of Roeness, the highest point in the Shetlands; Papaness, in Yell Island; Outstack Rock, the most northerly point of Great Britain, shaped like a seal; Balta Sound, where the whalers touch; Lunaness, at the E. end of Yell Sound, with the Outer Skerries off it; the Noss, outside Lerwick Sound; and Sandwich Bay, with Mouse Island off it. The deep creeks and sounds which occur along the coast afford shelter to fleets of fishing boats during the season. The fishings include herrings, cod, saithe, ling, and tusk, the last two having been for centuries staple articles of export. The other commodities are cod-liver oil, sperm oil, butter, cattle, and native ponies, or Shelties. Knitted hosiery is the only manufacture of the islands since kelp has ceased to be profitable. The live stock consists of horses, cattle, sheep, and swine, all of which are diminutive in size, and are of varieties almost peculiar to Shetland. The principal crops are black oats, potatoes, and turnips. Wheat and barley seldom come to perfection owing to the humidity of the climate. Winter scarcely terminates before the end of April, and sets in about October, affording but a short period for the operations of the husbandman. In the high latitudes of Shetland the light of day at Midsummer never totally disappears, so that at midnight the smallest print may be easily read, but in winter the nights are proportionately long and dark, the sun being above the horizon not more than 5½ hours. Rabbits are numerous in most of the islands, and sea-fowl swarm along the cliffs, including cormorants, gulls, kittywakes, guillemots, with the sea eagle, or bonxie, and the great white owl. The capture of seals furnishes employment to a considerable number of persons. Occasionally shoals of the bottle-nosed whale, known to naturalists as delphinus deductor, approach the shore in pursuit of herrings, and are captured in vast quantities, yielding excellent oil. The minerals and metallic ores are of considerable variety, including chromate of iron, iron mica, found chiefly at Fitful Head, iron pyrites at Garthness, and in Unst and Fetlar, copper ore at Fair Island and Sandlooge, also porcelain clay, galena, asbestos, fluor spa, amianthus, soapstone, verd antique, petroleum, and garnets, but none of these in sufficient quantities to repay the expense of working, except the chromate of iron, which is largely exported in a crude state to be converted into a pigment dye or alloy. The strata consists of a few secondary rocks of the Devonian, or Old Red sandstone formation, extending from Bressa to Sumburgh Head, and vast masses of gneiss and mica slate, occupying the centre and southern parts of the Mainland, the whole of Yell, and part of Unst, the remainder of Unst being chiefly composed of serpentine and diallaze rock. The more remote islands of Foula and Fair Isle chiefly consist of sandstone and trap, with clay and mica slate in parts. The principal igneous rocks are sienite, serpentine, and granite, the last forming the great mass of Ronaness mountain, described above, and occupying part of the north-eastern shores of Foula Island.—For ecclesiastical purposes Shetland is divided into twelve parishes, forming the synod of Shetland. The Free Church has seven chapels, the Independents six, the United Presbyterians two, and the Wesleyans three. Education is so generally diffused, that all can read, and most are tolerably proficient in writing and arithmetic.

SHETTLESTON, a quoad sacra par. within the jurisdiction of the City of Glasgow, in the barony, parish, and shire of Lanark, Scotland, 3 miles S.E. of Glasgow, and 1 mile from Tollcross. It is a considerable village, situated on the high road from Glasgow to Edinburgh, and has in its vicinity a manufactory for boilers and agricultural implements. The collieries, weaving, and agriculture are the chief employments of the inhabitants. The living is in the presb. of Glasgow, in the patron. of the managers and subscribers. There is a Free Church preaching station.

SHEVINGTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Standish, hund. of Leyland, co. Lancaster, 3 miles N.W. of Wigan, its post town, and 1 mile N.E. of Gathurst railway station. The village, which is large, is situated on the Leeds and Liverpool canal, near the river Douglas. Many of the inhabitants are employed in the collieries, and in the chemical works situate at Appleby Bridge. There are National schools for both sexes.

SHEVIOCK, a par. in the S. div. of East hund., co. Cornwall, 6 miles from Devonport, its post town, and 3½ S.E. of St. Germans. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on Whitesand Bay, and at Wrinkle Cove is a pier. This par. is bounded on the N. by the river Lynker, and on the S. by the English Channel, and includes the hmlt. of Crofthole. A portion of the inhabitants are engaged in the pilchard fishery, but the greater number in agriculture. About three-fourths of the land are arable, and the remainder woodland with a small proportion of pasture. The soil is a light loam, except near the river, where it is a stiffish yellow clay. Numerous rivulets intersect the parish. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £335, and the glebe comprises 62 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £412. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, is an ancient structure, with a spired tower and two bells. The interior of the church contains effigies of the Dawnays, and a monument to Sir Edward and Lady Courtenay. There is a National school. The Wesleyans have a place of worship.

SHEWALTON, a vil. in the par. of Dundonald, co. Ayr, Scotland, 5 miles S.W. of Kilmarnock. It is situated near Shewalton Moss. The principal attraction is Shewalton House, a modern mansion. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the collieries.

SHIANT ISLES, a group of small islands or rocks on the E. side of Lewis, Western Isles, coast of Scotland, 5 miles E. of Hushinish Point.

SHIDFIELD, a tythg. and chplry. in the par. of Droxford, hund. of Bishop's-Waltham, co. Hants, 2½ miles S. of Bishop's-Waltham. It is situated near the line of the South-Western railway. The district includes the hmlt. of Shirrell Heath. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £100, in the patron. of the Rector of Droxford. The church, dedicated to St. John, was erected in 1829.

SHIEL, a loch and river in the co. of Inverness, Scotland. It lies between Loch Moidart and Ardgower, about 9 miles W. of Fort William. The loch is 15 miles long by 2 wide, and communicates with Loch Moidart.

SHIELD, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Longburgh, par. of Burgh-by-Sands, co. Cumberland, 8 miles N.E. of Carlisle, on the Ship canal.

SHIELDAG, a quoad sacra par. in the pars. of Applecross and Gairloch, cos. Ross and Cromarty, Scotland It extends in length about 18 miles, with an extreme breadth of about 15 miles. The surface is of an uneven character, rising behind the village into a gigantic cliff or headland. The bay, which is 2½ miles in length by 1 mile broad, extends southward of the middle division of Loch Torridon. The village of Shieldag is about 12 miles N.W. of Lochcarron, and 15 N.W. of Janetown. It is situated on Shieldag Loch, near Loch Torridon. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the fisheries. Shieldag is in the presb. of Lochcarron, in the patron. of the crown. The stipend of the minister is about £100. The church, which is a parliamentary one, was erected in 1827. There is also a Free church.

SHIELDHILL, a hmlt. in the par. of Tinwald, co. Dumfries, Scotland, 3½ miles from Lochmaben, and 6 N.E. of Dumfries. It is a station on the Lockerbie and Dumfries branch of the Caledonian railway.

SHIELD-HILL, a vil. in the par. of Kirkharle, Tindale ward, co. Northumberland, 11 miles N.E. of Hexham, and 10 E. of Bellingham, in the vale of the Wansbeck.

SHIELDS, NORTH, a tnshp., market town, and seaport in the par. and borough of Tynemouth, E. div. of Castle ward, co. Northumberland, 7½ miles N.E. of Newcastle, and 16 N.E. of Durham. It is a station on the Newcastle and Tynemouth railway, and is connected with South Shields, in the co. of Durham, by a steam ferry across the Tyne, and steam vessels ply every half-hour to Newcastle. The town of North Shields, which forms the principal part of the borough of Tynemouth, is situated on the northern bank of the river Tyne, which divides it from South Shields, but which together form one port, called the Port of Shields. Belonging to this port, which is a bonding port, are 208 steamers, and about 1,100 ships of the aggregate tonnage of 265,600, employing above 10,000 men. Although so admirably located for commerce at the mouth of the Tyne, it was not till near the commencement of the present century that Shields became a place of any considerable importance. So early as the reign of Edward I. the Prior of Tynemouth, to whom the whole of this district then belonged, seeing the advantages of its position, made great efforts to form a harbour, and established a market, but by a decree obtained by the citizens of Newcastle was obliged to abandon the works. The district suffered much from the plague in 1635. In the time of the Commonwealth Cromwell selected it as an eligible site for a new town, and caused an Act to be passed for forming quays and establishing a market. It was not, however, till the close of the last century that the restrictions upon the trade of the place were removed, and from that time the town dates its rapid growth in wealth, population, and commerce.—The town extends about a mile along the river bank, occupying, besides the tnshp. of North Shields, and the greater part of the tnshps. of Tynemouth, Preston, and Chirton. The streets in the older part of the town are narrow and overcrowded, but in the modern parts there are a number of streets and squares containing many well-built houses. The principal public buildings are the custom-house, situated on the New Quay. The townhall, a structure in the Elizabethan style, erected in 1844; the House of Correction in the Tynemouth road; the union workhouse, situated in the Preston road; the mechanics' institute, in Howard-street, erected in 1858; the temperance hall, in Norfolk-street, erected in 1845; a theatre, subscription library, assembly rooms, and commodious baths and washhouses in Saville-street, built in 1854; also salt-water baths at the Lower Lights, where is Clifford's Fort, a battery constructed in 1672, and commanding the entrance of the harbour. There is a spacious quay at which vessels of 300 tons burden can load. Many of the vessels entering the port are designed for the Newcastle trade, but are of too great burden to cross the bar, which has but seven feet water at ebb tide, though the river afterwards deepens to 8, 12, and even 24 feet up to the harbour. On the W. side of the bar are many dangerous rocks, rendering three lighthouses necessary; one close to the shore, called the Low Light, is 77 feet high; another at Dockway-square, is 133 feet high; and the other is built upon the cliff a little to the N.E. of Tynemouth Castle. North Shields is a place of great trade, especially in coals and iron, which are largely exported to London. Many vessels are employed in the foreign and colonial as well as in the coasting trades, and some are engaged in the Greenland and Davis Straits whale fishery. There are floating, dry, and graving docks, where shipbuilding is carried on, also several iron founderies and extensive works where chain cables, anchors, and windlasses are made. The manufacture of sail-cloth, cordage, masts, blocks, hats, and tobacco furnishes employment to many hands, as do also the breweries, salt pans, tile and earthenware works. —The town of North Shields, together with the townships of Chirton, Cullercoats, Preston, and Tynemouth, forms the borough of Tynemouth, covering an area of 7,158 acres, and having a population in 1861 of 34,021, of which number 9,595 are in the township of North Shields. It was created a parliamentary borough under the Reform Act, and returns one member to parliament. In 1849 it was made a municipal borough, comprising the three wards of North Shields, Percy, and Tynemouth, and is governed by a mayor, six aldermen, and eighteen town councillors. A local board of health was established in 1851. It is a polling-place for the county elections, and a petty sessions town, the borough magistrates meeting once a week, and the magistrates for the eastern division of Castle ward every Tuesday. The new County Court is held monthly, and the poor-law guardians meet every alternate Thursday.—The parish church of Tynemouth is a plain stone building with a square tower, situated at the eastern end of North Shields, in the Preston road. The new church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, is situated in Collingwood-street, and was completed in 1836 at a cost of about £4,000. It has an octagonal tower, and contains 1,200 sittings, half of which are free. A chaplain is also attached to the Tyne Sailors' Home, where Divine service is performed twice every Sunday. In 1864 the Bishop of Durham consecrated three new churches in the borough in one week—viz. St. Peter's, North Shields, containing about 600 sittings; St. John's, Percy Main; and St. Paul's, Cullercoats. These churches were built and endowed by the late Duke of Northumberland and the Ecclesiastical Commissioners. At the same time and by the same means parsonage houses were built for the mother church and five districts—viz. (in addition to the above) for Holy Trinity and Holy Saviour, which are also district chapelries, and where incumbents receive £200 per annum from the same source as the three above named. The Scotch church, in Howard-street, is a Grecian structure, erected in 1811, at a cost of near ££2,300. The United Presbyterians have two places of worship, one in Northumberland-square, erected in 1857, and the other in Norfolk-street. There are also places of worship belonging to the Wesleyan, Primitive, and New Connexion Methodists, Wesleyan Reformers, English Presbyterians, Baptists, Independents, Society of Friends, and a Jewish Synagogue. There are in the town National, British, and infant schools, also a school of industry for girls, partly endowed; the Royal Jubilee school in Albion-street, for boys, girls, and infants, also a Roman Catholic and a Presbyterian school. Excellent mutual insurance clubs against shipwreck, &c., flourish here. There are numerous charitable institutions, including the North Shields and Tynemouth dispensary, situated in Church-street; the Tyne Sailors' home, situated on the New Quay, and presented to the town in 1856 by the late Duke of Northumberland; the Master Mariners' Asylum, on the Tynemouth road, erected in 1838 at a cost of above £5,000, in front of which is a full length statue of the late Duke of Northumberland; the soup-kitchen in Wellington-street, besides various other local charities. There are two cemeteries; one in Albion-street, and the borough cemetery at Preston, which latter covers an area of 28 acres, and was opened in 1857.—Market day is on Saturday. Fairs are held on the last Friday in April and the first Friday in November.

SHIELDS, SOUTH, a seaport, market town, municipal and parliamentary borough, in the par. of Jarrow, E. div. of Chester ward, co. Durham, 6 miles N. of Sunderland, 9 E. of Newcastle, and 20 N.E. of Durham. There is a steam ferry across the river Tyne to North Shields in the county of Northumberland, and a railway terminus near the river bank, to which the York, Newcastle and Berwick, and various other lines converge, communicating with the extensive collieries in the neighbourhood, also weekly communication is maintained by steam-vessel with Hull and Berwick-on-Tweed. This town, which is of comparatively modern growth, occupies the site of a Roman station on the S. bank of the Tyne, and at the termination of the military road, since called the Wreken Dyke, where many antiquities have been found, including Roman coins, altars, pottery, a bath, inscribed stones, &c. After the Norman conquest it became part of the possessions of the Dean and Chapter of Durham, and was called Le Sheeles, or Shields, from the sheds built along the shore by the fishermen of the Tyne. In the 15th and two following centuries it became celebrated for its salt-works, so many as 160 pans being at one time employed, but that branch of industry has long since declined, and is now nearly extinct. In the 17th century the manufacture of window glass was first introduced into England, and works established at the Ouseburn, near Newcastle, and towards the close of that century John Cookson established his extensive works at South Shields, which continued to flourish for more than a century, the Messrs. Cookson and Cuthbert and Shortridge and Co. frequently paying £150,000 to government before the repeal of the glass duty, being one-fourth of the whole revenue raised from that tax. In the 18th century chemical works were established, but this manufacture was not fully developed till about 1826, from which time the town has vastly increased in extent and population. In January, 1790, the first life-boat, invented by Greathead, a native of this town, was successfully employed to rescue some mariners who were wrecked in the offing, and the model of this most useful invention is still preserved in the church of St. Hilda. In 1832 it was created a borough under the Reform Act, returning one member to parliament, the bounds including the township of Westoe and the suburb of Templetown. In 1848 it was constituted with North Shields a distinct port, having previously formed a portion of the port of Newcastle-on-Tyne, and in 1850 received its first charter of incorporation, by which it was divided into three wards, viz. South Shields, Westoe, and Jarrow, the municipal and parliamentary bounds being co-extensive. Under this charter it is governed by a mayor, who is also returning officer, 8 aldermen, and 24 councillors, with the style of mayor, aldermen, and burgesses of South Shields.—The town, which extends about two miles along the bank of the river from E. to W., is a busy and thriving place. The old part consists of a long, narrow, and inconvenient street, running parallel to the river, with several minor streets, while the streets in the modern part are wide and well built. The principal public buildings are the townhall and market house, built in 1768, and situated in a large square near the centre of the town. The union poorhouse is a plain brick building situated in Ocean-street. The savings-bank is a modern stone structure. The news-rooms occupy a position near the site of the Roman station. The literary and scientific institution was established in 1825, and possesses a library of 3,500 volumes. The working men's institute was established in 1850, and has a library of 5,000 volumes. The dispensary, established in 1821, is one of the most beneficial institutions in the town. There are besides a theatre, assembly-rooms, law-house, three commercial banks, gas-works, baths, and washhouses, erected by the corporation in 1854, at a cost of £3,000, and a branch customs-house, the main office being situated at North Shields. On the river bank are thirteen dry docks, two piers or breakwaters recently constructed on either side of the entrance to the harbour, a pilot tower, and three lighthouses at the mouth of the Tyne, which is partially obstructed by a bar of sand, having only 7 feet of water at ebb tide. The town is partially paved, lighted with gas, and well supplied with pure water from shafts sunk at Humbledon and Fullwell hills, by the Sunderland and South Shields Water Company, incorporated in 1852. The principal trade of the town is in coal, which is brought down the river from the neighbouring collieries in keels, to be reshipped at this port. Ship and boat building is extensively carried on, and there are rope walks, sail and block factories, iron-works, potteries, breweries, varnish manufactories, and extensive nautical and provision stores.—The population in 1851 was 28,974, and in 1861 35,239, inhabiting 4,443 houses. The corporation meetings are held at the townhall, and those of the borough magistrates at the police court. Petty sessions are held on Tuesday and Friday by the county magistrates, and on the other four days by the borough magistrates. A county court is held monthly; also courts baron and leet twice a year by the Dean and Chapter of Durham as lords of the manor of Westoe. South Shields gives name to a Poor-law Union, embracing six townships and the parishes of Boldon and Whitburn. The guardians meet every alternate Thursday.—The living is a perpet. cur. in the archdeac. and dioc. of Durham, val. £450, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, dedicated to St. Hilda, was of great antiquity, but was almost entirely rebuilt in 1811, with the exception of the square tower. It is considered the parish church, South Shields having been constituted an independent parish for ecclesiastical purposes in 1845, though forming part of Jarrow parish for civil purposes. There are besides the district churches of the Holy Trinity and St. Stephen, with St. Thomas's and St. Mary's, which have all been endowed by the Dean and Chapter of Durham with £300 per annum. Holy Trinity church is a modern structure, with a square tower containing an illuminated clock. St. Stephen's was erected in 1846, with a tower and spire. St. Thomas's was erected in 1818 at a cost of £2,400. St. Mary's, situatod near the new dock of the North-Eastern Railway Company, was built in 1861. There are two chapels belonging to the United Presbyterians, and one each to the English Presbyterians, Wesleyans, Primitive Methodists, Independents, and Baptists. The benevolent societies of the town are numerous and well supported, including the Master Mariners' Asylum and Annuity Society, which has 22 cottages, situated near the coast, belonging to it. There are National and charity schools, a school supported by the Presbyterians, and a marine school, recently founded by Dr. T. M. Winterbottom, of Westoe. Market day is on Saturday. Fairs are held on the last Wednesday in April, and on the Wednesday after the 11th November.

SHIELDYKES, a hmlt. in the par. of Alnwick, co. Northumberland, 5 miles S.W. of Alnwick.

SHIFFIELD, a div. in the par. of Aston Cantlow, co. Warwick, 2 miles S.W. of Henley-in-Arden.

SHIFFNAL, a div. in the hund. of Brimstree, co. Salop, contains the pars. of Albrighton, Badger, Beckbury, Boningale, Boscobel, Donington, Kemberton, Ryton, Shiffnal, Stockton, Sutton-Maddock, and Tong, comprising 34,270 acres.

SHIFFNAL, a par., post and market town in the Shiffnal div. of the hund. of Brimstree, co. Salop, 18 miles S.E. of Shrewsbury, and 8 S.E. of Newport. It is a station on the Shrewsbury and Birmingham railway. It is situated on the turnpike road from London to Holyhead, in a country abounding with coal, and iron-ore. The par., which is extensive, comprising nearly 10,000 acres, includes the tnshps. of Stanton, Wyke, and Woodside, part of Burlington, part of Crackley Bank, Drayton, Evelith, Hatton, Haughton, Hem, and Hinnington. Shiffnal was formerly called Idesall or Idsal, and was once held by Earl Morcar, the Saxon. After the Norman conquest it successively passed to various families of distinction, among whom were the Dunstanvilles, Badlesmeres, Bohuns, Mortimers, and Talbots. The town was originally situated to the westward of the church, but was entirely destroyed by fire towards the close of the 15th century, when it was rebuilt on its present site. It contains a bank, savings-bank, mechanics' institute, union poorhouse, and public baths. Petty and special sessions are held monthly, also a court-leet annually for the manor of Shiffnal. Many of the inhabitants are employed in the coal and iron mines, and in the numerous blast furnaces, rolling and slitting mills, foundries, and in the manufacture of paper. The soil is fertile, upon a substratum of light gravel, though in some parts sandstone predominates. The land is chiefly arable, producing excellent crops of wheat, barley, and beans. A new line of railway has been opened from Shiffnal to Madeley, embracing a wide district of mineral traffic. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £420. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is a cruciform structure, with a tower in the centre containing eight bells. The interior of the church contains handsome oak roofs and several monuments, including one to W. Wakeley, who lived 124 years, from the reign of Elizabeth to that of George I. The church was restored in 1810, and the body of it again in 1855. There is also a church at Priors Lee, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £150, in the patron. of the Vicar of Shiffnal. The church was rebuilt in 1837 by subscription. The parochial charities produce about £35 per annum. There are National schools for both sexes, and a grammar school, established in 1595 by John Aron; the latter has an exhibition in turn with other Shropshire schools to Christ Church College, Oxford. The Wesleyans, Primitive Methodists, and Baptists, have each a place of worship. Dr. Beddoes, the eminent physician, was born here in 1760, and died in 1808. Haughton Hall, Hatton Grange. Aston Hall and Decker Hill are the principal residences. The Lord Stafford is lord of the manor. Market day is on Tuesday. Fairs are held on the first Monday in April, 5th August, and 23rd November, for hops, horses, and cattle.

SHIFFORD, a chplry. in the par. and hund. of Bampton, co. Oxford, 3 miles S.E. of Bampton, and 6 from Witney. It is situated on the Thames. At this place Alfred the Great once held a great council. The chapel is an ancient edifice.

SHILBOTTLE, a par. in the E. div. of Coquetdale ward, co. Northumberland, 5 miles S.E. of Alnwick, its post town, and 3 N.W. of Warkworth railway station. The village is situated within a mile of the turnpike road from Alnwick to Morpeth, and is chiefly agricultural. The par. includes the tnshps. of Guyson, Hazon, Newton, Whittle, and Woodhouse. Excellent coal is obtained, and there are a stone quarry and tile works. About four-fifths of the land are arable, and the remainder pasture and meadow. The soil is of a clayey nature, but fertile, producing grain of all kinds in abundance. The subsoil is chiefly limestone and freestone. Great numbers of cattle and sheep are reared and fattened for the markets. A portion of the rectorial tithes belong to the vicar, and the remainder to various persons. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Durham, val. £222, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. James, was thoroughly repaired in 1793. The parochial charities produce about £22 per annum, of which £13 goes to Strother's schools. There is a parochial school for both sexes, principally supported by the Duke of Northumberland, also a Church Sunday-school.

SHILDON, a tnshp. and ecclesiastical district in the par. of St. Andrew-Auckland, N.W. div. of Darlington ward, co. Durham, 9 miles W. of Darlington, its post town, and 3 S.W. of Bishop Auckland. It has an extensive goods station on the Stockton and Darlington railway. The village is large, and a great number of the inhabitants are engaged in the collieries and iron works. The par. includes the hmlts. of New Shildon, Thickley, Eldon, and Midridge. There are extensive shops and warehouses for the use of the railroad. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Durham, val. £225. The church, dedicated to St. John, has a tower containing two bells. It was built in 1834. There are National and British schools; the latter has a small endowment. The Wesleyans, Wesleyan Association, and Primitive Methodists have each a place of worship. T. Smithson, R. D. Surtees, and E. Forster, Esqs., are lords of the manor.

SHILLELAGH, a bar. in the co. of Wicklow, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, containing the pars. of Aghowle, Liscolman, Mullincuff, and parts of Ardoyne, Carnew, Crecrin, Crosspatrick, and Moyacomb. The barony was taken from the O'Byrne family by Lord Strafford, and now belongs to Earl Fitzwilliam.

SHILLELAGH, an ecclesiastical district and vil. in the above bar., 4 miles N.N.W. of Carnew. It is a station on the Dublin, Wicklow, and Wexford line of railway. It is situated on the stream which bears its name, a tributary to the river Derry. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Ferns, val. £89, in the patron. of the Incumbent of Carnew. The church was built by Earl Fitzwilliam. Shillelagh was once covered by a forest. It gives name to a Poor-law Union, consisting of 19 electoral divisions, and lying in the counties of Wicklow and Carlow.

SHILLELOGHER, a bar. in the co. of Kilkenny, comprising the pars. of Ballybur, Burnchurch, Castleinch, Danesfort, Earlstown, Grange, Grangekilree, Kilferagh, Outrath, Tullamaine, and parts of Ennisnag Kells, Killaloe, Stonecrathy, St. Canice, St. John's, St. Patrick's, Treadingstown, and Tullaghanbrogne, together containing 36,700 acres.

SHILLFORD, a vil. in the par. of Neilston, co. Renfrew, Scotland, 2 miles from Neilston, and 55 S.W. of Edinburgh.

SHILLINGFORD, a hmlt. in the par. of Warborough, co. Oxford, 2 miles N. of Wallingford, on the Thames.

SHILLINGFORD ST. FAITH. See SHELLINGFORD, co. Berks.

SHILLINGFORD ST. GEORGE, a par. in the hund. of Exminster, co. Devon, 3 miles S.W. of Exeter, its post town. The parish, which is of small extent, is situated on the old Plymouth road, and is wholly agricultural. The soil is of a loamy nature, with a subsoil of red rock. There is no village, only a few farmhouses. The living is a rect. annexed to that of Dunchideock, in the dioc. of Exeter. The church, dedicated to St. George, has a tower, and contains a brass of Sir William Huddersfield, bearing date 1499. There is a school for both sexes. Near the church are traces of a priory cell, which was formerly in connection with Tormorham Abbey, near Torquay. Sir L. V. Palk is lord of the manor.

SHILLINGLEY, a seat of the Earl of Winterton, in the par. of Haslemere, co. Surrey, 2 miles from Haslemere, and 13 S. of Guildford.

SHILLING-OKEFORD, or SHILLINGSTONE, a par. in the hund. of Cranborne, co. Dorset, 5½ miles N.W. of Blandford Forum, and 4 E. of Sturminster. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Stour. The land is chiefly in pasture. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £370, and the glebe comprises 71 acres. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £460, in the patron. of Exeter College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to the Holy Rood, has a square embattled tower. There is a National school. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. In the village are traces of an ancient cross. Lord Rivers is lord of the manor.

SHILLINGSTONE, a station on the Somerset and Dorset railway, between Blandford and Sturminster Newton.

SHILLINGTHORPE, a hmlt. in the par. of Braceborough, co. Lincoln, 3 miles N.E. of Stamford, on a branch of the river Glen.

SHILTON, a par., partly in the hund. of Faringdon, co. Berks, and partly in that of Bampton, co. Oxford, 2½ miles S.E. of Burford. Bampton is its post town. The village, which is small, is situated in a valley watered by a rivulet. The inhabitants are wholly engaged in agriculture. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Enclosure Act in 1794. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £112. The church is an ancient edifice, standing in the adjoining parish of Alvescott. The parochial charities produce about £42 per annum, of which £8 goes towards the support of a school. John Gwynne, Esq., is lord of the manor.

SHILTON, a par. in the Kirkby div. of the hund of Knightlow, co. Warwick, 6 miles N.E. of Coventry, its post town. It is a station on the Trent Valley section of the London and North-Western railway. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the road from Coventry to Wolvey, near the Oxford canal. The par. contains the hmlt. of Barnacle. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the ribbon manufacture and in agriculture. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £76, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is an ancient structure, with a square tower containing four bells. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes for this parish and that of Anstey. The manor belongs to the Dean and Canons of Windsor.

SHILTON, EARL. See EARL-SHELTON, co. Leicester.

SHILVINGTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Morpeth, W. div. of Castle ward, co. Northumberland, 4½ miles S.W. of Morpeth.

SHILVINGTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Portisham, co. Dorset, 5 miles S.W. of Dorchester.

SHILVODAN-GRANGE, a vil. in the bar. of Upper Toome, co. Antrim, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 4 miles N.E. of Randalstown, on the road from Antrim to Ballymena.

SHIMNA, a stream of the co. of Down, Ireland, rises in the Mourne mountains, and falls into Dundrum Bay, near Newcastle.

SHIMPLING, a par. in the hund. of Diss, co. Norfolk, 3½ miles N.E. of Diss, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on a branch of the river Waveney, and is wholly agricultural. Two-thirds of the land are arable, and the remainder pasture and waste. Shimpling Place is now a farmhouse. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £222. The church, dedicated to St. George, has a circular tower containing four bells. The interior of the church is decorated with carved oak and some stained windows, and on the steeple is a representation of St. George and the Dragon. The parochial charities produce about £13 per annum.

SHIMPLING, or SHIMPLINGTHORNE, a par. in the hund. of Babergh, co. Suffolk, 7 miles S. of Bury St. Edmund's, and 4½ N.W. of Lavenham. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on a branch of the river Stour, and is wholly agricultural. It includes several estates with manorial rights, as Chadacre Hall, the ancient seat of the Plampin family; Shimpling Thorn, of the Fiskes; and Shimpling and Gifford's Halls, the property of Melford Hospital. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £600, and the glebe comprises 83 acres. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ely. The church is dedicated to St. George. The parochial charities produce about £3 per annum. Chadacre Hall is the principal residence.

SHIN, or SKIN, a loch and river in the par. of Lairg, co. Sutherland, Scotland, 15 miles N.W. of Dornoch. It is about 15 miles in length by 2 in breadth, and is supplied by a stream rising under Ben Clybric.

SHINCLIFFE, a tnshp. in the par. of St. Oswald, S. div. of Easington ward, co. Durham, 2 miles S.E. of Durham, its post town. It is a station on the North of England railway. The river Weare passes through the township. A portion of the inhabitants are engaged in the collieries. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Durham, val. £98, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church was built and endowed in 1826 by the patrons. There is a National school for both sexes.

SHINDELLA, a small lough in the co. of Galway, Ireland.

SHINETON. See SHEINTON, co. Salop.

SHINFIELD, a par., partly in the hunds. of Charlton and Theale, co. Berks, and partly in the hund. of Amesbury, co. Wilts, 4 miles S.E. of Reading, its post town. The village, which is considerable, is situated on the road from Reading to Basingstoke, near the river Loddon, and is chiefly agricultural. The par. includes the hmlt. of Hartley-Drummer. The great tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £930, besides a glebe of 15 acres, and the vicarial for one of £200, with a glebe of 29 acres. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £200, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Hereford. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient edifice, with a low tower. The interior of the church contains several monuments. There is also a district church at Grazeley, the living of which is a perpet. cur.,* val. £35. The parochial charities produce about £84, of which £58 goes to Pigott's free school. There is also a National school. The Wesleyans and Independents have each a place of worship. Hartley-Court, the Manor House, Goodrest Lodge, and Highlands, are the principal residences. Alexander Cobham, Esq., is lord of the manor.

SHINGAY, a par. in the hund. of Armingford, co. Cambridge, 7 miles N.W. of Royston, and 6 N. of Ashwell railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Cam, and is wholly agricultural. Here was formerly a preceptory of the Knights Hospitallers of St. John of Jerusalem, founded by Roger de Montgomery's daughter Sybilla in 1140. Its revenue at the suppression was valued at £175. The soil is rich and loamy, with a subsoil of clay. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic. of Wendy, in the dioc. of Ely. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The Earl of Hardwicke is lord of the manor and sole landowner.

SHINGHAM, a par. in the hunds. of Clackclose and South Greenhoe, co. Norfolk, 4½ miles S.W. of Swaffham, its post town. The village, which is inconsiderable, is wholly agricultural. The surface is generally flat, and the soil of a sandy nature. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £105, and the glebe comprises 24 acres. The living is a rect.* annexed to that of Beechamwell All Saints, in the dioc. of Norwich. The church is dedicated to St. Botolph. The register dates from 1762.

SHINGLES, THE, a stony bank between the Needles and Hurst Castle, co. Hants, about 2 miles in length, with channels at either end marked out by buoys.

SHINGLEWELL. See IFIELD, co. Kent.

SHINNEL, a stream, co. Dumfries, Scotland, rising under Black Hill, and joining the Skarr near Penpont.

SHINNY, a vil. in the bar. of East Balrothery, co. Dublin, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles N. of Rush, not far from Shinny lough and harbour.

SHINRONE, a par., post and market vil. in the bar. of Clonlisk, King's County, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 26 miles S.W. of Tullamore, and 81 from Dublin. The soil is mostly good, with a small proportion of bog. The village is situated near the river Shannon, and contains a police station, a dispensary, and fever hospital. Petty sessions are held once a week. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Killaloe, val. with two others £487, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was built in 1819 by means of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits. There is a Roman Catholic chapel, united to that of Kilmurry-Ely, also two Wesleyan meeting-houses. There are four public and three private day schools. Cangort Park, the principal seat, occupies the site of the castle, which was destroyed in 1641. Fairs are held 9th July and 21st November.

SHIPBORNE, a par. in the hund. of Wrotham, lathe of Aylesford, co. Kent, 4 miles N.E. of Tunbridge, its post town, and 6 S.E. of Sevenoaks. The village, which is of small extent, is chiefly agricultural. The land is partly in hop grounds. The living is a don. cur. in the dioc. of Canterbury. The church, dedicated to St. Giles, has a tower containing five bells. In the churchyard are a number of yew trees. The parochial charities produce about £5 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes. The Lodge is the principal residence. Christopher Smart, the poet and translator of Horace, was born here in 1722, and died in 1771.

SHIPBROOK, a tnshp. in the par. of Davenham, hund. of Northwich, co. Chester, 3 miles S.E. of Northwich, its post town, and 2½ from the Hartford railway station. The township, which consists of a few scattered farms, is situated on the Grand Trunk canal, and near the river Dane. The Cheshire hounds meet in this place. The land is chiefly in pasture. J. H. Harper, Esq., is lord of the manor.

SHIPDEN, formerly a par. in the N. div. of Erpingham hund., co. Norfolk, adjacent to Cromer. It had once a church, dedicated to St. Peter, but this having been swept away by an inundation of the sea, the parochial rights have long since lapsed.

SHIPDHAM, a par. and post town in the hund. of Mitford, co. Norfolk, 5 miles S.W. of East Dereham, 17 N.E. of Thetford, and 4 S.W. of Yaxham railway station. The village, which is about a mile in length, is situated on the road from East Dereham to Thetford, and near the river Blackwater. The inhabitants are chiefly agricultural. It had formerly a market, under a charter obtained by the Bishop of Ely, in the 29th year of Henry III., but long since discontinued. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £1,120. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient building, with a lofty tower containing six bells. The parochial charities produce about £313, of which £70 goes to Bullock's free school, and £125 for fuel allotments. The Wesleyans, Independents, and Primitive Methodists have each a place of worship. There is a National school for both sexes. A fair is held on the 30th June. There was anciently a hermitage, with a chapel dedicated to St. Thomas-à-Becket, for the repair of which the Bishop of Ely, in 1487, granted 40 days' indulgence to all who might contribute.

SHIPHAM, a par. in the hund. of Winterstoke, co. Somerset, 3 miles N. of Axbridge, 7 from Yatton railway station, and 1½ mile S.E. of Churchill. Bristol is its post town. The village is situated among the Mendip hills, and on the turnpike road from Bristol to Langport. A large portion of the inhabitants are employed in agriculture. The substratum abounds in minerals, and calamine, zinc, and lead mines were formerly in operation. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £132 17*s., and the glebe comprises 14 acres. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Bath and Well, val. £157, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, dedicated to St. Leonard, was erected in 1843, and has a tower containing five bells. The register dates from Elizabeth s reign. There is a National school for both sexes, in which a Sunday-school is also held. The Wesleyans and Baptists have each a place of worship. The Dean and Chapter of Wells are lords of the manor. Fairs are held on the 27th April and 17th November, chiefly for cattle.

SHIPLAKE, a par. in the hund. of Binfield, co. Oxford, 4½ miles from Reading, its post town, and 3 S. of Henley-on-Thames. It is a station on the Twyford and Henley branch of the Great Western railway. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Thames. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £147, in the patron. of the Dean and Canons of Windsor. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, has a square tower containing five bells; a monument to the Rev. James Granger, author of the Biographical History of England, who was vicar of this parish, and died in 1776; also tombs of the Blundens and Plowdens, of Shiplake House. The church was restored and re-roofed a few years back. The parochial charities produce about £13 per annum.

SHIPLAKE, a hund. in the rape of Pevensey, co. Sussex, contains the pars. of Chalvington, Chiddingley, East Hoathly, Laughton, Ripe, and Waldron, comprising an area of 21,270 acres.

SHIPLET, or SHIPSLADE, a hmlt. in the par. of Bleadon, co. Somerset, 5 miles N.W. of Axbridge.

SHIPLEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Heanor, hund. of Morleston, co. Derby, 7 miles N.E. of Derby, its post town, 6 S.E. of Belper, and 2 S. of Heanor. It has a station at Shipley Gate, on the Erewash Valley branch of the Midland railway. A portion of the inhabitants are engaged in the collieries, from which coal of excellent quality is obtained. The mines are worked by a steam-engine. The village, which is small, is situated near the river Erewash and the Nutbrook canal. Several branch lines of railway communicate with the collieries. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Lichfield. The church is a modern edifice. In 1842 a school was established, at the expense of A. M. Mundy, Esq., who is lord of the manor and sole landowner. Shipley Hall is on an eminence, within a well-wooded park.

SHIPLEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Claverley, co. Salop, 6 miles N.E. of Bridgnorth.

SHIPLEY, a hmlt. in the par. of Wolsingham, N.W. div. of Darlington ward, co. Durham, 3 miles S.E. of Wolsingham, and 13 S.W. of Durham, near the river Wear.

SHIPLEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Eglingham, co. Northumberland, 5 miles N.W. of Alnwick. It is wholly agricultural. The Earl of Tankerville and J. H. H. Atkinson, Esq., are lords of the manor.

SHIPLEY, a par. in the hund. of West Grinstead, rape of Bramber, co. Sussex, 6 miles S.W. of Horsham, its post town. The village, which is chiefly agricultural, s situated on a branch of the river Adur. The parish is extensive, comprising about 5,656 acres, of which three-fourths are arable, and the remainder pasture and woodland. The soil is clayey, producing good wheat crops. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £98. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient Norman structure, with a tower and enriched circular arches at the W. entrance of the nave. It was repaired and enlarged in 1831. In the chancel is a monument to Sir Thomas Caryll. The register commences from 1609. There is an endowed boys' school, also a girls' school. Knapp Castle is the principal residence. In the grounds are the remains of the old castle, including the walls and a slight portion of the keep. This castle was visited by King John in 1206 and 1215, and was garrisoned during the parliamentary war. Sir Percy Burrell, Bart., is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

SHIPLEY WITH HEATON, a tnshp. and ecclesiastical district in the par. of Bradford, wap. of Morley, West Riding co. York, 11 miles from Leeds, its post town, and 3 N.W. of Bradford. It is a station on the Leeds and Bradford branch of the Midland railway. It is an extensive and populous village, situated on the S. side of the river Aire, at the junction of the Leeds and Bradford with the Bradford, Skipton, and Colne railway, also near the confluence of the Bradford and Leeds and Liverpool canals. It comprises, besides the vil. of Shipley, the hmlts. of Shipley-Fields, Moor-Head, and Heaton Royds. The village, which is well built, contains a mechanics' institute, erected in 1855. It is lighted with gas, and partially paved. There is a local board of health. A portion of the inhabitants are employed in the woollen and paper mills. In the vicinity are numerous quarries of freestone, and collieries producing coal of excellent quality. Adjoining the township of Shipley is the hamlet of Saltaire, with an extensive weaving mill, covering an area of 5½ acres, and employing 3,000 hands. It was built by Titus Salt, Esq., who also founded the hamlet for the factory operatives, and which now contains over 500 houses. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £100, in the patron. of the Vicar of Bradford. The church, dedicated to St. Paul, has a tower containing six bells. There is a National school for both sexes, also a Church Sunday-school. The Baptists, Wesleyans, Primitive and Reformed Methodists, have each a place of worship. A fair for cattle is held on the third Monday in October.

SHIPMEADOW, a par. in the hund. of Wangford, co. Suffolk, 2½ miles W. of Beccles, its post town, and 3 E. of Bungay. The village, which is small and straggling, is situated on the road from Beccles to Bungay, and near the river Waveney. The inhabitants are chiefly agricultural. The Wangford union poorhouse is situated in this parish. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £220, and the glebe comprises 27 acres. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £214. The church, dedicated to St. Bartholomew, has a square embattled tower. The whole structure has been thoroughly restored, and a slate roof added in lieu of the old thatched one. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum. There is a school for both sexes. In 1854 a female penitentiary for the counties of Norfolk and Suffolk was established here. Mrs. A. M. Suckling is lady of the manor.

SHIPPON, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of St. Helen, hund. of Horner, co. Berks, 1 mile N.W. of Abingdon. The village is small and wholly agricultural. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic. of Abingdon, in the dioc. of Oxford. The church is an ancient edifice.

SHIPSLADE. See SHIPLET, co. Somerset.

SHIPSTON-ON-STOUR, a par. and market town, formerly in the upper div. of Oswaldslow hund., co. Worcester, but now in the Blockley div. of Kineton hund., 16 miles S.W. of Warwick, and 83 N.W. of London. The Stratford-upon-Avon and Moreton railway passes about 3 miles distant, to which there is a branch tramway for conveyance of goods. This place, which takes its name from the Saxon word scep, "a sheep," for the breeding of which animal it has long been celebrated, was formerly a township in the parish of Tredington, but was constituted a distinct parish by Act of Parliament in the reign of George I. It is surrounded by the counties of Warwick and Gloucester, from the former of which it is separated by the river Stour. The soil is fertile, but clayey, upon a substratum of blue lias, containing numerous fossil shells. There are extensive nursery grounds at Furzehill, and on the Stratford road. The population in 1851 was 1,846, and in 1861, 1,760 the decrease being attributed to migration. The town is old and irregularly built, but contains some good houses. There is a branch bank connected with the Stonebridge and Kidderminster bank, a savings-bank, and union poorhouse. The trade is now confined to agricultural produce, the manufacture of shag, which was formerly extensively carried on, having declined. In the vicinity is Weston House, the seat of Sir George Philips. Shipston is a polling-place for the eastern division of the county. Petty sessions are held at the "George Inn" every alternate Saturday. The Poor-law Union comprises 13 parishes in Gloucestershire, 20 in Warwickshire, and 4 in Worcestershire. The superintendent registry and new County Court districts are co-extensive with the Poor-law Union. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £700. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Worcester, val. with that of Tidmington, £738, in the patron. of the dean and chapter, who present to the living alternately with Jesus College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Edmund, was rebuilt in 1855, but the old tower at the W. end, containing six bells, still remains. The interior contains several monuments and brasses. There are places of worship for Wesleyans, Baptists, and Society of Friends. The parochial charities produce about £150 per annum, chiefly arising from the bequests of John Pittway and George Marshall, of which £46 is applied to the support of the National schools, and the remainder distributed among the poor of the town. Market day is on Saturday, and there is a monthly fair for cattle. Fairs are held on the third Tuesday in April, 22nd June, last Tuesday in August, and Tuesday following 10th October.

SHIPTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Winslow, co. Bucks, 1 mile from Winslow, and 6 miles S.E. of Buckingham. It is situated near the line of the London and North-Western railway, and was given by King Offa to St. Alban's Abbey in 794.

SHIPTON, a tnshp. in the par. of St. Helen, co. Berks, 1 mile N.W. of Abingdon.

SHIPTON, a par. in the upper div. of the hund. of Munslow, 6½ miles S.W. of Much-Wenlock, its post town, and within the liberties of which borough it is included, and 8 E. of Church Stretton railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Corve, and on the turnpike road from Much Wenlock to Ludlow. In the vicinity, near Larden, is an encampment, said to be of British origin. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The soil consists of a rich loam, with a subsoil of limestone, which is quarried. This parish was formerly a chapelry in the parish of Wenlock. The living is a don. cur. in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £3. The church, dedicated to St. James, is an ancient stone structure, with a bolfry and three bells. The interior of the church contains monuments of the Mytton family. Shipton Hall and Larden Hall are the principal residences. T. Mytton, Esq., is lord of the manor.

SHIPTON, a chplry. in the par. of Market-Weighton, partly in the Holme Beacon div. of Harthill wap., and partly in the lib. of St. Peter's, East Riding co. York, 2 miles N.W. of Market-Weighton, its post town. It is a station on the York and Berwick railway. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Toomer, and is chiefly agricultural. The soil is a mixture of gravel and sand. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1773. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic. of Market-Weighton, in the dioc. of York. The church is an ancient structure, with an embattled tower containing two bells. The parochial charities produce about £35 per annum. There is a village school, with an endowment of £8 per annum. The Primitive Methodists and Wesleyans have each a place of worship, and in the latter a Sunday-school is held. Lord Londesborough is lord of the manor.

SHIPTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Overton, wap. of Bulmer, North Riding co. York, 6 miles N.W. of York, its post town, and 2 N.W. of Overton. It is a station on the Great Northern railway. The village, which is of small extent, is situated near the river Ouse, and on the great North road from London to Edinburgh. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The soil is of a loamy nature, with a subsoil of clay. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1812. The living is a perpet. cur.* annexed to the vic. of Overton, in the dioc. of York. The church has a spired tower containing three bells. It has several stained windows. There is an endowed grammar school, founded by Ann Middleton in 1655, also a National school, erected at the expense of the Honourable Lydia Dawnay. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a place of worship. The Hon. Payan Dawnay is lord of the manor and chief landowner.

SHIPTON-BELLINGER, a par. in the upper half div. of Thorngate hund., Andover div. of co. Hants, 4½ miles S.W. of Ludgershall, and 9 W. of Andover. Marlborough is its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. The land is chiefly arable. The great tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £118, and the vicarial for £167, with a glebe of 3 acres. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £168. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The Dean of Winchester is lord of the manor.

SHIPTON-GEORGE, a parochial chplry. in the hund. of Godderthorne, Bridport div. of co. Dorset, 3 miles E. of Bridport, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is chiefly agricultural. The par. contains Broad Sturthill. There are some remains of the ancient manor house. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect. of Burton-Bradstock, in the dioc. of Sarum. The church, dedicated to St. Martin, is an ancient edifice with a low embattled tower. The Earl of Ilchester is lord of the manor.

SHIPTON-LEE, a hmlt. in the par. of Quainton, hund. of Ashendon, co. Bucks, 1 mile N.W. of Quainton, and 6 miles S.W. of Winslow. It formerly had a chapel.

SHIPTON-MOYNE, a par. in the hund. of Longtree, co. Gloucester, 2½ miles S.E. of Tetbury, its post town, and 9 from Tetbury Road railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is chiefly agricultural. The soil is loam and clay, upon a subsoil of stiff clay and oolitic rock. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £345, and the glebe comprises 173 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £442. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is an ancient stone structure, with a low square embattled tower. The parochial charities produce about £18 per annum. There is an endowed National school for both sexes. The Beaufort hounds meet in this parish. T. S. Estcourt, Esq., is lord of the manor.

SHIPTON-OLIFFE, a par. in the hund. of Bradley, co. Gloucester, 6 miles N.W. of Northleach, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the London road, and near the Cotswold hills. The parish of Shipton-Sollers was united to this by Act of Parliament in 1776. The surface is hilly, and the soil thin, resting on a substratum of limestone rock. The tithes were commuted in 1792 under an Enclosure Act for 453 acres of land. The living is a rect. with that of Shipton-Sollers annexed, in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, joint val. £430. The church, dedicated to St. Oswald, is an ancient structure.

SHIPTON SOLLARS, a par. in the hund. of Bradley, co. Gloucester, 6¼ miles N.W. of Northleach, its post town, and 7 from Cheltenham. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. The living is a rect. annexed to that of Shipton-Oliffe, in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol. The church is dedicated to St. Mary.

SHIPTON-UNDER-WYCHWOOD, a par. in the hund. of Chadlington, co. Oxford, 6 miles S.W. of Chipping Norton, its post town, 4 N.E. of Burford, and 1 mile N.E. of the Shipton station on the West Midland section of the Great Western railway. It is situated on the river Evenlode, and comprises the chplry. and the hmlts. of Milton, Langley, and Lineham. It was formerly the seat of the Lacys of Pudlicot, and at Langley, in this parish, was a royal hunting seat. The impropriation belongs to the Professorship of Civil Law in the University of Oxford. The living is a vic.* with the cur. of Ramsden annexed, in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £335, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is old, with some traces of Norman architecture. It contains a sculptured stone pulpit and an octagonal font, ornamented with the arms of the Earls of Warwick. At the W. end of the nave is a painting of the Resurrection, and in the N. aisle an altar-tomb, with a recumbent effigy of a female. There is also a district church at Seafield, the living of which is a perpet. cur.,* val. £55. The parochial charities produce about £97 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes. There are traces of three religious houses, and an ancient building converted into the "Crown Inn." At Milton three singular stone vessels were found in digging the quarries.

SHIPTON-UPON-CHERWELL, a par. in the hund. of Wootton, co. Oxford, 2½ miles S.E. of Woodstock, its post town, and 6 from Oxford. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Cherwell, and is chiefly agricultural. About two-thirds of the land are arable, and the remainder pasture. The Oxford canal passes through the parish. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1768. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £310. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a modern edifice, with a square embattled tower. It was rebuilt in 1832, at the cost of Mr. Turner. There is a Sunday-school.

SHIPWASH, a sandbank off the coast of Essex, 15 miles E. of Harwich. It lies in the fair way to the N. after quitting the Thames mouth, in lat. 52° 2′ N. and long. 1° 38′ E.

SHIRA, a stream of the co. of Argyle, Scotland, flows through Glenshira, to which it gives name, to Loch Dubh.

SHIRBURN, a par. in the hund. of Pirton, co. Oxford, 6 miles S. of Tetsworth, its post town, and 1 mile N.E. of Watlington. The village, which is of small extent, is situated under the Chiltern hills, and is wholly agricultural. The soil is chiefly a chalky loam alternated with gravel. The tithes were commuted for land and corn-rents, under an Enclosure Act in 1805, and subsequently exchanged for a rent-charge of £80 to the vicar, and £14 10*s.* to the Earl of Macclesfield. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £112. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is a stone edifice with a square tower containing a clock and two bells. The interior has several monuments. There is a Church school for both sexes. Shirburn Castle, the residence of the Earl of Macclesfield, is an ancient moated mansion with a drawbridge. It is built on the site of a still more ancient castle. There is a collection of paintings, and several portraits of eminent persons, including one of Catherine Parr. The Earl of Macclesfield is lord of the manor.

SHIRBURN, a stream of the co. of Warwick, joins the river Sow above Stoneleigh.

SHIREBROOK, a chplry. in the par. of Pleasley, hund. of Scarsdale, co. Derby, 10 miles N.E. of Alfreton, and 5 N.W. of Mansfield, on the border of Nottinghamshire. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £62, in the patron. of the Rector of Pleasley.

SHIRE-GREEN, a vil. in the par. of Ecclesfield, West Riding co. York, 4 miles N. of Sheffield.

SHIRE-HALL-YARD, an ext. par. place in the borough of Ipswich, co. Suffolk.

SHIREHAMPTON, a tythg. and chplry. in the par. of Westbury-on-Trym, lower div. of Henbury hund., co. Gloucester, 5 miles N.W. of Bristol, its post town. The village is situated at the mouth of the river Avon. Off the coast are King-Road and Hung-Road, two anchorages for ships. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £731. The church is dedicated to St. Michael. There are numerous small charities. The Wesleyans have a chapel, and there is a National school. Omnibuses run to Bristol.

SHIRE-NEWTON, a par. in the upper div. of Caldicott hund., co. Monmouth, 4 miles W. of Chepstow, its post town, and 10 from Usk. It is situated on an eminence overlooking a fertile valley. It was formerly of more importance than at present. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £310, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church is dedicated to St. Thomas-à-Becket. The parochial charities produce about £4 per annum. There is a National school.

SHIREOAKS, a tnshp. in the par. of Worksop, wap. of Bassetlaw, co. Notts, 3 miles N.W. of Worksop, its post town. It is a station on the Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire railway. It is situated on the Chesterfield canal, near the Old Shire Oak, which branches into York and Derby. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £90. The church was founded in 1861 by the late Duke of Newcastle, and consecrated on 18th October, 1863. The E. window was presented by the Prince of Wales, who laid the first stone, and other windows by the present Duke of Newcastle, Mr. Gladstone, and others.

SHIRESHEAD, an ecclesiastical district in the par. of Cockerham, hund. of Lonsdale South of the Sands, co. Lancaster, 4 miles N.W. of Garstang, its post town. The village is small, and chiefly agricultural. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £93, in the patron. of the vicar. The church is a modern structure dedicated to St. Paul.

SHIRGARTON, a vil. in the par. of Kippen, co. Perth, Scotland, near Kippen.

SHIRLAND, a par. in the hund. of Scarsdale, co. Derby, 2 miles N.W. of Alfreton, its post town, and about the same distance from the Stretton station on the Midland railway. Shirland was formerly a market town, and is still a considerable village. The par. includes the hmlts. of Hallfield and Higham. A portion of the inhabitants are employed in frame-work knitting, but the greater number in agriculture. The parish is watered by the river Amber, which flows through it. About a third of the land is arable, and the remainder pasture and woodland. The soil is clayey, and the substratum contains seams of coal. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £175, and the glebe comprises 60 acres. There is also a rent-charge of £19, payable to the Rector of Morton. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £215. The church, dedicated to St. Leonard, was built in the 14th century, and was thoroughly restored in 1848. The interior contains effigies of the De Greys, also a monument to the Revell family bearing date 1510. The parochial charities produce about £25 per annum. There is a National also a free school for both sexes, at Hatfield-gate, endowed by Edward Revell with about £25 per annum. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. Gladwin Turbell, Esq., is lord of the manor.

SHIRLEY, a par. in the hund. of Appletree, co. Derby, 4½ miles S.E. of Ashbourne, its post town, and 10 N.W. of Derby. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. The par. includes the tnshp. of Yeaveley and Stydd. It was formerly the property of the Shirley family, Earls Ferrers, whose ancient seat is now converted into a farmhouse. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £153 17s., and the glebe comprises 9 acres. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £179. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, was thoroughly restored in 1842. There is also a district church at Yeaveley, erected in 1840, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £65. The parochial charities produce about £3 per annum. There is a National school, built in 1844 by voluntary contributions. The Primitive Methodists have a place of worship. Shirley Park is a meet for the Hoar Cross hounds.

SHIRLEY, an ecclesiastical district in the par. of Millbrook, hund. of Buddesgate, co. Hants, 2 miles N.W. of Southampton. It is situated on the shore of the Southampton Water, and contains, besides the vil. of Shirley, the hmlts. of Hill, Cocksford, and Aldermoor, and a tract called Shirley Common, which has been recently enclosed. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £350. The church, which is situated on Shirley Common, has a square tower, and was built and endowed in 1836 by the Rev. W. Orger, at an expense of £3,800. Over the altar is a painting of the crucifixion. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. There are National and Sunday schools.

SHIRLEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Aymestry, co. Hereford, 6 miles N.W. of Leominster.

SHIRLEY, a hmlt. and ecclesiastical district in the par. of Croydon, first div. of Wallington hund., co. Surrey, 2 miles E. of Croydon, its post town. The village, which forms the suburb of Croydon, contains several good houses, and many villas, including Shirley House, the seat of the Earl of Eldon, and Shirley Park. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £70, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church is modern, and dedicated to St. John.

SHIRLEY, a tythg. in the par. of Sopley, co. Hants, 4 miles N.E. of Christchurch.

SHIRLEY-STREET, a vil. in the par. of Solihull, hund. of Hemlingford, co. Warwick, 6 miles S.E. of Birminghan, on the river Blythe, between the Warwick and Stratford-on-Avon canal. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £120. The church is dedicated to St. James, and was enlarged in 1841. There is a National school for both sexes.

SHIRLEYWICH, a vil. in the par. of Weston-on-Trent, co. Stafford, 4 miles N.E. of Stafford, on the Grand Trunk canal and river Trent.

SHIRMIRS, a stream of the co. of Kirkcudbright, Scotland, falls into Loch Ken.

SHIRRELL HEATH, a hmlt. in the tythg. of Shidfield, par. of Droxford, co. Hants, 2 miles S. of Bishop's Waltham, near the line of the London and South-Western Railway.

SHISKEN, a hmlt. in the par. of Kilmory, Isle of Arran, co. Bute, Scotland, 6 miles from Kilmory. The village is situated on the western coast of the island. A vale named after the village extends to a considerable distance into the interior, and is the most productive portion of the island. There are a Free church and a parochial school.

SHITLINGTON, or SHILLINGTON, a par. in the hunds. of Flitt and Clifton, co. Bedford, 4 miles E. of Silsoe, 6 S.E. of Ampthill, and 13 S.W. of Bedford. The village, which is considerable, is situated on a branch of the river Ivel. The land is partly in common. The par. comprises the hmlts. of Holwell and Lower Stondon. The impropriation belongs to the President and Fellows of Trinity College, Cambridge. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Enclosure Act in 1802. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £128, in the patron. of Trinity College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has a tower, rebuilt, in 1750, and five bells. In the church are two brasses bearing date 1400. The parochial charities produce about £12 per annum. There is a place of worship for the Dissenters. George Musgrave, Esq., is lord of the manor.

SHITLINGTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Thornhill, lower div. of Agbrigg wap., West Riding co. York, 5½ miles S.W. of Wakefield. It is situated in the vale of the Calder, and comprises the hmlts. of Over, Middle, and Nether Shitlington, with Midgley. The road from Wakefield to Huddersfield passes through the tnshp. The substratum abounds with coal of excellent quality, which is extensively worked, and there are some quarries of good building-stone. The woollen manufacture is carried on to a considerable extent. The Calder and Hebble navigation affords ready water conveyance. There are places of worship for Wesleyans at Middle and Nether Shitlington.

SHITLINGTON, HIGH and LOW QUARTERS, tnshps. in the par. of Wark, N.W. div. of Tindale ward, co. Northumberland, 3 miles W. of Wark, and 2 S.W. of Bellingham. The village, which is small and irregularly built, is situated on a branch of the river Reed.

SHITTERTON, a tythg. in the par. and hund. of Beer-Regis, co. Dorset, 6 miles N.W. of Wareham. The village is small and wholly agricultural. The tythg. includes Beer Heath.

SHIVEN, a stream of the co. of Galway, Ireland, rises near Newtown-Bellew, and joins the Suck at Mount Talbot.

SHIVERING SANDS, a bank in the river Thames about 5 miles N. of Herne Bay.

SHOBDON, a par. in the hund. of Stretford, co. Hereford, 8 miles W. of Leominster, its post town, 6 from Wigmore, and 5 S.E. of Presteign. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on a branch of the river Lug, near Mortimer's Cross. The inhabitants are chiefly agricultural. The land is partly in hop grounds. The tithes were commuted for corn rents under an Enclosure Act in 1809. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £764. The church, dedicated to St. John the Evangelist, has a tower containing two bells. It was partially rebuilt in 1758 by John Viscount Bateman, of whose family it contains several monuments. There is a parochial school for both sexes erected at the expense of Lord Bateman. Shobdon Court is situated in a well wooded park stocked with deer. Lord Bateman is lord of the manor and principal landowner. At Castle Hill are traces of a Roman or Danish fortification.

SHOBLEY, an ext. par. place in the hund. of Ringwood, co. Hants, 19 miles S.W. of Winchester, on the Avon, near the borders of the New Forest.

SHOBROOKE, a par. and tnshp. in the hund. of West Budleigh, co. Devon, 2 miles N.E. of Crediton, its post town. The village, which is considerable, is situated near Cheriton Fitzpaine, and is chiefly agricultural. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter. The parochial charities produce about £23 per annum, of which £6 goes to the school. Shobrooke Park and the Sanctuary are the principal residences.

SHOBY, an ext. par. place in the hund. of East Goscote, co. Leicester, 4½ miles N.W. of Melton Mowbray, on the Wolds.

SHOCHIE, a trout stream of the co. of Perth, Scotland, rises in the par. of Monedie, and joins the Tay near Luncarty.

SHOCKERWICK, a hmlt. in the par. of Bathford, co. Somerset, 4 miles N.E. of Bath. It is situated on the Great Western railway, and belonged to Adam de Socherwiche, in 1165, and afterwards came to the Husseys.

SHOCKLACH, a par. in the higher div. of Broxton hund., co. Chester, 4 miles N.W. of Malpas. It is situated on the river Dee, which bounds the parish on the W., and is crossed by a bridge at Castletown. It comprises the tnshps. of Shocklach Church, Shocklach Oviatt, and Caldecott. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Chester, val. £107. The church, dedicated to St. Edith, has a Norman doorway. On the site of Hugh Lupus's castle are traces of a moated seat of the Egertons, Breretons, &c. Sir Richard Puleston is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

SHOCKLACH OVIATT, a tnshp. in the par. of Shocklach, higher div. of Broxton hund., co. Chester, 3½ miles N.W. of Malpas. It is in conjunction with Church Shocklach. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. Sir R. Puleston is lord of the manor.

SHODDESDEN, UPPER and LOWER, hmlts. in the par. of Kimpton, co. Hants, 6 miles N.W. of Andover.

SHOEBURY, NORTH, a par. in the hund. of Rochford, co. Essex, 4 miles S.E. of Rochford, its post town, and 3 N.E. of Southend. The village, which is of small extent, adjoins that of South Shoebury. It was called by the Saxons Schoebirig, and ruins of Danish works have been discovered. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £347, and the vicarial for £163, besides 10 acres of glebe. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £182. The church, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, is a stone building, with a wooden tower surmounted by a spire with two bells. The interior contains a monument to John Ibbotson. G. A. W. Welch, Esq., is lord of the manor.

SHOEBURY, SOUTH, a par. in the hund. of Rochford, co. Essex, 7 miles from Rochford, its post town, and 5 E. of Southend. It is situated on the river Thames at its influx into the sea, and nearly opposite the Nore. At its southern extremity is the small promontory called Shoebury-Ness, where are coastguard and signal stations on the Thames. There is also a government station for artillery practice at Shoebury Point. Bricks are made here to a considerable extent. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £410, and the glebe comprises 7 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £360. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is of great antiquity, with a tower built of flint. The parochial charities produce about £7 per annum. In the neighbourhood are traces of a Danish camp. At low water a road is traversable along the Maplin Sands to Foulness Island. R. Bristow, Esq., of Broxmore Park, Wilts, is lord of the manor.

SHOKAM, or SHOKHOLM, an islet in the par. of Dale, co. Pembroke, 2 miles S.W. of St. Bride's Point. It is a small rocky island comprising about 200 acres of rough pasture.

SHOLDEN, or SHOULDEN, a par. in the hund. of Cornilo, lathe of St. Augustine, co. Kent, 1½ mile W. of Deal. It contains No. 1 battery and Sandourn Castle, built by Henry VIII. for the defence of the S. coast, and in which Colonel Hutchinson died a prisoner. The village, which is small, is situated on the road from Sandwich to Deal. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £280, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church is dedicated to St. Nicholas. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum. Fragments of Roman urns and several coins of the Emperor Gallienus were found here in 1832.

SHOLING, a tythg. in the par. of Hound, co. Hants, 3 miles S.E. of Southampton.

SHONA and SHONAVEG, islets in Loch Moydart, par. of Ardnamurchan, co. Inverness, Scotland.

SHONAGARRY, a lead mine in the co. of Kerry, Ireland, 1 mile E. of Kenmare.

SHOOLTHWAITE, a moss in the south-eastern part of co. Cumberland, near Thirle Mere.

SHOOTER'S HILL, a hmlt. in the borough of Greenwich, locally in Blackheath hund., lathe of Sutton-at-Hone, co. Kent, 1 mile S. of Woolwich, and 9 miles E. of London. The hill, which was formerly thickly wooded, is 410 feet high, and has on its summit Severndroog Tower. The supply of water for Woolwich is drawn from here.

SHOPLAND, a par. in the hund. of Rochford, co. Essex, 1½ mile S.E. of Rochford, its post town, and 3 miles N.E. of Southend. The parish is of small extent. There is no village, only a few farmhouses. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £240 10*s.*, and the vicarial for £85, besides a glebe of 13 acres. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £89. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure, consisting only of a nave and chancel.

SHORDLEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Hope, co. Flint, near Caergwyrll.

SHOREDITCH, a hmlt. in the par. of St. Mary Magdalene, co. Somerset. It is included in the borough of Taunton.

SHOREDITCH, a par. and populous metropolitan district, in the Tower div. of Ossulstone hund. and parliamentary borough of the Tower Hamlets, co. Middlesex, 1½ mile N.E. of St. Paul's cathedral. It is the terminus of the Great Eastern railway, which terminus is soon to be moved to Liverpool-street, City. The Metropolitan railway has a station opposite the parish church. This parish, which is extensive, lies for the most part between the Regent's canal, Hackney-road, Finsbury Circus, and the City-road. It comprises Hoxton Old and New Town, Holywell, Moorfields, Church-End, and Haggerston, covering 620 acres, and containing a population in 1861 of 129,364. It was anciently traversed by the Roman military way leading from London-wall to the ford at Hackney; and on the site of the old artillery ground, now built over, traces have been discovered of a Roman camp. In ancient records it is generally written Sordig or Soresdich, evidently from the great common sewer, or ditch, which passed through it. It is well paved and lighted with gas, but the drainage and water supply are imperfect. The principal branch of manufacture carried on here is that of furniture; it is said that nine-tenths of the furniture of England is made here. There are also several breweries. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of London, val. £656, in the patron. of the Archdeacon of London. The church was rebuilt in 1740 by Dance, pupil of Sir C. Wren. There are twelve bells, very good. The interior contains ancient monuments; one connected with the royal family of Hungary, with a representation of two skeletons tearing asunder the trunk of a tree. Will Somers, Henry VIII.'s jester, is buried here. Gabriel Spencer, killed by Ben Jonson in a duel 1598. Richard Tarlton, Queen Elizabeth's famous clown (1588); James Burbadge (1596); his more famous son, Richard (1618); William Sly, one of Shakspeare's original performers, lie in the churchyard. The list of vicars begins A.D. 1185. There are, besides the district churches of St. John the Baptist, Holy Trinity, and Christ Church at Hoxton, St. Mary's, Haggerston, All Saints at Stonebridge, St. James's and St. Michael's in the Curtain-road, St. Mark's in the Old Street-road, St. Paul's, and St. Andrew's chapel. Of these the most remarkable is St. John the Baptist's, built in 1830 at a cost of £16,444. The Baptists, Independents, Wesleyans, and several other Dissenting congregations have places of worship. There are about 250 daily and 10 Sunday schools, some of which are partially endowed. The Haberdashers', Drapers', Weavers', Frame-work Knitters', and Ironmongers' Companies have almshouses here; besides several local almshouses. [See also articles LONDON, HOXTON, SPITALFIELDS, &c.]

SHOREHAM, a par. in the hund. of Codsheath, lathe of Sutton-at-Hone, co. Kent, 5 miles N. of Sevenoaks, its post town. It is a station on the Sevenoaks branch of the London, Chatham, and Dover railway. The village, which is chiefly agricultural, is situated in the vale of the river Darent, which flows through the parish to join the Thames at Dartford. At Castle Farm, in the neighbourhood, are traces of Shoreham Castle, built by the Oldhams. There is a paper mill in the vicinity. The impropriate tithes belong to the Dean and Chapter of Westminster. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £371, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Westminster. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, is an ancient structure with a square tower, containing a clock and six bells. There are tombs of the Borrets, of New House. The parochial charities produce about £27 per annum, of which £7 goes to Borret's almshouses. There is a free school for both sexes. A fair for toys is held on the 1st May.

SHOREHAM, NEW, a seaport, and parliamentary borough in the hund. of Fishergate, rape of Bramber, co Sussex, 6 miles W. of Brighton, 22 E. of Chichester, and 56½ S.W. of London. It is a station on the London, Brighton, and South Coast railway. The town is situated on the S. coast, at the mouth of the river Adur. Ella the First, king of the South Saxons, landed here. Shortly after the Norman conquest, it was given, with the lordship of Bramber, by William I. to William de Braose, and soon became a port of importance, owing to the increased intercourse between England and Normandy. John landed here with a large army in 1199, and he made it a free port in 1210. In the reign of Edward III. it contributed 26 ships towards the two fleets which were fitted out for the siege of Calais, being one ship more than was furnished by London; subsequently, however, declined. In 1758 an Act was obtained for the improvement of the haven, but the embouchure of the Adur continued to shift eastward, leaving the original town of Old Shoreham, now a small village, a mile inland, and rendering the haven almost useless. In 1816 a second attempt was made to restore this ancient port by cutting a new channel through the shingle embankment, and flanking it by substantial piers, which run in a S.S.W. direction into the sea, thus keeping open the passage. The harbour mouth is nevertheless subject to a bar, which shifts its position from 60 to 160 feet from the pier-heads. The depth of the water over the bar at high water is from 16 to 22 feet, according to the tides, and the rise of the spring tides is about 18 feet. A considerable foreign trade is carried on, owing chiefly to its being a warehousing port for timber, and for West Indian, Levant, African, French, Dutch, and other produce. A considerable trade is also done in coals and corn. The port has belonging to it upwards of 100 vessels, and is an excellent station for the oyster fisheries. It has long been noted for its shipbuilding, and extensive works for making cement.—The town consists for the most part of irregularly built streets. Many improvements have been effected, however, during the last half century, including the erection of the suspension bridge over the mouth of the river Adur by the late Duke of Norfolk in 1833, in place of the old narrow bridge built in 1782, nearly a mile above the town. The streets are paved and lighted with gas. The principal buildings are the church mentioned below, and a custom-house, in the Grecian style.—The town of New Shoreham, which is governed by a high constable, elected annually, has a population of over 3,000, but the parliamentary borough, which includes the parishes of New and Old Shoreham, the town and parish of Steyning, and the whole of the rape of Bramber, had 33,553 in 1851, and 32,622 in 1861. The borough returns two members to parliament.—The living of New Shoreham is a vic.* in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £127, in the patron. of Magdalen College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Mary the Virgin, is part of a cruciform structure, with a tower rising from the centre, erected towards the close of the 11th century, is remarkable for its architectural beauty, and was one of the largest churches in the country, but the nave has fallen into decay, strenuous exertions are, however, being made to have it restored. The living of Old Shoreham is also a vic.* in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £458, in the patron. of Magdalen College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, stands on the eastern bank of the river, and is an ancient structure, recently restored at the expense of Magdalen College. There are also a Protestant free church, and chapels belonging to the Wesleyans and Congregationalists. The college of St. Nicholas is a comprehensive institution, having several offshoots in the town, the most important branch being St. Saviour's school, in connection with the Established Church, founded in 1858 for the education of the lower middle class, comprising the sons of small tradesmen and farmers. It is under the supervision of the Bishop of Chichester, as visitor, and contains above 200 scholars. There are besides a grammar school, National and infant schools, and a military and engineering school at Leyton. A market for corn is held on every alternate Monday, and a fair on 25th July.

SHOREHAM, OLD, a par. forming part of the borough of New Shoreham, co. Sussex. See NEW SHOREHAM.

SHORESTON. See SHOSTON, co. Northumberland.

SHORESWOOD, a tnshp. in the par. of Norham, hund. of Norhamshire, co. Northumberland, formerly in Durham, 6 miles S.W. of Berwick-on-Tweed. The village, which is of small extent, is chiefly inhabited by colliers. There is a National school for both sexes. The manor and the greater part of the land belong to the Dean and Chapter of Durham.

SHORNCLIFFE AND SANDGATE, a chplry. in the pars. of Folkestone and Cheriton, co. Kent, 1 mile W. of Folkestone. It is a station on the South-Eastern railway. This place, which is of recent growth, is situated under the cliffs. See SANDGATE.

SHORNCOTE, a par. in the hund. of Highworth co. Wilts, 6 miles N.W. of Cricklade, its post town, and 3 S. of Cirencester. The parish, which is inconsiderable, is wholly agricultural. There is no village. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £92, and the glebe comprises 38 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £130. The church is dedicated to All Saints. The late rector, John Greenly, M.A., who died in 1862, aged 85 years, had served as chaplain on board the Revenge, one of Nelson's fleet, and was wounded at the battle of Trafalgar.

SHORNE AND MERSTON, a par. in the hund. of Shamwell, lathe of Aylesford, co. Kent, 3½ miles S.E. of Gravesend, its post town, and 4 N.W. of Rochester. The village, which is chiefly agricultural, formerly belonged to the Northwoods, Savages, Nevills, Cobhams, &c. There is a small battery, constructed in 1796, also another at Lower Hope Point, in the parish of Cliff. The land is partly in hop grounds and woodland. The impropriate tithes belong to the Dean and Chapter of Rochester. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £358, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, dedicated to SS. Paul and Peter, contains effigies of Sir Henry de Cobham, brasses of J. Smith, bearing date 1437, and an ancient font. The Earl of Darnley is lord of the manor. There is a National school, partially endowed.

SHORTFLATT, a tnshp. in the par. of Bolam, N.E. div. of Tindale ward, co. Northumberland, 13 miles N.E. of Hexham, 10 W. of Morpeth, and 1¼ mile S. of Bolam.

SHORTHAMPTON, a chplry. in the par. of Charlbury, hund. of Chadlington, co. Oxford, 2 miles S.W. of Charlbury, 5 S.E. of Chipping-Norton, and 4½ S.W. of Enstone. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Evenlode, near Wychwood Forest. The inhabitants are chiefly agricultural. The par. includes the hmlts. of Chilson and Pudlicott. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic. of Charlbury, in the dioc. of Oxford. The church, dedicated to All Saints, has three exposed bells on the top, there being no tower. Lord Francis Churchill is lord of the manor.

SHORTLANDS, a hmlt. in the par. and hund. of Bromley, co. Kent, 10 miles S.E. of London. It is a station on the London, Chatham, and Dover railway.

SHORTWOOD, a hmlt. in the par. of Horsley, co. Gloucester, 5 miles N.W. of Tetbury.

SHORWELL, a par. in the lib. of West Medina, Isle of Wight, co. Hants, 5 miles S.W. of Newport, its post town. The village is chiefly agricultural. An Alpine bridge is constructed over the Newport road. The par. contains the tythgs. of North and South Shorwell, Atherfield, Gatcombe, and Kingston. The manor belonged to the priory of Carisbrooke, from which it was separated in the reign of Edward III., and made a distinct parish. The land, though partly consisting of downs, is fertile. A spring of pure water rises in the demesne of Northcourt, from which the parish takes its name. The living is a vic. annexed to the rect. of Mottistone, in the dioc. of Winchester. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is a stone structure, erected in 1526, with a tower and three bells. The interior of the church contains a stone pulpit and some old wall-paintings, also the brass of a priest, date 1518, and monuments of the Leighs of Northcourt. The parochial charities produce about £84 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes. Northcourt House is the principal residence.

SHOSTON, or SHORESTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Bambrough, N. div. of Bambrough ward, co. Northumberland, 6 miles S.E. of Belford. It is situated on the coast, and is wholly agricultural.

SHOTATTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Ruyton, co. Salop, 10 miles N.W. of Shrewsbury.

SHOTFORD, a hmlt. in the par. of Mendham, co. Norfolk, 1 mile S. of Harleston, on the river Waveney.

SHOTHAUGH, a tnshp. in the par. of Felton, E. div. of Morpeth ward, co. Northumberland, 8 miles N. of Morpeth. It is in conjunction with Thirston.

SHOTLEY, a par. and tnshp. in the E. div. of Tindale ward, co. Northumberland, 9 miles S.E. of Hexham, and 6 S.E. of the Riding Mile station on the Newcastle and Carlisle railway. Gateshead is its post town. It is situated near the river Derwent, and contains the chplry. of Blanchland, or High Quarter, and the tnshps. of Newbiggin and Shotley, or Low Quarter, with the hmlts. of Unthank, Allens Ford, Greenhead, Black Headley, Kiln Pit Hill, and Shotley Field. The soil is a mixture of clay and sand. A considerable portion of the inhabitants are employed in the coal and lead mines, and in the paper mills, where the finest kinds of writing-paper are made. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Durham, val. £139. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, has a tower containing two bells. There is also a district church at Blanchland, erected in 1835, the living of which is a perpet. cur.,* val. £198. The parochial charities produce about £14, which go to the school. The Baptists have a place of worship. H. C. Silvertop, and Thomas Wilson, Esqs., are lords of the manor.

SHOTLEY, a par. in the hund. of Samford, co. Suffolk, 10 miles S.E. of Ipswich, its post town, and 2 from Harwich. The village, which is small and straggling, is situated at the confluence of the rivers Orwell and Stour, near the ferry to Harwich. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture, and a brisk trade is done in stone. The land is chiefly arable, with some pastures on the banks of the Orwell. The surface is undulating, and the soil of various qualities. There was formerly a hamlet, called Kirketon, which once gave name to the entire parish. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £570, and the glebe comprises 54 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £604. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is situated on an eminence. The parochial charities produce about £7 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes, of recent erection.

SHOTLEY-BRIDGE, a hmlt. in the N.W. div. of Darlington ward, co. Durham, 9 miles N. of Wolsingham, and 8 W. of Durham. It is situated on the river Derwent, and has a large paper-mill.

SHOTOVER, an ext. par. place in the hund. of Bullingdon, co. Oxford, 4½ miles N.E. of Oxford. It is situated under Shotover Hill, which rises 599 feet in height. Forest Hill was the residence of Richard Powell, Milton's father-in-law.

SHOTSWELL, a par. in the Burton-Dassett div. of Kington hund., co. Warwick, 4½ miles N.W. of Banbury, its post town, and 8 from Kineton. The village, which is small, is chiefly agricultural. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Enclosure Act in 1793. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £157. The church, dedicated to St. Lawrence, has a tower and five bells. The parochial charities produce about £13 per annum. There is a National school. The Wesleyans have a place of worship.

SHOTTER MILLS, an ecclesiastical district in the hund. of Farnham, co. Surrey, near Farnham.

SHOTTERY, a hmlt. in the par. of Old Stratford, co. Warwick, 1½ mile W. of Stratford-on-Avon. In the hamlet still stands the cottage where Anne Hathaway lived previously to her marriage with Shakspere, in 1582.

SHOTTESBROOK, a par. in the hund. of Beynhurst, co. Berks, 4½ miles S.W. of Maidenhead, its post town. There was formerly a college for priests, founded by Sir William Trussel in 1337, the revenue of which at the Dissolution was valued at £42. The parish is intersected by the line of the Great Western railway, and is bounded on the S. by a branch of the river Loddon. The land is chiefly arable, with a small proportion of meadow and woodland. The soil is a mixture of earth and loam, resting upon a substratum of chalk. The living is a rect.,* with the vic. of White-Waltham annexed, in the dioc. of Oxford, joint val. £610. The church, built in 1337, with the college, by Sir W. Trussel, whose tomb is in the S. transept, is dedicated to St. John the Baptist, and is a cruciform structure, with a tower, spire, and several stained windows. It contains three stone stalls under trefoil arches, a piscina, an octangular font, and several monuments and brasses, including one of a priest and franklin bearing date 1370; another of Lady Pennebrygg, bearing date 1401; and a monument to Henry Dodwell, the first Camden Professor of History at Oxford. The principal residence is Shottesbrooke House. The parochial charities produce about £16 per annum. At White-Waltham are remains of the hunting-seat of Prince Arthur, eldest son of Henry VII, now converted into a farmhouse.

SHOTTESHAM ALL SAINTS, or HIGH SHOT-

TESHAM, a par. in the hund. of Henstead, co. Norfolk, 6 miles S. of Norwich, its post town, and 2 E. of the Swainsthorpe railway station. The village is situated near the Great Eastern railway, and is chiefly agricultural. There were originally four distinct parishes, but the churches of St. Martin and St. Botolph having fallen into decay, those places have been consolidated with the parishes of All Saints and St. Mary. The impropriate tithes for the whole district have been commuted for £432, the vicarial for £556, and the glebe comprises 74½ acres. The living is a vic. with that of St. Mary consolidated, in the dioc. of Norwich. The church, which is dedicated to All Saints, has a square tower. It contains a curiously sculptured font, also a brass of E. Whyte, bearing date 1528. The register dates from 1538. The parochial charities produce about £26 per annum. There is a school for both sexes, supported by the Fellowes family. R. Fellowes, Esq., is lord of the manor.

SHOTTESHAM, SS. MARY AND MARTIN, a consolidated par. in the hund. of Henstead, co. Norfolk, 5 miles S. of Norwich, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. The parish is bounded on the W. by the small river Taas. The living is a vic. annexed to that of Shottesham All Saints, in the dioc. of Norwich. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure with a square tower. The register dates from 1687. The parochial charities produce about £4 per annum. There is a small school, founded by Mrs. Fellowes in 1852. Shottesham Park, the residence of the Fellowes family, was erected on the site of the old hall, which was the family seat of the Doyleys, and was surrounded by a moat. R. Fellowes, Esq., is lord of the manor.

SHOTTINGTON, a hill in the par. of Stelling, hund. of Stouting, co. Kent, 5 miles S. of Canterbury. It is situated on the line of the ancient Stane Street, and has on the summit a Roman camp, covering nearly 2 acres.

SHOTTISHAM, a par. in the hund. of Wilford, co. Suffolk, 4 miles S.E. of Woodford, and 6 from Woodbridge, its post town. The village, which is small, is situated near Shottisham Ford, on a creek of the river Deben. The inhabitants are chiefly agricultural. The surface is generally flat, and there are 40 acres of marsh. The soil is light and sandy. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £226, and the glebe comprises 24 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £248. The church, dedicated to St. Margaret, is a stone structure, with a tower containing one bell. It was restored in 1845. The parochial charities produce about £9 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes. The Rev. W. Darby and Rev. M. B. Darby are lords of the manor.

SHOTTLE, a tnshp. in the par. of Duffield, hund. of Appletree, co. Derby, 2 miles S.W. of Belper. It is in conjunction with Postern to form a township.

SHOTTON, a tnshp. in the par of Easington, S. div. of the ward of Easington, co. Durham, 2 miles S. of Easington, its post town, and 10 W. of Durham. At Shotton Bridge is a station on the Sunderland and Hartlepool section of the North-Eastern railway. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the collieries. The soil is of a clayey and sandy nature. In the vicinity are brick and tile kilns. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect. of Easington, in the dioc. of Durham. The church, dedicated to St. Saviour, was built in 1852. The parochial charities produce about £10 per annum, bequeathed by Edward Walton for educational purposes. There is a commodious school, principally supported by the colliery company, and in connection with the school is a library. There are places of worship for the Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists. The Bishop of Durham is lord of the manor.

SHOTTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Sedgefield, N.E. div. of Stockton ward, co. Durham, 6 miles N.W. of Stockton, and 3 S. of Sedgefield. It is in conjunction with Floxton.

SHOTTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Staindrop, S.W. div. of Darlington ward, co. Durham, 5 miles N.E. of Barnard-Castle. It is in conjunction with Langley dale.

SHOTTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Stannington, co. Northumberland, 6 miles S.E. of Morpeth, and 8 N. of Newcastle.

SHOTTON, a tnshp. in the chplry. of Hadnall, co. Salop, 5 miles N. of Shrewsbury.

SHOTTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Hawarden, hund. of Mold, co. Flint, 3 miles N.W. of Hawarden. It includes the hamlet of Nine-Houses.

SHOTTS, or BERTRAM SHOTTS, a par. in the district of Lanark, middle ward, co. Lanark, Scotland. It contains the vils. of Sallysburgh, Kirk-o'-Shotts, Harthill, and Omoa. It extends about 10 miles in length from S.W. to N.E., with an extreme breadth of about 8 miles, and is bound by Linlithgowshire, and by the pars. of Cambusnethan, Dalziel, Bothwell, and New Monklands. The surface is elevated, but generally level, varying in height from 200 to 850 feet above sea-level. The soil is chiefly clay, with a mixture of loam on the banks of the river, and peat in places. The prevailing rocks belong to the carboniferous formation, including coal, ironstone, and winstone, all of which are worked. On the S. side of the parish is a stratum of fire-clay. The parish is traversed by the S. road from Edinburgh to Glasgow, and by a branch mineral railway, which is in conjunction with the Caledonian. The village of Kirk-o'-Shotts is about 10 miles N.E. of Hamilton, and 27 from Edinburgh. It is situated at the head of the rivers North and South Calder. Many of the inhabitants are employed in the Shotts and Omoa iron works, which were established in 1787, and are carried on to a considerable extent. This par. is in the presb. of Hamilton, and synod of Glasgow and Ayr. The stipend of the minister is about £328. The parish church was erected in 1820. There are a Free church and an United Original Secession church, also a parochial school, and five others, two of which are endowed. There are two public libraries. Near the church is Kate's Well. Gavin Hamilton and Professor Miller were born in this parish. At an early period Shotts formed part of the parish of Bothwell. It was the property of the Hamilton family, by whom it was sold in 1630. After the Reformation it was created a separate parish, and bore for a time the name of Bertram-Shotts, afterwards contracted into Shotts.

SHOTWICK, a par. and tnshp. in the higher div. of Wirrall hund., co. Chester, 5 miles N.W. of Chester, its post town, and 3 S. of Sutton. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the N. bank of the river Dee, and is wholly agricultural. The soil is a stiff clay, and the surface level. About two-thirds of the land are meadow and pasture, and the remainder arable. The par. includes the tnshps. of Capenhurst, Great and Little Saughall, and Woodbank. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Chester, val. £100, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is an ancient edifice with an embattled tower. The living was once held by Dr. Samuel Clarke. There is also a district church at Capenhurst, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £120. The parochial charities produce about £8 per annum.

SHOTWICK-PARK, an ext. par. place in the higher div. of the hund. of Wirrall, co. Chester, 3 miles N. of Sutton railway station, and 4 N.W. of Chester. There are slight traces of a castle mentioned by Leland, and formerly belonging to the crown, in which Henry II. lodged on his way to Ireland in 1156, and Edward I. in the years 1260 (when prince) and 1278.

SHOULDEN. See SHOLDEN, co. Kent.

SHOULDHAM, a par in the hund. of Clackclose, co. Norfolk, 6 miles N.E. of Downham-Market, its post town, and 9 S. of Lynn. The village, which had formerly a market, is built round a green watered by a rivulet. The inhabitants are chiefly agricultural. The land is generally fertile, intermixed with light heath and fen. A Gilbertine nunnery for canons and nuns, under the government of a prior, was founded by Jeffrey Fitz-Piers in the reign of Richard I. Its revenue at the Dissolution was valued at £171 6*s.* 8*d.* There is an extensive rabbit warren covering about 600 acres. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to that of Shouldham-Thorpe, in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £121. The church, dedicated to All Saints, has a square tower containing four bells. The chancel was rebuilt in 1839. The parochial charities produce about £35 per annum, realised from poor's land. There are a Church school and a Sunday-school. The Wesleyans, Primitive Methodists, and Methodist Reformers have each a place of worship. There are some traces of the ancient church of St. Margaret. Sir Thomas Hare, Bart., is lord of the manor. Fairs are held on 19th September and 11th October.

SHOULDHAM-THORPE, a par. in the hund. of Clackclose, co. Norfolk, 5 miles N.E. of Downham-Market, its post town, and 9 S. of Lynn. The village, which is small and irregularly built, is wholly agricultural. About two-thirds of the land are arable, and the remainder pasture, common, and woodland. The surface is elevated, and the soil light. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to that of Shouldham, in the dioc. of Norwich. The church, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, has a Norman doorway and an open turret containing two bells. The parochial charities produce about £7 per annum. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a place of worship. Sir Thomas Hare, Bart., is lord of the manor.

SHOULTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Hallow, co. Worcester, 2 miles N.W. of Worcester.

SHOWELL, a chplry. in the par. of Swerford, hund. of Chadlington, co. Oxford, 2½ miles N.E. of Chipping-Norton.

SHOWSLEY, a hmlt. in the par. of Easton Neston, co. Northampton, 2 miles N.E. of Towcester.

SHOYSWELL, a hund. in the rape of Hastings, co. Sussex, contains the pars. of Ticehurst, and part of Burwash, comprising an area of 7,280 acres.

SHRAWARDINE, a tnshp. in the par. of Alberbury, hund. of Ford, co. Salop, 7 miles N.W. of Shrewsbury, in the vale of the Severn, near the ancient Watling Street.

SHRAWARDINE, a par. in the hund. of Pimhill, co. Salop, 6½ miles N.W. of Shrewsbury, its post town, and the same distance S.W. of Baschurch railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Severn, and is chiefly agricultural. In the vicinity are the ruins of a border castle built by Count Alan, a follower of the Conqueror and ancestor of the Fitz-Alans, who held it under the crown for many ages as a defence to Shrewsbury against the Welsh. In the reign of Elizabeth it was purchased by Lord Chancellor Bromley, and during the Civil War was occupied by Cromwell. The site and remains are now the property of the Earl of Powis. There is a newly erected building, designated "The Castle," near to which is an extensive mere. The living is a rect.* with the vic. of Montford annexed, in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £380. The church is dedicated to St. Mary, and contains an ancient font, also a brass to Martha Botevyle. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum. Sir C. Edmondes was born here in 1566. The Earl of Powis is lord of the manor.

SHRAWLEY, a par. in the lower div. of Doddingtree hund., co. Worcester, 4½ miles S. by W. of Stourport, its post town, and 7 W. of Droitwich. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Severn, and is chiefly agricultural. The land is well cultivated, and partly in wood and hop grounds. The surface is hilly, and the soil gravelly. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £355, and the glebe comprises 63 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £355. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is situated on an eminence, with a tower containing six bells. The parochial charities produce about £150 per annum. There is a school, partially endowed by Edward Burton in 1699. H. F. Vernon, Esq., is lord of the manor.

SHREWLEY, a hmlt. in the par. of Hatton, Snitterfield div. of Barlichway hund., co. Warwick 4 miles N.W. of Warwick.

SHREWSBURY, the county town of Shropshire or Salop, a market town, parliamentary and municipal borough, is 153 miles N.W. from London by road, or 163 by the North Western, and 171 by the Great Western railways; 58 miles S. from Liverpool, and 42 from Chester. It is situated on the river Severn, and is an important railway centre. The population within the municipal and parliamentary boundaries, which are co-extensive, was 19,681 in 1851, and, in 1861, had increased to 22,163, occupying 4,445 houses. The amount assessed for property-tax is £99,109, and for poors' rates, £80,332. The poor are maintained under a local Act. The town is very ancient, and is thought to have been founded by the Britons of the 5th century on the ruins of Uriconium, a Roman station. It was early captured by the Saxons, who changed its name of Pengwern, or "Alderhill," to Scrobbes-byrig, or "Scrubstown," of which the present name is a corruption. It early rose in importance, and was one of the chief towns in the country under Alfred, who here established a mint, and his daughter Elfleda founded a college. In the contest between Canute and Edmond Ironsides, in 1016, the town suffered severely, having espoused the cause of the former. William the Conqueror granted it and most of the surrounding country to Roger de Montgomery, one of his followers, who was subsequently created Earl of Shrewsbury, and here built a castle, which he secured by a wall across the isthmus of the peninsula on which it stood. For the site of this castle fifty-one houses were cleared away. In 1102 the castle and property were forfeited to the crown, by the third earl, Robert de Belesme, who had supported in the field the cause of Robert, Duke of Normandy, the king's brother. Henry I. in 1126 granted the earldom to his wife Adeliza of Louvain, whose castellan and sheriff held the castle for the Empress Maud against Stephen. It was captured by the latter, who treated the inhabitants with great severity, but was retaken by young Henry, afterwards second king of that name, and was restored to the custody of Fitz-Alan. Being on the border of Wales, the town suffered repeatedly from the incursions of the Welsh, and was in 1215 captured by them under Llewellyn the Great, who had joined the insurgent barons against John. It was soon retaken; but again, in the following reign, it was ravaged, and a portion of the town burned, by the Welsh and the turbulent barons. Simon de Montfort, who was joined by the warlike Llewellyn, grandson of the chief already alluded to, succeeded in obtaining possession of Shrewsbury for a short period, but lost it again after the battle of Evesham. When Edward I. determined on the final subjugation of the Welsh clans, he established his headquarters in this town, and in 1277 made it his temporary residence, removing to it the Courts of King's Bench and Exchequer. In 1283 he summoned a parliament to meet here, when David, the last prince of Wales, was tried, and, being found guilty of treason, was executed. In the next reign, the Earl of Arundel, who revolted against Edward II., attempted to seize Shrewsbury, but was repulsed by the townspeople, aided by Sir John Charlton of Powis, and was beheaded at Hereford. A parliament again assembled here in 1397, at which the Earl of Hereford charged the Duke of Norfolk with high treason, and both were sentenced to banishment by Richard II., the one for ten years, the other for life. In 1403, it was the scene of the battle between the royalist troops and the insurgents under Douglas and Hotspur, when the latter was killed by Prince Hal, afterwards Henry V. It favoured the side of York during the Wars of the Roses; and after the death of his father, Richard of York, Edward IV. raised an army among the townspeople, and defeated the opposite party under the Earl of Pembroke at Mortimer Cross in Herefordshire. His queen afterwards found an asylum in the town, and here gave birth to Richard, who was subsequently murdered with his brother in the Tower by Richard III. It was also the scene of the execution of Buckingham by Richard; and in the following year proclaimed the Duke of Richmond as king, under the title of Henry VII. In the wars between Charles I. and the Parliamentarians, it was loyal to the king, who was here joined by Prince Rupert, in 1642. The town was fortified, and a mint established; but it was, in 1644, surprised by the enemy under Colonel Mytton, and suffered severely; the inhabitants, however, still continued loyal. It was visited, in 1687, by James II., in whose reign the castle was stripped of cannon and ammunition, and the outworks and chapel were demolished.—The town stands on several gentle eminences, but chiefly occupies a peninsula formed by the winding course of the Severn, which is crossed by two bridges, called English and Welsh bridges, on account of their respective situations. It formerly lay wholly within the curve of the river, but has gradually extended on the E. and W. sides into suburbs, forming Abbey Foregate and Calchan on the E., and Frankwell on the W.; and also beyond the neck of the peninsula and the castle to the N., forming Castle Foregate. It presents a bold and commanding appearance, the outer houses being of comparatively recent erection, well built and laid out; but in the old parts the streets are narrow and ill-arranged, presenting a strange contrast of old and new houses irregularly intermixed, and many have an antique appearance, with gables and stories overhanging the road. Many of the streets, too, contain several old half-timber buildings, some of which are in excellent preservation and most interesting. Considerable improvements have lately been made, streets have been widened, new houses built in them, and the entire is well paved and lighted with gas. There is an ample supply of water from the river, and from a spring two miles distant from the town. In the environs there are many pleasant walks and drives, and the houses in the suburbs are generally furnished with gardens and meadow lands, which impart to the town, when viewed from a short distance, a most picturesque appearance. English Bridge, across the Severn, is of stone, and was erected in 1774 at a cost of £16,000. It is 410 feet in length, and consists of seven semicircular arches. Welsh Bridge, also of stone, and built in 1795, cost £8,000, is 266 feet in length, and has five arches. Another bridge, at Coleham, crosses Meole rivulet, which joins the Severn near English Bridge. There is a wharf, with warehouses, near Welsh Bridge. —Shrewsbury abounds in interesting remains, the most important of which are ecclesiastical. There are nine churches in the town, most of which supply specimens of stained glass in antique patterns. St. Alkmund's Church was originally cruciform and of great antiquity, having been built on a site given by Alfred's daughter Elfleda; but the only part of the structure remaining is the tower, surmounted by a spire, 184 feet in height. The church was rebuilt in the modern Gothic style in 1795. St. Chad's, an old collegiate church, fell, when undergoing some repairs, in 1788, having been too long neglected, and was rebuilt in 1792 at a cost of £20,000. It is in the Grecian style, and is formed by the intersection of two circles, with a square tower and portico attached. The smaller circle is occupied by a staircase; and the larger one, which is 100 feet in diameter, forms the body and chancel of the church. The appearance is striking, more from the fineness of the stone and the splendour of ornamentation, than the harmonious proportion and disposition of the parts. St. Mary's, in a cruciform shape, was lately repaired. It is in the Norman and early Grecian style, has a spacious chancel, with chantry chapels, and a tower, surmounted by a spire, 220 feet high. It, also, is collegiate, and presents specimens of various styles of architecture, from the time of the Norman conquest to that of Elizabeth. The tower contains a peal of ten bells. St. Giles's is a small and plain structure; a portion of it dates from the beginning of the 12th century. The Abbey Church, the western portion of a Benedictine abbey, founded in 1083 by Roger de Montgomery, the first Earl of Shrewsbury, was to a great extent destroyed at the dissolution of the order; but the nave, N. porch, and western tower remain, and form the church of Holy Cross parish. They display many peculiar features of the early Norman style; but the building has undergone considerable changes, the most striking being the insertion of a large perpendicular window in the face of the western tower, only equalled in England by the window of York Cathedral. A Norman doorway beneath this window is adorned with mouldings. The aisles contain many monuments, and there is an octagonal stone pulpit opposite the southern entrance. The church is interiorly an oriel, and the roof is vaulted by eight ribs. St. George's is a modern structure, built of freestone, cruciform, and in the early pointed style; and St. Michael's and Holy Trinity, also of recent erection, are in the Grecian style. There are also five chapels-of-ease. The Independents have two places of worship; the Baptists, Unitarians, Quakers, and the Wesleyan, Primitive, Calvinistic, and New Connexion Methodists have one each; and there is a Roman Catholic church, by Pugin, erected in 1856 at a cost of £10,000, which was provided by the Earl of Shrewsbury; it has a stained-glass window at the E. end. The remains of the old castle of Shrewsbury, once a place of great importance and strength, now consist of two round towers and a curtain, built by Edward I., probably on the site of the Norman keep, the walls of the inner court, now a garden, and the great arch of the inner gateway, the only remaining part of Roger de Montgomery's fort; also a lofty mound on the edge of the river, and the fort of Roushill, built by Cromwell. These remains now form part of a dwelling-house. Portions of the ancient wall erected by Cromwell are still standing on the N.E. of the town, between the Welsh Bridge and the isthmus; and a tower and part of the wall on the S. side, besides a rampart erected for the defence of the town, still remain. The Royal free grammar school of Shrewsbury, founded by Edward VI. in 1553, in place of St. Peter's College, is an endowed establishment, having twenty-two exhibitions and an income of £3,000, and has produced some eminent men, among whom Sir Philip Sidney and his friend Fulke Greville, afterwards Lord Brook, the poet, occupy a distinguished place. There are also National and Lancastrian schools. —The other principal buildings are the townhall, erected in 1836, from a design by Sir R. Smirke, at a cost of £12,000; the market-house, 103 feet long, in Elizabethan style, with a market-cross and conduit; the town and county gaol and house of correction, by Telford; military depôt, in Abbey Foregate, from a design by Wyatt, erected at a cost of £10,000, containing two large depositories for ammunition, an armoury for 25,000 stand of arms, with houses for armourer and storekeeper; the Drapers' Hall, a curious old building; mechanics' institute; public subscription library, near St. John's Hill, containing about 6,000 volumes, and with news-rooms adjoining; savings-banks, museums, and almshouses. The Shrewsbury Working Men's hall, in the market square, erected in the year 1863 by public subscription at a cost of nearly £4,000, on a site presented for the purpose by a lady. It contains a handsome lecture hall, common room, reading room, hot and cold baths, and a large eating department, where daily meals are provided on the Glasgow plan; it is not only self-supporting but also remunerative. A Doric column, in honour of Lord Hill, 132 feet high, was erected in 1814 at the entrance to the town from London, and is surmounted by a colossal statue of his lordship; it cost £5,973, raised by subscription. There is also a statue of Clive, executed by Marochetti. The theatre was rebuilt in 1834, and occupies the site of the royal residence of the princes of Powisland. On the S.W. of the town is the Quarry Promenade, set aside for the townspeople as a recreation ground, and with a walk planted on both sides with full-grown limetrees. It is about 20 acres in extent, and 1,500 feet long, and is believed to be the site of a Roman theatre. The Central railway station is built of freestone, in the Tudor style; it was completed in 1848, and considerably enlarged in 1855. The ancient council house, with an ornamented wooden gateway and two timber buildings, the one called Ireland's Mansion, and the other probably used as the guild house by the fraternity of the Holy Cross, the Clothworkers' Hall, Bellestone House, and Whitehall, are also interesting. A plot of ground 20 acres in extent, and about a mile from the town, was purchased in 1855 at a cost of £4,000, and has been laid out as a general parochial cemetery. The charitable institutions of the town include the Shropshire infirmary, a Grecian building, with a Doric portico; the eye and ear dispensary; the Salop penitentiary, established in 1844; the county lunatic asylum, at Bicton Heath, a structure in the Elizabethan style; St. Giles's and St. Millington's hospitals; a lying-in hospital; St. Mary's, St. Chad's, and Evans's almshouses, and the Holy Cross hospital, a building erected and endowed by private subscription, and with five dwellings for the reception of respectable females. The house of industry, for the poor of the six parishes of Shrewsbury, stands on the S. bank of the Severn, and was furnished for a foundling hospital in 1765; it cost £12,000. The free grammar school, already alluded to as having been founded by Edward VI., was much enlarged by Queen Elizabeth. Owing, however, to some defects in the original ordinances and rules, it had fallen into decay previous to the close of the last century, but an Act was passed in 1798 vesting the management in the Bishop of Lichfield and Coventry, and 13 trustees, and the school has again attained a high celebrity. The house, which was built in 1630, on the site of a more ancient wooden structure, is of freestone, and forms two sides of a court, the library and chapel occupying the third.—Shrewsbury received many royal charters, the chief being from Richard I. and Charles I. It is divided into five wards, and is governed by 10 aldermen and 30 councillors, of whom one is the mayor. It is a borough by prescription, and has sent two members to parliament since the reign of Edward I., the right of election, down to the passing of the Reform Act, being in burgesses paying scot and lot, and not in receipt of alms or charity. The electoral limits were enlarged by the Boundary Act; constituency 1505, in 1865. It is also a polling-place for the southern division of the county. Assizes and quarter sessions for the county are held here, and quarter and petty sessions for the town, under a recorder, who decides actions for debt to any amount, and for ejectment within the liberties. It is the head of Salop archdeaconry, in the bishopric of Lichfield, North Salop, and comprises six parishes. It is also the head of an excise collection.—The town was formerly of considerable importance as a place for the sale of Welsh flannels and webs, the market having been removed to it from Oswestry in 1621, but this branch of trade is now very much reduced. It has, however, important manufactories of thread, linen, and canvas. There is a large factory for spinning flax, besides smaller factories, fulling mills, and an extensive iron foundry at Coleham, the whole employing many hundred persons. Glass-staining is brought to great perfection, and malting is much practised, as the neighbourhood grows prime barley. Markets are held on Wednesday and Saturday of each week; fairs for horses, cattle, and sheep, on each alternate Tuesday, and for butter and cheese on the second Wednesday of each month. Wool fairs are held on July 2nd and August 14th, and the great annual horse fair in March. The fair green is 3½ acres in extent. Shoes are largely manufactured, and the town is celebrated for its brawn and Shrewsbury cakes. The Severn supplies a valuable salmon fishery. It is here navigable for boats of from 30 to 40 tons, and the Shrewsbury canal, which is 17 miles long, terminates near Castle Foregate in extensive and convenient wharves, and opens up a communication with the Staffordshire collieries.—The town is connected by railway with Chester, Manchester, Birmingham, and Hereford. From its situation, and the many objects of interest in it and the immediate neighbourhood, it is much resorted to by persons of small income, who have retired from business, and who find the markets well supplied with all the necessaries of life at a moderate cost. Four banking companies have offices here, and there are five local newspapers. About half a mile from the town, at Monkmoor, an oval racecourse is laid off. On the second Monday after Trinity a ceremonial known as Shrewsbury Show takes place, in which the twelve corporate trading companies go in procession, attended by the mayor and other members of the corporation, in their municipal capacity.

SHREWTON, a par. in the hund. of Branch, co. Wilts, 6 miles N.W. of Amesbury, and 11 N. of Salisbury. Devizes is its post town. The village is situated on Salisbury Plain, and is chiefly agricultural. Great damage was done to this village in 1841 by an inundation caused by excessive rains. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £230, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, was rebuilt in 1854. The parochial charities produce about £34 per annum, which is devoted to educational purposes, also £15 from enclosed land for the repairs of the church. There is a National school, also a Dissenting chapel. C. Wansbrough, Esq., is lord of the manor.

SHRIPNEY, a tythg. in the par. of South Bersted, hund. of Aldwick, rape of Chichester, co. Sussex, 2 miles N. of Bognor, near the Arundel and Portsmouth canal.

SHRIPPLE, a tythg. in the par. of Idmiston, hund. of Alderbury, co. Wilts, 3 miles E. of Idmiston, and 6 N.E. of Salisbury.

SHRIVENHAM, a hund. in the co. of Berks, contains the pars. of Buscot, Coleshill, Compton-Beauchamp, Eaton-Hastings, Shrivenham, Uffington, and parts of Ashbury, Great Farringdon, and Sparsholt, comprising an area of 34,490 acres.

SHRIVENHAM, a par. in the above hund., co. Berks, 5½ miles S.W. of Farringdon, and 2 from Longcott. It is a station on the Great Western railway. The parish, which is of large extent, is situated on the Wilts and Berks canal, and a branch of the river Cole. It comprises the chplries. of Becket, Bourton, Fernham, and Longcott, and the tnshp. of Watchfield. The village, which is large and well built, was formerly a market town, under a charter obtained by William de Valence in 1257. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Enclosure Act in 1789. The living is a vic.* with the cur. of Watchfield annexed, in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £550, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is a cruciform structure, with a tower rising from the centre; it formerly had a chantry, founded by John de Burghton in 1336. It contains a monument to Admiral Barrington, by Flaxman. There is also a district church at Longcott, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £300. The parochial charities produce about £108 per annum, of which £84 go to the almshouses, founded in 1642 by Sir Henry Marten. There are National schools for both sexes. Beckett House, the principal residence, is situated in White Horse Valley. Viscount Barrington, M.P., is lord of the manor.

SHRONELL, a par. in the bar. of Clanwilliam, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 3 miles S.W. of Tipperary, its post town. The greater part of the surface is arable land of medium quality. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Emly, val. £106, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was built in 1808, and the tower was subsequently added by means of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits.

SHROPHAM, a hund. in the co. of Norfolk, contains the pars. of Attleborough, Besthorpe, Brettenham, Bridgham, Old and New Buckenham, Eccles, Great Ellingham, Hargham, Hockham, Illington, Kilverston, Larling, Rockland, Rondham, Shropham, Snetterton, Wilby, and East and West Wretham, comprising an area of 49,010 acres.

SHROPHAM, a par. in the above hund., co. Norfolk, 3 miles N.W. of Eccles Road railway station, 4 N.W. of East Harling, and 10 N. of Thetford. The village, which is of small extent, is chiefly agricultural. It was formerly a market town, and gave name to the hundred.

Part of the land is in fen and common. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £298, in the patron. of the mayor and chapter. The church is dedicated to St. Peter. The parochial charities produce about £48 per annum, realised from allotments. There is a school for both sexes. The Primitive Methodists have a place of worship.

SHROPSHIRE, or SALOP, an inland co. in the W. of England, is bounded on the N. by Cheshire, E. by Staffordshire, S. by Worcestershire and Herefordshire, and W. by the Welsh counties of Radner, Montgomery, and Denbigh. It lies between 52° 18′ and 53° 0′ N. lat. and between 2° 14′ and 3° 12′ W. long. Its extreme length from N. to S. is 48 miles, and its greatest breadth from E. to W. is 40 miles. The area of the county is 1,343 square miles, or 859,520 acres, of which 790,000 acres are arable, meadow, and pasture. The population at the commencement of the century was 169,248; in 1851 it was 229,341; and in 1861, 240,959, or 42 per cent. over the number in 1801. At the time of the Roman invasion the county was chiefly inhabited by the Ordovices and Cornavii, whose territory was divided by the Severn, and was subsequently included in the Roman province Flavia Cæsariensis. The Romans appear to have been stoutly opposed by the Britons in this part of the country, as evidenced by the camp called Caer Caradoc, supposed to be that of Caractacus, and the earthworks at Caer Ditches, near Clun, where Camden and others are of opinion the great battle was fought between this chief and Ostorius Scapula, which effected the subjugation of the W. of the island. The principal Roman station was at Wroxeter, on the Severn, called by Latin writers Uriconium, where a wall, rampart, and ditch still mark the extent of the Roman city. There are besides Roman remains at Rowton, Market-Drayton, The Walls, Bury Ditches, and other places in this county. For many centuries it formed part of the kingdom of Powisland, with Pengwern for its capital, but the Saxons under Penda succeeded in conquering it in 626, and it became incorporated with the kingdom of Mercia, which extended to the base of the Welsh mountains, and was known as Myrcna-rice, the kingdom of the borderers; this was Latinised into Mercia, and finally was corrupted into the Marches of Wales. For the protection of his territory from the inroads of the Welsh, Offa made a dyke or rampart 100 miles long, which still bears his name, and extended along the confines of Wales, from Flintshire on the N. to the Bristol Channel on the S., with the Severn for an inner boundary. Shortly after the union of the Saxon kingdoms under Egbert, this part of the country became a prey to the ravages of the Danes, who arrived here in great force in 849, and pushed on to Wales. At Cleobury Mortimer is a camp, supposed to have been formed by this people, and near Bridgnorth are traces of a fortification. When Alfred the Great had expelled the Danes he formed this district into a county under the name of Scrobbesbyrigshire, after its capital, then a city of much importance, of which its present name is a corruption. During the two following centuries the county was frequently invaded by the Welsh, and at the Norman conquest was given by William I., with the adjoining county of Montgomery, and the title of the Earl of Shrewsbury, to Roger de Montgomery for his services in the reduction of Edric the Forester. About this period most of the castles in the county were erected by the Norman nobles, who obtained grants of land on condition of maintaining their castles garrisoned against the Welsh, and were appointed Lords Marchers, with power to decide all questions of grievance between the English and Welsh, establish courts of judicature, build towns, &c., but the Welsh continuing to harass the border, Edward I. determined on their subjugation, and having taken David-ap-Llewellyn, the last prince of Wales, summoned a parliament to meet at Shrewsbury in 1283, by which the prince was declared guilty of treason, and condemned to be hanged and quartered, which was accordingly done. A parliament was again appointed to meet here by Richard II. in 1397. During the revolt of Owain Glyndwr in the reign of Henry IV., the county was the scene of many lesser conflicts, and the final battle was fought at Shrewsbury in 1403, when the Prince of Wales, afterwards Henry V., with a portion of the king's army, defeated the joint forces of Glyndwr and the Percys, and slew Harry Hotspur, son of the Earl of Northumberland, which terminated the war. In the struggle between the rival houses of York and Lancaster the county was again engaged, and many important events took place. On the landing of the Duke of Richmond in 1485 he was proclaimed as Henry VII., and joined by the tenants of the Earl of Shrewsbury, and many others, who rendered him signal service in the battle of Bosworth Field. When Charles I. became obnoxious to a portion of his subjects he retired to Shrewsbury, and many of the towns in this county declared in his favour, but in 1644 the parliamentarians gained the ascendency, and continued to hold it, notwithstanding the unavailing efforts of the royalists, who rose in arms in 1655, and again in 1659.—The county is remarkable for the variety and beauty of its scenery, which in some places displays itself in rugged mountainous districts, and in others in rich and well-cultivated tracts, diversified by gently rising elevations with intersecting valleys. The county is divided by the Severn into two almost equal parts, the southern portion assuming the mountainous character of the adjoining counties of Montgomery and Denbigh, while the northern district is nearly level, relieved only by a few solitary hills and finely-wooded valleys. The elevated summits on the S.E. are for the most part extensions of the great western, or Welsh, range of mountains. The highest points are Brown Clee Hill, 1,805 feet above the sea-level, and Titterstone Clee Hill, 1,750 feet; W. of the Clee hills is the mountainous district called Clun Forest, formerly a wooded tract, but now well cultivated and divided into small freehold properties. Separating these two districts is a mountainous tract which stretches to the N.W. in a range of hills, the loftiest of which is Longmynd, 1,674 feet high, and still further N. is Stiperstones, a very peculiar mass of rocks. The remaining most important mountain ranges are the Berwyn range, which enters from Montgomery and terminates in this county in Selattyn Hill, 1,300 feet high; the Breddin hills, extending for about 4 miles, but in no place of considerable altitude; and the Wrekin, an isolated elevation of 1,320 feet, near Wellington, which forms a conspicuous object, being much higher than the neighbouring hills. It is connected with the Caer Caradoc hills, which border on the Longmynd.—The principal river is the Severn, which is noticed in a separate article. Its course through this county is winding and navigable through its entire extent of 70 miles, during which it receives from the E. the waters of the Tern, and its tributary the Roden, and of several small streams from the W. The S. is also watered by the Teme, which is joined by a number of small tributaries, and after forming part of the boundary between Herefordshire and Shropshire, falls into the Severn below Worcester. The Dee washes the N.E. corner of the county, separating it from Cheshire. The only lake of any size is Ellesmere, near the town of that name, which covers an area of 116 acres. The canal accommodation is very excellent, all the lines being to the N. of the Severn; the principal are the Donnington, which extends from Donnington Wood to the neighbourhood of Newport, where it is joined by the Shropshire canal of about the same length, which runs into the Severn below Coalbrookdale; a branch communicates with Ketley. The Shrewsbury canal, starting from the Severn at Shrewsbury, runs along the left bank of the river, and then, turning to the N.E., joins the Shropshire and Donnington canals near Wellington. It is 17 miles long; at Atcham it passes through a tunnel 970 yards in length, and it crosses the valley of the Tern by the first cast-iron aqueduct that was ever made; besides several other minor canals. The county is well supplied with railways; Shrewsbury, its capital, being in direct communication with Chester and Liverpool by Crewe, Stafford, Birmingham, and Gloucester and South Wales by Hereford. Coach roads were formerly very bad, but have of late years been much improved. The principal is the London and Holyhead road, which enters the county between Wolverhampton and Shiffnal, and, passing Shrewsbury, leaves it near Chirk.—Shropshire is as important from the richness and variety of its minerals as it is interesting from the beauty of its scenery and the numerous remains of antiquity which may yet be seen there. The New Red sandstone formation occupies the whole N. of the county, and the Old Red sandstone extends over most of the S., the Severn being in most parts the boundary between the two systems. The northern limit of the older formation is the coalfield of Coalbrookdale, and on the E. it extends to the Wyre, or Bewdley coal district which passes into the adjoining county of Worcester. Its south-western boundary consists of an extensive tract comprising nearly one-fourth of the entire county, and composed of stratified rocks of the Silurian and Cambrian systems, but there is a considerable outlying district of the Old Red sandstone nearly 100 square acres in extent, separated from the larger portion of the Silurian rocks, which reaches into Radnorshire, and includes nearly the entire of Clun Forest. The Ludlow hills belong to the Silurian system, and rise from the Old Red sandstone at Corvedale to elevations of 1,000 to 1,100 feet, and from these to Coalbrookdale extends an unbroken escarpment called Wenlock Edge, consisting of Wenlock limestone. W. of this rise the Caradoc, or Church Stretton hills, where Ostorius is said by some to have defeated Caractacus, and which are formed of amorphous trap; Longmynd, which belongs to the Cambrian system, and raises its square-topped head to a height of 1,674 feet; and Stiperstones, rough and ragged, in which is a rich lead mine. The New Red sandstone formation in the N. of the county is broken towards Market Drayton by a bed of lias containing fossils corresponding to those found in the great lias formation of Warwick and Worcestershire, from which it is distant upwards of 60 miles. The plain of Shrewsbury is in most parts formed of the newer sandstone, but several patches of coal are scattered through it, and they are also found at intervals between the transition chains which indent this same plain. The important coalfield of Coalbrookdale, the most extensive and most productive in the county, extends from Wormbridge to Coalport on the Severn. It is 8 miles in length and 2 in breadth; the coal is of the kind called slate coal, and contains from 1 to 3 per cent. of ash. Some of the beds are very sulphurous, and the coals are only used in making lime on account of the fœtid odour which they emit when burning. The most productive parts of the field are about Hadley, where 16 seams have a total thickness of 15 yards; Dawley, where the coal seams are 14 yards in depth; and Madeley, where the beds are narrower, and 24 of them only measure 10½ yards. The entire field is much faulted, some of the dislocations amounting to 600 or 700 feet. Coal is found at every part of the district at varying depths, and alternating with ironstone, sandstone, and other substances. The ironstone is not rich, but being accompanied by the coal and flint supplies all the requisites for smelting, which is extensively practised. The ores of iron are peroxides in sandstone, argillaceous carbonates in shale, and sulphurets in coal. Brown Clee Hill and Titterstone Clee Hill, a few miles S. of Coalbrookdale, have their summits covered with overlying masses of granite, but coal is worked midway from the base. In the former it is found only in their strata, but in the latter the principal bed is 6 feet in depth. At Cornbrook there is a very valuable field 1 mile long and a quarter of a mile in breadth. The Billingsley tract, to the E. of the Clee hills, stretches from Dense Hill on the N. to the borders of Shropshire and Worcestershire, a distance of 8 miles, but it is doubtful whether this is one continuous field, or consists of several smaller ones adjacent to each other. The rocks which bound or separate these coalfields consist principally of sandstone, limestone, trap, and schistus, containing lead and calamine, the most important of which, as already mentioned, are in Stiperstones mountain. The matrix is crystallized quartz, with sulphates and carbonate of barytes, and carbonate of lime. The ore is sulphuret of lead, carbonate of lead, red lead, ore, and blende, which contains besides calamine, or zinc, and the rock at Pimhill is strongly tinctured with copper. Mineral pitch exudes from the red sandstone at Pitchford. Freestone, marble, slate, and pipeclay are raised. Saline springs are found among the New Red sandstone and coal measures in the N. and there is one also at Saltmoor, near Ashford, on the banks of the Tern, where salt is said to have been manufactured before the Norman conquest. Chalybeate springs also occur near Wenlock, at Moreton Bay, and in other places, and on the W. side of Longmynd, on Prolley Moor, there is a spring containing chloride of lime.—The climate is generally salubrious, but varies much according to the elevation above the sea and the nature of the soil, the lands in the E. being level, are dry and warm, so that the harvests there are frequently ripe a fortnight earlier than in the W. and middle. The soils are too varied and intermixed to admit of any general description, but the land is for the most part fertile and well cultivated, except the elevated districts, which are generally too rugged and barren to admit of much use being made of them except as sheepwalks. Agriculture is improving, grass lands receiving less attention than arable. The meadows near the Severn are very fertile, and are often enriched by the overflow of the river. The county is not remarkable for dairy produce, but a fine quality of cheese is made and sold as Cheshire. The cattle are generally of the improved Hereford, Lancashire, Leicester, and Cheshire breeds. The horses are of good quality, but of no particular kind. The sheep are remarkable for the excellence of their wool. In many parts there is a species of horned sheep peculiar to this county and resembling South Downs. They are small and hardy, weighing about 10 lbs. the quarter, and yielding fleece of about 2½ lbs. Pork and bacon are much used by the people. Large flocks of turkeys are raised, and there are fine orchards, particularly in the S., where hops also are grown. China of delicate and elegant pattern is made at Coalport and Caughley; earthenware at Coalport, and a coarse quality is also made at Broseley. There are glass works at Brockwardine, and porcelain is made at Bridgnorth, also carpets and cloth. Flannels are manufactured at Oswestry, Shrewsbury, Worthen, and Church Stretton, and linens and linen thread at various places. Gloves and paper are made at Ludlow, and there are paper works also in different parts of the county. The principal industry, however, is devoted to coal and iron. The collieries under inspection number 59. The yearly produce is estimated at upwards of 300,000 tons, most of which is consumed in the iron furnaces at Coalbrookdale, Lightmoor Ketley, Donnington, Madeley Wood, and Snedshill on the N. of the Severn, and Calcot, Willey, Broseley, and Benthall S. of that river. Seven-tenths of the iron produced in the county, or 7 per cent. of that in the entire kingdom, is raised at Wellington, Dawley, and Madeley. The manufacture at Wellington and its neighbourhood is yearly increasing by the establishment of iron foundries, saw mills, new workshops and forges for the making of bar iron, which is there extensively carried on.—The county is divided into North and South Shropshire, the former containing the hundreds of Oswestry, Pimhill, North Bradford, South Bradford, and the liberty of Shrewsbury; and the latter the hunds. of Brimstrey, exclusive of Halesowen parish, Chirbury, Candover, Ford, Munslow, Overs, Purslow, including Clun, Stottesden, and Wenlock franchise. It comprises 231 parishes, distributed among the dioceses of Hereford, Lichfield, St. Asaph, and Worcester, but all in the province of Canterbury. The civil government is entrusted to the lord-lieutenant and custos rotulorum, high sheriff, and about 138 deputy-lieutenants and magistrates. The county is in the Oxford circuit; the assizes and quarter sessions are held at Shrewsbury, where the county gaol, lunatic asylum, and Shropshire infirmary are situated, and there are 14 market towns. The county returns 12 members to parliament, two for the northern and two for the southern divisions, constituency 5,315 and 4,170 respectively, in 1865, and two each for the boroughs of Shrewsbury (1,505), Bridgnorth (647), Ludlow (382), and Wenlock (999). The detached district of Halesowen is included for elective purposes with the county of Worcester. The election for the northern division is held at Shrewsbury, and for the southern at Church Stretton.

SHROTON, a par. in the hund. of Pimperne, North Blandford div., co. Dorset. See IWERNE COURTNAY.

SHRULE, a par. in the bar. of Slivemargue, Queen's County, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles N. of Carlow, its post town, lying along the river Barrow. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Leighlin, united with Slatey. The church is in ruins. It is united to Killabin in the Roman Catholic arrangement. Shrule Castle, situated on the Barrow, was built in the time of Queen Elizabeth by Sir Robert Hartpoole.

SHRULE, a par. in the bar. of Rathcline, co. Longford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, containing the post town of Ballymahon. The surface lies along the river Inney, and consists of a good soil. The royal canal traverses the parish. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ardagh, val. £147, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is at Ballymahon, and has been lately enlarged by means of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits. There are a Roman Catholic chapel, two public and several private day schools. Newcastle, the seat of the Dowager Countess Ross, and numerous other seats, surround the village.

SHRULE, a par. in the bar. of Kilmaine, co. Mayo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 3 miles N. of Headford, its post town. The surface, which lies along the river Blackwater, consists of a good soil, and is traversed by the road from Galway to Westport. The living is in the dioc. of Tuam, and in the patron. of the bishop. There are a Roman Catholic chapel, and one or two private schools. Dalgan Park is the chief seat. There are ruins of Ballycurrin Castle.

SHRULE, a bar. in the co. of Longford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, contains the pars. of Abbeyshrule, Agharra, Forgney, and parts of Kilcommock, Kilglass, Noughaval, Taghsheenod, and Taghshinny, comprising about 21,000 acres.

SHUCKBURGH, LOWER, a par. in the hund. of Kington, co. Warwick, 4½ miles E. of Southam. Daventry is its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the Oxford canal, and is wholly agricultural. Mr. Drake's hounds meet in this parish. There are some sand pits. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Worcester, annexed to the vic. of Priors' Hardwick. The church is dedicated to St. John the Baptist. There is a free school for both sexes.

SHUCKBURGH, UPPER, a par. in the hund. of Knightlow, co. Warwick, half a mile S.E. of Lower Shuckburgh, 6 miles S. of Rugby, and 5 E. of Southam. Daventry is its post town. The village consists of two or three farmhouses. The manor passed from the Danvers to the Schuckburghs in the 12th century, from whom it derives its name. The Oxford canal passes through the parish. The surface is generally elevated, and on the western boundary is Beacon Hill, commanding views of the surrounding country as far as the Wrekin and the Malvern hills. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £30. The church is dedicated to St. John the Baptist. It has some stained windows by Eginton, also tombs of Richard Shuckburgh and Sir George Shuckburgh, the mathematician. The principal residence is Shuckburgh Hall.

SHUDY-CAMPS, a par. in the hund. of Chilford, co. Cambridge, 4 miles S.E. of Linton, its post town, and 8 miles N.E. of Audley End railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the Via Devana, near a branch of the river Cam. The inhabitants are wholly agricultural. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £146, in the patron. of Trinity College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure, with a square tower containing five bells. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes.

SHUGHBOROUGH, a tnshp. in the par. of Colwich, co. Stafford, 5 miles S.E. of Stafford, its post town. It is situated on the Grand Trunk canal in a vale on the rivers Trent and Sow. It came to the Astons in the reign of Henry III., and subsequently to the Tixals.

SHUNA, an island in the par. of Kilbrandon, district of Lorn, co. Argyle, Scotland, 14 miles S.W. of Oban. It is situated inside Luing Island, in Shuna Sound, and extends in length about 3 miles from N. to S., with an extreme breadth of about 1½ mile. The surface is of a tumulated character, and about 200 feet above sea-level, and is chiefly in woodland and pasture. Limestone and slate are quarried.

SHUNNER FELL, a mountain in the par. of Grinton, North Riding co. York, 4 miles W. of Muker. It attains an elevation of 2,350 feet above sea-level, and gives rise to the river Swale.

SHURDINGTON, GREAT, a par. in the hund. of Upper Dudstone, co. Gloucester, 3 miles S.W. of Cheltenham, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the new road from Cheltenham, through the vale of Rodborough, to Bath. The soil is of a clayey nature, alternated with loam and gravel. The land is chiefly in pasture. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic. of Badgeworth, in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol. The church, dedicated to St. Paul, has a tower and bell. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes.

SHURDINGTON, LITTLE, a hmlt. in the par. of Badgeworth, hund. of Upper Dadstone, co. Gloucester, 4 miles E. of Gloucester.

SHURFORD, a hmlt. in the par. of Wilton, co. Somerset, near Taunton.

SHURIRY, a small loch in the par. of Reay, co. Caithness, Scotland, 5 miles W. by S. of Halkirk. It is formed by the river Forse.

SHURLACH, UPPER AND LOWER, a tnshp. in the par. of Davenham, hund. of Northwich, co. Chester, 1½ mile S.E. of Northwich, its post town. It is situated on the Grand Trunk canal and the river Dane. The land is chiefly in pasture. The Wesleyan Association Methodists have a place of worship. J. H. Harper, Esq., is lord of the manor.

SHURTON, a tythg. in the par. of Stogursey, co. Somerset, 7 miles N.W. of Bridgwater, near the Bristol Channel.

SHUSTOKE, a par. in the Atherstone div. of the hund. of Hemlingford, co. Warwick, 3 miles N.E. of Coleshill, its post town. It is a station on the Birmingham, Whitacre, and Leicester section of the Midland railway. The village is situated on the high road from Birmingham to Atherstone, near the Midland railway. The par., which extends for nearly nine miles in length, though very narrow, contains the chplry. of Bentley and the hmlt. of Blythe. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The river Blythe, and a stream called the Bourne, intersect the parish. The living is a vic.* with the cur. of Bentley annexed, in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £258, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Cuthbert, has a lofty tower, containing five bells. The interior of the church contains monuments of the Dugdale and Dilke families. The registers date from 1538. The parochial charities produce about £54 per annum, of which £49 go to Huntbach's school and almshouses.

SHUTE, a par. in the hund. of Colyton, co. Devon, 3 miles W. of Axminster, its post town, and 2 N.E. of Colyton. The village is situated near the river Axe, on the Exeter and Axmouth road. The manor was formerly held by the Shutes, Bonvilles, and Petres. The soil consists of red marl. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £250, in the patron. of the dean and chapter.

The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is an ancient cruciform structure, with a tower containing five bells. The interior of the church contains monuments of the De la Pole family. There is a National school for both sexes. Shute House is the principal residence. Sir J. G. R. de la Pole, Bart., is lord of the manor, and principal landowner. A pleasure fair occurs on the Monday prior to Michaelmas.

SHUTFORD, a chplry. in the par. of Swalcliffe, hund. of Banbury, co. Oxford, 5 miles W. of Banbury. It comprises the tnshps. of East and West Shutford. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic. of Swalcliffe, in the dioc. of Oxford. The chapel-of-ease, dedicated to St. Martin, is situated in the township of East Shutford.

SHUTTINGTON, a par. in the Tamworth div. of Hemlingford hund., co. Warwick, 3 miles N.E. of Tamworth, its post town, and 1½ mile N. of the Polesworth railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the Coventry canal and the river Anker. There are remains of Alycote or Alvecote priory situated in this parish. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £318. The church is an ancient structure, with Norman porch.

SHUTTLEHANGER, a chplry. in the par. of Stoke-Bruerne, hund. of Cleley, co. Northampton, 3 miles N.E. of Towcester, its post town, and 3½ from Blisworth railway station. It is situated near the Grand Junction canal. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the manufacture of shoes and pillow-lace. The Wesleyans have a place of worship.

SHUTTLEWOOD, a hmlt. in the par. of Bolsover, co. Derby, 5 miles E. of Chesterfield.

SHUTTLEWORTH, a tnshp. in the par. of Bury, hund. of Salford, co. Lancaster, 4 miles N. of Bury, its post town, and the same distance from Haslingden. It is a station on the East Lancashire railway. The village is situated on the high road from Rawtenstall to Bury, near the river Irwell. The district of Shuttleworth, which is extensive, was formed into a par. in 1845, and comprises the tnshp. of its own name, and part of that of Walmersley. It gives name to the Shuttleworths of Gawthorp, at which place they settled in Richard II.'s time. In the vicinity are cotton, woollen, and paper mills; also collieries, stone quarries, and bleach works, which give employment to a large number of the inhabitants. The soil is of a heavy character, upon a rocky subsoil. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £160, in the patron. of the crown and bishop alternately. The church, dedicated to St. John in the Wilderness, was erected in 1847, at an expense of £2,000. There are National schools for both sexes. The Independents and Wesleyans have each a place of worship, in which Sunday-schools are held. There are also a library and reading rooms. Nearly in the centre of the parish stands Grant's Tower, and on the opposite side of the valley is a monument of Sir Robert Peel. The Edenfield and Bury coaches pass through the village daily.

SHYANE, a par. in the bar. of Eliogarty, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 3 miles N.N.E. of Thurles. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Cashel, val. with Thurles, £950, in the patron. of the bishop.

SIBBALDIE, an ancient par. in the co. of Dumfries, Scotland, 4 miles N. of Lockerby. It is now joined to Applegarth.

SIBBERSCOTT, a tnshp. in the par. of Pontesbury, co. Salop, 5 miles S.W. of Shrewsbury.

SIBBERTOFT, a par. in the hund. of Rothwell, co. Northampton, 3 miles N.E. of Welford, its post town, and 5 S.E. of Market-Harborough. The village is small and wholly agricultural. Here is a well, from which the river Welland rises. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £350, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Helen. There is a National school. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. Sir James Langham, Bart., is lord of the manor.

SIBDON-CARWOOD, a par. in the Stow div. of Purslow hund., co. Salop, 7 miles S.W. of Church Stritton, and 1 mile N.W. of Stokesay. The par. is situated on the road from Ludlow to Bishop's Castle. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £50.

SIBERTSWOLD, or SHEPHERDSWELL, a par. in the hund. of Bewsborough, lathe of St. Augustine, co. Kent, 6 miles N.W. of Dover, its post town. It is a station on the London, Chatham, and Dover railway. The village, which is of small extent, is chiefly agricultural. The soil is of a light nature, though in some places a stiff clay occurs. Three Barrow Down, in this parish, is so named from three large tumuli or barrows, connected with each other by deep trenches, supposed to be of Roman origin, near the edge of Barham Downs. The living is a vic. with that of Coldred annexed, in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £255, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is an ancient edifice. There is a mixed National school.

SIBFORD-GOWER and SIBFORD TERRIS, tnshps. in the par. of Swalcliffe, hund. of Bloxham, co. Oxford, 7½ miles S.W. of Banbury, and 24 N.W. of Oxford. These townships are situated on the borders of Warwickshire, and are wholly agricultural. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £235, in the patron. of New College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, was erected in 1840. The parochial charities produce about £135 per annum, of which £30 go to the free school. There are places of worship for the Wesleyans and the Society of Friends. J. H. Sheldon, Esq., is lord of the manor.

SIBLE-HEDINGHAM. See HEDINGHAM, SIBLE, co. Essex.

SIBSEY, a par. in the W. div. of Bolingbroke hund., parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 5½ miles N.E. of Boston, its post town. It is a station on the East Lincolnshire branch of the Great Northern railway. The village is extensive and well built. The inhabitants are chiefly agricultural. The par. includes the ext. par. place of Rowlands Marsh and the hmlt. of Frithbank. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £315, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Margaret, has a square tower containing eight bells. The church was restored in 1856. The parochial charities produce about £139 per annum, of which £97 go to the free school. The Wesleyans have a place of worship.

SIBSON, a hmlt. in the par. of Stibbington, hund. of Norman-Cross, co. Hants, 6 miles W. of Peterborough, and 1½ mile S.E. of Wanstead station, on the London and North Western railway, on the river Nen.

SIBSON, or SIBSTONE, a par. in the hund. of Sparkenhoe, co. Leicester, 4 miles N.E. of Atherstone, its post town, and 4 S.W. of Market-Bosworth. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Sence, and is chiefly agricultural. The par. includes the hmlts. of Wellesborough and Upton. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £962, in the patron. of Pembroke College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Botolph, is an ancient edifice with a square tower containing a clock and four bells. The interior of the church contains the brass of a priest bearing date 1532. There is a National school, erected and supported at the expense of Earl Howe.

SIBTHORPE, a par. in the S. of Newark wap., co. Nottingham, 7 miles S.W. of Newark, its post town, and 6 S.E. of Thurgarton railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on Car Dyke, and is chiefly agricultural. The living is a don. cur.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £20. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient structure, with a square tower containing four bells. The chancel contains a monument to E. Burnell. The church was originally larger than at present, and had a chantry founded by Geoffrey Scrope, in Edward II.'s time, and subsequently converted into a college, the revenue of which, at the Dissolution, was £31 1*s.* 2*d.* There is a school, supported by Mrs. B. Wright, of Shelton. The Wesleyans have a place of worship, constructed upon wheels. Archbishop Secker was born in this parish. The Duke of Portland is lord of the manor.

SIBTON, a par. in the hund. of Blything, co. Suffolk,

1½ mile N.W. of Yoxford, and 5 miles N.W. of Saxmundham. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Badingham, and is wholly agricultural. The land is partly in common. The par. comprises the hmlt. of Sibton-Green. In the vicinity are traces of a Cistercian abbey, founded by William de Cayneto, or Cheney, about 1150, and valued at the Dissolution at £250 15*s.* 7*d.* The living is a vic.* with the perpet. cur. of Peasenhall annexed, in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £200. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient edifice, and contains three brasses of the Chapmans, bearing date from 1574. The parochial charities produce about £93 per annum, £28 of which go to Scrivener's free school, founded in 1719. Sibton Park is the principal residence.

SICKLESMERE, a hmlt. in the pars. of Great and Little Whelnetham, co. Suffolk, 3 miles S.E. of Bury St. Edmund's.

SICKLINGHALL, a tnshp. in the par. of Kirkby-Overblow, upper div. of Claro wap., West Riding co. York, 3 miles S.E. of Kirkby-Overblow, and 2½ W. of Wetherby, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. In 1852, a Roman Catholic church, dedicated to St. Mary, was erected at an outlay of about £8,000, defrayed by Peter Middleton, Esq., of Linton Springs. It has a groined roof and painted windows. Two wings have since been added to the building for a monastery called "Lys Marie," where young men are trained for the Roman Catholic priesthood. There is a parochial school for both sexes, which is supported by H. J. Scott, Esq., lord of the manor. The Wesleyans have a place of worship.

SIDBURY, a par. in the hund. of East Budleigh, co. Devon, 3 miles N. of Sidmouth, its post town, and 4 S.W. of Honiton. The village, which is considerable, was formerly a market town. It is situated on the river Sid, which falls into the English Channel at Sidmouth. The inhabitants are chiefly agricultural. The par. contains the hmlts. of Tidford, Harcombe, and Burscombe. The soil consists of marl, clay, and sand. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £476, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, dedicated to St. Giles, is an ancient cruciform structure, with a tower containing a clock and six bells. The parochial charities produce about £70 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes. The Independents have a place of worship. Didbury House, Castle House, Cotford House, Court Hall, Mount Edgar, Sivonia, and Primley Hill, are the principal residences. D. Cave, Esq., is lord of the manor. A cattle fair is held on the Wednesday prior to the 20th September, and on the Tuesday before Ascension Day.

SIDBURY, a par. in the Chelmarsh div. of Stottesden hund., co. Salop, 6 miles S.W. of Bridgnorth, its post town. The village, which is small, is situated near the Bridgnorth and Cleobury Mortimer road. The inhabitants are chiefly agricultural. The soil consists of a strong loam upon a subsoil of clay. The Wheatland hounds meet in this parish. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £227. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, is an ancient stone edifice with a small turret containing one bell.

SIDCUP, a hmlt. in the par. of Foot's-Cray, Ruxley hund., lathe of Sutton-at-Hone, co. Kent, 3½ miles S.E. of Eltham.

SIDDAN, a par. in the bar. of Lower Slane, co. Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles S.E. of Drumcondra, its post town. The surface consists of good pasture land, and is traversed by the road from Dublin to Londonderry. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Meath, val. with others, £225, in the patron. of the crown and bishop. The church was erected in 1753. There is a Roman Catholic chapel united to those of Killeary and Innismott. There are two public schools. Mooretown is the principal seat. This parish was granted to the Manners' family by Queen Elizabeth, and formerly belonged to St. Thomas's Hospital at Dublin. Linen weaving is carried on, and lime and marl are worked. Petty sessions are held once a fortnight.

SIDDINGTON, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Prestbury, hund. of Macclesfield, co. Chester, 5½ miles N.W. of Congleton, its post town, and 5 S.W. of Macclesfield. The village is situated on a branch of the river Weaver, and is chiefly agricultural. To the N.E. of the township is Reed's Mere, an extensive sheet of water, upon which is a floating island of about 2 acres in extent, covered with brushwood and beech trees. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Chester, val. £106. There is a National school for both sexes. Thornycroft Hall is the principal residence. A. H. Devonport, Esq., is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

SIDDINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Crowthorne, co. Gloucester, 2 miles S.E. of Cirencester, its post town, and 8 from Cricklade. The Great Western railway, which passes through the parish, has a branch from Kemble to Cirencester. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the road from Cirencester to Wootton-Bassett, near the river Churn and the Thames and Severn canal. It was formerly celebrated for the manufacture of pottery. The soil consists of stone-brash and clay, upon a subsoil of rock, and stone of a bluish colour, and very durable, is quarried for paving. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £440, with the discharged vic. of St. Peter annexed, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is a stone structure, with a tower containing two bells. Bishop Bull was rector of this parish. The parochial charities produce about £8 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes. The Independents have a chapel. The Earl Bathurst is lord of the manor.

SIDE, a par. in the hund. of Rapsgate, co. Gloucester, 7 miles N.W. of Cirencester, its post town, and 7 E. of Painswick. The parish, which is of small extent, is situated near the Roman Ermine Street. The surface is hilly. The soil consists of stone-brash and gravel, with a rocky subsoil. There is no village. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £126. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a small stone edifice, with a tower and three bells. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum. John Hall, Esq., is lord of the manor.

SIDESTRAND, a par. in the hund. of North Erpingham, co. Norfolk, 3 miles S.E. of Cromer, its post town, and 7 N. of Walsham. The parish, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. There is a coastguard station situated on the N.E. coast. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £100. The church is dedicated to St. Michael, and had formerly a circular tower, which fell down in 1841. The register dates from 1558. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum.

SIDFORD, a hmlt. in the par. of Millbrook, co. Hants, 2 miles N.W. of Southampton.

SIDLAW-HILLS, a mountain chain lying between Perth and Brechin, co. Forfar, Scotland. They consist of red sandstone, and attain an elevation of 1,406 feet, at the highest point at Dunsinane Hill 1,114 feet.

SIDLESHAM, a par. in the hund. of Manhood, rape of Chichester, co. Sussex, 5 miles S. of Chichester, its post town. The village, which is considerable, is situated between Chichester and Pagham harbours. An estuary was formed here by a sudden irruption of the sea at Pagham, immersing nearly 3,000 acres of land; this estuary is the means of working an extensive tide-mill, which will grind a load of corn in an hour. The soil is chiefly fertile. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £182, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure, with a square tower containing two bells. The register dates from 1566. The parochial charities produce about £129 per annum. There is a parochial school.

SIDMONTON, a par. in the lower half div. of Kingsclere hund., co. Hants, 7 miles S. of Newbury railway station, and 3 S.W. of Kingsclere, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. It formerly belonged to Romsey Abbey, and passed at the Dissolution to the Kingsmills. There is a meet for the Craven hounds at Sidmonton Common. The living is a vic. annexed to that of Echinswell, in the dioc. of Winchester. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has a tower containing six bells. William Kingsmill, Esq., is lord of the manor.

SIDMOUTH, a par., seaport, market town, and watering-place in the hund. of East Budleigh, co. Devon, 14 miles S.E. of Exeter, and 6 S.W. of Ottery St. Mary. The town, which is situated at the lower end of a valley, sheltered on the E. and N. by two high hills, and near the mouth of the small river Sid, which here falls into the Western Bay, was formerly a place of more importance than at present, and in the 13th century was a borough and market town, governed by a portreeve. Its trade was then very considerable, particularly with France, the nearest point of which, Cape de la Hogue, near Cherbourg, is 90 miles across, but no craft, except pleasure-boats and fishing-smacks, can now approach the town, in consequence of the harbour being choked up with sand and pebbles. The town is irregularly built, but is neat and clean, and has recently been much improved. In 1839, an Act was obtained for building a market house, and the town contains hotels, inns, boarding-houses, commodious baths on the Esplanade, public rooms for assemblies and concerts, an institution, with a library and reading-rooms at the London Hotel, subscription reading-rooms, two circulating libraries situated in Fore-street, and a sea-wall, completed in 1838, which affords a promenade of about half a mile in length. The climate is salubrious and remarkably mild, the town having a southerly aspect, overlooking the sea. The mean annual temperature is 51·97°, while the summer averages 62°, and the winter only 42·44°. The town is well lighted with gas, and a good supply of pure water has lately been brought from the Cotmaton springs. From the top of the Peak, or Salcombe hills, the view extends upwards of 30 miles, taking in the whole of the valley of the Sid. The soil is a rich alluvial earth. In the vicinity of the town are numerous marine villas, including Woolbrook Glen, once the residence of the late Duke and Duchess of Kent, and the Queen, then Princess Victoria. Some of the female population are employed in the manufacture of Honiton lace. This place gives the title of viscount to the Addington family. A landslip occurred here some years back, when a part of the Peak hill was carried nearly a fourth of a mile into the sea. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £481. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, has been lately restored. It contains some good specimens of coloured glass, and a handsome reredos of Caen stone and marble. A painted window is about to be presented by her Majesty in memory of her father, the late Duke of Kent, who died here. There is also a chapel-of-ease dedicated to All Saints. There are places of worship for Independents, Wesleyans, and Unitarians. There are parochial, National, and British and Foreign schools, also two Sunday-schools. Market days are Tuesday and Thursday. Fairs are held on Easter Monday, and on the third Monday in September, for the sale of cattle and horses.

SIDNEY SUSSEX COLLEGE, an ext. par. place in the lib. of Cambridge University, co. Cambridge.

SIEFTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Culmington, co. Salop, 6 miles N.W. of Ludlow.

SIGGINSTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Llanwit Major, co. Glamorgan, 4 miles S.W. of Cowbridge.

SIGGLESTHORNE, a par. and tnshp. in the N. div. of Holderness wap., East Riding co. York, 6 miles N.E. of Beverley, its post town, 13 N.E. of Hull, and 4 S.W. of Hornsea. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The par. includes the tnshps. of Catfoss, Hatfield, and Seaton. The soil is of a clayey and loamy nature, upon a subsoil of clay. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of York, val. £585, in the patron. of the crown. The church, dedicated to St. Lawrence, is an ancient structure, with a square tower containing three bells. The parochial charities consist of Constable's school, for the instruction of 16 poor children. The principal residence is Sigglesthorne Hall.

SIGHELDEN, or SILSDEN, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Kildwick, E. div. of Staincliffe wap., West Riding co. York, 5 miles S.E. of Skipton, 4 N.W. of Keighley, and within half a mile of the Silsden railway station. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the manufacture of worsted and cotton goods, and in nail-making. The village is situated on the Leeds and Liverpool canal, near the river Aire. The tnshp. includes the hmlts. of Sighelden Moor, Brunthwaite, and Cringle. A considerable portion of the land is moorland, part of which has recently been brought under cultivation. Coal of inferior quality is found, and there are quarries of excellent building-stone. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £121. The church is dedicated to St. James, and was originally erected in 1711, but rebuilt in 1816 by the Earl of Thanet, who is lord of the manor and chief landowner. There are places of worship for Primitive Methodists and Wesleyans. The charities consist of 5 acres of land bequeathed by Thomas Townsend in 1683.

SIGHILL. See SEGHILL, co. Northumberland.

SIGNETT, a hmlt. in the par. of Burford, hund. of Bampton, co. Oxford, 1 mile S.W. of Burford. It is in conjunction with Upton.

SIGSTON KIRBY, a par. in the wap. of Allertonshire, North Riding co. York, 3 miles E. of Northallerton, its post town. It contains the vils. of Sigston Smithy, Sowerby, and Winton. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. There is no village. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of York. The church, dedicated to St. Lawrence, has a tower containing two bells. There is a free school.

SIGSWORTH, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Fountains-Earth, par. of Kirkby-Malzeard, West Riding co. York, near Pateley Bridge, and 4 miles S.W. of Ripon. It is situated near the rivers Nidd and Skell.

SILBURY HILL, an artificial mound near Avebury, co. Wilts, 5 miles S.W. of Marlborough. It is the largest barrow in the British Isles, measuring 1,680 feet round at the base, and 170 feet high, and was supposed to be a monument of great antiquity; on its being opened by the Archæological Institute in 1849 nothing of interest was discovered.

SILCHESTER, a par. in the lower half of Holdshott hund., co. Hants, 7 miles N.W. of Basingstoke, its post town, and 2½ W. of the Mortimer station, on the Great Western railway. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. In the vicinity are traces of the fortified camp called by the Britons Caer Segont, and by the Romans Calleva Atrebatum, or Vindonum, having been one of the principal stations of the Romans in the S. of Britain. It was here that the younger Constantine assumed the purple in 407. In 493 the fortifications were dismantled by Ella. The enclosed area is in the form of an irregular octagon, nearly 1½ mile in circumference. The site is now under cultivation, nevertheless the track of the streets are still to be traced, and on the S. side the walls are from 15 to 20 feet in height. About 150 yards from the N.E. angle of the walls is an amphitheatre on the outer side, now covered with trees; and about a mile to the N.W. is another camp, near the hamlet of Soak. There are also traces of the Portway to Salisbury, Grimsdyke to Winchester, and of the Devil's Causeway to Staines roads; another road led past the camps and tumuli on Mortimer Heath to Speen. In 1833 were discovered the walls of the thermæ, or hot-baths, and coins, inscriptions, and other relics of Roman origin have since been discovered. Silchester gives title of baron to the family of Pakenham, Earls of Longford. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £308. The church is an ancient structure dedicated to St. Mary. The parochial charities produce about £15 per annum. There is a National school, principally supported by the Duke of Wellington, who is lord of the manor and principal landowner. The Primitive Methodists have a chapel here.

SILCOATES, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Alverthorpe, West Riding co. York, 2 miles N.W. of Wakefield.

SILEBY, a par. in the hund. of East Goscote, co.

Leicester, 5 miles S.E. of Loughborough, and 1½ mile S.E. of Mountsorrel. It is a station on the Midland railway. The village, which is large, is situated on a branch of the river Soar, which bounds the parish on the W. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture, and framework knitting is carried on to some extent. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £158. The church, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, is an ancient structure with a square tower containing a clock and five bells. It was erected in Henry VI.'s time, and belonged to Evreux Abbey in France, and after the suppression of alien priories to Axholme priory. In the churchyard is an elm-tree said to be as old as the church, and 30 feet in diameter. The parochial charities produce about £50 per annum. There is a free school with a small endowment bequeathed by the Rev. W. Staveley in 1702. The Wesleyans, Primitive Methodists, and General Baptists have chapels here. William A. Pochin, Esq., is lord of the manor.

SILFIELD, a tnshp. in the par. of Wymondham, hund. of Forehoe, co. Norfolk, 1½ mile S.E. of Wymondham, and 9 S.W. of Norwich. It is situated near the river Yare. The principal residence is Stanfield Hall, an Elizabethan mansion surrounded by a moat, and to which a chapel was formerly attached.

SILIAN, a par. in the hund. of Moyddyn, co. Cardigan, 2 miles N.W. of Lampeter, its post town, and 11 from Aberaeron. The village is small. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic. of Llanwnnen, in the dioc. of St. David's. The church, dedicated to St. Sulian, is an ancient structure with an old round font, and a runic pillar stone.

SILKSTONE, a par. in the wap. of Staincross, West Riding co. York, 4 miles S.W. of Barnsley, its post town, and the same distance N.E. of Peniston. It is a station on a branch of the Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire railway. The village, which is situated in a valley on a branch of the river Dearne, is well built, and principally consists of one long street. The par. is of large extent, including the tnshps. of Barnsley, West Bretton, Cawthorne, Cumberworth, Dodworth, Stainbrough, Thurgoland, and Hoyland-Swaine. A portion of the inhabitants are engaged in the collieries, nail factories, iron and wire-drawing works, and in the manufacture of linen. The coal obtained is of excellent quality, and is wrought chiefly by R. Clarke, of Noblethorpe. There are also quarries of good building-stone. The produce of the mines and quarries is conveyed by a short railway of 2 miles to the basin of the Barnsley canal, whence it is sent to London and various other markets. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £270, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient structure with a square tower and six bells. The interior of the church contains brasses and effigies of the Beaumonts and Wentworths of Bretton Park, also a monument to Gen. Sir W. Wentworth, who commanded the forces in Ireland in the reign of Charles I. In addition to the parish church are the following district churches—viz. at Cawthorne, West Britton, Cumberworth, Barnsley St. Mary, Barnsley St. George, Barnsley St. John, Stainbrough, Dodworth, and Thurgoland, the livings of which are perpet. curs.,* varying in val. from £225 to £119. The parochial charities produce about £372 per annum, including £29, the endowment of Clarkson's school. There is a National school for both sexes. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have chapels.

SILKSWORTH, a tnshp. in the par. of Bishop-Wearmouth, N. div. of Easington ward, co. Durham, 3 miles S.W. of Sunderland, its post town. The tnshp., which is situated on the Hetton coal railway, includes the hmlts. of Grindon and Farrington. The village is small and irregularly built. There is a parochial school, in which Divine service is performed weekly by the Rector of Bishop Wearmouth. Silksworth House and Silksworth Hall are the principal residences.

SILK-WILLOUGHBY. See WILLOUGHBY-SILK, co. Lincoln.

SILLAN, a small lough in the co. of Cavan, Ireland, near Shercock. It is about 2 miles in length by three-quarters of a mile in breadth, and is much admired for the beauty of its shores.

SILLERMORE, a bog in the bars. of Galway and Moycullen, co. Galway, Ireland.

SILLIES, a river of the co. of Fermanagh, Ireland, rises near Lough Naman, and joins the Erne above Enniskillen.

SILLOCK, a hmlt. on Dublin Bay, co. Dublin, Ireland, near Dublin.

SILLOTH POINT, on the coast of co. Cumberland, near Lee Scar, and opposite Silloth Bank, in the Solway Frith, 12 miles from Port Carlisle. It is the terminus of the Carlisle and Silloth and Port Carlisle section of the North British railway.

SILPHO, a tnshp. in the par. of Hackness, lib. of Whitby-Strand, North Riding co. York, 6 miles N.W. of Scarborough. It is in conjunction with Harwood.

SILSDEN. See SIGHELDEN, co. York.

SILSOE, a par. and post town, but until recently a hmlt. in the par. of Flitton, hund. of Flitt, co. Bedford, 4 miles S.E. of Ampthill, 10 S.E. of Bedford, and 40 from London. The village, which had formerly a market, granted to the inhabitants by charter bearing date 1319, is situated on a branch of the river Ivel. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £150. The church, dedicated to St. James, was rebuilt in 1830, at the expense of Earl de Grey, who endowed it with an annuity of £150. There is a school for both sexes maintained by the Countess de Grey. Wrest Park, the principal residence, was a seat of the late Duke of Kent.

SILTON, a par. in the hund. of Red-Lane, co. Dorset, 5 miles E. of Wincanton, its post town, and 3 N.W. of Gillingham. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Stour. A portion of the inhabitants are employed in linen-weaving and in the manufacture of ticking. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £379. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, has a low square tower and S. porch. It contains a monument to Sir Hugh Wyndham, chief justice of the common pleas in the reign of Charles II. The register dates from 1653. The Duke of Somerset is lord of the manor.

SILTON, NETHER, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Leake, wap. of Birdforth, North Riding co. York, 8 miles N.E. of Thirsk, its post town, and 7 E. of Northallerton. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to the vic. of Leake. The Wesleyans have a chapel.

SILTON, OVER, a par. in the wap. of Birdforth, North Riding co. York, 8 miles N.E. of Thirsk. It includes the tnshp. of Kepwick. The village is of small extent and chiefly agricultural. About a third of the land is moorland, and the remainder equally distributed between arable, meadow, and pasture, besides 100 acres of woodland and plantation. The Sinnington hounds meet here. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of York, val. £70, in the patron. of Trinity College, Cambridge. The church is dedicated to All Saints.

SILT-PITS, an ext. par. place in the soke of Horncastle, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, near Horncastle.

SILVERBAND, a vil. in the par. of Cambuslang, co. Lanark, Scotland, 5 miles S.E. of Glasgow, between the rivers Calder and Clyde.

SILVERDALE, a tnshp. in the par. of Warton, hund. of Lonsdale South of the Sands, co. Lancaster, 11 miles N. of Lancaster, its post town, 5 S.W. of Burton-in-Kendal, and 5 N. of the Carnforth railway station. It is a station on the Lancaster railway. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on Morecambe Bay. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £80, in the patron. of the Vicar of Warton. The church, erected in 1679, was restored and enlarged in 1829. The parochial charities produce about £12 per annum.

SILVERDALE, a vil. in the par. of Keele, co. Stafford, 2 miles N.W. of Newcastle-under-Lyne. It is a station on the Silverdale and Longton branch of the North Staffordshire railway.

SILVERHILL, a hmlt. in the par. of Huish, co. Devon, 4 miles S.W. of Kingsbridge.

SILVERHILL, a mountain in the co. of Donegal, Ireland, near 2,000 feet above sea-level.

SILVER HILL, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Ecclesall Bierlow, West Riding co. York.

SILVER HILL, a vil. in the par. of Walwin's Castle, co. Pembroke, 4 miles N.W. of Milford.

SILVER HOLM, an islet in the upper part of the lake of Windermere, co. Westmoreland.

SILVERLEY, a hmlt. in the par. of Ashley, hund. of Cheveley, co. Cambridge, 4 miles S.E. of Newmarket, its post town. It was formerly a separate parish. There is no village, only two or three farmhouses. The living is a vic. annexed to the rect. of Ashley, in the dioc. of Ely. The church is in ruins.

SILVERMINES, a post-office vil. in the par. of Kilmore, bar. of Upper Ormond, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5 miles S.S.W. of Nenagh. It is situated on the old Limerick and Dublin road, near the Silvermine mountains. Here are lead mines, which are extensively worked, the ore yielding a large percentage of silver. In 1641 the rebels murdered the miners, and destroyed the works then in the tenancy of Lord William Russell and Sir Charles Brooke. Fairs are held on 1st May, 8th June, 12th September, and 25th October.

SILVER RIVER, a stream of the King's County, Ireland, rises in the Silverbloom mountains, and joins the river Brosna near Ferbane.

SILVERSTONE, a par. in the hund. of Greens-Norton, co. Northampton, 3 miles S.W. of Towcester, its post town, and 7 N.E. of Brackley. The village, which is considerable, is situated on a branch of the river Tow. In consequence of its close proximity to Whittlewood Forest, a brisk timber trade is carried on. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to that of Whittlebury in the dioc. of Peterborough. The church is dedicated to St. Michael. There is a National school erected at the expense of Lord Southampton in 1846. The Wesleyans have a place of worship with a school-room adjoining. The Duke of Grafton is lord of the manor.

SILVERTON, a par. in the hund. of Hayridge, co. Devon, 5½ miles S.W. of Collumpton, its post town, 7 N.E. of Exeter, and 3 S. of Hele railway station. The village, which is extensive, is situated on an eminence, near the road from Tiverton to Exeter, and between the rivers Exe and Culme. It is now chiefly agricultural, but was formerly a market town. The par. contains the hmlt. of Lease. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £950. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a stone structure with a tower containing a clock and six bells. In the churchyard is an old cross much defaced by time. The parochial charities produce about £210 per annum, including £133, the endowment of Richard's free school. There is a National school for girls. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. The trustees of the late Earls of Egremont and Ilchester are lords of the manor. On a hill on the E. side of the parish are the remains of a British camp. Cattle fairs are held on the first Thursdays in February and July.

SILVINCH, a hmlt. in the par. of White Lackington, co. Somerset, 2 miles N.E. of Ilminster.

SILVINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Overs, co. Salop, 5 miles N.W. of Cleobury-Mortimer, its post town, and 8 N.E. of Ludlow. The village, which is of small extent, is situated under the Tittlestone section of the Clee hills. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £100. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is an ancient stone structure with a square tower containing two bells. The Rev. J. Edmunds is lord of the manor.

SIMMONDLEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Glossop, hund. of High Peak, co. Derby, 8 miles N.W. of Chapel-en-le-Frith.

SIMONBURN, a par. in the N.W. div. of Tindale ward, co. Northumberland, 9 miles N.W. of Hexham, its post town, and 26 W. of Newcastle. This parish was formerly the largest in the county, extending 33 miles in length, by 14 in breadth, but in 1814 it was divided by Act of Parliament into six parochial rectories, the livings of all which are in the gift of the Governors of Greenwich Hospital, and the funds for which were obtained by the sale of tithes. The parish as at present defined comprises about 13,372 acres, of which a fourth part is arable, and the remainder pasture and sheep walks, with 460 acres of woodland and plantation. It is situated on a branch of the river Tyne, near the Picts' Wall, and is chiefly agricultural. The par. contains, besides the vil. of its name, the chplry. of Hamshaugh, and the tnshps. of Haughton and Simonburn. The substratum abounds with coal, and iron-ore was formerly obtained. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Durham, val. £426, in the patron. of the Governors of Greenwich Hospital. The church, dedicated to St. Simon, is an ancient structure, and was restored in 1821. It contains several monuments to the Allgoods. There is also a district church at Hamshaugh, the living of which is a perpet cur.,* val. £120. The parochial charities produce about £180 per annum, of which £45 goes towards the support of the school founded by Giles Heron. Nunwick Hall and Park End are the principal residences. The Duke of Northumberland is lord of the manor. In 1735 a stone inscribed with the names of Ulpius and Sabinus, Roman lieutenants in Britain, was found whilst repairing the old rectory-house.

SIMOND'S HALL WITH COMBE, a tythg. in the par. of Wotton-under-Edge, co. Gloucester, 2 miles N.E. of Wotton.

SIMONSTONE, a tnshp. in the par. of Whalley, higher div. of Blackburn hund., co. Lancaster, 4½ miles N.W. of Burnley, near the river Henburn.

SIMONSTONE, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of High Abbotside, North Riding co. York, 1 mile N. of Hawes.

SIMONSWOOD, a tnship. in the par. of Walton-on-Hill, hund. of West Derby, co. Lancaster, 4½ miles S.E. of Ormskirk.

SIMONWARD. See BREWARD, ST., co. Cornwall.

SIMPRIN, an ancient par. in the co. of Berwick, Scotland, 3 miles N. of Coldstream. It is now joined to Swinton.

SIMPSON, a par. in the hund. of Newport, co. Bucks, 2 miles N.E. of Fenny-Stratford, its post town, and 5 from Woburn. The village, which is small and wholly agricultural, is situated on the Grand Junction canal, and on the river Ouzle, a branch of the Ouze. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £330. The church is dedicated to St. Nicholas. The parochial charities produce about £60 per annum, bequeathed by Thomas Pigot in 1573.

SINCLAIRTOWN, a vil. in the par. of Dysart, co. Fife, Scotland, near Pathead. It is a station on the Edinburgh and North British railway. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in weaving.

SINDERBY, a tnshp. in the par. of Pickhill, wap. of Hallikeld, North Riding co. York, 6 miles S.W. of Thirsk, 7 N. of Ripon, and 1 mile E. of the Sinderby station, on the Northallerton branch of the North Eastern railway. The village, which is small, is situated near the river Swaile. The Wesleyans have a place of worship.

SINDERLAND, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Dunham Massey, and par. of Bowden, co. Chester, 3 miles W. of Altrincham, on the Bridgwater canal, near a branch of the river Mersey.

SINFIN WITH ARLESTON, a lib. in the par. of Barrow-upon-Trent, hund. of Appletree, co. Derby, 3 miles S. of Derby, near the Birmingham railway and the river Derwent.

SINFIN-MOOR, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Alvaston, par. of St. Michael, co. Derby, 3 miles S.E. of Derby, near the river Derwent.

SINGE, PASSAGE DU, or THE SWINGE, a channel lying between the Isle of Alderney and Ortach Bank in the Channel Islands.

SINGLEBOROUGH, a hmlt. in the par. of Great Horwood, hund. of Cottesloe, co. Bucks, 2½ N. of Winslow.

SINGLECROSS, a hund. in the wap. of Bramber, co. Sussex, containing the pars. of Horsham, Nuthurst, Rusper, and Warnham, comprising an area of 4,120 acres.

SINGLESTREET, a vil. in the bar. of Tirhugh, co. Donegal, Ireland, near Ballyshannon.

SINGLETON, a par. in the hund. of Westbourne, rape of Chichester, co. Sussex, 6 miles N.E. of Chichester, its post town, and 5½ S.E. of Midhurst. The village, which is chiefly agricultural, is situated in a valley of the Downs, on the road from London to Chichester, by way of Midhurst. The par. contains the hmlt. of Charlton, and is mentioned in the Domesday Survey as Silleton. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £115. The church is an ancient structure with a square tower. The parochial charities produce about £80 per annum. On the summit of St. Roche's, or Rook's Hill, which is 702 feet above sea-level, is an ancient camp.

SINGLETON, a chplry. in the par. of Kirkham, hund. of Amounderness, co. Lancaster, 13 miles N. of Preston, its post town, and 3 S.E. of Poulton railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on Wyre Water, and is wholly agricultural. The soil is of a clayey and marly nature. The chplry. includes the tnshps. of Great and Little Singleton. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £110. The church, built in 1754, is dedicated to St. Anne. There are National schools for both sexes, also a place of worship for the Roman Catholics. T. Miller, Esq., of Preston, is lord of the manor.

SINNINGTON, a par. partly in the wap. of Ryedale, but chiefly in Pickering Lythe, North Riding co. York, 4½ miles W. of Pickering, its post town, and 4 E. of Kirby-Moorside. The village, which is small, is situated on the river Severn, and on the high road between Pickering and Kirby-Moorside. The par. includes the tnshps. of Marton and Little Edstone. In the village is a green and maypole. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agricultural pursuits. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of York, val. £84, in the patron. of the Master of Hemsworth School. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is built out of the remains of the monastery, and was repaired in 1841. The register dates from 1597. The parochial charities produce about £27, which go towards the support of the school. The Wesleyans have a chapel and Sunday-school.

SINWELL WITH BRADLEY, a tythg. in the par. of Wotton-under-Edge, upper div. of Berkeley hund, co. Gloucester, near Wotton.

SION HILL, a hmlt. in the par. of Wolverley, co. Worcester, 1 mile N. of Kidderminster. It is the seat of Lady Russell.

SION HILL and SION HOUSE, two mansions, the former a seat of the Duke of Marlborough, and the latter of the Duke of Northumberland, in the par. of New Brentford, hund. of Elthorne, co. Middlesex, half a mile W. of Brentford, which see.

SIRIOR, a tnshp. in the par. of Abergele, co. Denbigh, 9 miles N.W. of Denbigh, on the line of the Holyhead railway.

SISLAND, or SIZELAND, a par. in the hund. of Loddon, co. Norfolk, 1¼ mile S.W. of Loddon, its post town, and 10 miles S.E. of Norwich. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on a branch of the river Yare, and is wholly agricultural. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £126. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has a thatched roof and a campanile turret. The register dates from 1584.

SISTON, a par. in the hund. of Pucklechurch, co. Gloucester, 6 miles N.E. of Bristol, its post town, and 1½ mile E. of Mangotsfield railway station. The village, which is considerable, is situated near the Gloucester railway. There are some brick kilns, a pin factory, and a malting establishment. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £323. The church, dedicated to St. Peter or St. Anne, is an ancient stone structure with a square tower containing six bells. There is also a district church at Warmley, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £60. The parochial charities produce about £6 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes. Siston Court is the principal residence. F. R. N. Dickenson, Esq., is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

SITHNEY, a par. in the hund. of Kerrier, co. Cornwall, 2 miles N.W. of Helston, its post town, and within which borough the par. is included. The village, which is large, is situated on the high road to Penzance, Camborne, and Redruth. The par. includes the chief part of Porthleven fishing coves, and part of Looe Pool in Mount's Bay. There is a small harbour at Porthleven capable of floating vessels of 200 tons. The soil is of a loamy and sandy nature, with a subsoil of marl and granite. A large portion of the inhabitants are engaged in agriculture, and some in the mines. The substratum abounds with minerals, and there are mines of lead, copper, and tin, the two last being still worked. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £368, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Sithney, is an ancient stone structure with a square tower and three bells. The interior contains several mural monuments, &c., and some remains of stained glass. There is also a district church at Porthleven, erected in 1841, and dedicated to St. Bartholomew. The living is a perpet. cur., val. £206. The parochial charities produce about £8 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes, also a Sunday-school held at the church. The Wesleyans and Baptists have each a place of worship. A parochial feast occurs on the first Sunday in August. On Longstown Down was the Mên-amber logan stone, and many stone battleaxes have been found at Venton Vedna.

SITTINGBOURNE, a par., seaport, and market town in the hund. of Milton, lathe of Scray, co. Kent, 7 miles W. of Faversham, 11 S.E. of Rochester, and 15 W. of Canterbury. It is a station on the London, Chatham, and Dover railway, and has a branch line over the Swale to Sheerness in the Isle of Sheppy. It is situated on the Roman and Watling Street, still the high road from London to Dover, and near Milton Creek, a navigable branch of the Swale. It was anciently a market town and place of considerable importance, being situated on the direct route to the Continent, before the introduction of railways, but subsequently declined, till of late years the market has been revived, and the town much enlarged. The Northwoods, at the Lion, entertained Henry V. here in 1420 at a cost of 9*s.* 9*d., and the Lushingtons, at the George, received George I. and II. It was incorporated by Queen Elizabeth under a mayor and jurats, and empowered to send members to parliament, but this latter privilege was never exercised. The town consists principally of one long street, called the High-street, and several new streets running from the railway station. On the north slope of the hill overlooking the creek is the adjoining town of Milton. The population of the two towns in 1861 was 6,984, of which number 4,301 were in Sittingbourne, and 2,683 in Milton. The principal public buildings are Gordelier's public rooms, formerly the George hotel, where the magistrates for the division meet twice a month, and where the Sittingbourne branch of the Faversham savings-bank is held; the corn exchange in High-street, the new police court, also in High-street, two banks, and the Crown quay. A large Congregational church, Wesleyan chapel, and Trinity Church, have been recently built, with National schools for 360 children. The exports are corn, wool, bricks, and road metal for the metropolis; and coals are imported. The principal trade is derived from the transit of passengers, and the supply of the surrounding district. There are paper and corn mills in the parish of Sittingbourne, and some oil and cement mills. A considerable number of boats are engaged in the dredging for oysters in the Swale. Sittingbourne is a polling-place for East Kent, and the seat of a new County Court, which is held monthly. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Canterbury, gross val. £300, in the patron. of the archbishop. The parish church, dedicated to St. Michael, was rebuilt, except the tower and external walls, in 1762, after a fire. There are National and Sunday schools, also an extramural cemetery recently laid out. Theobald, the editor of Shakspeare, was a native of Sittingbourne. Corn-market day is Friday. Fairs are held at Whitsuntide and Michaelmas.

SIXHILLS, a par. in the E. div. of Wraggoe wap., parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 4½ miles S.E. of Market-Rasen, its post town, and 11½ W. of Louth. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. There was formerly a priory of nuns and canons, founded by Albert-de-Greslei in the reign of Stephen, and in which Mary, wife of Christopher Seton, was imprisoned by Edward I. in 1306. The surface is hilly, but the soil fertile, and limestone is quarried. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £67. The church is dedicated to All Saints. There is a chapel for Roman Catholics.

SIX HUNDREDS, a hmlt. in the par. of Heckington, co. Lincoln, 5 miles E.S.E. of Sleaford.

SIX-MILE-BRIDGE, a vil. in the tnshp. of Weetslade, co. Northumberland, 5 miles N. of Newcastle.

SIXMILEBRIDGE, a vil. in the bar. of Smallcounty, co. Limerick, Ireland, 4 miles N. of Bruff, on the river Commogue.

SIXMILEBRIDGE, a small post town in the par. of Kilfinaghta, bar. of Lower Bunratty, co. Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 11 miles S.E. of Ennis, and 128 from Dublin. It is a station on the Limerick and Ennis railway. The village, which was formerly a market town, is situated on the river Ongarnee, and the old Limerick and Ennis road. It contains the parish church, a Roman Catholic chapel, police station, sessions house, bridewell, two mills, and the ruins of the market house. It had formerly a small religious house, a cell to St. Saviour's, Limerick. General sessions are held in June, and petty sessions at intervals. Sixmilebridge House is the principal seat. A fair is held on 5th December.

SIX-MILE-CROSS, a post-office vil. in the par. of Termonmaguirk, bar. of Omagh, co. Tyrone, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 8 miles W.S.W. of Pomeroy. It is a station on the Belfast and Clones railway. Here are a district church, Presbyterian meeting-house, and a school. The village and surrounding country are the property of Earl Belmore.

SIXMILEWATER, a stream of the co. of Antrim, Ireland, rises near Larne, and falls into Lough Neagh at Antrim Bay.

SIXPENNY-HANDLEY, a hund. in the co. of Dorset, contains the pars. of Handley, Cann, Compton Abbas, Fontmell Magna, Iwerne Minster, Melbury Abbas, and East and West Orchard, comprising an area of 16,960 acres.

SIZERGH-FELL-SIDE, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Levens, co. Westmoreland, 3 miles S.W. of Kendal. It is situated near the river Kent, and its principal attraction is the castle, with its collection of portraits. It has been the seat of the Stricklands since Edward I.'s time.

SIZEWELL, a hmlt. in the par. of Leiston, hund. of Blything, co. Suffolk, 4 miles N.E. of Aldborough, its post town. It is situated under Sizewell Cliffs, on the coast. Near to the shore is Sizewell Bank, a growing shoal 6 miles by three-quarters of a mile in extent. Sizewell Gap, a small bay on the coast, was formerly a place for smugglers, and is now a coastguard station. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to that of Leiston, in the dioc. of Norwich. There was formerly a chapel, dedicated to St. Nicholas.

SKAILL LOCH, a freshwater lake near Holorow Skaggie, in the West Orkney Isles, Scotland.

SKAILWICK, a district in the island of Westray, co. Orkney, Scotland.

SKARWEATHER, a sandbank outside Swansea Bay, on the coast of co. Glamorgan, 3 miles W. of Portheawl.

SKATERAW, a vil. in the par. of Innerwick, co. Haddington, Scotland, 4 miles S.E. of Dunbar.

SKATERIGG, a vil. in the par. and co. of Renfrew, Scotland, chiefly inhabited by colliers.

SKATE-ROAD, an anchorage inside of Holy Island, on the coast of co. Northumberland, near Warnham Bar.

SKAW HOLM, or OUTSTACK ROCK, a small islet forming one of the North Shetland group, coast of Scotland. It lies to the N. of Unst, and is the most northerly point of the British Isles.

SKEA, a hmlt. in the par. of Clanawley, co. Fermanagh, Ireland, 3 miles S.W. of Enniskillen.

SKEAN, a lough on the borders of the cos. of Sligo and Roscommon, Ireland, near Lough Meelagh.

SKECKLING, a hmlt. in the par. of Burstwick, S. div. of Holderness wap., East Riding co. York, 8 miles E. of Hull, its post town, and 2 from the Burstwick station, on the Hull and Holderness railway.

SKEEBY, a tnshp. in the par. of Easby, wap. of West Gilling, North Riding co. York, 2 miles N.E. of Richmond. It is a small agricultural village, situated on a branch of the river Swale. In 1839 a chapel-of-ease was erected here, with a school adjoining.

SKEFFINGTON, a par. in the hund. of East Goscote, co. Leicester, 10 miles S.E. of Leicester, its post town, and 2 N.W. of Tugby. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Eye, and is chiefly agricultural. The land is of a hilly nature, abounding in well-timbered lawns. The soil consists of clay and gravel. Sir R. Sutton's hounds are kennelled in this parish. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £446. The church, dedicated to St. Thomas-à-Becket, is an ancient structure with a low square tower and five bells. It contains a piscina, stained windows, and monuments of the Skeffingtons, which family became extinct in 1850. Skeffington Hall contains a drawing-room floored and wainscoted out of one oak, also a gallery with portraits of Henry VIII. and other monarchs, by Vandyke, &c. There is a Sunday-school and a Dissenting chapel. Sir R. Sutton is lord of the manor.

SKEFFLING, a par. in the S. div. of Holderness wap., East Riding co. York, 4 miles S.E. of Patrington, its post town, and 3 from the sea-coast. The village, which is small, is situated at the mouth of the river Humber, and is wholly agricultural. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of York, val. £53. The church, dedicated to St. Helen, is an ancient structure with a tower. The parochial charities produce about £8 per annum. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. Sir T. A. C. Constable is lord of the manor.

SKEGBY, a par. in the N. div. of Broxtow wap., co. Nottingham, 3 miles W. of Mansfield, its post town. The village, which is extensive, is situated on the opposite acclivities of a deep valley on the banks of the river Meden. A portion of the inhabitants are employed in the collieries, and some females in framework knitting. There are limestone quarries, brick and lime kilns, a pottery, and a steam corn-mill. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £78, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, which is situated some distance from the village, is an ancient structure much dilapidated. There is a National school, and a Wesleyan chapel. J. Dodsley, Esq., is lord of the manor and chief landowner.

SKEGBY, a hmlt. in the par. of Marnham, co. Notts, 3 miles S.E. of Taxford.

SKEGGLES WATER, a pool in the chplry. of Kentmere, par. of Kendal, co. Westmoreland, 8 miles N.W. of Kendal. It drains into the river Kent.

SKEGNESS, a par. in the Marsh div. of Candleshoe wap., parts of Lindsay, co. Lincoln, 5 miles N.E. of Wainfleet, its post town, and 4 S.E. of Burgh. According to Leland, here was once a considerable town, with a haven and castle, but swallowed up by the sea. It is now a small bathing village situated on the coast, near Skegness Spit, where the sand drives at low water. There are two hotels and several lodging-houses. A brisk trade is done in coals. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £103. The church, dedicated to St. Clement, is an ancient structure with a tower. The parochial charities produce about £6 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have chapels. Lord Monson is lord of the manor.

SKELBROOKE, a chplry. in the par. of South Kirby, upper div. of Osgoldcross wap., West Riding co. York, 8 miles N.W. of Doncaster, its post town. The village, which is small, is situated near Barnsdale Forest. At this place Henry VIII., in 1541, met the clergy of the diocese of York, and received the sum of £600 as a present. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of York, val. £80. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is an ancient stone edifice; it was repaired in 1840.

SKELDALE, a spot above Fountains Abbey, West Riding co. York, on the river Skell.

SKELDERSKEW GRANGE, a hmlt. in the par. of Guisborough, lib. of East Langbaurgh, North Riding co. York, 2 miles from Guisborough and 45 N. of York, near the coast.

SKELDING, a tnshp. in the par. of Ripon, lower div. of Claro wap., West Riding co. York, 6 miles S.W. of Ripon, on the river Skell.

SKELL, a stream in the West Riding co. York, joins the Ure below Ripon.

SKELLFLETE, a stream in the East Riding co. York, joins the Humber near Bromflete.

SKELLIGS, THE, a group of three islands in the par. of Killemlagh, bar. of Iveragh, co. Kerry, prov. of Munster, Ireland. They lie off Bolus Head, 6 miles to the W.S.W., and a little less from Bray Head. They are distinguished as the Great and Little Skelligs, and the Lemon Rock. On Little Skellig great numbers of Solan geese are captured, and on Great Skellig are the ruins of an abbey, to which in former times pilgrims resorted to worship before a rude cross carved on an overhanging cliff. Two lights are exhibited—one visible at 25 miles, the other at 18 miles.

SKELLINGTHORPE, a par. in the lower div. of Boothby-Graffo wap., parts of Kesteven, co. Lincoln, 5 miles W. of Lincoln, its post town. It is a station on the Great Northern railway. The par. includes the hmlt. of Swallow-Beck, and is chiefly the property of Christ's Hospital, London. Prior to the enclosure of the parish, the land was chiefly of a boggy character, but since that period has become richly cultivated. The Burton hounds meet in this neighbourhood. The Fosse Dyke navigation, connecting the rivers Trent and Witham, passes within a quarter of a mile of the village. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £31, in the patron. of the Master of Spital Hospital. The church, dedicated to St. Lawrence, is an ancient edifice with a square tower. The interior has recently been restored. There is a parochial school for both sexes, partly supported by the Governors of Christ's Hospital. The Wesleyans have a place of worship.

SKELLOW, a tnshp. in the par. of Owston, upper div. of Osgoldcross wap., West Riding co. York, 5½ miles N.W. of Doncaster, its post town, and 1½ mile S.W. of Owston. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on a branch of the river Dore.

SKELMANTHORPE, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Cumberworth, and pars. of Emley and High Hoyland, West Riding co. York, 6 miles S.E. of Huddersfield. The land is fertile, and the substratum contains freestone and coal. The village, which is considerable, contains several mills for the manufacture of worsted and silk goods. There is a place of worship for Wesleyans, and a National school supported partly by a small endowment. On the enclosure of Cumberworth common 7 acres were allotted to this hamlet.

SKELMERSDALE, a chplry. in the par. of Ormskirk, hund. of West Derby, co. Lancaster, 4½ miles S.E. of Ormskirk, its post town, and 3 N.W. of Pimbo-lane railway station. The village is chiefly agricultural. Many of the inhabitants are engaged in the collieries and stone quarries. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Chester, val. £142, in the patron of the Vicar of Ormskirk. The church, dedicated to St. Paul, has a tower and bell. It was built about the year 1776, and enlarged in 1823. In the interior is a painted E. window, and some monuments to the Skelmersdale family. The parochial charities produce about £79 per annum, of which £51 goes to Swift's school. The Wesleyans have two places of worship. This place gives title of baron to the Wilbrahams of Lathom, to whom the manor belongs.

SKELSMERGH, a tnshp. in the par. and ward of Kendal, co. Westmoreland, 2 miles N.E. of Kendal. The inhabitants are employed in the corn, worsted, and other mills situated on the banks of the rivers Kent, Mint, and Sprint. There are remains of a chapel, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, and at Doddington is a chapel belonging to the Roman Catholics.

SKELTON, a par. in the ward of Leath, co. Cumberland, 6½ miles N.W. of Penrith, its post town and railway station, and 14 from Wigton. The village is chiefly agricultural. The soil is damp, with a subsoil of clay, freestone, and limestone. The par. contains the tnshps. of Lamonby and Unthank. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £294, in the patron. of Corpus Christi College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to SS. Mary and Michael, is an ancient stone structure with a tower containing two bells. It formerly contained a chantry, and was restored in 1794. The parochial charities produce about £39 per annum, of which £32 go to the free school for 30 children. Sir H. R. Vane is lord of the manor.

SKELTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Howden, wap. of Howdenshire, East Riding co. York, 2 miles S.E. of Howden, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Ouse, and is chiefly agricultural. A portion of the land is in pasture. The soil is sandy, with a subsoil of clay. Steam-packets plying between Hull and York pass daily. There is a school for both sexes. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. R. Schofield, Esq., of Sand Hall, is lord of the manor.

SKELTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Marske, wap. of West Gilling, North Riding co. York, 4 miles W. of Richmond.

SKELTON, a par. partly in the lib. of St. Peter's, East Riding, but chiefly in the wap. of Bulmer, North Riding co. York, 4 miles N.W. of York, its post town, and 9 S. of Easingwold. The village, which is of small extent, is situated in a vale near the river Ouse, and is chiefly agricultural. The soil consists of clay and loam. The living is a perpet. cur.* annexed to that of Brotton, in the dioc. of York, val. £137, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church is dedicated to St. Peter. There is an endowed village school. Skelton Lodge and Fairfield are the principal residences.

SKELTON, a tnshp. in the par. and lib. of Ripon, West Riding co. York, 4 miles S.E. of Ripon, its post town, and 2½ N.W. of Boroughbridge. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Bure, and is wholly agricultural. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £90, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes.

SKELTON, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Templenewsom, West Riding co. York, 2 miles S.E. of Leeds.

SKELTON, a par. in the E. div. of Langbaurgh lib., North Riding co. York, 3½ miles N.E. of Guisborough, its post town. The par., which is bounded on the N. by the German Ocean, is of large extent, and includes the chplry. of Brotton, the hmlt. of Manless Green, and the tnshps. of Kilton, Great Moorsholm, Saltburn, Skiningrove, and Stanghow. It was given by William the Conqueror to Robert de Brus, ancestor to the kings of Scotland, and of the present family of Bruce, Marquises of Ailesbury. The castle, originally built in the 12th century, was the residence of Hall, the "Eugenius" of Sterne, and author of "Crazy Tales." The village, which is still considerable, was formerly a market town. The Cleveland hounds meet here; seals are taken on the coast. There are quarries of freestone in the hills. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of York, val. £190, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church, dedicated to All Saints, has a tower containing two bells; it was rebuilt in 1755. There is a chapel-of-ease at Brotton. The Wesleyans have two chapels, one at Skelton, and the other at Great Moorsholm. There are National schools, built in 1848 by the present owner of the castle, J. T. Wharton, Esq. The parochial charities produce £10 per annum.

SKELWITH, a tnshp. in the par. of Hawkshead, hund. of Lonsdale North of the Sands, co. Lancaster, 2 miles S.W. of Ambleside. It is joined with Monk-Coniston to form a township.

SKENDLEBY, a par. in the Wold div. of Candleshoe wap., parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 4 miles N.E. of Spilsby, its post town, and 2½ S.E. of Willoughby railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated in a valley on a branch of the river Steeping. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £155. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient structure with a tower containing three bells. The parochial charities produce about £5 per annum, exclusive of an allotment of 8 acres of land. There is a parochial school. The Wesleyans have a place of worship, with a library and Sunday-school. Lord Willoughby d'Eresby and John Holland, Esq., are lords of the manor.

SKENE, or SKEEN, a loch in the co. of Dumfries, Scotland, 7 miles N.E. of Moffat. It is situated on the borders of Peebles and Selkirk, near the fall on the river Moffat, and is 1,000 feet above sea-level.

SKENE, a par. in the co. of Aberdeen, Scotland. It extends in length about 6¾ miles from S.E. to N.W., with an extreme breadth of about 4½ miles. It is bounded by the pars. of Kinton, Kinellar, Newhills, Peterculter, Echt, Cluny, and Kemnay. The surface, which is rugged, rises in some places to a considerable elevation. A great portion of the land is in moorland pasture. The substratum is composed of granite rock and rubble. In the vicinity are a large cairn, several Druidical stones and tumuli, and traces of a camp. The roads from Aberdeen to Alford and Tarland pass through the village, which is about 8 miles W. of Aberdeen. It is situated near Skene Loch on Luchar Burn. There is a woollen mill at Garlogie. This par. is in the presb. and synod of Aberdeen. The stipend of the minister is about £158. The parish church was erected in 1801, and was restored in 1841. There are a Free church, an Independent chapel, two Free Church schools, besides other schools. The principal seats are Skene House and Easter Skene House.

SKENFRETH, a hund. in two divs., co. Monmouth. The upper contains the pars. of Grosmont, Llangua, Llantillio Crossenny, Skenfreth, and parts of Llanvihangel, comprising an area of 19,420 acres; and the lower div. contains the town of Monmouth, and the pars. of Welsh Bicknor, Llangattock-Vibon-Avel, St. Maughan's, Rockfield, and Wonastow, comprising an area of 14,190, exclusive of Monmouth.

SKENFRETH, a par. in the upper div. of the hund. of Skenfreth, co. Monmouth, 6 miles N.W. of Monmouth, and 24 from Hereford. The village, which is small and chiefly agricultural, is situated at the bridge over the river Monnow. In the vicinity is the ruin of Skenfreth Castle. It was of trapezium form, encircled by a curtain wall of immense thickness, and defended by six towers and a circular keep, but of which nothing now remains but the outer wall. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £215. The church is an ancient structure dedicated to St. Bridget, and has several stained windows.

SKEOTISVAY, an island in the par. of Harris, and one of the Hebrides, co. Inverness, Scotland, three-quarters of a mile W. of Scalpa. It extends in length about three-quarters of a mile, by half a mile in breadth. It is situated in East Loch-Tarbet, and is uninhabited.

SKERDBEG and SKERDMORE, rocky islets off the W. coast of co. Galway, Ireland, N.W. of Gulin-Head.

SKERNE, a stream of the co. of Durham, rises near Hutton Henry, and joins the Tees at Croft Bridge.

SKERNE, a par. in the Bainton-Beacon div. of Harthill wap., East Riding co. York, 2 miles S.E. of Great Driffield, its post town, and 13 from Beverley. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on a branch of the river Hull. The inhabitants are wholly agricultural. The soil consists of gravel, clay, and loam upon a subsoil of clay. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of York, val. £71. The church has a tower containing two bells. The parochial charities consist in 5 acres of land designated "Poor Folks' Close." The Wesleyans have a place of worship. Lord Londesborough is lord of the manor.

SKERR, an ext. par. place in the par. of Lower Kenfigg, co. Glamorgan, 6 miles W. of Bridgend.

SKERRIES, a small seaport and post town in the par. of Holmpatrick, bar. of Balrothery, co. Dublin, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 22 miles N.E. of Dublin. It is a station on the Dublin and Drogheda railway. It is situated on the E. coast on a projecting neck of land near the islands of its name. It has a harbour and pier, and contains the parish church, a Roman Catholic chapel, parochial and National schools, dispensary, police and coast-guard stations. There is an excellent beach for bathing. Fairs are held on 28th April and 10th August.

SKERRIES, a dangerous reef in the English Channel, off the coast of South Devon, 2 miles N.E. of Start Point.

SKERRIES, a rocky islet off the coast of Anglesea, 2 miles from Point Carnal, and 6 N.E. of Holyhead. It is near 1 mile in length, and has a lighthouse, erected in 1714, visible for 15 miles.

SKERRIES, OUT, a group of nine islets and rocks, in the parish of Nesting, Shetland Islands, coast of Scotland. They are situated off Luna Ness, at the E. end of Nell Sound, in the Northern Ocean, about 15 leagues N.E. of the Orkneys, and 5 miles N.E. of Whalsay Island. A little beyond lies Outstack Rock, the most northerly point of the British Isles. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the ling and herring fisheries.

SKERRIES, THE, a group of rocks in the bar. of Lower Dunluce, co. Antrim, 1 mile N.E. of Portrush, and 4 miles N. of Bushmills. They lie opposite the basalt peninsula forming the harbour of Portrush, and have inside anchorage in 6 fathoms water.

SKERRY, a par. in the bar. of Lower Antrim, co. Antrim, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 3 miles N.N.E. of Broughshane, its post town. The surface extends along the river Braide, and among the Lile mountains. It consists of some good land, with a large proportion of bog and mountain waste. The road from Glenarm to Ballymena crosses the parish. The highest point is at Collin Top, which has an altitude of 1,419 feet. The prevailing rocks are basalt and greenstone, with traces of coal and iron. Some of the inhabitants are employed in weaving. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Connor, val. with Racavan, £535. The present church, which stands at Broughshane, was built, in place of the ancient edifice now in ruins, by Earl O'Neill in the middle of the last century.

SKERRY. See PENTLAND SKERRY, Orkney Isles.

SKERTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Lancaster, hund. of Lonsdale South of the Sands, co. Lancaster, three-quarters of a mile N. of Lancaster. It is a large village separated from the town of Lancaster by the river Lune. There is a considerable salmon fishery. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £100, in the patron. of trustees. The church was erected in 1833. There is a National school endowed by Henry Williamson in 1767 with £10 a year.

SKETCHLEY, a hmlt. in the par. of Aston-Flamville, hund. of Sparkenhoe, co. Leicester, 1 mile S.W. of Hinckley, near Watling Street.

SKETHIOG, a vil. in the par. of Llansaintfraed, co. Brecon, 5 miles S.E. of Brecon.

SKEWEN, a vil. in the par. and hund. of Neath, co. Glamorgan, 2 miles from Neath. It is situated on Swansea Bay, near the mouth of the Neath river. It is a cur. in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £130, in the patron. of the crown and bishop.

SKEWHILL, a vil. in the par. and tnshp. of Ecclesfield, wap. of Strafforth, West Riding co. York, 4 miles N. of Sheffield.

SKEWSBY, a tnshp. in the par. of Dalby, wap. of Bulmer, North Riding co. York, 8 miles N.E. of Easingwold.

SKEYTON, a par. in the hund. of South Erpingham, co. Norfolk, 11 miles N. of Norwich, its post town, and 4 S.E. of Aylsham. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on a branch of the river Bure. The living is a rect. annexed to the vic. of Buxton, in the dioc. of Norwich. The church, dedicated to All Saints, has a square tower. The Wesleyans have a chapel.

SKIACH, a stream of the cos. of Ross and Cromarty, Scotland, rises under Ben Wyvis, and falls into Cromarty Firth.

SKIACH, GREAT and LITTLE, two small lochs in the co. of Perth, Scotland, 5 miles N.W. of Dunkeld. They abound in trout.

SKIANID, a vil. in the par. of Tongue, co. Sutherland, Scotland, 3 miles N. of Tongue, on the river Kyle, opposite Rabbit Island.

SKIBBEREEN, a post and market town in the pars. of Creagh and Abbeystrowey, bar. of West Carbery, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 45 miles S.W. of Cork, and 217 from Dublin. It is situated on the banks of the river Ilen, which empties itself into Baltimore harbour and St. George's Channel. It has several well-built streets, and two or three good hotels. It contains the parish church, a Roman Catholic chapel, two Methodist meeting-houses, and National schools, also a bridewell, barracks, two branch banks, a savings-bank, and union poorhouse. Linen and woollen manufactures were formerly carried on. There are a brewery, tannery, and two flour-mills. General sessions are held in May, and petty sessions once a week. The Skibbereen Poor-law Union contains 20 electoral divisions in the county of Cork. There are remains of a monastery, and of two fortresses formerly of the MacCarthy Reagh family. Wednesday and Saturday are market days. Fairs are held on 14th May, 10th July, 2nd August, 12th October, 11th and 23rd December.

SKIDBROOK-WITH-SALTHAVEN, a par. in the Marsh div. of Louth Eske hund., parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 10 miles N.E. of Louth, its post town. The village, situated on the coast, is chiefly agricultural. The par. includes the hmlt. of Saltfleet. About one-third of the land is in salt-marsh and common. The soil chiefly consists of rich clay resting upon a substratum of black earth, in which marine shells are found. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £271. The church, dedicated to St. Botolph, is an ancient structure with a tower, situated in the fields to the W. of Saltfleet. Lord Willoughby d'Eresby is lord of the manor.

SKIDBY-WITH-SKIDBYCARR, a par. in the Hunsley-Beacon div. of Harthill wap., East Riding co. York, 4 miles S.W. of Beverley. The land is chiefly arable. The village is small, but well built. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of York, val. £105, in the patron. of the Bishop of Chester. The church is dedicated to St. Michael.

SKIDDAW, a mountain, co. Cumberland, 5 miles N. of Keswick. It rises by a gradual ascent of 5 miles to an elevation of 3,022 feet, and from its summit commands views of the lake scenery.

SKILGATE, a par. in the hund. of Williton, co. Somerset, 5 miles E. of Dulverton, 8 W. of Wiveliscombe, its post town, and 11 N.E. of Tiverton. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the turnpike road between Watchett and Minehead. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £250. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, has a square tower containing four bells. The registers date from 1600. There is a parochial school for both sexes, of recent erection. The Earl of Carnarvon is lord of the manor.

SKILLINGTON, a par. in the wap. of Beltisloe, parts of Kesteven, co. Lincoln, 7 miles S. of Grantham, its post town, and 6 W. of the Corby railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the S.W. border of the county. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £105, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, dedicated to St. James, has a tower containing two bells. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum. There is a school for both sexes, supported principally by Sir J. M. Cholmeley and C. Turner, Esq. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. The Earl of Dysart and Sir M. J. Cholmeley, Bart., are lords of the manor.

SKILTIEMUIR, a vil. in the par. of Cockpen, co. Edinburgh, Scotland, 2 miles S.W. of Dalkeith.

SKINBURNESS, a vil. in the par. of Holme-Cultram, ward of Allerdale-below-Derwent, co. Cumberland, 11 miles N.W. of Wigton. It was anciently a place of importance, having a market and fair granted to the Abbot of Home-Cultram, but at the beginning of the 14th century was nearly destroyed by the sea. It is now a bathing village, commanding extensive views over the Solway Frith and the Scottish mountains. A productive herring fishery is carried on.

SKININGROVE, a tnshp. in the par. of Brotton, E. div. of Langbaurgh lib., North Riding co. York, 7 miles N.E. of Guisborough, its post town. It is situated on the coast, and almost secluded from view by the lofty heights by which it is encircled. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the fisheries.

SKINNAND, a par. in the higher div. of Boothby-Graffo wap., parts of Kesteven, co. Lincoln, 9 miles S.W. of Lincoln, its post town, and 11 N.W. of Seaford. The parish, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Brant, and is wholly agricultural. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £105. The church is in ruins, but a portion of the churchyard is still devoted to burial purposes.

SKIP-BRIDGE, a hmlt. in the par. of Moor Monkton, in the ainsty of co. York, 7 miles N.W. of York, on the river Nidd.

SKIPLAM, a tnshp. in the par. of Kirkdale, wap. of Ryedale, North Riding co. York, 2 miles N.W. of Kirkby Moorside, and 5 N.E. of Helmsley, on a branch of the river Rye. It includes the hmlt. of Bransdale East Side.

SKIPNESS, a par. in the district of Kintyre, co. Argyle, Scotland, 7 miles S.E. of West Tarbert, and 32 N.E. of Campbell Town. It is situated near Skipness Point, on Loch Fine and Kilbrannan Sound. See SADDLE.

SKIPORT, a sea loch on the N.E. side of South Uist, Western Isles, coast of Scotland.

SKIPPOOL, a hmlt. in the par. of Poulton-le-Fylde, co. Lancaster, 1 mile N.E. of Poulton, and 10 miles S.W. of Lancaster. It is a sub-port to Preston. It is situated on the line of the Preston and Wyre railway at the point where the Skippool river falls into Wyre Water.

SKIPSEA, a par. and tnshp. in the N. div. of Holderness wap., East Riding co. York, 7 miles N.W. of Burton Agnes, 5 N.W. of Hornsea, and 10 S.E. of Burlington. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the high road from Burlington to Hornsea, and within one mile distant of the coast of the North Sea, which bounds the parish on the E. The par. includes the tnshps. of Bonwick and Dringhoe, with the hmlts. of Upton and Brough. In the vicinity are traces of Drugo de Bruere's castle. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of York, val. £96, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church is dedicated to All Saints. The chancel was rebuilt in 1824. There is a National school for both sexes. The Wesleyans and Independents have each a place of worship, in which Sunday-schools are held. The Wesleyans have also two day schools. A court-leet is held in October. Sir C. Constable is lord of the manor.

SKIPTON, or SKIPTON-IN-CRAVEN, a par. and market town in the E. div. of Staincliff and Upper Claro waps., West Riding co. York, 40 miles W. of York, 216 N.W. of London by road, and 231 by the Great Northern and the Leeds and Colne branch of the Midland railways, on which it is a station. It is situated in the vale of the river Aire, and on the Leeds and Liverpool canal. The ancient par. was very extensive, including, besides the town of Skipton, the tnshps. of Barden, Beamsley, Bolton Abbey, Draughton, Embsay, East Halton, Hazlewood with Stonths, Stirton with Thorlby, and the hmlts. of Barwick and Drebley, and had a territorial boundary of 49 miles. The parish has lately been subdivided, distinct ecclesiastical districts having been assigned to Christ Church in Skipton, Bolton Abbey, and Embsay. The two last are rects., the great tithes having been ceded to them by the Dean and Chapter of Christ Church, Oxford. After the Norman conquest this place became the property of Robert de Romeli, who built the castle about the end of the reign of William the Conqueror. It subsequently passed by marriage into the Albemarle family, but reverting to the crown, was given by Edward II. to Piers Gaveston, after whose death it was given, in 1311, to Robert Lord Clifford, in whose family it has continued, with the exception of a single attainder, for 500 years. During the Great Rebellion it sustained a siege of three years by the parliamentary generals, and surrendered in 1645. Of the castle, which stands at a short distance E. of the church, the greater part is modern, having been rebuilt by Anne Countess of Pembroke as a residence, after having been dismantled by order of Parliament in 1649. The town is laid out in the form of the letter Y, with the market-place near the centre. The only public buildings are the townhall, union poorhouse, mechanics' institute, a savings-bank, and two commercial branch banks. A brisk trade is carried on in corn and agricultural produce, and there are three cotton mills. The population of the township in 1851 was 5,044, and in 1861, 5,454. It is a polling-place for the county elections, and a petty sessions town. The Poor-law Union embraces 47 tnshps. It is also the seat of new County Court and superintendent registry districts. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £307, in the patron. of Christ Church, Oxford. The parish church is supposed to have been rebuilt by Richard III., but some parts, including the four stone sedilia, are of greater antiquity, and formed part of the original Norman edifice. It was entirely restored in 1854 at an expense of £3,000, defrayed by the parish. In addition to the parish church are the following churches, viz. Christ Church, St. Cuthbert's, Bolton Abbey, and St. Mary's, Embsay, varying in val. from £150 to £250. The church of St. Cuthbert, once the nave of Bolton Abbey, is a Gothic structure, with stained windows, and was reroofed in 1858. The ancient castle church is now a stable belonging to Sir R. Tutton, Bart. The manor of Bolton Abbey belongs to the Duke of Devonshire, who has a seat here. The parochial register dates from 1597, and that of Bolton Abbey from 1689. The Primitive Methodists have two chapels, and the Wesleyans, Independents, Swedenborgians, and Roman Catholics each one. There is a free grammar school, founded in 1548 by William Ermysted, a canon of St. Paul's, London, which has an income from endowment of £800 per annum, with three exhibitions of £7 each to Christ's College, Cambridge, also National, British, and Sunday schools. There is also at Bolton a grammar school on the foundation of the famous Robert Boyle. The charities produce above £1,150 per annum, including school endowments. About 5 miles N.E. of Skipton are the ruins of Bolton Abbey, and 6 miles N. are the ruins of Barden Tower, once a residence of the Cliffords. Market day is Saturday. Fairs are held on alternate Mondays for cattle and sheep, and on 25th September for horses.

SKIPTON-UPON-SWALE, a tnshp. in the par. of Topcliffe, wap. of Birdforth, North Riding co. York, 4½ miles W. of Thirsk, its post town, and 7 N.E. of Ripon. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Swale, and is wholly agricultural. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of York, val. £30. The church, dedicated to St. John the Evangelist, was built in 1842. The Wesleyans have a chapel.

SKIPWITH, a par. in the wap. of Ouse, East Riding co. York, 5½ miles N.E. of Selby, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is chiefly agricultural. The par. includes the tnshp. of North Duffield. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of York, val. £300, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Helen, has a square tower containing three bells. There is an endowed school, founded in 1714.

SKIRBECK, a wap. in parts of Holland, co. Lincoln, contains the pars. of Boston and the pars. of Benningham, Butterwick, Fishtoft, Frieston, Leake, Leverton, Wrangle, and part of Skirbeck; comprising an area of 30,880 acres, exclusive of Boston.

SKIRBECK, a par. in the wap. of Skirbeck, parts of Holland, co. Lincoln, half a mile S.E. of Boston, its post town. It is situated on the river Witham, and nearly encircles the town of Boston. The par. includes the hmlt. of Skirbeck Quarter, which lies on the W. of the above-mentioned river. The living is a rect.* with the cur. of Trinity annexed, in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £631. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is an ancient structure, and is situated on the E. side of the river Witham, about a mile distant from the town. The church of the Holy Trinity is situated on the Spilsby road. The parochial charities produce £86, of which £35 belong to the bedesmen of St. Leonard's, and £24 to Middlecott's almshouses. Here was formerly a hospital of the Knights Hospitallers of St. John of Jerusalem, founded by Sir T. Multon in 1230, the tenements and gardens of which are now occupied by the bedesmen of St. Leonard's.

SKIRBECK QUARTER, a hmlt. in the par. of Skirbeck, wap. of Kirton, parts of Holland, co. Lincoln.

SKIRCOAT, a tnshp. in the par. of Halifax, wap. of Morley, West Riding co. York, half a mile S.W. of Halifax, its post town. It is situated on the line of the Manchester and Leeds railway, near the junction of the rivers Calder and Hebble. The tnshp. includes the hmlts. of Skircoat Green, Heath, Shaw Hill, Woodhouse, Salter Hebble, and King Cross. A portion of the inhabitants are employed in the cotton and woollen mills, and there are several dyeing works and flour-mills. Skircoat-Moor is a heath of 150 acres, commanding views of Halifax and the surrounding country. On the banks of the Calder and Hebble navigation are spacious wharves and warehouses. The living is a don. cur. in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £15. An episcopal proprietary chapel was erected on Skircoat-Moor in 1826. There are National schools for both sexes, and infant schools. The Wesleyans, Independents, and Methodists of the New Connexion have places of worship.

SKIRDUSTON, an ancient par. in the co. of Banff, Scotland, now joined to Aberlour.

SKIREHOLME, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Applewick and par. of Burnsall, West Riding co. York, 7 miles N.E. of Skipton, near the river Wharfe, under Bardon Fell.

SKIRETHORNS, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Threshfield and par. of Linton, West Riding co. York, 7 miles N. of Skipton, on the river Wharfe.

SKIRK, or SKEIKE, a par. in the bar. of Clanconagh, Queen's County, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles S.S.W. of Borris-in-Ossory. Gowran is its post town. The soil is mostly of good quality, and the road from Borris-in-Ossory to Templemore traverses the interior. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ossory, val. £377, in the patron. of the crown. There is a church, erected in 1831, partly by means of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits. The parish is united to that of Rathdowney in the Roman Catholic arrangement. There are a public and a private school. Skirk Cottage and Ballymeelish are the principal residences. There are remains of the castle of Garran, and traces of a Druidical circle and cromlech.

SKIRLAUGH, NORTH, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Swine, East Riding co. York, 3 miles N.E. of Swine, and 9 N.E. of Hull, its post town. It is a station on the Hull and Hornsea railway. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on Lambwith Drain, and is chiefly agricultural. The soil is rich and productive. The Skirlaugh union poorhouse is situated in this township. North Skirlaugh is separated from South Skirlaugh by the Lamworth stream. R. Bethell, Esq., of Rise Park, is lord of the manor.

SKIRLAUGH, SOUTH, a chplry. in the par. of Swine, middle div. of Holderness wap., East Riding co. York, 9 miles N.E. of Hull, its post town, and 8 N. of Hedon railway station. The village is situated on the Hull and Hornsea turnpike road, near the Lamworth stream. The soil is of clay. About 1809 several celts, spear-heads, &c., were discovered in a bank. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic. of Swine, in the dioc. of York. The church, dedicated to St. Augustine, is an ancient stone structure with a tower, erected in the 14th century by Bishop Walter Skirlaw, of Durham. The interior was restored in 1819. The parochial charities produce about £62 per annum, of which £11 go to Langdale's school, and £10 for apprenticing poor boys. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a place of worship. Sir T. A. C. Constable is lord of the manor.

SKIRLING, a par. in the co. of Peebles, Scotland, containing a vil. of the same name. It extends in length about 3 miles from S. to N., with an extreme breadth of about 2 miles, and is bounded by Lanarkshire and by the parishes of Kirkcord, Broughton, and Kilbucho. A portion of the land is in excellent cultivation, and the remainder hilly pasture. The soil is in general light, but fertile. The village of Skirling is about 2½ miles N.E. of Biggar, and 25 S.W. of Edinburgh. It is situated on Biggar Water, but is of small extent. This par. is in the presb. of Biggar and synod of Lothian and Tweeddale. The parish church is an ancient structure restored in 1720. The stipend of the minister is about £239. There are a Free church and a parochial school.

SKIRLINGTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Atwick, N. div. of Holderness wap., East Riding co. York, 1 mile N. of Atwick, and 3 N.W. of Hornsea. It is situated on the coast.

SKIRMAGE, an ext. par. place in the lower div. of Munslow hund., co. Salop, adjoining Diddlebury, and 6 miles N. of Ludlow.

SKIRPENBECK, a par. partly in the wap. of Buckrose, and partly in the lib. of St. Peter's, East Riding co. York, 6 miles N.W. of Pocklington, its post town, and 10 N.E. of York. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the Beck, a branch of the river Derwent, which bounds the parish on the W. About one-third of the land is meadow and pasture, and the remainder arable. The soil is a strong clay, except along the course of the Beck, where it is a rich loam. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of York, val. £232, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church is an ancient edifice, with a monument to the Paget family.

SKIRRID FAWR and FACH, two lofty summits in the northern div. of co. Monmouth, about 2 miles N.E. of Abergavenny.

SKIRTS-OF-URNEY-AND-ARDSTRAW, or DERG, a par. in the bar. of Omagh, co. Tyrone, prov. of Ulster, Ireland. It contains Castle-Derg, its post town. It is situated on the river Derg, and was formerly included with Urney and Ardstraw. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Derry, val. £254, in the patron. of the Rector of Urney. The church is at Castle-Derg, as is also the Roman Catholic chapel. There are a Presbyterian meeting-house and a National school, also two or three private schools.

SKIRWITH, a tnshp. in the par. of Kirkland, ward of Leath, co. Cumberland, 8 miles N.E. of Penrith. The village is situated on a branch of the river Eden, under Cross Fell. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Carlisle. The church, dedicated to St. John, was erected in 1858. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. Skirwith Abbey, the principal residence, is erected on the site of a preceptory of the Knights Templars. Lady le Fleming, of Rydal Hall, is lady of the manor.

SKOKHOLM and SKOMAR, two islets off the coast of co. Pembroke, two-thirds of a mile W. of St. Bride's Point. They are chiefly pasture and rabbit warren.

SKREEN, a bar. in the co. of Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. It contains the following pars., Ardmulchan, Athlumney, Brownstown, Cushinstown, Dowdstown, Dunsany, Follistown, Kilcarn, Killeen, Killmoon, Lismullin, Macetown, Monktown, Rathfeigh, Skreen, Staffordstown, Tara, Templekeeran, Timoole, and parts of the pars. of Danestown and Trevet, with the town of Navan.

SKREEN, a par. in the bar. of Skreen, co. Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 5 miles N. of Dunshaughlin, its post town. The road from Dublin to Navan traverses the interior. Tara Hill and Skreen Hill are prominent points. The living is a rect. in dioc. of Meath, val., with others, £507, in the patron. of the crown. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Rathfeigh. There are National and parochial schools, and some others aided by private charity. Corbalton Hall is the principal seat. A monastery was founded here, which is supposed to have received the shrine of St. Columb in 875. There are some remains of the castle of the De Feypoys, who took the title of baron from this place.

SKREEN, a par. in the bar. of Tireragh, co. Sligo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 6 miles N.W. of Coolaney. Dromore West is its post town. The surface, which extends along Ardnaglass harbour, and among the Ox mountains, is generally good, but includes some extent of bog. The road from Sligo to Ballina crosses the parish. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Killala, val. £412, in the patron. of Trinity College. The church was built in 1819, near the site of the old church, by means of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits. There is a Roman Catholic chapel. There are four public and two or three private schools. Leckfield is the principal residence. In the vicinity are ruins of Ardnaglass Castle, formerly a seat of the O'Dowd family. Fairs are held on the 21st June, 13th August, 23rd September, and 12th November.

SKREEN, a par. in the bars. of East Shelmaliere and Ballaghkeen, co. Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 6 miles N.E. of Wexford, its post town. It is situated on the road which follows the coast from Wexford to Oulart. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Ferns, val. with Ardcolme, £509, in the patron. of the bishop. There are a Roman Catholic chapel and a dispensary. Ballinroan is the principal seat.

SKULL, a par. and post town in the bar. of Carbery West, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 57 miles S.W. of Cork, and 221 from Dublin. The surface, which extends along Skull Harbour in Roaring Water Bay, is wild, abounding in rock and mountain. Mount Gabriel rises 1,145 feet above the level of the sea. The parochial limits include the vil. of Ballydehob and several outlying islands. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Cork, val. £737, in the patron. of the crown and bishop. The church was erected in 1720; and a new church has been built at Ballydehob. There are a Roman Catholic chapel, a Wesleyan meeting-house, 6 public schools, and a day school. The harbour, though encumbered with sunken rocks about the entrances, affords good shelter, and has a depth from 2 to 8 fathoms. Copper ore is worked here on the coast and at Horse Island, and slate at Audley's Cove. There are ruins of several old castles. Ardmanagh is the principal residence. There are police and coastguard stations. A fair is held on 5th January.

SKUTTERSKELF, a tnshp. in the par. of Rudby-in-Cleveland, W. div. of Langbaurgh lib., North Riding co. York, 3 miles S.W. of Stokesley. Near the village is Folly Hill, which serves as a landmark at sea, being visible in clear weather for 20 leagues.

SKYBORRY, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanvair-Waterdine, co. Salop, 2 N.W. of Knighton, situated on the river Teme.

SKYE, ISLE OF, one of the Hebrides Islands, co. Inverness, Scotland. It lies between 57° 2′ and 57° 41′ N. lat., and between 5° 37′ and 6° 40′ W. long., and is the largest of the Western or Hebridean isles, with the exception of Lewis. The eastern side of the island is separated from Glenelg on the mainland by a narrow sound, called the Kyles of Skye, opening into Loch Alsh, and in some parts not more than a mile wide, the nearest points being Kyle Rich ferry to Bernera, which is only half a mile across. The extreme length of the island from N. to S. is 45 miles, from the point of Sleat to the point of Aird, and its extreme breadth from E. to W. 24, but its average breadth does not exceed 14, and in some places only 3 miles. The greater part of the surface is in sheep walks and hilly pasture, and is the property of Lord Macdonald, and of Macleod of Macleod. The coast is about 180 miles in circuit, and is generally rocky and precipitous, occasionally indented with deep but gusty bays or lochs. The principal ports are Portree and Broadford on the E., the Isle of Oransay on the S., and Dunvegan and Stein on the N. The fisheries on this coast, especially in the sounds between Skye and the mainland, are productive. No manufactures are carried on, and there is little trade in the island. The population is about 23,000, and the language generally spoken is Gaelic. The climate is wet and stormy, but the winter not so severe as might have been expected from its northern latitude. Soapstone, ironsand, manganese, and jet, are met with, but have never been productively worked. The peculiar features of Skye are its mountain and water scenery, and its natural curiosities, including Loch Coruisk, celebrated in Sir Walter Scott's "Lord of the Isles," and the Cave of Strathaird. Near Kilmuir is Duntulm Castle, where Flora Macdonald lies buried, and in Loch Follart is Dunvegan Castle, once the residence of the chief of the Macleods, and lately repaired and fitted up by William Langley, Esq. Another remarkable building is Armadale Castle, the seat of Lord Macdonald. Red deer and game are plentiful. The island contains, besides the town of Portree, the pars. of Bracadale, Duirinish, Kilmuir, Sleat, Snizort, and Strath, with the islands of Oronsay, Pabay, Scalpa, Rasay, Holm, Fladda, Rona, Staffin, Altavaig, Trodda, Fladda Huna, Ascrib, Issay, Soay, and Vinay, off the coast.

SKYRACK, LOWER, a wap. in the West Riding co. York, contains the pars. of Aberford, Bardsey, Barwick-in-Elmett, Collingham, Garforth, Kippax, Swillington, Thorner, Whitkirk, and part of Harewood, comprising an area of 37,560 acres.

SKYRACK, UPPER, a wap. in the West Riding co. York, contains the pars. of Addle, Bingley, Guiseley, and parts of Harewood, Ilkley, and Otley, comprising an area of 54,730.

SLACKSTEAD, a tythg. in the par. of Farley-Chamberlayne, co. Hants, 6 miles S.W. of Winchester.

SLADE, a chplry. in the pars. of Painswick and Stroud, co. Gloucester, 2 miles N.E. of Stroud. The village, which is small, is situated in a vale, through which passes the road to Cheltenham, and on the bank of Slade Water is a cloth factory, one of the largest in the W. of England. An Episcopal chapel was erected in 1831.

SLADE, a hmlt. in the par. of Nettlecombe, co. Somerset, 4 miles S. of Watchet.

SLADE, a vil. in the par. of Hook, bar. of Shelburne, co. Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 5 miles S.S.W. of Fethard. It is situated on Slade Bay, near Waterford Harbour, and has ruins of Slade Castle, formerly of the Hay family. Hook Head Light is adjacent.

SLADE-GREEN, a hmlt. in the par. of Crayford, hund. of Lessness, lathe of Sutton-at-Hone, co. Kent, 2 miles N.W. of Dartford, near the river Thames.

SLADE NEWTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Laughten-en-le-Morthen, West Riding co. York, 5 miles S.W. of Tickhill.

SLADES, a hmlt. in the chplry of Linthwaite, West Riding co. York, near Huddersfield.

SLAIDBURN, a par. and tnshp. in the W. div. of Staincliffe wap., West Riding co. York, 9 miles N. of Clitheroe, its post town, and 13 W. of Settle. The village, which is chiefly agricultural, is situated on the river Hoddon. The par. includes the tnshps. of Bowland, Forest, Easington, and Newton. It once had a chantry at Hamerton, founded in the chapel of St. Mary by Stephen de Hamerton in 1332. The soil consists of limy clay upon a subsoil of limestone. The lands are chiefly in pasture, and great numbers of cattle are reared in the moorland district. The living is a rect.* with the cur. of Dale Head annexed, in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £336. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is an ancient stone structure with a low square tower containing six bells. There is also a chapel-of-ease, dedicated to St. Peter. The register dates from 1654. The parochial charities produce about £80 per annum. There is an endowed grammar school, founded in 1717 by John Brennand, and in which a Sunday-school is also held. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. Townley, Esq., is lord of the manor. A fair is held on the Wednesday prior to Easter Sunday.

SLAINS AND FORVIE, a par. in the district of Ellon, co. Aberdeen, Scotland. It contains the vils. of Collieston and Oldcastle, and the Loch of Slains, which is about 54 acres in extent. The parish extends in length about 5 miles, with a breadth of 3 miles, and is bounded on the E. by the German Ocean, and on other sides by the parishes of Foveran, Logie-Buchan, and Cruden. There are the Kippet Hills. The coast is rocky, with many caves, one of which is 200 feet in length, and 30 in height, and another, well known as the Dropping Cave, is covered with stalactite. A great portion of the land has been reclaimed, and is now in an excellent state of cultivation. The prevailing rocks are gneiss and mica slate. The parish is watered by the Ythan, which is navigable, and abounds in large pearl mussels. The village of Slains is about 6 miles S.E. of Ellon, and is situated at the confluence of the river Ytham with the North Sea. The parish is also traversed by the road from Aberdeen to Peterhead, and is within easy distance of the Buchan railway. On a rock, 120 feet above the sea, are ruins of Slains Castle, dismantled by James VI. in 1594. The par. is in the presb. of Ellon and synod of Aberdeen. The stipend of the minister is about £217. The parish church was erected in 1800. The principal seats are Leask House and Gordon Lodge, the latter the residence of the Gordons of Pitburg.

SLAITHWAITE, a tnshp. in the par. of Huddersfield, upper div. of Agbrigg wap., West Riding co. York, 5 miles S.W. of Huddersfield, its post town. It is a station on the Leeds, Huddersfield, and Manchester section of the London and North Western railway The village, which is extensive, is situated on the river Colne and the Leeds and Manchester railway and canal, the former having a station here. A portion of the inhabitants are employed in the woollen and cotton mills. In the vicinity are mineral baths, much frequented during the summer season. The town is lit with gas. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to that of Lingards, val. £192, in the patron. of the Vicar of Huddersfield. The church is dedicated to St. James. The register dates from 1685. The parochial charities produce about £42 per annum, which goes to the free school. There are National schools for both sexes. A court-baron is held every October at the Manor House. The Earl of Dartmouth is lord of the manor. A fair is held twice a-year.

SLALEY, a par. in the E. div. of Tindale ward, co. Northumberland, 5½ miles S. of Hexham railway station and its post town. It is a straggling village situated on the Devil's Water rivulet. A portion of the inhabitants are employed in the Dukesfield lead works. The soil is productive. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Durham, val. £103. The church, built in 1832, has a tower containing two bells. The parochial charities produce about £14 per annum, £3 of which goes to the school. H. Silvertop, Esq., is lord of the manor.

SLALEY, a hmlt. in the par. of Bonsall, co. Derby, 2 miles N.W. of Wirksworth.

SLAMANNAN, a par. in the co. of Stirling, Scotland. It contains a village of the same name, with a station on the Monkland railway. The parish extends in length about 7 miles from E. to W. with an extreme breadth of 4½ miles, and is bounded by the counties of Linlithgow, Lanark, and Dumbarton, and by the parishes of Falkirk, Polmont, and Muiravonside. The surface is hilly, but not mountainous, rising at its highest point about 600 feet above sea-level. The lowlands on the banks of the river Avon are subject to inundation. Large tracts of land have been reclaimed. Coal and ironstone are extensively worked. The parish is traversed by the Slamannan railway. The village, which is about 5 miles S.W. of Falkirk, is situated near the Lanark border on the river Avon. This par. is in the presb. of Linlithgow and synod of Lothian and Tweeddale, and in the patron. of the crown. The stipend of the minister is about £217. The parish church was erected in 1810. There is a Free church, and a parochial school. This parish was formerly named St. Laurence, after the dedication of its original church.

SLANE, LOWER and UPPER, two bars. in the co. of Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. The former contains the pars. of Drumcondra, Inishmot, Killary, Loughbracken, Mitchelstown, Siddan, and part of Ardagh. The latter contains the pars. of Dowth, Gernonstown, Grangegeeth, Monknewstown, Rathkenny, Slane, Stackallen, and parts of Collon and Tullyallen.

SLANE, a par. and post town in the bar. of Upper Slane, co. Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 28 miles N.W. of Dublin, 8 S.W. of Drogheda, and 2 from the Beaupare station on the Dublin and Drogheda railway. The village, formerly a market town, is situated on the road from Dublin to Londonderry and the river Boyne, which is here crossed by a bridge. Petty sessions are held at intervals. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Meath, val. £346, in the patron. of the crown. The church was built in 1712, and has been recently enlarged by means of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits. There are two Roman Catholic chapels, a National and several public schools. Slane Castle is the seat of the Marquis Conyngham. A battle was fought on the river's bank in 1690, near which is New Grange tumulus. Fairs are held on 2nd April, 2nd June, 2nd September, and 8th November.

SLANES, a par. in the bar. of Ardes, co. Down, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 4 miles N.E. of Portaferry, its post town. It is situated on the E. coast, and is a coastguard station. Slane Point and South Rock, with its lighthouse, are prominent points. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Down, val. with Ballyphilip £390, in the patron. of the bishop. A large abbey is said to have once stood here.

SLANEY, a river of the co. of Wexford, Ireland, rises under the Table Mountain, and after a course of 60 miles, in which it is joined by the Little Slaney, falls into the sea at Wexford Harbour.

SLAPEWATH, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Guisbrough, North Riding co. York, near Guisbrough.

SLAPIN, a sea loch on the S. side of the Isle of Skye, co. Inverness, Scotland, between Lochs Eishort and Scavig.

SLAPTON, a par. in the hund. of Cottesloe, co. Bucks, 3 miles S. of Leighton-Buzzard, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated near the North Western railway and the Grand Junction canal. About two-thirds of the land are arable, and the remainder pasture. The soil is clayey. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £280, in the patron. of Christ Church, Oxford. The church is dedicated to the Holy Cross. The parochial charities produce about £35 per annum. The Wesleyans have a chapel, and there is a village school.

SLAPTON, a par. in the hund. of Coleridge, co. Devon, 5 miles E. of Kingsbridge, and 7 S.W. of Dartmouth. The par. is situated on Start Bay, and includes Slapton Lake, a lagoon nearly 2 miles in length, abounding in fish and fowl. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The soil is of a loamy nature, with a subsoil of dunstone. The Slapton harriers and Sir H. Seale's hounds hunt in the neighbourhood. The manor formerly belonged to Sir Guy de Brien, standard-bearer to Edward III., who founded in the church a chantry for a rector and four priests, with £10 per annum from land. The living is a perpet cur. in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £96. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure. The parochial charities produce about £28 per annum. There is a free school for both sexes, in which a Sunday-school is also held. The Plymouth Brethren have a place of worship.

SLAPTON, a par. in the hund. of Greens-Norton, co. Northampton, 3¾ miles S.W. of Towcester, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the small river Tove, and is wholly agricultural. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Peterborough. The church, dedicated to St. Botolph, has a tower and two bells. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum. The Wesleyans have a place of worship.

SLATEFORD, a vil. in the par. of Colinton, co. Edinburgh, Scotland, 2 miles S.W. of Edinburgh, and 3½ N.E. of Currie. It is a station on the Caledonian railway. The village is situated near the Leith Water and the Union canal. There is a bleach field of large extent. An United Presbyterian church is situated in the village.

SLATESFORD, a vil. in the par. of Edzell, co. Forfar, Scotland, 5 miles N. of Brechin, near the head waters of the North Esk.

SLAUGHAM, a par. in the hund. of Buttinghill, rape of Lewes, co. Sussex, 5 miles S.W. of Crawley, its post town, and 4 N.W. of Cuckfield. The parish is of great length, and is portioned into 4 districts, designated Slaugham, Peace Pottage, Warningfield, and Hand Cross. The village is situate on the road from London, through Crawley to Brighton. The river Ouse has its source in the grounds of Ashford, forming in its course a lake of about 30 acres at Slaugham Mills. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £460. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure, restored and enlarged in 1837. It contains several monuments and brasses of the Coverts, one bearing date 1503. There is a National school for both sexes. The Baptists have a place of worship. In the neighbourhood are many residences, as Ashfold, Broadfield, Colwood, Dencombe, Hand Cross House, High Beeches, Hyde, Slate House, Slaugham Hall, Slaugham Park, and Woodside. The ruins of the mansion of the Coverts, called Slougham Place, occupy a space of upwards of three acres, now fenced in with a high wall. The grand staircase was given by the late Colonel Sergison to the proprietor of the Star Inn at Lewes, and has been erected in that house. Warden Sergison, Esq., is lord of the manor.

SLAUGHTERFORD, a par. in the hund. of Chippenham, co. Wilts, 5 miles N.W. of Chippenham, its post town, and 9 E. of Bath. The village, which is considerable, is situated on Box brook, a branch of the river Avon. In the vicinity is Bury-Wood camp, on the Fosse Way. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to the rect. of Biddestone, in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is an ancient structure with a tower containing one bell.

SLAUGHTER, LOWER, a hund. in the co. of Gloucester, contains the pars. of Great and Little Barrington, Bourton, Clapton, Naunton, Great and Little Rissington, Rissington Wick, Sherborne Upper and Lower, Slaughter, Wilford, and Windruth, comprising an area of 23,590 acres.

SLAUGHTER, LOWER, a par. in the hund. of the same name, co. Gloucester, 3 miles S.W. of Stow-on-the-Wold, its post town, and 6 N.E. of Northleach. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on a branch of the river Windrush, and is chiefly agricultural. The soil consists of stonebrash. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect. of Burton-on-the-Water, in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol. The church is an ancient structure. General Sir George Whitmore is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

SLAUGHTER, UPPER, a hund. in the co. of Gloucester, contains the pars. of Addlestrop, Bleddington, Broadwall, Eyford, Oddington, Stow-on-the-Wold, Lower Swell, Westcote, and parts of Condicote and Iccomb, comprising an area of 13,840 acres.

SLAUGHTER, UPPER, a par. in the hund. of Lower Slaughter, co. Gloucester, 1 mile W. of Lower Slaughter, and 3½ miles S.W. of Stow-on-the-Wold, its post town. The surface is hilly, comprising a portion of the Cotswold hills, and the lower grounds are watered by two streams which form the head waters of the river Windrush. The village is small and wholly agricultural. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £131. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient edifice partly Norman. The parochial charities produce about £72 per annum, of which £11 go towards the support of a school.

SLAWSTON, a par. in the hund. of Gartree, co. Leicester, 6 miles N.E. of Market-Harborough, its post town, and 16 S.E. of Leicester. It is a small agricultural village situated in a sheltered spot, and commanding a prospect of the vale of the Welland. The soil consists of stiff clay. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £174. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient stone structure with a tower and three bells. The parochial charities produce about £3 per annum. The Independents have a place of worship. The Earl of Cardigan is lord of the manor.

SLEAFORD, NEW, a par. and market town in the wap. of Flaxwell, parts of Kesteven, co Lincoln, 14 miles N.E. of Grantham, and 18 S.E. of Lincoln. It is a station on the Boston, Sleaford, and Grantham branch of the Great Northern railway, and on the Midland is also a station for Sleaford. It is connected, by means of a canal and the river Witham, with the towns of Boston and Lincoln, and with the Trent navigation. It is situated in a valley on the banks of the small river Slea, at a short distance below its source, and on the line of the ancient Ermine Street, where coins of Constantine have been found. It had formerly a castle, built by Alexander, Bishop of Lincoln, where King John sickened after the loss of his baggage in the Wash, and in which Bishop Fleming, the opponent of Wickliffe, died. This palace is described by Leland as an imposing castle with a drawbridge and gate-house, but the causeway and part of the walls are all that now remain. The town, which is an improving place, consists chiefly of four streets extending at right angles, and designated respectively North, East, West, and Southgate-streets. It contains a townhall, corn exchange, union poorhouse, and cross 70 feet high, designed by Boyle after one of Queen Eleanor's, and executed in 1850 for a testimonial to the late Henry Handley, Esq., M.P. for South Lancashire, also two banks and a savings-bank. The streets are paved, and lighted with gas. The town, including the suburbs of Holdingham, Old Sleaford, and Quarrington, had a population in 1851 of 3,729, and in 1861 of 3,745. Quarter sessions are held for the division of Kesteven. petty sessions by the county magistrates. Sleaford is a polling-place for the southern division of the county. The Poor-law Union comprises 56 parishes and townships. A new County Court is held in the town, which is also the seat of a superintendent registry. The living is a vic.* in the archdeac. and dioc. of Lincoln, val. £170. The church, dedicated to St. Denis, has a tower surmounted by a spire 144 feet high. The church was built in 1271 by two merchants, and is remarkable for its number of windows. It has recently been thoroughly restored and refitted at a cost of £3,400. The interior contains several stone stalls and monuments of the Carr family, who formerly held the manor. The register commences in 1575. An extra-mural cemetery has lately been formed on the E. side of the town. The Wesleyans have a chapel, erected in 1848, and the Primitive Methodists, Independents, and Calvinists have each a place of worship. There are National schools, also a well-endowed grammar school, founded in 1604 by Robert Carr, who also endowed a hospital with lands now producing upwards of £1,000 per annum. This charity has recently been remodelled under an order of the Court of Chancery. Market day is Monday. Fairs are held on Plough, Easter, and Whit Mondays, on 12th August, and 20th October for cattle, and on 1st October for cheese.

SLEAFORD, OLD, a hmlt. in the par. of New Sleaford, but formerly a separate parish.

SLEAGILL, a tnshp. in the par. of Morland, W. ward, co. Westmoreland, 2 miles S.W. of Morland, 4½ N.E. of Shap railway station, and 7½ W. of Appleby. The village, of small extent, is situated in a valley, and is chiefly agricultural. The soil is clayey, with a subsoil of clay, lime, and freestone. There is a school for both sexes, with a small endowment, also a Sunday-school.

SLEAP, a tnshp. in the par. of Wem, hund. of North Bradford, co. Salop, 2 miles S.W. of Wem. It is situated on the river Roden.

SLEAP, a tnshp. in the par. of Ercall Magna, co. Salop, 4 miles N.W. of Wellington, on the river Tern.

SLEAT, a par. in the island of Skye, co. Inverness, Scotland. It is situated to the westward of the mainland of Scotland, being separated by a channel which varies from a quarter of a mile to two leagues in breadth. The parish extends 20 miles in length by 3 in extreme breadth, being indented by Loch-in-Daal on the S. side, which leaves an isthmus of only about 1¼ mile to the head of Loch-Eishart, on the opposite side, thus cutting the parish into two divisions. The surface abounds in hilly pasture. The village of Sleat stands on Sleat Sound, with Sleat Point to the S.W., and Loch Alsh to the N.E., at which point it is crossed by a parliamentary road from the ferry at Kyle-Rhoa. This par. is in the presb. and synod of Glenelg, and in the patron. of the crown. The parish church was erected in 1631, and was restored and enlarged about 1837. There are a Free church, six non-parochial schools, and a parochial school. In this parish are the castles of Dunskaich, Knock, and I'Chamuis, or the Castle of the Bay, once residences of the barons of Sleat. There are also five duns, or Danish forts.

SLEATY, a par. in the bar. of Slievemargy, Queen's County, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles N.W. of Carlow. It is situated along the river Barrow. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Leighlin, united with Shrule. The church has long been in ruins. There is a hedge school. An old burial-ground here has two curious crosses.

SLEATYGRAIGUE, a vil. in the bar. of Slievemargy, Queen's County, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, on the river Barrow, near Carlow.

SLEBECH, a par. in the hund. of Dungleddy, co. Pembroke, 7 miles from Haverfordwest, its post town, and 5 W. of Narberth. The village, which is small, is situated on the river Cleddan. In 1148 it belonged to a commandery of Knights Hospitallers. The living is a perpet. cur. with those of Mynwere and Newton annexed, in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £281. The church contains effigies of the Knights Hospitallers. Slebech Hall, situated on the site of the old commandery, is the principal residence. In the interior is preserved the sword formerly used at the installation of Knights of St. John of Jerusalem.

SLEDDALE, a hmlt. in the tnshp. and par. of Guisbrough, lib. of East Langbaurgh, North Riding co. York, near Guisbrough.

SLEDDALE, LONG, a chplry. in the par. and ward of Kendal, co. Westmoreland, 7½ miles N.W. of Kendal, its post town. It is situated on the river Sprint. It is about 6 miles in length by half-a-mile in breadth, and is divided into small estates. The mountains, which are exceedingly lofty, are clothed to within a short distance of the summits with hanging woods and sheep-walks. There are many cascades formed by the mountain streams. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £69, in the patron. of the Vicar of Kendal. There is a school for both sexes, with an endowment of £10.

SLEDDALE, WEST, a hmlt. in the par. of Shap, co. Westmoreland, 3 miles S.W. of Shap, on a branch of the river Lowther, under Shap Fells.

SLEDMERE, a parochial chplry. in the wap. of Buckrose, East Riding co. York, 3 miles from the Fimber and Sledmere station, on the Driffield and Matton branch of the North-Eastern railway, and 12 S.E. of Matton, its post town. The village, which is chiefly agricultural, is situated on the old Roman way from York. The par. includes the hmlt. of Croome. A pack of harriers is kept in the neighbourhood. The land is divided between arable, meadow, and sheep-walks. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of York. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has a square tower with three bells. The interior of the church contains monuments of the Sykes and Masterman families. The parochial charities produce about £6 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes. Near the church stands Skedmere Hall. Sir T. Sykes, Bart., is lord of the manor.

SLEDMUIR, a vil. in the par. of Kerriemuir, co. Forfar, Scotland, 2 miles from Kerriemuir.

SLEEGIL, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Hipswell, par. of Catterick, North Riding co. York, 2 miles S.E. of Richmond, near the river Swale.

SLEEKBURN, EAST and WEST, tnshps. in the par. of Bedlington, co. Northumberland, 3 miles N.W. of Blyth. They are situated on the river Wansbeck, and were until recently included in the county of Durham.

SLEEP AND SMALLFORD, a hmlt. in the par. of St. Peter's, co. Herts, near St. Alban's.

SLEIGHTHOLME, a hmlt. in the par. of Bowes, wap. of Gilling, North Riding co. York, 9 miles N. of Reeth. It is situated in the vale of the Greta, which here flows through a natural arch called God's-bridge.

SLEIGHTS, a chplry. in the par. of Whitby, Whitby Strand lib., North Riding co. York, 3 miles S.E. of Whitby. It is a station on the York and Berwick branch railway.

SLEMINGFORD, a hmlt. in the par. and lib. of Ripon, West Riding co. York, 5 miles N.W. of Ripon, its post town. It is situated at a ford on the river Ure. It is in conjunction with Worm Stanley to form a township.

SLEMISH, a mountain in the co. of Antrim, Ireland, about 3 miles E. of Broughshane; it attains an elevation of 1,437 feet.

SLIAB-GAVEL, or SLIOBGOIL, a mountain in the district of Kantyre, co. Argyle, Scotland, near Tarbert. It attains an elevation of 2,228 feet.

SLIDDERYFORD, a hmlt. in the bar. of Lecale, co. Down, Ireland, 4 miles S.E. of Castlewellan.

SLIEVE, signifying a "head," or "summit," is prefixed to the names of many mountains, hills, and small places in all parts of Ireland.

SLIEVEARDAGH, a bar. in the co. of Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland. It contains the pars. of Ballingarry, Buolick, Crohane, Fennor, Grangemockler, Iserkieran, Killenaule, Kilvemnon, Lickfinn, Lismalin, Modeshil, Mowney, Templemichael, and parts of Cloneen, Garrangibbon, Graystown, Kilcooly, Newtownlennan, and St. John Baptist.

SLIEVEMARGY, a bar. in Queen's County, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. It contains the pars. of Killeshin, Shrule, Sleaty, and parts of those of Cloydagh, Killabban, and Rathaspick. The Slievemargy hills and coalfields are in this barony.

SLIEVEMORE, a hmlt. in the par. of Burrishoole, co. Mayo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 22 miles W.N.W. of Newport. It is situated in Achill Island, and is a station of the Protestant mission. Slievemore Hill, near the hamlet, has an altitude of 2,217 feet.

SLIGO, a maritime co. in the prov. of Connaught, Ireland, is bounded N. by the Atlantic Ocean and Donegal Bay, E. by the counties of Leitrim and Roscommon, S. by Roscommon and Mayo, and W. by Mayo. It lies between 53° 53′ and 54° 26′ N. lat., 8° 3′ and 9° 1′ W. long. Its greatest length from E. to W. is 41 miles, and from N. to S. 38 miles. Its area is 721 square miles, or 461,753 acres, of which 290,696 acres are arable, 151,723 uncultivated, 6,134 in plantations, 460 sites of towns and villages, and 12,740 under water. The population in 1841 was 180,809, in 1851, 128,510, and in 1861, 124,845, or 173 to every square mile of the entire surface, being only 69 per cent. of the number in 1841, when there were 251 to every square mile. The number of persons from this county who emigrated from Irish ports, stating it was their intention not to return, from the 1st May, 1851, to the 31st December, 1864, was 17,693, or nearly 13 per cent. of the population at the former date. The coast line of Sligo is nearly 100 miles in extent, and is irregular in outline, forming many bays and natural harbours, of which the most important are Ballysadare and Sligo Bays, and terminating at other parts in rocky headlands, among which are Rathlee Head to the E. of Killala Bay, Aughris Head to the S. of Sligo Bay, and Rosskeeragh Point. The coast is generally rocky, but to the E. of Sligo Bay and at Killala Bay sandy and pebbly strands prevail. The principal islands are Inishmurray, about a mile in length, containing 209 acres, with a population in 1861 of 58, and Inishmulclohy, or Coney Island, which lies at the entrance of Sligo Bay, and forms a natural breakwater. Sligo formerly belonged to the O'Conor family, and the descendants of Roderick O'Conor were long engaged in many struggles in defence of their patrimony. Upon the invasion of Henry II. a Norman family named De Burgo established themselves here, and assisted Charles Carragh in depriving his kinsman Cathal of the Bloody Hand of the throne of Connaught. Hugh O'Nial, head of the Tyrone family, supported Cathal, and was signally defeated at Ballysadare in 1200. In 1245 Maurice Fitzgerald, then Lord Deputy, built a castle on the present site of Sligo town. In the rebellion of 1641 the county suffered severely, and was finally overrun and subdued by the Cromwellian army under General Ireton and Sir Charles Coote. It was faithful to James II., and in the disturbances of 1798 it was again the theatre of military movements, which, however, were unattended with any decisive result.—This county has a great diversity of surface, exhibiting rich plains, lakes, mountains, and wooded enclosures, and in other parts dreary expanses of bog and commons. Entering from Ballyshannon, the land along the coast is flat and bleak, but is much relieved by the elevations of Benbulben, Benduff, and Benwisken; these form part of a range of limestone mountains stretching eastward, which, with their smooth flat tops, present a strange contrast to the rough gneiss mountains which lie around. At the southern base of Knocknarea, 1,078 feet high, is a chasm, called the Glen of Knocknarea, three-quarters of a mile long, and 30 feet broad. Its sides, which rise to a height of 40 feet, are almost perpendicular, and present the appearance of ashlar masonry. From this point, along the coast to Killala Bay, stretches an extensive plain backed by lofty mountains, reaching from Ballysadare to Foxford in County Mayo, a distance of 25 miles, and is for the most part 5 to 6 miles in breadth. These mountains consist of two parallel divisions, called Slieve Gamph and the Ox mountains, and vary in height from 600 to nearly 1,800 feet, their northern surface being generally abrupt and rocky. Along the borders of Roscommon are the Curlew hills, of which Carrowkeel has an elevation of 1,062 feet, and Keshcorran of 1,183 feet. The Braughlieve mountains belong principally to Roscommon and Leitrim, but extend also into this county, where they rise to a height of 1,183 feet. The lakes are Loughs Talt and Easky, which lie between Slieve Gamph and the Ox mountains, Loughs Arrow and Gara, both bordering on Roscommon, and Lough Gill, about 6 miles long and 2 in breadth, stretching from Sligo town to county Leitrim. The last named is 20 feet above the sea-level at low-water, and is the largest, containing among other islets Innismore, called also Church Island, upon which are the remains of a monastery. There is no river of importance in the county, but the principal stream is the Owengarrow, which takes its rise in the Ox mountains, and flows southward into county Mayo, where it joins the Moy, which for a part of its course forms the boundary of this county. The Arrow, coming from Lough Arrow, empties itself into Ballysadare Bay after receiving in its course the waters of the Owenmore from the Curlew mountains, and the Owenbeg from the Ox mountains. The Garrogue from Lough Gill flows through the town of Sligo into the bay. The principal roads are the mail-road from Dublin to Sligo, which is continued to Ballina, and the mail-road to Ballyshannon. A branch line of the Midland Great Western railway has been made from Mullingar to Sligo, passing through Longford. Most of the county belongs to the carboniferous limestone formation, interspersed with large tracts of Old Red sandstone, and in some places mica slate, trap, hornblende, and gneiss are met with, especially in the Ox mountains, which also abound in minerals, as ironstone, copper, lead, and silver, all which were formerly worked in considerable quantities, but on the failure of the supply of wood the furnaces gradually declined. Manganese occurs in the mountains bordering on Leitrim, and garnets are found near Lough Easky, also asbestos in the neighbourhood of Leitrim, and amethysts near Ballymote.—The climate is generally temperate and healthy, but variable, and the influence of the Atlantic is felt in frequent rains, often accompanied by high winds. The soil is generally good, and well suited for agriculture. In the district to the N.E. of Sligo mossy and sandy soils prevail, and the sea at this point was making serious inroads upon the land, and had covered several hundred acres of fertile ground, when the late Lord Palmerston, part of whose Irish property lies along the coast, and some other landowners succeeded in stopping the encroachments. Approaching the town of Sligo the soil is less mossy, deeper, and richer, and the plain lying to the S. of the town, and resting on a subsoil of limestone or calcareous gravel, is the best land in the county. Diversified occasionally with bog and peat, it extends as far as the Curlew and Braughlieve mountains, along the sides of which are dreary moorlands. In most parts of this district a substratum called lac-leigh, or grey flag, is found, which is singularly retentive of water, and does not allow it to pass through. It lies about 9 to 12 inches below the surface, and on being broken up and mixed with the surrounding earth acts as a fertiliser, and no longer interferes with the drainage. From this central plain, stretching across to Mayo, is a gently undulating country, the inner part abounding in moor and deep moss. The occupations of the people are chiefly agricultural, and large districts are laid out in tillage, but grazing also is extensively practised. The total number of acres under crop in 1865 was 96,675, being an increase of 16,963 acres since 1848; and 221,140 acres, exclusive of clover and meadow, were in grazing land. In 1841 there were 7,360 acres under plantation of oak, beech, elm, ash, fir, mixed timber, and fruit. The fisheries on the coast are of considerable importance, and trout, salmon, and other fish are taken in the rivers. The oysters are large in size, but well flavoured, being chiefly procured from the beds at Lissadill. Coarse woollens and linens are manufactured to a small extent.—The religion of the people is principally Roman Catholic, 112,436, or 90 per cent. of the entire population, having, in 1861, been of that persuasion, while 10,438, or 8·4 per cent., belonged to the Established Church, and 1,971, or 1·6 per cent., were of other Christian denominations, of whom 931 were Presbyterians, and 778 were Methodists. The county is divided for civil purposes into 6 baronies —Carbury, Coolavin, Corran, Leyney, Tireragh, and Tirerril, and contains 41 parishes. It returns 3 members to parliament, 2 for the county, the constituency in 1861 having been 3,181, and 1 for the borough, constituency 379. It belongs to the Connaught circuit. Sligo is the only town in the county with a population, in 1861, over 2,000, and is the assize town. Markets are held there, and also at Aclare, Ballymote, Bellaghy, Easky, and Tobereurry. The county infirmary, county gaol, and the district lunatic asylum for this county and Leitrim are at Sligo. Quarter sessions are held here, and also at Easky and Ballymote. Petty sessions are held at 14 places. The local government is vested in the lieutenant of the county and custos rotulorum, the sheriffs, 14 deputy lieutenants, and about 88 magistrates. The county belongs to the northern, or Dublin military district, and there are barracks at Sligo. In the neighbourhood of Sligo are many Druidical remains, and at a place called Lug-na-Clough, or the Giant's Grave, many immense stones stand perpendicularly in a strange and unaccountable manner, forming part of a circle similar to that at Stonehenge on Salisbury Plain, in England.

SLIGO, a seaport, municipal and parliamentary borough, and chief town of co. Sligo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, is situated near the mouth of the river Garrogue, and is 131 miles from Dublin by road, or 134 by rail. It is the terminus of a branch line of the Midland Great Western railway from Mullingar, and steamers ply regularly between it and Glasgow. The town, which was the property for the most part of the late Lord Palmerston, and of the Right Hon. John Wynne, of Hazlewood, P.C., lies principally on the S., or left bank of the river Garrogue, which is here crossed by two bridges, and is navigable from Lough Gill. The houses are irregularly but well built. The streets are lighted with gas and paved, but in the older parts of the town they are narrow and ill suited for trade. The most important public building is the parish church of St. John, an ancient cruciform structure in the later style of English architecture, with a square tower at the W. end. It has lately been enlarged and improved. Calry parish church, standing on a hill at the E. end of the town, is a Gothic building of recent erection, with a tower and spire. The Roman Catholic church of the parish of St. John is large. There is also a friary attached to the Dominican convent, and there are Presbyterian, Independent, and two Methodist meeting-houses. The new building for National schools is appropriate. There are besides schools under Erasmus Smith's charity, and the Incorporated Society, with parochial and other schools. The other public buildings are the county court house, gaol, infirmary and fever hospital, the union workhouse, district lunatic asylum, the custom-house, butter market, linen hall, constabulary barrack, and a new office of the Ulster bank. There is a small business done in linens, and there are flour mills, some small breweries, and a distillery. The salmon fishery in the river is important; the limits of the district are Coonamore Point and Mullaghmore, and the close season is from 19th August to 4th February in each year, for both tidal and fresh-water fishing. The port is under the control of the Town and Harbour Commissioners, who are elected for life. They have improved the harbour—vessels of large draught, however, are obliged to anchor in the pool, which is safe and easily gained. The chief imports are coals, timber, iron, and salt, and the exports are butter, meal, flour, and corn. The assizes for the county are held in the town, and also quarter and petty sessions. Four newspapers are published weekly. The religion of the townspeople is principally Roman Catholic. In 1861 there were 8,392 persons of that religion, 1,630 members of the Established Church, 288 Presbyterians, 231 Methodists, 122 Independents, and 30 of other religious persuasions, or unspecified. The borough returns one member to parliament, and had a constituency in 1865 of 379. It is governed by a mayor, 6 aldermen, and 18 councillors, elected from 3 wards. Sligo is the seat of a Poor-law Union, comprising 29 electoral divisions. Tuesday and Saturday are market days. Fairs are held on 27th March, 4th July, 11th August, and 10th October.

SLIGUFF, a par. in the bar. of Idrone East, co. Carlow, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 13 miles N.E. of Borris. It is situated on the river Barrow, and is crossed by the road from Goresbridge to Bagenalstown. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Leighlin, val. with Lorum, £352, in the patron. of the bishop. The church has long been in ruins. In this parish are ruins of Ballyloughlin Castle, formerly a seat of the Cavanaghs. Fairs are held on 12th February and 1st November.

SLIMBRIDGE, or SLYMBRIDGE, a par. in the upper div. of Berkeley hund., co. Gloucester, 4 miles N.W. of Dursley. Stonehouse is its post town. The parish, which is of large extent, is bounded on the N. by the river Severn, and is intersected by the Gloucester and Berkeley canal and the Gloucester and Bristol railroad. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The manufacture of iron was formerly carried on, but has been discontinued, and the site of the works is now occupied by a saw-mill. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £601, in the patron. of Magdalen College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. John the Evangelist, has a lofty spire. The parochial charities produce about £5 per annum. There is a place of worship for Independents.

SLINDON, a tnshp. in the par. of Eccleshall, N. div. of Pirehill hund., co. Stafford, 3 miles N. of Eccleshall, near the North-Western railway.

SLINDON, a par. in the hund. of Aldwick, rape of Chichester, co. Sussex, 3½ miles N.W. of Arundel, its post town, and 73 from London. The village, which is of small extent, is chiefly agricultural. Slindon includes the ext. par. place of Gumber. The manor was given to the archbishops of Canterbury by King Ceadwalla in 680, and came to the Kempes in Elizabeth's reign, who rebuilt the mansion. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £219. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The parochial charities produce about £3 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes. The Roman Catholics have a place of worship, also a school partially endowed. Slindon House, the residence of the Earl of Newbury, contains a collection of paintings and portraits by Lely and others.

SLINFOLD, or SLYNFOLD, a par. chiefly in the hund. of West Easwrith, rape of Arundel, but partly in the hund. of East Easwrith, rape of Bramber, co. Sussex, 4 miles W. of Horsham, its post town, and 39 from London, and is a station on the Horsham and Guildford railway. The village, which is chiefly agricultural, is situated on the river Arun, which falls into the sea at Littlehampton. The ancient Stane Street, forming the road from Horsham to Guildford, intersects the parish. The surface is hilly. The living is a vic. and rect.* in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £472, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, has a spired tower containing six bells. It was erected on the site of the old one in 1861. The interior contains a stained E. window and an effigy of a lady. The register dates from 1558. The parochial charities produce about £3 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes. Hayes, Holmbush, and Strood Park are the principal residences. Many Roman antiquities have been found on the line of the old Roman road.

SLINGLEY, or SLINGSBY, a hmlt. in the par. of Seaham, N. div. of Easington ward, co. Durham, 6 miles S.W. of Sunderland, and 1 mile from the Seaham Harbour station, on the Sunderland and Seaham railway. It is in conjunction with Seaton to form a township.

SLINGSBY, a par. in the wap. of Ryedale, North Riding co. York, 7 miles N.W. of New Malton, and 6 N. of Whitewell. It is a station on the Thirsk, Malton, and Driffield railway. The village, which is large and well built, is situated on the acclivity of the northern ridge of the Howardian hills, and is watered by the Wathbeck rivulet. The manufacture of bricks and tiles is carried on, and limestone is extensively quarried for building purposes, and for burning into lime. The land is generally arable, with a small proportion of pasture and woodland. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of York, val. £490. The church is an ancient structure dedicated to All Saints. The chancel was rebuilt in 1835. The charities produce about £13 per annum, of which £5 goes towards the support of a school. There are places of worship for the Wesleyan Methodists, also two schools chiefly supported by the Earl of Carlisle. In the vicinity of the village are traces of a castle built by the Lacys and Mowbrays, and which was purchased by Sir Charles Cavendish in 1603. The castle, having become dilapidated, Sir Charles, son of the preceding, rebuilt on its site a mansion, which afterwards became the property of the poet Sheffield, Duke of Buckingham, and was subsequently purchased by an ancestor of the Earl of Carlisle, the present proprietor of the manor. In the grounds facing the castle is a mount called Gallows Hill Field. Traces of the Roman road from Malton are still discernible at various points near the village, on the W. of which are the remains of Slingsby Castle, built by William de Slingsbie, ancestors of the Slingsbys of Scriven, and on the E. the ancient seat of the Wyvill family.

SLIPPERY FORD, a hmlt. in the par. of Keighley, West Riding co. York, near Keighley.

SLIPTON, a par. in the hund. of Huxloe, co. Northampton, 3 miles N.W. of Thrapstone, its post town. The parish, which is considerable, is wholly agricultural. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £107. The church is dedicated to St. John the Baptist. W. Bruce Stopford, Esq., is lord of the manor.

SLOHABERT, a vil. in the par. of Kirkinner, co. Wigton, Scotland, near Wigton.

SLOLEY, a par. in the hund. of Tunstead, co. Norfolk, 4 miles from Coltishall, its post town, 5 S. of North Walsham, and 1 mile E. of Scottow. The village is of small extent. The land is chiefly arable, with some woodland and pasture. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £220. The church, dedicated to St. Bartholomew, is an ancient structure with a square tower containing six bells. The interior of the church contains several monuments. It was restored in 1841. The register dates from 1681. The parochial charities produce about £23 per annum. There is a free school for both sexes entirely supported by the rector. The Rev. James White, M.A., is lord of the manor.

SLOLEY HILL, a vil. in the par. of Harley, co. Warwick, 5 miles W. of Nuneaton.

SLOOTHBY, a hmlt. in the par. of Willoughby, Wold div. of Calceworth hund., parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 1½ mile S. of Willoughby, and 4 miles S.E. of Alford. There is a chapel for the Wesleyans.

SLOSWICK, a hmlt. in the par. of Worksop, co. Nottingham, 2 miles S.W. of Worksop.

SLOUGH, a market town in the pars. of Upton and Stoke Pogis, co. Bucks, 2 miles N.E. of Windsor, and 8¼ from Ascot racecourse. It is a principal station on the Great Western railway. It is a small but improving town, containing 3,425 inhabitants. It is famous as being the place where Sir W. Herschel discovered the sixth satellite of Saturn on the day he set up his 40-feet telescope in August, 1789. The town, which has more than doubled its population within the last ten years, contains many well-built houses and villas surrounded by gardens. Market day is Tuesday, chiefly for cattle.

SLOY, a loch in the co. of Dumbarton, Scotland, 5 miles N.W. of Tarbet. It is situated under Benvoirlick, and was the rendezvous of the clan Mac-Farlane.

SLYNE-WITH-HEST, a tnshp. in the par. of Bolton-le-Sands, hund. of Lonsdale South of the Sands, co. Lancaster, 2 miles N. of Lancaster, its post town, on the Carlisle and Kendal canal. There is a landing quay at Hest.

SMAILHOLM, a par. in the district of Kelso, co. Roxburgh, Scotland. It contains a vil. of the same name. It extends in length about 4½ miles from E. to W., with an extreme breadth of about 2¾ miles, and is bounded along three-fourths of its outline by Berwickshire, and on the S. by Kelso and Makerston. The surface is moderately even, rising about 500 feet at its greatest elevation. The northern boundary is watered by the river Eden, which traverses it for about 2½ miles. A large portion of the land is arable, upon a subsoil of limestone and trap rock. The parish is traversed by the road from Kelso to Edinburgh. The village of Smailholm is 6 miles N.W. of Kelso, and 7 N.E. of Melrose. It is, strictly speaking, three villages, designated respectively East Third, West Third, and Overton. The ruins of Smailholm Tower stand on a rock, belonging to Lord Polwarth, and were once the stronghold of the Pringles of Whytbank. This par. is in the presb. of Lauder and synod of Merse and Teviotdale. The stipend of the minister is about £225. The parish church was erected in 1632, and was improved and restored in 1821.

SMALESMOUTH, a tnshp. in the par. of Gaystead, N.W. div. of Tindale ward, co. Northumberland, 7 miles N.W. of Bellingham, and 1 mile W. of Gaystead, on the river North Tyne.

SMALFORD, a ward in the pars. of St. Peter and St. Stephen, hund. of Cashio, or lib. of St. Alban's, co. Herts, 3 miles E. of St. Alban's.

SMALLBERRY-GREEN, a hmlt. in the par. of Isleworth, co. Middlesex, 2 miles S.W. of Brentford. In the vicinity is Spring Grove, formerly the seat of Sir Joseph Banks.

SMALLBRIDGE, a vil. in the tnshp. of Wuerdle, par. of Rochdale, co. Lancaster, 2 miles N.E. of Rochdale, its post town. The village, which is considerable, is situated near the Leeds canal. The inhabitants are principally employed in the neighbouring cotton-mills. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £147, in the patron. of the Vicar of Rochdale. The church is modern. There are National and other schools.

SMALLBROOKE, a tythg. in the par. of Newton St. Cyres, co. Devon, 4 miles N.W. of Exeter.

SMALLBURGH, a par. in the Tunstead and Happing incorporation and hund. of Tunstead, co. Norfolk, 12 miles N.E. of Norwich, its post town, and 5½ S.E. of North Walsham. The village, which is small and irregularly built, is situated near the navigable river Ant, which has a wharf at Wayford Bridge. This parish adjoins that of Stalham, and is intersected by the road from Cromer to Yarmouth. At a short distance from the bridge are traces of a Roman station. In this parish is situated the Tunstead union poorhouse, at which petty sessions are held every Tuesday for the incorporated hunds. of Happing and Tunstead. The soil consists of a rich loam, producing abundant wheat crops. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £389, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is a small structure, the tower of which fell down in 1677, and has not been rebuilt. The parochial charities produce about £21 per annum, which goes towards the repairs of the church, also a poor's allotment. There are a union school and a village school.

SMALLEY, a chplry. in the par. of Morley, hund. of Morleston, co. Derby, 6 miles N.E. of Derby, its post town, and 4 N.W. of Ilkeston railway station. The village is considerable, and chiefly modern. A portion of the inhabitants are employed in the extensive collieries, and in lace making. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect. of Morley, in the dioc. of Lichfield. The church is dedicated to St. John the Baptist. The parochial charities consist of about £40 per annum, realised from land bequeathed by S. Richardson in 1711, and about £10 from other sources. There is an endowed school for boys, and a National school for girls. The Baptists have a place of worship. The manor house is the principal residence.

SMALLHOLM, a vil. in the par. of Loch Maben, co. Dumfries, Scotland, 3 miles S.W. of Lockerby.

SMALLHYTHE, a chplry. in the par. and hund. of Tenterden, lower div. of Scray lathe, co. Kent, 2 miles S.E. of Tenterden. It is situated near the coast and within the cinque-port liberties. The land is chiefly in pasture and hop plantations. The living is a don. cur. in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £107, in the patron. of the householders of Dumborne-in-Tenterden. The church is dedicated to St. John the Baptist, and was erected about 1509.

SMALL ISLES, a par. of the Hebrides, in the district of Mull, co. Argyle, Scotland, except Eigg, which is annexed to the shire of Inverness. It comprises the islands of Rum, Canna, Muck, and Eigg, besides several smaller islands. It was a part of the parish of Sleat till 1726, when it was erected into a separate parochial charge. The par. is in the presb. of Skye and synod of Glenelg, and in the patron. of the crown. The stipend of the minister is about £158. There is no parish church, but a school-house at Eigg in which divine service is celebrated. There are also a Free Church preaching station, a Roman Catholic place of worship at Eigg, and a Society school at Muck. A notice of each of these islands is given separately.

SMALLRICE, a hmlt. in the par. of Sandon, co. Stafford, 4 miles N.E. of Stafford.

SMALLRIDGE, a tythg. in the par. of Axminster, co. Devon, near Axminster.

SMALLS, a cluster of rocks off the coast of Pembroke, 20 miles W. of St. Bride's Head. They are marked by a lighthouse 70 feet high, exhibiting a red light visible for 13 miles at sea.

SMALLTHORN, a hmlt. in the par. of Norton-on-the-Moors, co. Stafford, 2½ miles N.E. of Burslem, on the Caldon canal.

SMALLWOOD, a tnshp. in the par. of Astbury, hund. of Northwich, co. Chester, 3 miles S.E. of Sandbach. Church Lawton is its post town. The village, which is irregularly built, is chiefly agricultural. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Chester, val. £100, in the patron. of the Rector of Astbury. The church, dedicated to St. John, is a modern structure with a stained window. There is a National school, and a place of worship for Wesleyans.

SMANNELL, or SWANHILL, a hmlt. in the par. of Andover, co. Hants, 2 miles N.E. of Andover.

SMARBER, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Melbecks, par. of Grinton, North Riding co. York, 2 miles E. of Muker, on the river Swale.

SMARDALE, a tnshp. in the par. of Kirkby-Stephen, East ward, co. Westmoreland, 2½ miles S.W. of Kirkby-Stephen. It is a station on the Barnard Castle, South Durham, and Lancashire Union railway. The village is situated on a branch of the river Eden, near Crosby and Ash Fells. It formerly belonged to the Smerdales of Smardale Hall, now a farmhouse. There is a free school situated at Waitby.

SMARDEN, a par. and post town in the hund. of Calehill, upper div. of Scray lathe, co. Kent, 9 miles N.E. of Cranbrooke, and 3 S. of Headcorn railway station. The parish is situated on the South-Eastern railway and the river Buelt. The village, which is considerable, was formerly a market town. The land is partly in hop-grounds. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £501, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, has a square tower containing five bells. The register dates from 1632. The parochial charities produce about £64 per annum, of which £45 go to the free school founded in 1716 by Stephen Dudson. There are places of worship for the Baptists and Wesleyans. A National school for boys has recently been built.

SMARMORE, a par. in the bar. of Ardee, co. Louth, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2½ miles S.S.W. of Ardee, its post town. It is 2½ miles long by 1 mile in breadth, and occupies the S.W. of the barony, adjoining the county of Meath. The land is chiefly in tillage. The living is a vic. in the benefice of Ardee, the inhabitants are wholly Roman Catholic. In the demesne of Smarmore Castle, the residence of Myles Taaffe, Esq., three Danish raths are still preserved.

SMEATON, GREAT, a par. in the waps. of Allertonshire and Gilling East, North Riding co. York, 7 miles N.W. of Northallerton, its post town, and 2 from the Cowton station, on the North-Eastern line of railway. The village is situated on an eminence near the rivers Wiske and Tees. The par. includes the hmlts. of Hornby and Enter-Common. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The living is a rect.* with the cur. of Appleton-upon-Wiske annexed, in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £472. The church is an ancient stone structure with a turret containing two bells. There is a chapel-of-ease at Appleton, also an ancient Norman structure. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum. There is a National school.

SMEATON, KIRK, a par. in the upper div. of Osgoldcross wap., West Riding co. York, 6 miles S.E. of Pontefract. The village is situated on the S. bank of the river Wente. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of York, val. £370. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure. There is a National school.

SMEATON, LITTLE, a tnshp. in the par. of Womersley, lower div. of Osgoldcross wap., West Riding co. York, half-a-mile N.E. of Kirk-Smeaton, and 6 miles S.E. of Pontefract. The village is situated on the northern bank of the river Wente.

SMEATON, LITTLE, a tnshp. in the par. of Birkby, wap. of Allertonshire, North Riding co. York, 1 mile S. of Great Smeaton, and 5½ miles N.W. of Northallerton.

SMEDLEY, a hmlt. in the par. and borough of Manchester, co. Lancashire, 1 mile N. of Manchester.

SMEETH, a par. in the lib. of Bircholt Franchise, lathe of Shepway, co. Kent, 4½ miles S.E. of Ashford, its post town, and 7½ from Hythe. It is a station on the South-Eastern railway. The village, which is of small extent, is chiefly agricultural. The par. includes the hmlt. of Ridgway, and was formerly a market town. The East Kent hounds meet in this parish. The land is partly in hop-grounds. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect. of Aldington, in the dioc. of Canterbury. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure with a square tower containing one bell. It was restored in 1850. The register dates from 1662. The parochial charities produce about £38 per annum. There are schools for both sexes. Scott's Hall is the principal residence, and was the seat of Sir William Scott, Knight Marshal of England in 1350, and from that period continued in possession of the same family till 1784. E. H. Knatchbull Hugessen, Esq., is lord of the manor and chief landowner. Fairs occur on 15th May and 29th September.

SMEETON WESTERBY, a tnshp. in the par. of Kibworth-Beauchamp, hund. of Gartree, co. Leicester, 5 miles N.W. of Market-Harborough, its post town, and 10 from Leicester. The village is chiefly agricultural. A portion of the inhabitants are employed in framework knitting. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £150, in the patron. of the Rector of Kibworth-Beauchamp. The boys of this township have the privilege of being educated at the free school of Kibworth-Beauchamp.

SMELT HOUSE, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Bishopside, West Riding co. York, near Pateley Bridge.

SMERRILL, a tnshp. in the par. of Youlgreave, hund. of Wirksworth, co. Derby, 4 miles S.W. of Bakewell. It is joined to Middleton.

SMERWICK HARBOUR, a bay on the W. coast of co. Kerry, Ireland.

SMETHCOTT, a par. in the hund. of Condover, co. Salop, 4 miles N. of Church-Stretton, its post town, and 8½ S.W. of Shrewsbury. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. The par. includes the hmlts. of Betchcott, Picklescott, and Walk Mills. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £276, in the patron. of the trustees of Hulme's Charity. The church is dedicated to St. Michael. The parochial charities produce about £19 per annum, of which £4 go to a school.

SMETHWICK, a hmlt. in the par. of Harborne, hund. of South Offlow, union of King's Horton, co. Stafford, 3 miles W. of Birmingham. It is traversed by the Stour Valley railway, and has good rail and water means of transit. Besides the station in Rolfe-street, the Spon-lane and Soho stations accommodate the hamlet, and it is within 1½ mile of Handsworth station, on the Great Western line from Birmingham to Wolverhampton. The canals form a remarkable feature here, one being raised 70 or 80 feet above the other. The "Summit Bridge" over the new canal and railway is of iron, and 265 feet long, and 68 feet high. Smethwick is governed by a local board of health, is lighted with gas, and has a plentiful supply of good water. It has a literary institute in Rolfe-street, with library and news-room. It has greatly increased in population and wealth of late years, its rapid growth being due to its contiguity to Birmingham, and the extension of its manufactures—glass, iron and steel, zinc, and copper works. Its population in 1851 was 8,379, and in 1861 was 13,379. The area of the hamlet is 1,885 acres. There are many large works in the district, one of the most extensive being the glass works of Chance Bros., which occupy nearly 40 acres of land, and give employment to about 1,700 hands. There are other large glass works, ironfoundries, tube, rivet, and gun-barrel works. Smethwick, which is in the archdeac. of Stafford and dioc. of Lichfield, has four churches, besides places of worship belonging to Roman Catholics and Protestant Dissenters, and several National, infant, and other schools.

SMETHWICK, a tnshp. in the par. of Brereton, hund. of Northwick, co. Chester, 4 miles N.E. of Sandbach.

SMISBY, or SMITHESBY, a par. in the hund. of Repton, co. Derby, 2 miles N.W. of Ashby-de-la-Zouch, its post town, and 9 S.W. of Burton railway station. The village is situated on the S.E. border of the county. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The par. includes the ext. par. place of Bondang, or Burton-road. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £68. The church, dedicated to St. James, is of great antiquity. The parochial charities produce about £41, arising from Church estate. There is a National school. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. Sir John Harper Crewe, Bart., is lord of the manor.

SMITE, or SMYTE, a stream of the co. of Nottingham, joining the river Devon at Aslacton.

SMITH, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Gomersall, West Riding co. York, 5 miles S. of Bradford.

SMITHBOROUGH, a post-office vil. in the bar. of Monaghan, co. Monaghan, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 5 miles S.W. of Monaghan. It is a station on the Portadown and Clones railway, is situated on the Ulster canal, and is named after its founder, Mr. Smith. A fair is held on Whit-Monday.

SMITHDON, a hund. in the co. of Norfolk, contains the pars. of Barwick, Great Bircham, Newton Bircham, Tofts-Bircham, Brancaster, Choseley, Docking, Fring, Heacham, Holme, Hunstanton, Ingoldesthorpe, Ringstead, St. Andrew and St. Peter, Sedgeford, Shernborne, Snettisham, Stanhoe, Thornham, and Titchwell, comprising an area of 45,660 acres.

SMITHESBY. See SMISBY, co. Derby.

SMITHIES, a vil. in the tnshp. of Monk Bretton, West Riding co. York, 2 miles N.E. of Barnesley.

SMITHSTOWN, a vil. in the par. of Kilskyre, bar. of Upper Kells, co. Meath, Ireland, 1 mile N. of Crossakeel.

SMITHTOWN OF CULLODEN, a vil. in the par. and co. of Inverness, Scotland, on the eastern border of co. Inverness.

SMITHYHAUGH, a vil. in the par. of Auchterarder, co. Perth, Scotland, 6 miles S.E. of Muthill, and 2½ E. of Auchterarder. It is situated on Ruthven-water, and near the Scottish Central railway. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in weaving.

SNAILWELL, a par. in the hund. of Staploe, co. Cambridge, 3 miles N. of Newmarket, its railway station and post town, and 68 from London. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £535. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient structure with a tower containing two bells. The register dates from 1629.

SNAINTON, a chplry. in the pars. of Brompton and Ebberston, Pickering Lythe, North Riding co. York, 8 miles S.E. of Pickering, and 9 S.W. of Scarborough. The village, which is of small extent, is situated near the river Derwent. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to the vic. of Brompton, in the dioc. of York. The church was rebuilt in 1836. The parochial charities produce about £6 per annum. The Wesleyans have a place of worship.

SNAITH, a par., post and market town in the lower div. of Osgoldcross wap., West Riding co. York, 7 miles S.W. of Goole, and 19 S.E. of York. It is a station on the Wakefield and Goole branch of the Lancashire and Yorkshire railway, and is situated on the river Aire, near the Goole and Knottingley canal. The parish, which is of large extent, containing near 35,000 acres, comprises the tnshps. of Armin, Carleton, Goole, Hook, Rawcliffe, Balne, Cowick, Gowdall, Heck, Hensall, and Pollington. The town, situated on a gentle declivity on the S. bank of the river, is small and irregularly built. It is a polling-place for the county elections, and has recently been much improved by the erection of some substantial houses. A portion of the inhabitants are employed in the cultivation of flax and potatoes for the Leeds market. Petty sessions are held on the last Thursday of every month. There is a large steam mill for grinding corn. At the W. end of the town is an ancient hall, formerly the seat of the Yarburgh family. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of York, val. £479. The church, dedicated to St. Lawrence, is an ancient stone structure with a low square tower surmounted with pinnacles and containing six bells. The interior contains a monument by Chantrey to the second Viscount Downe, a marble bust to an ancestor of Lord Beaumont, and relics of ancient armour and banners. In addition to the parish church are the following district churches, viz. at Armin, Carlton, Cowick, Goole, Hensall-cum-Heck, Hook, Pollington-cum-Balne, and Rawcliffe, the livings of which are all perpet. curs.,* varying in val. from £168 to £74. The parochial charities produce about £291, besides almshouses for 6 poor widows. There is a free grammar school founded in 1623 by Nicholas Waller, but the endowment is now applied in aid of the National school. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. There are traces of a Benedictine priory founded here in the 11th century as a cell to the Abbey of Selby, the site of which was given at the Dissolution to John Earl of Warwick. Viscount Downe is lord of the manor. Market day is on Thursday. Cattle fairs are held on the last Thursday in April, and on 10th August.

SNAPE, a par. in the hund. of Plomesgate, co. Suffolk, 3 miles S.E. of Saxmundham, its post town, and 5½ from Aldborough. It is a station on the East Suffolk railway. The village, which is designated "Snape Street," is situated near the river Alde, a branch of the Ore, over which is a bridge. The par. includes the hmlt. of Grumford and The Ward. There was anciently a Benedictine priory, founded by W. Martell in the 11th century as a cell to the Abbey of St. John at Colchester, but subsequently given by Henry VII. to Butley Abbey. On either side of Snape bridge are wharves, which are the means of facilitating a considerable trade in grain to the port of London and other markets. In the vicinity of the village are sand and clay pits and excellent brick earth. The living is a vic. annexed to that of Freston, in the dioc. of Norwich. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, has a tower containing three bells. The interior of the church contains a hexagonal font, on which are carved many figures. The register dates from 1544. The parochial charities produce about £8 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes. The remains of Snape Abbey are now converted into a farmhouse.

SNAPE, a tnshp. in the par. of Well, wap. of Hang East, North Riding co. York, 3 miles S. of Bedale, its post town, and 1½ mile N. of Well. The tnshp. includes the hmlt. of Langley. The soil is of various qualities, with limestone and building-stone. In the vicinity is Snape Castle, or Hall, now in a ruinous state. It was formerly the seat of the Fitz-Randolphs and Nevilles, Lords of Middleham, and Earls of Exeter, and was about Henry VI.'s time rebuilt by the Latimers. Out of one of its compartments has been constructed a chapel-of-ease. Thorp Perrow is now the principal residence. Two free schools were founded in the 14th century by Lady Neville of Snape Castle. M. Milbank, Esq., is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

SNARESBROOK, a hmlt. in Epping Forest, par. of Wanstead, co. Essex, 7½ miles N.E. of St. Paul's, London, and 2 N.W. of Ilford. It is a station on the London, Woodford, and Loughton branch of the Great Eastern railway. The village is situated near the river Roding, and on the Woodford road. The Infant Orphan Asylum for 700 children was erected by subscription in 1843.

SNARESHILL, an ext. par. place in the hund. of Guiltcross, co. Norfolk, 1½ mile S.E. of Thetford. It is situated on a branch of the river Ouse, near Seven Hills barrows, where Inguar, a Danish chief, slew Edmund King of East Anglia in the year 870.

SNARESTON, a par. in the hund. of Sparkenhoe, co. Leicester, 5½ miles S. of Ashby-de-la-Zouch, its post town, 7 N.W. of Market Bosworth, and 1½ mile S.W. of Swepstone. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the Ashby canal, and is chiefly agricultural. There are some brick kilns. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect. of Swepstone, in the dioc. of Peterborough. The church, dedicated to St. Bartholomew, is of brick, with a tower containing two bells, and is covered with ivy. There are a National School, a free school, and a library for the poor. Miss E. M. Leslie is lady of the manor.

SNARFORD, a par. in the wap. of Lawrence, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 7 miles S.W. of Market Rasen, its post town, and 2 W. of Wickenby railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Langworthy. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £181, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Lawrence. The interior contains monuments of Sir Thomas and Sir George St. Poll, knights, also of an Earl of Warwick and his lady. Sir James Doughty is lord of the manor. The Burton hounds meet in this parish.

SNARGATE, a par. in the lib. of Romney Marsh, lathe of Shepway, co. Kent, 5½ miles N.W. of New Romney, its post town, and 1½ mile from the Appledore railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on a branch of the river Rother, and is wholly agricultural. The living is a rect. annexed to that of Snave, in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £144 and £84, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church, dedicated to St. Dunstan, has a tower containing three bells. The interior contains an ancient font, piscina, &c.

SNAVE, a par. in the lib. of Romney Marsh, lathe of Shepway, co. Kent, 5 miles N.W. of New Romney, its post town, and 8 S. of Ashford. The village, which is inconsiderable, is situated near the Military canal, and is wholly agricultural. The living is a rect. annexed to that of Snargate, in the dioc. of Canterbury. The church, dedicated to St. Augustine, has a square stone tower and wooden belfry detached, containing one bell. The register dates from 1570.

SNAYSHOLM, a hmlt. in the par. of Aysforth, North Riding co. York, 54 miles N.W. of York, in the valley of the river Ure, near Hardrow Force.

SNEAD, or ISNOWYD, a par. in the hund. and co. of Montgomery, 6 miles S.E. of Montgomery, its post town. It is a small village situated on the river Camlet. Some of the inhabitants are employed in the collieries. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £87. The church, which is ancient and ivy-mantled, formerly belonged to Chirbury priory.

SNEAD, a hmlt. in the par. of Rock, lower div. of Doddingtree hund., co. Worcester, 5 miles S.W. of Bewdley.

SNEAFELL, a lofty summit in the Isle of Man, 5 miles N. of Douglas. It rises 2,004 feet above the sea.

SNEATON, a par. in the lib. of Whitby-Strand, North Riding co. York, 3 miles S.W. of Whitby, its post town, and 1½ mile S. of Ruswarp railway station. The village, which is small, is situated on the river Esk, and is wholly agricultural. The par. includes the hmlt. of Thorpe. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of York, val. £170. The church has a low tower surmounted by a spire and containing three bells; it has likewise an ancient font. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum. There is an endowed free school for both sexes. Miss Wilson is lady of the manor.

SNEEM, a seaport village and post town in the par. of Kilcrohane, bar. of Dunkerrin, co. Kerry, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 12 miles S.W. of Kenmare, on a rivulet of the same name, which flows from the mountains in a S.S.W. course of 5 miles into the harbour, and on the road to Cahersiveen. It is irregularly built, and contains a church and Roman Catholic chapel, with parochial and National schools. Petty sessions are held once in each month, and fairs seven times a year. There is a constabulary station in the village.

SNEINTON, or SNENTON, a par. in the S. div. of Thurgarton wap., co. Nottingham, 1 mile E. of Nottingham, of which it is a populous suburb, and 8 miles from Bingham. The par., comprising Old and New Sneinton, Sneinton Elements, and the Hermitage, is situated near the river Trent, and in 1861 contained 11,048 inhabitants. Sneinton, called by the Anglo-Saxons Snattingaham, was given to William de Brewere by King John, and afterwards came to the Pierpoints. In the vicinity are several dairies producing excellent cheese. Framework knitting is carried on, and several manufactures connected with those of Nottingham. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £227. The church, dedicated to St. Stephen, is a cruciform structure with a tower containing three bells. It was rebuilt by Rickman in 1840, and has a view over 20 miles. The parochial charities produce about £4 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. The county lunatic asylum is situated in this parish. Earl Manvers is lord of the manor. In the neighbourhood are some curious excavations in the stone rock, supposed to have once been occupied as dwellings.

SNELLAND, a par. in the W. div. of Wraggoe hund., parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 4½ miles N.W. of Wragby, its post town, and 9 N.E. of Lincoln. It is a station on the Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire railway. The village, which is of small extent, is chiefly agricultural, and is situated on the river Langworth. The par. includes the hmlt. of Swinthorpe. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £227. The church is dedicated to All Saints. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum. The Hon. C. H. Cust is lord of the manor.

SNELSMORE, a tythg. in the par. of Chieveley, co. Berks, 4 miles N. of Newbury.

SNELSON, a tnshp. in the par. of Rostherne, hund. of Macclesfield, co. Chester, 6 miles S.E. of Nether Knutsford.

SNELSTON, a par. in the hund. of Appletree, co. Derby, 3½ miles S.W. of Ashbourne, its post town, and 3 from Norbury railway station. The village is situated on the river Dove. A portion of the inhabitants are engaged in the coal mines. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect. of Norbury, in the dioc. of Lichfield. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, has a square embattled tower. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. There are some charities, also a free school, which is supported by J. Harrison, Esq., the lord of the manor. Snelston Hall is the principal residence.

SNENTON. See SNEINTON, co. Nottingham.

SNETTERTON, a par. in the hund. of Shropham, co. Norfolk, 2 miles W. of Larling, its post town, and the same distance N. of Harley Road railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on a branch of the river Ouse, and on the road to Norwich through Thetford. The Norwich and Brandon section of the Great Eastern railway passes in the vicinity. The living comprises the consolidated rects. of All Saints and St. Andrew, with that of Quiddenham annexed, in the dioc. of Norwich. The church, dedicated to All Saints, has two porches and a square embattled tower. The parochial charities produce about £7 per annum. A school was erected in 1836, and is supported by the rector. The Earl of Albemarle is lord of the manor and sole landowner.

SNETTISHAM, anciently SNETHAM, a par. in the hund. of Smithdon, co. Norfolk, 11 miles N.E. of Lynn, its post town, and 6 N.E. of Castle Rising. It is a station on the Lynn and Hunstanton branch of the Great Eastern railway. The village, which is spacious and well built, is situated about 2 miles from the coast of the Wash, and on the coast road from Wells, Hunstanton, and Lynn. It was formerly a market town, and there are still some remains of the ancient market cross. In the vicinity are chalk pits and quarries of carstone—the latter, in its original state, is soft and easily worked, but when exposed to the atmosphere becomes hard. Many of the houses have been built of it. On the beach adjoining the Lynn Channel is a bed of shingle extensively exported for the repair of roads in Lincolnshire. Celtic and other antiquities have been discovered at different times. Petty sessions for the division are held on the second Monday in each month, and a county court for the recovery of small debts. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £110. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient cruciform structure of stone and flint, with a lofty spired tower containing five bells. Only a small portion of the chancel, which is covered with ivy, is now standing. The interior of the church contains a font of great antiquity, also a stained window and several marble monuments. The register dates from 1754. The parochial charities produce about £100 per annum, of which £92 goes to Hall's free school. A Sunday-school is held at the National schoolhouse. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a place of worship. The Hall is the principal residence. H. L'Estrange, Esq., is lord of the manor.

SNEYD, a hmlt. and tnshp. in the par. of Burslem, N. div. of Pirehill hund., co. Stafford, adjoining the town of Burslem. The inhabitants are principally engaged in the potteries, iron mines, and collieries. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £150, in the patron. of the crown and bishop alternately. The church is a modern edifice. The Wesleyans have a place of worship.

SNIBSTON, a chplry. in the par. of Packington, hund. of West Goscote, co. Leicester, 4 miles S.E. of Ashby-de-la-Zouch. It is situated near the Leicester and Swannington railway, and on the road from Leicester to Ashby. The chapel-of-ease is dedicated to St. Mary. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the collieries.

SNILESBY, or SNILESWORTH, a tnshp. in the par. of Hawnby, wap. of Bridforth, North Riding co. York, 8 miles N.W. of Helmsby, its post town, and 11 N.E. of Thirsk.

SNIPE HOUSE, a hmlt. in the par. of Alnwick, ward of East Coquetdale, co. Northumberland, 3 miles S.W. of Alnwick, in the vale of the Alne.

SNITTER, a tnshp. in the par. of Rothbury, W. div. of Coquetdale ward, co. Northumberland, 3 miles N.W. of Rothbury. It is a small village, situated on the river Coquet. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The soil consists of clay and loam, with a subsoil of clay. There is a school, with a small endowment. The Duke of Northumberland is lord of the manor.

SNITTERBY, a par. in the E. div. of Aslacoe wap., parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 1 mile S. of Waddingham. Kerton-in-Lindsey is its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated between the ancient Ermine Street and the river Ancholme. The living is a perpet. cur in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £392, in the patron. of the crown. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is a small edifice, with a tower and one bell. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a place of worship.

SNITTERFIELD, a div. in the hund. of Barlichway, co. Warwick, contains the pars. of Alveston, Bearley, Rudbrooke, Fulbrooke, Hampton-Lucy, Haseley, Hatton, Honily, Loxley, Norton Lindsey, Sherbourne, Snitterfield, Wolverton, and Wroxhall; comprising an area of 28,180 acres.

SNITTERFIELD, a par. in the Snitterfield div. of Barlichway hund., co. Warwick, 3½ miles N.E. of Stratford-on-Avon, its post town, and 6 S.W. of Warwick. The village, which is chiefly agricultural, is watered by a tributary of the river Avon. The houses are well built, and many improvements have recently been made in the village. Near the church is King's Lane, through which King Charles II. passed, disguised as a groom, to Miss Lane's house, after the battle of Worcester; but the oak where he was said to have taken shelter, was blown down a few years ago. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £271, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is an ancient structure, dedicated to St. James. The parochial charities produce about £9 per annum. The principal residence is Ingon Grange. W. Phillips, Esq., is lord of the manor.

SNITTERTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Darley, hund. of Wirksworth, co. Derby, 2 miles E. of Winster, and 1½ mile N.W. of Matlock. It is situated on the river Derwent, and contains the ancient seat of the Sacheverels and the small hamlet of Winsley.

SNITTLEGARTH, a hmlt. in the par. of Torpenhow, ward of Allerdale-below-Derwent, co. Cumberland, 7 miles N.E. of Cockermouth, and 1½ mile S.W. of Derby. It is joined to Bewaldeth to form a township.

SNITTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Bitterley, co. Salop, 3 miles E. of Ludlow.

SNIZORT, a par. in the island of Skye, co. Inverness, Scotland. It contains the vil. of Uig. It extends about 12 miles in length from N. to S., with an extreme breadth of 6 miles, and is bounded on the N. by the par. of Kilmuir, on the E. by the Sound of Raasay, on the S. by Portree, on the S.W. by Bracadale, and on the W. by Duirinish and Loch Snizort. The surface is of a hilly character, attaining its greatest elevation in the Storr mountains. A large portion of the surface is in sheep-walks and waste. The soil of the arable ground is a mixture of gravel, loam, and clay. In this parish are the extensive glens of Haltin, Hinistil, and Uig; and inside Vaternish Point is Snizort Loch, 14 miles in length by 8 in breadth, and including the Ascrib islands or rocks, with anchorage in 4 to 50 fathoms. The coast is bold and rocky, with the exception of the head of the lochs. Fish and game abound. Near Portree is a cascade of 90 feet fall. In this parish are traces of an ancient church, with many round duns, several Druid stones, and a steeple-like pillar, measuring at the base 360 feet, with an altitude of 300 feet. The village, which is about 24 miles N.W. of Broadford, contains the parish church, and is situated at the head of Snizort Loch. The whole length of the parish is traversed by a road connecting Uig with Portree. This par. is in the presb. of Skye and synod of Glenelg, and in the patron. of the crown. The stipend of the minister is £158. The parish church was erected in 1805, and enlarged in 1839. There are two Free churches, and a Baptist chapel. There are a sub-parochial school, and an Assembly's school.

SNODLAND, a par. in the hund. of Larkfield, lathe of Aylesford, co. Kent, 6 miles S.W. of Rochester, its post town, and 3 N.E. of West Malling. It is a station on the North Kent railway. The village is situated on the river Medway. A portion of the land is in hop-grounds. There are extensive lime and cement works, also a paper manufactory. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £297, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient structure, with several stained windows. The parochial charities produce about £59 per annum, of which £19 goes to May's school. There is a National school for both sexes. The Independents have a place of worship.

SNOREHAM, a par. in the hund. of Dengie, co. Essex, 4 miles S.E. of Maldon, its post town. The village is small, and wholly agricultural. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £103. The church is in ruins. The inhabitants frequent that of Latchingdon, with which place the parish is rated for the poor.

SNORING, GREAT, a par. in the hund. of Greenhoe, co. Norfolk, 3½ miles N.E. of Fakenham, its post town, and 2 S. of Walsingham. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Stiffkey, and is chiefly agricultural. The Walsingham union poorhouse is in this parish. The living is a rect.* with that of Thursford annexed, in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £584, in the patron. of St. John's College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, is an ancient edifice with a square tower containing one bell. The interior of the church contains several stone stalls and monuments. The register dates from 1560. The parochial charities produce about £19 per annum. John Dugnore, Esq., of Swaffham, is lord of the manor.

SNORING, LITTLE, a par. in the hund. of Gallow, co. Norfolk, 3 miles N.E. of Fakenham, its post town. The village is of small extent, and wholly agricultural. The living is a rect. annexed to that of East Barsham, in the dioc. of Norwich. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, has a detached circular tower, supposed to have belonged to a more ancient edifice. Lord Hastings is lord of the manor and chief landowner.

SNORSCOMB, a hmlt. in the par. of Everdon, co. Northampton, 4 miles S.E. of Daventry.

SNOWDEN, UPPER and LOWER, hmlts. in the tnshp. of Askwith, par. of Weston, West Riding co. York, 2 miles N.W. of Otley.

SNOWDON, the highest mountain in England or Wales, called by the Welsh Eryri, or Eagle-top. It consists of slate and porphyry, and is cleft into four summits, the highest point being 3,571 feet above the sea.

SNOWSHILL, a par. in the lower div. of Kiftsgate hund., co. Gloucester, 2 miles from Broadway, its post town, and 6 N.E. of Winchcombe. The village is small and chiefly agricultural. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect. of Stanton, in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol. S. Wynniatt, Esq., is lord of the manor.

SNOWY LEE, a hmlt. in the chplry. of Longwood, par. of Huddersfield, West Riding co. York, 3 miles W. of Huddersfield.

SNYDALE, a tnshp. in the par. of Normanton, lower div. of Agbrigg wap., West Riding co. York, 4 miles S.W. of Pontefract, its post town, and 1 mile E. of Normanton. The village, which is of small extent, is situated near the North Midland railway. Snydale Hall is the principal residence. There are a few small charities.

SOAR, a branch of the river Trent, rises near Watling Street, co. Leicester.

SOAY, an island in Loch Inver, co. Sutherland, Scotland, 12 miles W. of Assynt.

SOAY, an island in the par. of Bracadale, district of Skye, co. Inverness, Scotland. It is situated between Lochs Scavig and Brettle, near Dunan Point, and is separated from the island of Skye by Soay Sound. It extends in length about 3 miles from N.E. to S.W., with an extreme breadth of 2¼ miles. The surface is very irregular, the greater part being low, but some points obtaining an extreme altitude of about 500 feet. The coast is rocky, the cliffs rising from 60 to 70 feet.

SOAY, LITTLE, and MEIKLE, islands in West Loch Tarbet, on the W. coast of Harris, co. Inverness, Scotland, near Soay Sound, 2 miles N. of Taransay Island.

SOBERTON, a par. in the lower half of Meon-Stoke hund., co. Hants, 3½ miles S.E. of Bishop's-Waltham, its post town. The village is extensive and well built. The par. includes, besides the chplry. of Newtown, the hmlt. of Southend, the tythg. of East Hoe, and the libs. of King's Mead and Wickham Lodge. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect. of Meon-Stoke, in the dioc. of Winchester. The church has a square tower containing six bells. The parochial charities produce about £4 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes. H. J. B. Minchin, Esq., is lord of the manor.

SOCK, a hmlt. in the par. of Mudford, co. Somerset, 3 miles N.E. of Yeovil.

SOCKBRIDGE WITH TIRRIL, a tnshp. in the par. of Barton, West ward, co. Westmoreland, 2 miles S.W. of Penrith. It is situated on the river Eamont, near the Lancaster railway, and includes Thorpe and High Winder. The village is small and chiefly agricultural. A portion of the inhabitants are employed in the limestone quarries. The Earl of Lonsdale is lord of the manor.

SOCKBURN, a par., chiefly in the wap. of Allertonshire, North Riding co. York, but partly also in the S.W. div. of Stockton ward, co. Durham, 7 miles S.E. of Darlington, its post town, and 10 from Stockton. It is situated on a bend of the river Tees, and includes the hmlts. of Over Dimsdale and Girsby. The manor came to the Blacketts through the Conyers family, of whom was Sir John Conyers, the dauntless knight, who is said to have slain the monstrous venomous serpent or dragon at the grey stone in an adjoining field, where it had previously devoured many people. In memory of which a falchion is still presented to the Bishop of Durham at his first coming into the parish. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Durham, val. £190, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to All Saints. It contains monuments and effigies of the Conyers family, of the 14th century. The Hall is the principal residence.

SOCK-DENNIS, or STOCK-DENNIS, an ext. par. place in the hund. of Tintinhull, co. Somerset, 1 mile S.W. of Ilchester. It was formerly a separate parish.

SODBURY CHIPPING. See CHIPPING SODBURY.

SODBURY, LITTLE, a par. in the hund. of Grumbald's Ash, co. Gloucester, 2½ miles S.E. of Chipping-Sodbury, and 4 N.E. of the Yate railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated near the Bath and Chippenham roads. The inhabitants are chiefly agricultural. The soil is of a clayey character, and the land is partly in common. On the brow of one of the Cotswold hills in this parish, facing the Severn, are traces of a Roman camp, from which point a view is obtained of the vale of Gloucestershire. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £235. The church is dedicated to St. Adeline. There is a Sunday-school. W. H. H. Hartley, Esq., is lord of the manor.

SODBURY, OLD, a par. in the lower div. of Grumbald's Ash hund., co. Gloucester, 1½ mile E. of Chipping-Sodbury, and 3 miles E. of the Yate railway station. The village, which is chiefly agricultural, is situated on the western side of the Cotswold hills. The soil is of various qualities, with a subsoil of clay and limestone. Numerous fossils, including Nautili and Belemites, are found on the side of the hill. In the vicinity is a Roman encampment. The road from Bristol to Chippenham here meets the Bath and Cheltenham road at the "Cross Hands" inn, which owes its name to an ancient Roman coin discovered in the encampment, and bearing the legend, "Caius Marius, Imperator, concordia Militum." The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £460, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Worcester. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is an ancient stone structure with a square embattled tower containing one bell. There is a National school for both sexes. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. Lye Grove House is the principal residence. W. H. H. Hartley, Esq., is lord of the manor.

SODOR AND MAN, diocese. See MAN, ISLE OF.

SOFTLEY, a hmlt. in the par. of St. Andrew Auckland, N.W. div. of Darlington ward, co. Durham, 7 miles S.W. of Bishop-Auckland, and 8 S.E. of Walsingham. It is joined with Lynesack to form a township. The village is situated on the river Gaunless. A portion of the inhabitants are employed in the collieries.

